"There is no possible excuse for the western world to interfere with China, and the American people do not believe in any such policy. (Signed) Clarence Darrow."

Fitzpatrick Writes.

John Fitzpatrick, serving with Darrow on the committee but likewise unable to be present, asked that the following message from him be read to the mass meeting:

"I gladly express the sympathy of the Chicago Federation of Labor and of Chicago workers for the Chinese revolutionary movement. We are against American intervention in China.

"We are always on the side of freedom. We are with the Chinese people and against imperialism, foreign or American. (Signed) John Fitzpatrick."

The committee of which Attorney Wm. H. Holly is secretary, is organizing a Hands-Off-China conference to be held in Chicago at an early date.

Providence Workers Too.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 9.—At a meeting which packed the A.C.A. Hall here, the workers of Providence and vicinity adopted a resolution, to express sympathy with the working masses of China and condemning the presence in China of American marines and ships of war. The speaker was Al Bisch, and the chairman was Nellie Prajulus.

BERLIN PARTY LEADERS LAUD C.E.RUTHENBERG

Red Flag Floats at Half Mast

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

BERLIN, Germany (By Mail)—In the distance a mighty Red Flag is floating at half mast over a beautiful structure that dwarfs the buildings about it.

The building is Karl Liebknecht House, the new home of the German Communist Party in Alexander Strasse (Alexandec Street). The structure also houses the Party's official organ, "Die Rote Fahne" (The Red Flag).

The crimson standard of the German Party was at half mast over its own home in honor of the coming on Tuesday, April 19, at noon of the Ashes of our American Comrade Ruthenberg.

Mat By Party Leaders.

Here in Berlin each had been received as at Bremerhaven, at Bremen and at Hamburg, by the leaders of the Party, by a Guard of Honor from the Red Front Fighters and by hosts of workers, who joined in the procession from the Lehrter Bahnof, where wa arrived from Hamburg, to the Party Headquarters. In the escort were Ottomar Eberlein, the political secretary of the German Communist Party, and Wilhelm Pieck, its general secretary.

Another room beautifully decorated, had been prepared here as in the other cities as the resting place for the Urn, during its stay in Berlin. Here another Guard of Honor was placed on continuous watch.

The stop in Berlin was not to be very long. I seized the first opportunity, therefore, to visit Friedrichsfeld, the beautiful cemetery where lie interred Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg with hundreds of other martyrs of the revolutionary struggles of the workers in Berlin.

Friedrichsfeld lies to the East of Berlin, along the railroad that runs toward Moscow. I was accompanied by a young comrade from the party headquarters. As we approached the cemetery, we came up with a funeral, a proletarian funeral being conducted by Red Front Fighters. The casket was carried in a horse-drawn black hearse. All those accompanying the casket walked. All except two big autobuses filled with police, for the police are always present in large numbers at all Communist funerals in Berlin. In addition to carrying short swords and revolvers, many of them had rifles thrown over their shoulders. More police were already waiting when we arrived at the cemetery.

Wreath For Liebknecht.

The party has a large plot of ground here of its own. In the center there has been erected with the contributions of workers a huge "Red Wall" at a cost of $10,000. The building of this "Red Wall" was inspired by the "Red Wall" of the Paris Commune, and of the "Red Wall" of the Kremlin in Moscow. Its foundation is deep, it stands thick, high and wide, its solidity a symbol of the strength of the German Communist movement. In the center at the front of the "Red Wall" Liebknecht and Luxemburg lie buried. On behalf of the American Communist Movement I placed a wreath upon their graves with the inscription: "In Memory of Brave Red Soldiers of the World Social Revolution." In this plot alone 244 lie buried, many of them the martyrs of the Spartacus struggle for power in January, 1919. Liebknecht and Luxemburg being slain on Jan. 15th of that year. At least 3,000 workers in all lost their lives in this single revolutionary effort. Many of these are buried in other parts of this same cemetery that contains no graves of the bourgeois dead.

Then we returned to the city and as we passed thru the working class sections the workers were already gathering in the open spaces, preparing to march to Karl Liebknecht House for the demonstration that was to bid a Revolutionary Farewell to the Ashes of Ruthenberg on their way to Moscow. In one public park we noticed that the Red Standard, one of the Red Front Fighters' Organizations, had been placed and was already surrounded by many workers.

When we reached Karl Liebknecht House, the streets were already beginning to fill up, with the police present in large numbers everywhere. Exactly at 5.30 o'clock the procession began to move toward the Schlesischen Bahnof (Station) thru Linien Strasse, thru the Gollnow, Weber, Andre strasse, thru Die Lange Strasse the procession moved and finally arrived, after half an hour's march, in the great open space before the station. Every bit of room, however, was filled. Hundreds had greeted the Ashes on their arrival in the morning. Thousands came to bid them farewell this evening. Here, too, the green police were reinforced by large numbers of blue police.

Wilhelm Kaspar was the first speaker. I followed him. Then Helen Crawford, of England, returning from the congress of the International Red Aid, at Erfurt, spoke. Our addresses were interpreted by

Food Workers Ask Governor to Free Sacco and Vanzetti

Demanding freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti, the general executive board of the Amalgamated Food Workers' Union has sent a communication to Governor Alvin T. Fuller, Boston Mass., that reads in part, as follows:

"The general executive board of the Amalgamated Food Workers, in regular session, speaking in the name of the 10,000 members of the Amalgamated Food Workers, expresses their unanimous and unshakable belief in the innocence of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti of the hold-up murder and robbery of which they were convicted by a prejudiced court and jury, and for which they have been sentenced to die in the electric chair.

To The Authority.

"They respectfully urge that you use the authority vested in your office and extend executive clemency to Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

"We are also thoroughly convinced that prejudice against the social and political opinions held by the two condemned men, and not by any means consideration of their guilt, was responsible for the verdict. We are sure that an impartial and open investigation of the whole case by an unprejudiced commission will prove their absolute innocence.

"Grant them justice. They have suffered long enough. Save their lives and set them free."

SVENSON, Oregon, (By Mail).—At a May Day meeting held here a resolution on Sacco and Vanzetti was adopted, in part, it reads:

"Resolved by the workers and farmers of the community assembled in mass meeting this first day of May, 1927, at Svenson, Oregon, that we vigorously protest this inhuman act of Judge Thayer, and ask the governor of Massachusetts to grant them their freedom.

"And be it further resolved, that a copy of this resolution be sent to the governor of Massachusetts, the press, and the International Labor Defence, unanimously adopted."

Dorothy Mackaye Pleads Not Guilty

LOS ANGELES, May 9.—Dorothy Mackaye, actress, today entered a plea of not guilty to felony charges accusing her of concealing facts surrounding the death of her husband, Fay Raymond, musical comedy star. Dr. W. J. Sullivan, charged jointly with Miss Mackaye, also entered a formal plea of not guilty.

J. W. Kruyt, secretary of the International Red Aid, who comes from Holland. Other delegates from the Congress were also present. Then Otto Geschke and Wilhelm Pieck also spoke, the great throng breaking into the singing of "The International" as the latter finished. As the final words of the last stanza closed the Honor Guard led the way into the station and to the Moscow-bound train. We would soon be on the soil of the Union of Soviet Republic.

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY LAW FACULTY PLEADS FOR FULLER TO GIVE SACCO AND VANZETTI JUSTICE

Explain Supreme Court Stand.

...—The supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, in regard to each of the apparently important aspects of the case has been called upon to rule only on whether errors of law were committed by the court below. They did not pass, and were not called upon to pass, upon the facts. The issues involving the weight and credibility of new evidence submitted in support of the motions for a new trial have been passed on by but a single judge. That a single judge may sometimes be mistaken is evidenced by the decisions of courts of last resort, reversing the rulings of trial judges in jurisdictions where such rulings are subject to appellate review. This possibility of mistake is inevitably increased in rulings on motion for a new trial, in which a judge is asked, in some sort, to reverse himself. We do not know that any mistake has occured in this case. But the fact that there is widespread doubt as to the justice of the result in the case of Sacco and Vanzetti lends color to the possibility that such mistake may here have been committed. The presence of such doubt makes it unfortunate to let the case stand without review when but a single man has passed upon the importance of the new evidence presented. The supreme judicial court has ruled that no abuse of judicial discretion has, as a matter of law, been demonstrated. But there sometimes arise cases in which the wisdom of the exercise of judicial discretion becomes important, on the case taken as a whole. We deem this such a case. It lies in your hands to make or authorize a review which can remove all doubt.

In urging upon you the appointment of a commission of inquiry, we speak of course as individuals only. It is beyond our province to speak, or to seem to speak, as representing the institutions with which we are connected. But, as individuals, we wish to express again our conviction that such an inquiry cannot but strengthen faith in the judicial and governmental institutions of Massachusetts and of the country, and cannot but strengthen those institutions themselves. The most admirable judicial system sometimes slips, or seems to slip. It is such occasions of seeming that shakes confidence; and when confidence is shaken, it is shaken not in the single instance only, but in the structure as a whole.

Executive Discretion.

The surest foundation for faith in any system of justice lies in its capacity to deal with the occasional inevitable case in which a censorably widespread doubt arises whether justice may not have failed of accomplishment. And the established machinery of justice has provided for executive discretion in just such cases. We address you in vigorous faith that an inquiry to determine whether the judicial institutions have done justice in this case is but the utilization of the powers vested in your office against such a contingency as has arisen. We address you in the vigorous faith that such an inquiry will be a wellspring from which, however such inquiry may eventuate, the judicial institutions of Massachusetts and of the country at large will draw strength and the trust and the reverence that is their due.

Burn Four Children

NEELYVILLE, Mo., May 9.—Four children of J. C. Wiley perished today when flames destroyed the Wiley home five miles south of here. The children were trapped on the second floor of the house.

Chicago Building Falls

CHICAGO, May 9.—Between 40 and 50 clerks and shoppers escaped injury today when a four story brick building suddenly collapsed, partially filling into an adjacent excavation. Several lives were feared lost in the wreckage.

Our Letter from Australia

NEW SOUTH WALES.—A split has developed in the labor ranks within the N. S. W. branch of the Australian Labor Party. The president, Mr. Scaly, has been expelled by the executive, because of his determination to call the Annual Conference at Easter. The vast majority of unions and branches are standing behind Mr. Scaly, and the labor premier of New South Wales, Mr. Lang, has also stated that he will attend the Easter Conference.

Mr. Scaly, with a minority of the executive members has set up an executive of his own. Both executives have declared the other bogus, and it appears that in due course every member and every branch of the A. L. P. will be expelled from the movement.

The militants are supporting Mc. Seale because they desire that the control of Bailey and the bureaucrats of the Australian Workers' Union should end. It is also desirable that the proposed new rules be adopted. These new rules, are the basis of the whole struggle.

Miners Out.

Ten thousand miners on the Maitland Coalfields have been "on the grass" for a month owing to a dispute between the coal owners and the deputies. A new act, passed by the Labor government, provided for more stringent inspections of the coal mines. This entailed more work for the deputies who demanded that additional deputies be employed. The coal owners refused the demand, and the deputies went on strike. The matter has now been adjusted more or less satisfactorily. It is regrettable that the deputies are not in the same organization as the miners, but perhaps this struggle will be the means of bringing home to the workers the need for closer organizations on the coalfields.

VICTORIA.—The state elections take place in Victoria tomorrow. At present the Nationalist Party is in office, and it is hoped that the Labor Party will win out on this occasion. It is very doubtful, however, if this can happen, because the distribution of seats is heavily loaded in favor of the employers. Sometime ago, the Labor Party was able, due to disunity among the employers' parties, to form a minority government, but it did not last long.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.—The state elections were held in South Australia last Saturday. The Labor Party was routed, and an employers' government is now in office. The reason why the Labor Party candidates were defeated is that the Labor government was weak and vacillating, and did not attempt to aid the workingclass in the daily struggle; consequently, the workers did not have any enthusiasm for the fight. During its term of office, the Labor government jailed British seamen who were on strike; persecuted workingclass speakers in the Botanic Gardens; employed "pimps" in the government railways and fought against the 44 hour week. Truly a wonderful record, and one which could not, and did not, inspire the workers with much enthusiasm.

WEST AUSTRALIA.—State elections were also held in West Australia last Saturday. The Labor government is in a precarious position, but it still has a chance of pulling through. There are still four seats to be decided, and the government needs one of them to be saved from another election. It is hard to forecast the result, but if the employers win all four seats the parties will be equal in strength, in parliament. It is possible that this will happen because the four seats are not usually Labor seats, but two of them were won by Labor candidates at the previous elections because of disunity among the employers' candidates.

As a Doctor Sees It

Our Lawyer Says:

"Prior experience in matters of this kind, plus such information as I have been able to secure by investigation, convinces me completely that a definite preconceived plan has been made by enemies of the paper to compel its suspension and to effect its destruction."

JOSEPH R. BRODSKY
Attorney and Counsellor-at-Law.

The seriousness of the situation is plain. The result of a possible loss of our paper would be disastrous not only to our party but also to the entire labor movement.

Should our paper be destroyed, the one militant voice of protest against American intervention in China is silenced. Should our paper be crushed, then the call for militant trade unionism and active struggle against American capitalism is stilled; and the chief organ fighting for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti is rendered impotent.

The success or failure of the efforts of the capitalist class in their attack upon The DAILY WORKER depends upon the militancy and power of our defense. The situation demands that no stone be left unturned, nor should any effort be spared to roll up an adequate Defense Fund for the protection of our paper. It calls for action without delay.

Two Louisiana Disasters—the Flood and Hoover.

Certainly the pathetic plight of the stricken victims of the Mississippi river flood in the South arouses the sympathy of everyone. Countless thousands of square miles are inundated, and the inhabitants compelled to flee the raging waters because the government that is supposed to protect them is too niggardly to strengthen the dikes to meet such emergencies. The miserable log-rolling, pork-barrel congressmen, working hand in hand with the grafting contractors have grown rich securing appropriations to build safeguards along the river. It is of no concern to the capitalist class and its government that thousands of poor inhabitants of the bottom lands along the Mississippi are driven from their homes or even perish.

The flood came first, leaving wreck and ruin in its trail. Then came the second calamity, a supplementary disaster, that will affect the population for years to come. The second catastrophe to befall them was Mr. Hoover.

This man Hoover, an aspirant for the presidency, and secretary of commerce in Coolidge's cabinet, is the very personification of all that is worst in Imperialistic America. There is no infamous act this man has not been guilty of against defenseless peoples of the whole world. He preys upon misery in order to advance the interests of his masters, the Wall Street bandits. As an agent of Wall Street in Europe he turned the agony of the populations of the devastated countries into profits. He distributed food to populations only on condition that they become subservient to American imperialism. He used his office as agent of the Wilson administration to place the yoke of slavery upon whole countries in return for a crust of bread. He actively aided the bloody monster, Horthy of Hungary, conduct a policy of extermination against the working class. His hands dripping with the blood of European workers, he entered the Harding-Denby-Fall Teapot Dome cabinet of Harding and participated in the "revelry" of that gang. For his services to imperialism he is the darling of the reptile press of the nation.

Like a foul buzzard he prays upon disaster. The flood in Louisiana gave him another opportunity to serve his masters. The Coolidge administration would have us believe that Hoover's mission is one of mercy. He is not there to relieve suffering, but to take advantage of the devastation to bind the whole population to the banking capitalists, the loan mongers. He is now conferring with New Orleans bankers, local agents of Wall Street, for the purpose of placing at the disposal of the afflicted farmers, long term loans. Land will be drained, next year's crop will be planted, but the inhabitants will slave only to pay the interest on the loans to the bankers. Already living close to the line of merest subsistence, the victims of the flood today are to be perpetually victimized by the bankers through the execrable trickery of Secretary Hoover.

Instead of the government coming to the rescue of the flood victims and placing funds at their disposal gratis, to somewhat atone for its neglect to safeguard them, it takes advantage of their present misery to drive them ever lower.

Reprehensible as is the conduct of Hoover, it must be recognized as part and parcel of the capitalist system, which places profits above human lives. The government does not exist to aid the workers and farmers, but to enable the ruling class to enslave them.

The most effective weapon now available against such shameful swindling on the part of the political agents of Wall Street is a Labor Party that will be able to rally to its support the exploited farmers of both the corn and wheat belts of the middle and far West and the cotton belt of the South.

Woll Pleads Case of Bankers

Matthew Woll, water-boy for the steam roller of the American Federation of Labor bureaucracy, ornament of the National Civic Federation and pleader extraordinary for American imperialism, row comes forth in the current issue of his magazine, The American Photo Engraver, with a plea for a reduction or cancellation of war debts.

In his argument Woll tries to distort the facts to make it appear that such cancellation will benefit the industrialists of this country by stopping the influx of European manufactured goods. Like all fakers who indulge in loose talk about the war debts, he tries to create the impression that cancellation of debts will automatically stop the inroads being made upon American industry by cheap goods from Europe. If he is competent to discuss the matter at all he ought to know that the chief demand for cancellation comes precisely from the Wall Street bankers who want to lift the burden of debts owing the United States government off the tyrannical governments of Europe in order that the bankers may be able to collect interest on their private investments in those countries. Since most of the debts were floated by loans obtained from the sale of liberty bonds, the United States government will go on paying for them out of the money collected from the taxpayers. The bankers hold most of these liberty bonds, so they will not lose anything thereby. The debt cancellation proposition simply means the burden is taken off such despotic regimes as the Mussolini tyranny and placed upon the shoulders of American taxpayers. Woll, in advocating reduction or cancellation of these debts, is playing the game of Wall Street in order to aid his Civic Federation pals, many of whom have private investments in Europe.

If cancellation of loans would benefit the workers of Europe it would be a different matter, but the workers will be exploited to the limit anyway and most of the surplus will flow into the hands of American industrialists and bankers. But the European nations cannot pay the interest on government loans from the United States and at the same time pay the heavy interest demanded by the private loan mongers, hence Woll and other agents of imperialism advocate cancellation and, as is customary these days, use pacifist slogans to cloak their imperialist policies.

An Open Letter to President Hutcheson

By B. GOLDBERG.

Dear President Hutcheson—As a member of the Carpenters' Union, I take the liberty to address a letter to you.

In our monthly Journal, The Carpenter, for the month of April, an article appeared by you in which you ask local unions and all members to help destroy the Communists in the Needle Trades unions. You say in the article that they are a danger to the unions. Let me ask you Mr. Hutcheson, who are Communists to you?

Are they Communists who refused to obey your decision of 1916, when you betrayed the strike in New York after 80 per cent of the bosses had settled on the new conditions? After a two days strike you settled on the old conditions and compelled the workers to return to work. When the workers refused to obey your treacherous order you brought scabs from other cities and broke the strike. Did you betray the strike then in spite the Communists? At that time there were no Communists yet.

You, Mr. Hutcheson, ask the carpenters to support Mr. Green, Matthew Woll, McGrady and company in the struggle to break the needle trade unions. And you are becoming the guardian of other unions! You have become a friend of the workers! You want to save the workers from the menace of Communism! The workers know you too well, Mr. Hutcheson!

I would like to ask you one pertinent question. You interfere in other unions. You want to clean out, as you say, the grafters. That's very complimentary to you. But dear president, what about our own Carpenters' Union of which you are the president. Is everything in our union nice and orderly?

Yes. Let us talk a little bit about our own union. If you remember Mr. Hutcheson, you received many communications from Local 376 with many signatures of members when our local was under the administration of Lensky and Glmpelewitch. We asked you to investigate the books. We called to your attention that the officials of the local are not conducting the union affairs properly and are violating the rights of the members. When a member requests a report on union business he gets a split head and is thrown out of the hall.

You refused to pay any attention to the appeals as if it was none of your business. You received complaints that the members were paying money which the officials were dividing up and the local was bankrupt. You were not at all interested. It was workers who were complaining to you because they could not stand the graft corruption and mismanagement any longer. But when the membership removed the grafters and elected honest workers to represent them, then you, Mr. Hutcheson did become interested in the local and declared that the officials were not fit.

They were too honest and had the audacity to run a candidate against you, Brother Rosen. Ha surely would have represented the workers while you do not. Then you declared that you don't like the local and you disbanded it. Did the members endorse your action?

Did the membership agree to your expelling the most activa union men, and disbanding entire locals? Did the members accept your breaking up the Detroit District Council and organizing of scab locals?

You break up and destroy the union and make agreements that are always favorable to the bosses and not to the workers. Do you think that the workers are satisfied and agree with your union-breaking activities? I tell you that they don't.

And you Mr. Hutcheson want to save the situation in the needle unions. Perhaps you want to establish there a union like ours? I advise you as a good member of the carpenters' union not to mix in the needle unions because you will fare very badly.

Another question Mr. Hutcheson. Were you interested to know how the New York district council is conducting its business? Do you know that the New York carpenters voted last year with a huge majority for a 40-hour work week. Did they get it in their agreement? No! The bosses refused, and the district council is very careful not to make the bosses angry.

Do you know about the fake referendum that the district council sent out to the locals to raise the dues? And that many locals who voted against it had their votes cancelled? Their votes were cancelled only because Jack Halkett wanted to do it?

Mr. Hutcheson, I think that you are also acquainted with the case of Local 2717 when the chief officials of the local, Sam Goldberg and Louis Goldberg, took graft from the local and shared it with Halkett, and that they looted the locals out of thousands of dollars?

When the members threw out the grafters and elected new officials, the district council and Halkett refused to recognize them. When the local appealed to you, and informed you that Louis Goldberg was not a member in good standing, you refused to listen to your own constitution and that you violated the rules of our constitution by allowing a non-union man to act as a timekeeper, you rejected the appeal of the local. You insisted that the old grafters should remain in office. You did not consider the will of the membership. You threw out the regularly elected officials who were elected by the workers unanimously, and wanted to force tha grafters upon them.

The case had to go before a capitalist court. The facts that were brought out in court made every honest person shudder at the way the officials of the district councils and the leaders of the New York carpenters were steeped in graft, how Halkett and Goldberg divided up over two hundred thousand dollars. Your name, Mr. President, was involved in that case. I believe that you were well aware of the entire situation, and that your friends of the A. F. L., the Greens, Wolls and McGradys, also knew all about it.

Now, I wish to ask where were you, big leaders of the American Federation of Labor? Did you take the least trouble to expel these grafters who are a disgrace to the labor movement? No, by no means. President Green, Mathew Woll and McGrady did not pay the least attention. They did not say a single word against these corrupt grafters. They are their own boys.

And you, President Hutcheson, wasted thousands of dollars of the workers' money for lawyers to defend the grafters.

But it did not help you. The court issued a decision against you.

The grafters are still the leaders of the district council.

Now, Mr. Hutcheson, you come out with an article in the April number of The Carpenter appealing to the organized workers to help destroy the Communists.

Who are you? Whom do you represent? You have no right to appeal to workers. You don't represent the workers. The workers know you very well. They know that the struggle in the needle trades is a revolt of the rank and file against the corrupt leaders who want to turn the unions into company unions.

The carpenters will follow their fellow workers of the needle unions, and will conduct the struggle with united forces until they get rid of the corrupt leaders, the Hutchesons, Greens, Wolls and McGradys, and their small grafters, and establish honest unions for the workers and not company unions for the bosses and their agents.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Don't Pan the President.

Dear Comrade Editor:

Be sure to read very carefully the nice story told by Wm. Green of A. F. L. on the Italian "Charter of Labor" and then go over the A. F. of L. methods of expulsion of the furriers and the Joint Board and you will see how Mussolini got his idea to strangle labor.

The McGrady, Woll, Frayne game in New York City is just the same. I am somewhat surprised that old Fox Green got excited and spilled the beans.

Also notice that on April 23rd O'Leary didn't have his name on any N. Y. World articles. He is one "bird" who is never fair, always on the "boss" side and never giving progressive labor an even break.

Why don't you give a story on this "bird." Every one despises him.

I read your paper every day, and consider it the only paper where one can get the right slant of labor news. I don't like the abuse of President Coolidge, or men high in power as it doesn't do any good, and makes you many enemies.

Give the records of the fakers who go after you. As you will find "birds" like Martin Littleton all bave a story that some one knows. When you rip it into them on their past, it brings you many admirers.

As a democrat, I resent it when you roast the president. While I may agree with you it's truth, but he is president of the U. S. A. and should not be attacked, as vile as you do about "strike breaker." Use that type and paper on the Greens, Wolls and McGradys and all the "fat boys" who eat labor in every strike. Rank and file is a simple minded "cuss" and can understand what A. F. of L. officials do, and brings home to them what they know.

Ask anyone in the printing trades about Jim Lynch, or Woll, Berry, Frayne, etc., and you will 99 times out of a 100 hear "the dirty s—— of b——s," etc.

With best wishes and success, believe me, as many more, sincere admirers who cannot come out as would like to do.

Keep after the Greens, Praynes, Wolls, etc., and you will make many news friends. Ask why no organizing has been done since the Detroit Convention. How many millions unorganized are there in the U. S. A. and they will be more worried than when you pan the president of the U. S. A.

GOOD LEWIS.

Bertillion Steel Workers.

Dear Comrade Editor:

I want to acquaint you with the system of "convict labor" used by the Inland Steel Plant at Indiana Harbor, Indiana. A week ago our office represented a Mexican before the Industrial Board of Indiana, for injuries sustained while in the plant of the Inland. The facts showed that our client Zapeda had obtained the check and number of a brother Mexican who was leaving for Mexico, and had worked for several weeks under the check of Martinez. The Inland Steel brought in the head timekeeper to prove that as the man had never been "formally" employed by the Inland he was not entitled to compensation.

The timekeeper's testimony was as follow: "First of all, he laid on the table before him a blackboard, well inked and a roller, explained this by saying that ALL employees of the plant are finger-printed when entering their plant to work. There is no exception—chemist college graduates as well as laborers.

Then he proceeded to read the card which held the man's full record, name, age, etc., whether he is a citizen or not, whether he is or has been connected with any labor organizations, whether or not he has been active in strikes, whether or not he has ever gone out on a strike and numerous others of the same tender.

This "Bertillion" system is highly recommended by the Inland, as the timekeeper made the statement that it keeps a lot of hot headed "guys" out of the plant. Probably meaning men who have gone out on strike.

If this is of interest to your readers you may print it.

Sincerely,
PAUL P. GLASER.

Commends Publicity.

April 30, 1927.

Dear Comrade Editor:

The publicity your paper has given us in the past has done a lot for us. In a short time we gained on the membership, but it is not enough yet. From the thousand workers working in this industry a couple of hundred organized is almost nothing.

We hope that this time and also in the future your paper will give us publicity. We want to abolish, 10, 11 and 12 hours a day of toil. We demand 8 hours work.

Yours with comradely greetings,
JOHN NAZAREK, Sec'y.

Praise For Play, "Mr. Pim Passes By"

It might be well to record here some of the comments of the critics when they first witnessed the Theatre Guild's production of A. A. Milne's "Mr. Pim Passes By." This, mind you, was seven years ago, in the days when the Theatre Guild was still struggling for recognition and when it was housed at the Garrick Theatre. Haywood Broun in the Tribune:

"Mr. Pim Passes By," the new comedy from A. A. Milne, which was produced at the Garrick Theatre last night, deserves to be ranked among the conspicuous successes of the Theatre Guild. When a comedienne of the first rank meets a deft light comedy sparks are bound to fly, even as they flew last night while Laura Hope Crews cavelled in the role of Olivia Marden. This is surely one of the most delightful performances of the season."

Charles Darnton in the Evening World:

"Mr. Pim Passes By," is one of those leisurely English comedies that make playgoing a delightful relaxation, and it was so capitally acted at the Garrick last night that the Theatre Guild again distinguished itself for its good taste, uncommon variety and general cleverness."

Burns Mantle in the Mail:

"An altogether perfect production of a charming light comedy is this newest venture of the resident company at the Garrick."

The DAILY WORKER has secured the play for the week of May 16 to 21. Tickets are now on sale at special prices for DAILY WORKER readers at 108 East 14th street. The popularity of this show makes it imperative that tickets be purchased well in advance.

MASS DEFIANCE OF INJUNCTIONS URGED ON UNION

But Beckerman Cries For Attack on Lefts

Injunctions were the sole topic of discussion at the Saturday session of the convention of the Cloth Cap, Hat & Millinery Workers International Union which has been meeting for the past eight days in Beethoven Hall, East 84th Street.

There was of course no opposition to the passage of a resolution condemning injunctions, but before the "ayes" were taken the whole problem of injunctions, which have been recently so widely used in labor disputes, was thoroly surveyed by a number of speakers.

Injunctions were pointed to as a growing menace which must be fought vigorously by all trade unionists. Not only is this so-called legal weapon being resorted to during big strikes, but it is being tried frequently in shop strikes where the employers hope it will not attract much attention, and may possibly slip thru and be made permanent.

Sydney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, who addressed the convention declared that injunctions were illegal and that the only way to meet them was by mass defiance. The main theme of Hillman's speech was a plea for unity of labor's forces against the combined forces of the employers; and for political activity so that labor men could be placed in office to interpret the constitution for labor men. (This was probably not an advocacy of the Workers (Communist) Party, altho Hillman mentioned no party by name.)

Abe Does Dirty Work.

Same diplomacy as usual, Hillman did not make any violent attack upon the Communists or the progressives. He left that job for Abraham Beckerman, manager of the New York Joint Board of the Amalgamated, who was a speaker yesterday. Sarcastic, cynical, Beckerman boasted of the success of his strong-arm methods in the Amalgamated and talked of the necessity of each union driving out the Communists sooner or later. He did not urge his own methods on the rapmakers, but simply stated that in his organization "they had proved best."

Constitutional changes took up much of the discussion time yesterday. At the close of the day, delegates were still debating on a new method of representation to the general executive board.

Ginsberg Barred Forever.

A resolution introduced by the Chicago delegates was unanimously adopted by the convention without opposition. This motion strongly condemned the action of Percy Ginsberg, former member of the executive board and an organizer of the union, who a few months ago became an agent of the bosses, after being exposed by the membership. The resolution also barred Ginsberg from ever again becoming a member of the union.

A resolution was passed permitting the raising of the initiation fee in each local according to the wage in that craft.

The convention defeated a resolution calling for the combining of the position of secretary-treasurer and editor of the Headgear Worker. This was designed as a method of economy, so that one officer's salary would be freed for use in extending the out-of-town organizing work. It was voted that the change should not be made.

Progressives in Banquet.

A large group of progressive workers gathered for the proletarian banquet at Stuyvesant Casino on Friday night, which was arranged by the progressive delegates to the capmakers' convention. Among the speakers were Max Jakowsky, A. Typograph, M. Wilson, of the Young Pioneers, I. Feingold, J. Galstuck, Sylvia Bleeker, Louis Hyman, manager of the cloak and dressmakers' Joint Board, J. Miller, of Local 7, Boston, which has just won the 40-hour week; M. Zisbel, Rebecca Grecht, Anna David of Chicago; M. Lipsin of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers; I. Shapiro, of the Furriers Union; J. Borschevsky, of Local 2 of the Cloakmakers' Union. A Sazir acted as chairman.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE USED TO HIRE GANGSTERS AND WRECK UNION

Once more Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, has misused the funds of the union. Sigman has thrown dollars which belong to the workers, and should be paid to them as "unemployment insurance," was turned over to Sigman by the trustees of the Joint Board, and which, it has been used to fight the Joint Board, and to hire gangsters to terrorize the workers on the picket line.

Last year, on the first of June, the Joint Board paid out over $500,000 from the unemployment insurance fund to the stockholders. This year they will get nothing. The money they should receive is going, practically wasted in the work of smashing the Cloakmakers' Union.

According to the terms of the agreement under which the insurance fund was created, and according to the by-laws drawn up by members of the fund, the money was to be paid out only to the workers as insurance during periods of unemployment. Louis Hyman, manager of the Joint Board, who, during this past week, completed an investigation of this mishandling of the fund, declares that the trustees of the fund have been criminally negligent and that legal steps against them are being contemplated in order to regain the money due the workers.

Trustees Cognive.

There seems little doubt that the trustees connived in the trick by which Sigman gained control of the money, and that they knew what use he was planning to make of it. At a certain meeting of the fund's Executive Board, each trustee resigned and the fund was put in Sigman's hands with power to elect a set of new trustees. This has not been done since further payments to this fund were suspended until 1928.

Hyman's full account of the astounding betrayal of the cloakmakers is given in the following statement:

"In accordance with the recommendations of the Governor's Commission, in 1924—which was accepted and made part of the agreement—an insurance fund was established in up by payments of 1 per cent from the wages of the workers, and from the cloak industry. This was kept the employers 2 per cent of the weekly payroll. In accordance with the agreement, a board of trustees was created to see that those workers who were out of work for a certain time and entitled to unemployment insurance should get it. The board consisted of one representative each from the union, the Industrial Council, the jobbers, and the contractors, with Mr. Arthur D. Wolfe, vice-president of the Chatham & Phoenix Bank, as impartial chairman.

Bosses Quit Fund.

"The payments from this insurance fund were made twice a year during the slow seasons—about June and February. Three months ago, the Industrial Council objected to further contributions by their members on the ground that Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, did not enforce these payments upon the other employers outside the council. A meeting was called where the International consented to the suspension of further payments to this fund until 1928.

"Since then, rumors have been circulating that instead of paying out to the workers the money due them this June, the fund had turned the money over to the International for use in their fight against the Joint Board. At first I refused to believe such stories; to believe that responsible people who had been placed in charge of a fund which was to be used for a definite purpose should so abuse their trust. Finally I went over last Wednesday to see Mr. Wolfe, the impartial chairman. He said he knew nothing about the matter because he had resigned.

"I told Mr. Wolfe that in my opinion he should have made his resignation public thru the press so that all the cloakmakers would have known of it. I felt sure if he had been in charge of the fund no money would have been used for any other purpose than that specified in the agreement under which the fund was established, and in the by-laws made by the trustees.

"While Mr. Wolfe did not attribute his resignation to a difference of opinion about the use of the fund, he did state to me that he had obtained from each member of the board a written statement that he was freed from any responsibility or obligation as far as the fund is concerned.

All Trustees Resign.

"After seeing Mr. Wolfe, I went to one of the trustees from the Industrial Council, Louis Lustig, of 666 5th avenue, and he told me that at a meeting of the Board of Trustees, each one in turn had resigned until Sigman was left alone and he was authorized to appoint another group of trustees and the fund was handed over to him. Mr. Lustig intimated that the resignations were tendered only because they knew that Sigman would get control of the fund anyway.

"I believe that the trustees are criminally responsible in this matter, especially since the Governor's Commission which created this fund specified that a representative of the public must be on the board.

"The fund has turned over to Sigman $400,000 in cash, and $200,000 outstanding, all of which belongs to the cloakmakers. They are going to hold the trustees responsible for this money and are considering how what legal action is possible to regain this money. Last year at this time, more than $600,000 was paid out to them. This year, when they need it most than ever, they are not going to get a cent.

Two Day Strike of Hodcarriers Gives Them $2 Wage Raise

(By A Worker Correspondent.)

A strike, lasting less than two days, was won by the local building laborers union (hodcarriers) increasing their wages from $8 to $9 a day and gaining the five day week.

The strike was short, sharp and sweet. Beginning last Tuesday morning all the bosses were signed and men working Thursday morning. It was one of the "folded arms" strikes. No picketing or demonstration of any kind were held.

This would have been impossible if scabs were imported or there was an oversupply of local labor.

The strike created considerable interest in labor circles and similar strikes are expected in surrounding towns. About 100 workers are the gainers.

Charge Reaction Is Buying Witnesses to Send Workers to Jail

The purchasing of witnesses by officials of the reactionary International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, long known, has been brought out on the witness stand by the testimony of Jacob Siegel.

The owner of a fruit stand at 174th St. and Bryant Ave., Siegel claims he was offered "plenty of money" if he could identify Martin Feldman and Anthony Sardi, cutters. Judge Morris Gottlieb, sitting in Bronx court, postponed the hearing of the two men until May 15.

Feldman and Sardi, who incurred the hatred of the czar of the Cutters' Local by active union work in spite of his orders against it, were arrested on March 30 on framed up charges brought by William and Louis Lubelliski.

Customs Officers Bribed.

WINDSOR, Ont., May 9.—Protected by Customs officers, rum laden motor cars were allowed to cross from Windsor to Detroit on the ferries unmoleested for over two years, Robert J. Calderwood, a former Canadian customs officer, testified today at the Royal Commissions Liquor Inquiry.

Calderwood swore that he and six other Canadian Customs Officers were paid $10 for each car they permitted to cross the river.

Gendarmes in Bad Mistake Actually Attack Fascist; Apologies Order of Day

The local gendarmerie messed up one fascist Sunday.

It was, of course, all a mistake. The cops don't pick on fascists, but all Italians, especially when not in uniform, look alike to the Staten Island defenders of lawmorder.

"Commander" Silvio Scaroni, a Mussolini pet, was the unwitting victim when he tried to push through a crowd to get into a picture being snapped at the prow of the Savoia II. Francesco de Pinedo's plane.

The "Commander" was dressed in ordinary civvies, without so much as a black shirt, and so when he pushed into a couple of plain-clothes men in order to get to the Savoia, fists flew and a general melee seemed imminent.

De Pinedo ordered over to the scene and introduced the plain clothes commander to the plain clothes cops, while apologies rent the air.

On Second Avenue near 14th Street the other day a crowd of west-Italians were attacked by police, many beaten and all forced to flee, as one of a series of police attacks on enemies of Mussolini's black regime.

LONG WAR SEEN IN LOCKOUT OF PLUMBERS HERE

Cleveland and Seattle in Grip of Struggle

With the striking plumbers of Brooklyn, the locked out plumbers in the other boroughs of New York and the building Trades Employers' Association maintaining unyielding resistance in the building trades war here yesterday, there were no immediate prospects of a settlement.

Signifying the gravity of the local lockout, International President John M. Costield of the Plumbers arrived in the city yesterday. He immediately went into conference with C. G. Norman, head of the militant Building Trades Employers' Assn., but no announcement was forthcoming to the press.

Both sides are digging in for a long and bitter struggle which may determine the entire trend of building trades wages and conditions in the United States for the coming five years. Born on the crest of the apparently unending building trades boom of the past four years, unions in that industry have pressed continuously and successfully for ever higher wages.

Bosses Take Stand.

The bosses have at last agreed to make a stand against further "aggressions" and "labor monopoly," as they term it. This was indicated when the master plumbers abdicated power in the present fight and allowed the Building Trades Employers outfit to take over the leadership. With the united bosses on one side, and the arrival of International President Costield on the other side, a prolonged deadlock seemed possible.

A sudden settlement, by which Costield orders the Brooklyn plumbers back to work at the old $12 scale without hope of the 5-day week, thus ending the lockout, is also seen as a possibility. This would indicate that the higher officials of the building trades agree with some of the bosses that a building crest has been reached, and that the workers must now prepare for "deflation."

National Struggle.

The New York situation is viewed as part of a national crisis in the building trades, with war brewing in Cleveland and Seattle. In Cleveland the bosses are separating the crafts and beating them one by one while in Seattle a knock-down and drag out fight seems imminent over the full five-day week.

Officials of all plumbers' locals in the city met yesterday at 3 p. m. at the Aberdeen Hotel, headquarters of the international officials.

Ask Labor Injunction.

The Bronx plumbers injected a comic note into the serious struggle by applying for an injunction to restrain the bosses from locking them out. They contend that they have a five-year agreement, which the Employers' Association is violating, and have asked the courts to make the bosses be good.

A similar injunction granted recently was flatly defied by the master plumbers and later vacated by the judge when he saw what a farce it was.

Plumbers' Helpers Confer.

At a conference between a delegation of the striking plumbers' helpers, who were represented by C. E. Miller, president of the helpers' organization, M. Patrick, a vice-president and M. Singer a member of the executive board, with the officials of the different locals of plumbers in greater New York presided at by Thos. J. Burke, the problem of the striking helpers was taken up.

"The attitude of the plumbers and especially Mr. Burke was a very favorable one for the helpers," said C. E. Miller, "the fact that the plumbers are taking such an attitude encourages us in our struggle. We are preparing for the fight, which we hope will not be a long one, although we are making all preparations for a long battle.

"On Monday we are opening a kitchen that will feed all the striking helpers. The kitchen will be open every day at the Church of All Nations. This is necessary because the low wages of the helpers—four dollars a day does not permit them to save any money."

Secretary Street Carmen Gain.

SCRANTON, Pa., (FP)—Scranton street car motormen and conductors gain one cent an hour in a new 12-year agreement, bringing wages up to 55 for 5-man car operators and to 73 cents an hour for those operating the one-man cars. Mechanics in the barns gain 3% cents, bringing their average scale to 72 cents an hour.

A strike hung in the balance during the six weeks of negotiations. The men belong to the Amalgamated Association.

NEW ENGLAND CONFERENCE OF WORKING WOMEN TO BE HELD IN BOSTON, MAY 15

BOSTON, May 9.—A conference of New England working women, representing every trade and industry, will be held on May 15th at 2 p. m. at South Union Hall, 64 Chambers Street, Boston, (near the North Station).

The call to attend is for industrial conference, to all labor organizations, women's auxiliaries, women's organizations of New England and working class women of shops, factories and stores.

Against War.

The first problem marked for consideration by the women is organization "to wage a bitter struggle against imperialist war" and secondly the organization of working women. But the conference, which looks to the permanent organization of women in every field, plans to discuss a long list of "problems confronting working women, including every big issue of the day, from unemployment to the vote." It plans also to take definite action on many of these.

Call to Send Delegates.

All New England organizations of working class women are invited to send two delegates to this conference and they are also asked to contribute $1.00 to help defray expenses. The invitation to the conference is signed by Eva Hoffman, secretary; Frances Alexon, secretary Mothers League of New England; Anna Kempinen, secretary Women Branches Finnish Workers Clubs; K. Berzione, New England District Organizer, Lithuanian Working Women's Alliance.

Strike of Paper And Bag Makers May Start Soon

(By A WORKER Correspondent.)

On May 1, the contract between Local 107 of the Paper Plate and Bag Makers' Union, and Alfred Bleyer and Co., was ended.

At a recent conference between the Shop Committee and the boss the union put forth its modest demands for a 46-hour week and an adjustment of wages. The boss was extremely polite, but told the committee to postpone the conference.

Second Conference.

At the next conference the management shocked the committee by putting forth its "Rules and Regulations," which are, in effect, counter-demands aiming at the weakening of the union and at the greater enslavement of the workers in that shop.

Let us cite one or two points in the counter-demands:

1. Scale of production.

2. Right to discharge first and then settle between Shop Committee and bosses.

3. No holidays to be paid for if a worker stays away from work a day before or after the holiday.

To Enslave Workers.

These counter-demands, and the other minor ones, are made with the very plain motive of subjecting and enslaving the workers more and more.

A recent meeting of the union took up the question of the demands and counter-demands. Them emphatically rejected the counter-demands, characterizing them as "impossible, enslaving, breaking the union," etc., and they upheld their own demands.

The Last.

They were not satisfied with this. An unanimous vote carried the motion that the next conference be the last, and that if the bosses insist on their counter-demands, which they call "Rules and Regulations," the shop will immediately go on strike.

Since they are a section of the Central Trades and Labor Council and have a large branch of the International Labor Defense, they do not fear lack of support. Other organizations, besides those mentioned, will likewise contribute to the success of a strike.

Organize Strike Committee.

At the same meeting a strike committee consisting of some twenty-five workers was organized.

Local 107 of the Paper Plate and Bag Makers' Union has shown its solidarity and unity of purpose at this meeting. They mean to back up every word they say. They will fight the bosses's counter-demands until they win the strike. They are a big, solid mass prepared for a bitter struggle of a number of weeks' duration.

To Fight Hard.

If the bosses force the strike, they will suffer in the end for it. The workers of Local 107, P. P. & B. U. will gain what they rightfully ask for. The slogan is: "We Will Win."

Fur Trimmers to Expand Activity, Is Market Rumor

As a result of the agreement signed last week by the Fur Trimming Manufacturers' Association with the Joint Board of the Furriers' Union, the fur manufacturing world has been in an uproar and the market is filled with a mass of predictions and rumors.

One persistent report is that the trimming association now plans to enlarge its scope and take in a number of manufacturers who are dissatisfied with the leadership in the Associated Fur Manufacturers, Inc. Already there are a number of coat manufacturers who have applied for membership in the trimming group. There is a race on now between the two groups to gain new members, and there is talk of each group suspending initiation fees during the campaign.

Representatives of the Joint Board and the trimming association have already met to discuss who shall be the new impartial chairman under the new agreement. Many prominent names have been suggested, but no decision in the matter has been reached.

One result of the new agreement is that those manufacturers who have so far ignored the order of the Associated to discharge all workers who refuse to register with the International, now feel their position strengthened; and they are confident that the Associated will not dare to try to force compliance with this arbitrary ruling.

2,000 Still Out.

The situation remains stationary as far as lock-outs are concerned. About 2,000 workers have been discharged for refusal to register and they are maintaining regular picketing of their shops. There was a great mass demonstration this morning with many thousand workers on the picket line. So far little effort has been made by the bosses to take any scabs into the shops. Evidently they realize it would be futile.

Journalistic Ethics of Boston Post May Cost Paper Sum of $400,000

BOSTON, May 9.—The ethics, such as they are, of the capitalist press received a frightful blow here when the Atlantic Monthly filed suit for $400,000 against the Boston Post for printing the Governor Smith's statement that the pope won't rule America if Tammany's hero is elected president.

The Post, it is charged, bribed employees of the firm publishing the Atlantic Monthly in order to get a copy of Smith's statement, for publication before the Atlantic Monthly was off the press.

The Post claimed a big "scoop" in beating other newspapers by several days in letting the world know about Smith's defense against the anti-catholics. The Atlantic Monthly asks $1 for each copy of the Post containing the stolen article.

WHITEWASH OF YELLOW FIRM BY INSPECTORS HIT

Say Building Officials Bribed by Outfit

Four separate investigations to determine the cause of the accident on Friday at the office building of the non-union Yellow Taxicab Company, at 514 East 23rd St., where seven persons lost their lives and forty others were injured, are under way following the publication of a report by Peter C. Spence, chief of the Bureau of Fire Prevention.

Faulty building materials, causing a structural collapse, were held responsible by Spence, who announced his findings after a two-day investigation. He said his conclusion was based on the fact that absolutely no evidence of fire, such as must inevitably have preceded or followed an explosion, was found in the debris.

"It was not a reinforced concrete building" Spence said. "All that braced the concrete were a few quarter-inch rods. The building fell in of its own weight. Had reinforced concrete been used in its construction few, if any, lives would have been lost.

A new scandal, involving the previous city administration, is developing, unless the findings of the investigators are not made public, for the criticism of Spence was released following an attempt by Frederick C. Keuhnle, chief inspector for the Department of Buildings, to exonerate the contractors who erected the structure and the Building Department agents who approved it, of suspicion of laxity or absolute dishonesty.

Keuhnle, after an incomplete investigation, announced that the construction of the building was entirely according to regulation and that there was no evidence of violation of building laws. This statement was received with considerable scoffing and skepticism by opponents of the Tammany regime.

The connection between John P. Sinnott, secretary to former Mayor John F. Hylan, and the Yellow Taxicab Company, of which Sinnott was one of the leading stockholders, is cited by many as sufficient grounds for belief that violations of the building laws were "overlooked" by building inspectors. During the Hylan administration the Yellow cabs had a monopoly of the taxi stands, and were accorded many traffic privileges.

Besides these of Chief Spence and Chief Inspector Keuhnle, investigations of the accident were begun yesterday by Police Inspector Arthur Carey of the Homicide Squad and Assistant District Attorney John F. McGeean. All of them refused to make known their findings so far, and District Attorney Banton, referring to McGowan's investigation, admitted that he has no power to compel attorney or other technicians for the special inquiry needed to place the blame definitely, and must, perforce, await the reports of the city's technical men.

Of the nine seriously injured, it was said at Bellevue that eight would be discharged in a day or two, but one, a stenographer, Grace Goldman, is in imminent danger of death. In all, seven persons were killed, and 40 injured by falling debris.

I. L. D. and Barbers Hold Sacco Meeting

The joint executive boards of the International Labor Defense, Williamsburg Branch, and the Barbers' Union, Local 913, in conference have decided to call on Sacco and Vanzetti conference for Wednesday, May 11, at 8:30 p. m. in the Barbers' Union headquarters, 66 Manhattan Ave., Brooklyn.

All working class organizations in Brooklyn are invited to attend this important conference. If any organization was not received an invitation, they are earnestly invited to take this announcement as an invitation.

With the passing of each day, the agitation for the unconditional release for Sacco and Vanzetti becomes greater. More and more the class prejudice and blatant "frame-up" aspect of the case becomes clear to the world at large.

The City of Mills

By MARY B. MULLETT.

It was at the corner held to vain labor. I had alikened through the wandering crowds and found myself at a booth where there were dresses for sale. "Look here, Fellow-Workers, did you ever see such a bargain? Mine silk dress for five dollars. Only five dollars for this nice dress—worth fifteen!"

A little crowd of women had gathered—they felt the materials, tried the dresses up against each other. Five dollars was very cheap—but, then, there might be better bargains somewhere else. They moved on.

One Wanted It.

One remained standing, her eyes fixed on the shimmering green of the dress. A bony hand reached out and the of fingers felt the texture of the goods.

"Nice dress, lady. Why don't you get it?"

The hand drew back quickly. "Yes, nice dress."

"Come on, lady. Buy the dress, it's a bargain."

"Yes, it's a bargain. I no buy."

"You won't buy it?" The salesnevice looked at her "prospect" with scorn. "You won't buy it when it's only five dollars? Gee, what do you think we're going to do? Give things away?"

A faint flush came into the woman's sallow face. I realized suddenly that she would have been beautiful had she not looked twenty years older in face than in body. "No. No. I know it is the bargain. But I no have money."

"No money? That's what you all say. You got money, lady."

I stepped forward—I had remembered that face. The woman was a striker. At sight of me she smiled, answered my greeting.

"It's Hard"

"It's hard when you're broke and want to get things, isn't it? And everything's so cheap here, it seems a shame not to buy them."

She nodded. "Sure. I guess you been broke too and you know. That lady," a thumb jerked toward the keeper of the booth, "she think I got plenty money. Maybe she don't know I been on strike ten months?"

"Maybe not. Maybe she doesn't know there is a strike."

Never Had a Silk Dress.

We laughed.

The woman turned to me with a position of the dress. "Mary—he she don't know, how I no have that dress." Her eyes closed to again caress it.

"I never have a silk dress." The intonation had faded into a dull monotony of tone. "In the old country, nobody have. Then I marry and I come here, fifteen year back. My husband say to me 'Rosa I get money and I buy you silk dress.' So he go work in the mill, but he not get much money. We save a little, then we have baby and the money go. I think, well, sometime I have the silk dress. Everyone have; this not like the old country—here you must have."

Babies—Sickness.

"Yes, it seems that way."

"Sure, and so I want. Again we save money—I think I get my dress next month perhaps. But we have another baby, and my husband sick long time, and I go work in the mill, too." The bent, twisted hands had told me that.

"Well, we go on so—and sometimes we have a little, but never money for the silk dress."

She laughed. "So the strike come, and my husband he say, 'You going out?' and I say, 'Sure, I go on strike for a silk dress.' He know I want long time, so he laugh and say alright he strike too."

"And you're still striking for it." It was rather an obvious rejoinder, but I was not much thinking what I said. My mind was absorbed with the picture of those two mill-workers, who, after fifteen years of starvation wages, could still laugh together over the joke of making the strike a personal matter—bringing it down to the understandable level of their own cherished ambitions.

When We Win!

Again her eyes caressed the sleazy silk of the dress—she turned to me with a half-embarrassed laugh, the expression of one who realizes the absurdity of her own dreams.

"And when we win, I get a silk dress—" an unbelievable flash of merriment lit, for a half second, that not quite beautiful face—"and I think I wear my silk dress and go make call on the boss!"

She walked away, still smiling—as she passed the dress her twisted hand stole another moment's shy contact with its silk.

The Treasure Ship

OAKLAND, Cal., May 9.—Gone are the adventurers and the Klondike "kings" of '98, but the ship that carried more passengers and gold out of the Alaska country than any other vessel on the coast is lying at the Oakland waterfront, as trim as she was thirty years ago.

This "Treasure Ship" of the Klondike days—the "Humboldt"—was sold recently at auction for $28,000 to satisfy liliels against her owners.

Auction Draws Crowd.

Lusty tales of the Alaskan gold rush days that cling to the once proud "Humboldt" brought thousands of San Francisco's merchants exchange to witness the auction. Albert E. Gillespie was the successful bidder.

And the man who took her north for her first trip, who quelled the gun fights of maddened miners, settled the disputes of the angry camp following mistresses and lost only $100,000 out of $100,000,000 worth of gold dust and bullion that comprised his cargo, was among those present at the auction.

Captain F. G. Baughman remains master of the historic ship that sailed through the Golden Gate, the slim, white craft that made 565 trips into northern waters.

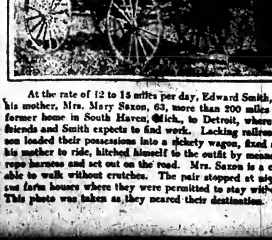
Captain Recalls Treasure Days.

"Exciting days and dangerous, those gold rush days," declared the captain, the tall, white-haired and unsmiling master whose word was the only law among the roughest outfit that ever thronged north at the smell of "gold." "They drank champagne as if it were water and every morning after breakfast there'd be 75 to 100 empty bottles lying on the table."

Among the famous kings of the Klondike who shipped aboard the "Humboldt" and ware put ashore on the rocks in the Arctic over the passes to the Yukon, were such men as Charlie Anderson, "the lucky Swede," who sat up in his cabin every trip south to guard the piles of gold bars stacked all round him, "Kings" McDonald, LeDue and "Soapy" Smith, ringleaders of the Skagway "bad men."

The kings are long since gone—their gold is spent and stolen and hidden away.

A Fantastic Legend.



There is a fantastic tale that sailors tell about the "Humboldt"—that somewhere in the dark depths of her hold are bars of gold to the sum of $80,000. Of the $100,000 that was stolen on a trip from Alaska in 1910, about $20,000 was recovered ashore. The thieves were not able to land the rest and so they slipped the bars into the hold of the "Humboldt," to be rid of it—at least, that's the story.

Be this as it may, the ship that carried sled dogs and pet bears, wild women and wild wolves, along with her treasure cargo in the old days, still is sturdy; her captain and only commander since she was launched in Humboldt bay, California, thirty-one years ago, is the only member of the old crew remaining.

English Earthquake.

LONDON, May 9.—Earthquake shocks accompanied by prolonged subterranean rumblings were reported today from Padstow, Cornwall.

TREKS 200 MILES FOR WORK

At the rate of 12 to 15 miles per day, Edward Smith, 62, hauled his mother, Mrs. Mary Saxon, 63, more than 200 miles from their former home in South Haven, Mich., to Detroit, where they have friends and Smith expects to find work. Lacking railroad fare, the son loaded their possessions into a rickety wagon, fixed a place for his mother to ride, hitched himself to the outfit by means of a rude rope harness and set out on the road. Mrs. Saxon is a cripple, unable to walk without crutches. The pair stopped at night at various farm houses where they were permitted to stay without charge. This photo was taken as they neared their destination.

"L" CARS ALMOST TOPPLE INTO STREET BELOW

A defective switch is blamed for this "L" accident in Chicago, at Van Buren and Wells Streets, where an eastbound Humboldt Park train crashed into the rear of a Wilson Avenue express at a switch turn. The cars careened as if they would plunge into the street below. Two persons were injured.

Naggin' de Niggah

ARTICLE II

By WILLIAM MELVILLE SUTTON.

Whenever a northerner objects to the white man's attitude or treatment of the Negro, and only a courageous northerner will in the south, and whenever he voices the opinion that the black man is a human being, the thin-lipped, mean-looking mouth of the southerner expresses the one-tracked brain's ever-persistent, ubiquitous retort:

"Wal, would you-all marry a niggah; would you-all sleep with one?"

Can't Argue With Him.

To him it is the retort magnificent. He has floored you and he cackles. And against such logic one has no argument.

Evidence of the southern race-equality myth is the Jim Crow law which takes its place, among the moronic legislative acts of the south, with the Tennessee Anti-Evolution law. Because you wonder why a seat is contaminated because a Negro has sat in it or because a Negro sits in the one next to yours on the street car and train, you are asked, "Would you-all marry a niggah." But no one will give a really good reason. Perhaps the southerner feels, like Europe's consanguineous royal ninnies, that subject of common and therefore lowly vintage is unfit as a seat-comrade. Or perhaps that a Negro's proximity to him degrades him. Who can know? For who can fathom the southern mind, simple as it might be?

Want to Hog Room.

The Jim Crow law stipulates in gist that although Negroes must take the back seats and the whited the front ones—in order that they may have the better view perhaps—there must be no dividing line; the arrangement must be made according to the number of white and black passengers. Yet—there always is a yet in the south—white simpletons daily harass the newspapers with demands that they, the newspapers, use their influence to gain legislation that would bring about a cut-and-dried boundary line. Such a line, for instance, that would cause conditions under which Negroes would stand, while only a few of their brethren sat, and the whites would sit in a compartment with four rows of side-seats to spare and vacant. But, legislations or no, the whites see to it that similar conditions prevail.

Ancient Terrors.

For example—and I am not presenting theories or hypotheses, but actual facts—two chattering, slimy and skinny old spinsters drag their empty carcasses into a street-car, which, like all southern cars, has two short benches facing each other in the front, two rows of side seats intended for two passengers each, and then two more benches, as in front, at the back. Seats and benches alike are occupied, in that in front the benches are full and in each side seat at least one person—a Negro is a person, if not a personage, to this writer—is seated. Yet the chattering females, who could easily find seats alone, among the whites, of course, must take places where their decaying hips would be in juxtaposition. Two Negroes may be sitting together. They have all the rights of law, strength of rules and regulations, etcetera, to their seats. But the two females refuse to see it in that light.

A high-pitched, stringy voice that under other circumstances is a whine, orders:

"Hey, you niggahs, we-all wants dem seats. Git up."

And They Do.

And obediently, the two blacks rise and walk to the rear of the car, where they hang their heads to hide the chagrin and malice that shake them, and the two husbandless maidens sink into the seats a moment before contaminated by trousers hiding black skin.

Enforcing Gentility.

Another instance:

A little above center in a street-car is the scene. All seats are occupied; the aisles, all other spaces, is crowded. A fat woman, bearing a burdensome offspring in one arm close to her breast, pulling another youngster, somewhat older, by the hand, enters and pushes her way into the scene. A white gentleman—gentleman, understand—is enjoying a newspaper and, what's more, a luxury of all luxuries on this jammed trolley-carrier—a seat. He is a gentleman enough to see that a lady and her issue must rest, but he is not gentleman enough to give up his uplifting newspaper and the restful seat. Instead, he calls out:

It's The Law.

"Hey, you niggah, git up. Don' you-all see a white leddy?" Behind two Negroes must rise. The white leddy gets her seat. The honorable gentleman has not exceeded any authority; the Jim Crow law is on his side. Doesn't it say, somewhere in its unspeakable passages, that no niggah must sit while a white gentleman or leddy is standing?

This attitude permeates the pedagogy of the south, too. But here the intolerance is not so limited. It goes a little farther, becomes more vicious; the minds of pedants are not so elastic as those of the less erudite. Whereas in the street car the white man can endure the presence of the Negro—at the back—he cannot bear the thought that his children must be subjected to the air into which and from which a black child might breathe. The taint of black blood might touch his youngster. And then what calamities! Just imagine a white woman's lowering herself to teach pickaninnies! Just imagine how a white child's chances to become a good preacher, Sunday school superintendent, lawyer, boollmarm would be jeopardized if a little black head, with tiny, kinky ringlets to which are appanded minute pink bows, were endeavoring to take in some of the imbecilic knowledge handed out by the same 'marm in the primary grades!

Called Culture.

My wife, a school teacher in the north until she knew better, was curious about the schools of the south. She expressed her curiosity to our pious, baptist landlady, whose profound loyalty to her church expressed itself in frantic efforts to wean away her husband from the methodist church and who did not stop, as she boasted, while discouraging his wayward leanings, at destroying before he could see them the highly-literary, mimeographed announcements of the Faxon methodist church which came to him by post.

This pure lady hails from Kentucky and she keeps chickens and a cow in her back yard in order to save pennies on eggs and milk and—to keep her roomers awake. She is high minded, righteous, perfectly correct. She supplies this to sociology and pedagogical science.

The "Bed." Again.

"A white man, he ain't got no right to put his child in allong with niggah brats. They's a place for niggahs and fer their kids. We-all got no use fer them down here. The big ones, they's fer civil'un; the little ones, they's worse. You-all can't teach them nothing', 'specially what you-all's teachin' to white chil'un. They don't keep what's bein' said, an' they just natch'ly hinder the white ones. Besides, just think of putting blacks and whites together! Why, that's just like puttin' white folk and niggahs together in one bed. Ah sure don' know what's worse."

They Raise Preachers.

And then:

"Do you-all mean to say that up north they put them together? My Gawd, what filthy habits! An' you-all was teachin' them? Just think of the white woman down heah teachin' black brats! Why, her family would disown her an' her friends would shun her." And on and on in that vein. And this female is typical of all the whites in the south.

In the ecclesiastical schools of higher learning—and the south abounds in these fulsome institutions that are never heard of, that rest amid shrubbery, foliage and cows and chickens in hills, dales, swamps and that are supported by noble baptists, presbyterians, methodists, Ku Kluxers and fearful Catholics—the situation is the same. No mingling. The white may fear the taint all his life.

North Cows Him.

Occasionally a Negro who hears that the north's institutions are more liberal and that they actually teach humanity in these fulsome institutions and shrinks into a day-by-day laborer in an effort to return to the intellectual level imposed on them by their white masters.

Maybe Liberalism!

The southerner points to this reclamation of the south from the north with vast pride:

"The south is funny, sah," he says, "If you were born here, or have got the mud of the soil on your feet, you can never leave. If you do leave, you always come back. There's something here that brings you back." And as an afterthought: "Maybe it's liberalism."

That is how he accounts for the return. But he does not know, or refuses to know, that it is the hustle and hurry of the north, so different from the lazy, shiftless life of the south, and the unendurable winters that terrify the Negro and send him scurrying back to the Spanish moss, the magnolias and the corn. As for the "liberalism" I fear that the Negro would rather endure the apathetic, cool attitude of the free north than the loathing, contemptuous forbearance of the anti-abolitionist south.

Sacco and Vanzetti

Who is it knocks upon the gate?
Who is it cries from fallen feet?
O brothers, let it not be late,
O warriors, stand against retreat!

The bloody ballad sings again,
And men are wasted by despair,
Lo, where the garrulous wings complain
Is a liar-crowded air!

Dragging a noisome trail of wonder,
The caravans of darkness drift
Against your brightening word of thunder.
O dawn-awakened ones be swift!

Who is it knocks upon my heart?
They have debarred you, crucified!
Called you savage, and upstart,
Broken you teeth, and pierced your side!

Wide are the currents of your grief,
Deep upon deep your torment lies,
O tasters of the bitter leaf,
O runners where the summer dies!

The lords have spoken, the laws are wise . . .

BOOKS

THE FREEDOM OF ART.

The middle-class fairy-tale about the freedom of art, its immunity from the effects of social conflicts, has been having a tough time the world over, most recently in Germany where Fascists and Social Democrats carry on the great "democratic" traditions. A number of publishers and editors have been arrested during the past year for issuing left-wing literary works. Matters have gone so far, that the Protective League of German Authors, which includes writers of every tendency, has had to petition the authorities to restore the post Johannes R. Becher to the position of a man on trial for violating the book law.

This may sound like a paradox, but here are the facts:

Becher, who is considered one of the best poets in Germany, regardless of tendency, happens to be a member of the Communist Party. His poetry reflects his political views. Result: in 1925 he was arrested for holding the mirror up to Wilhelmstrasse.

He was released during the so-called "Hindenburg amnesty," only to get busy again on a novel dealing with chemical warfare in the future. The book is a stinging satire on bourgeois civilization. Title: "(CHCI-CH) IS As or The Only Just War." The amnesty made Becher immune from persecution, but his publishers were arrested, tried, and condemned, and the chemical warfare novel suppressed. The newsstands and bookshops of Berlin freely and profusely display pornographic works, magazines on female beauty, with detailed illustrations, the official organs of the homosexuals and lesbians; but Becher's novel may not be sold; and when I finally obtained a copy from a friend I was asked to carry it wrapped up in thick layers of the Lokalanzeiger.

The decision of the court made every new work of Becher's a continuation of the condemned book. While the poet is personally immune, as a result of the amnesty, any publisher who issues any of his works runs the risk of going to jail.

Becher realizes the effectiveness of this form of censorship, and wants to fight it out in the courts. He sees no reason why others should be punished for his writings, or—what is even more important—why the class character of the government's war on books should skulk behind the smoke-screen of legal technicalities.

The Protective League of German Authors has therefore asked the authorities to save Becher from his position as a complete outlaw, and to restore him to the position of a "criminal," so that he can be tried in the courts.

The Becher case is only one of many reflecting the class-struggle in literature, art, and drama, which in Germany, at any rate, is extremely conscious and intense.

INCLUDING THE SCANDINAVIAN.

Bolshevist Russia, by Antou Karlgren. MacMillan Company, New York. $3.50.

Professor Karlgren seems to be suffering from political paranoia. The lies, illusions, and imbecilities current about Soviet Russia five years ago are far from still realities. While the more intelligent bourgeoisie everywhere is loudly admitting that the Bolsheviks have brought Russian industry and agriculture up to the pre-war level and that the economic prospects of the workers' and peasants' state are excellent; while bourgeois experts in education (vide Miss Farrel) and art (vide Lee Simonson) are whooping it up for Soviet caltare; while workers' delegations from Western Europe find that the Russian workers and peasants are actually running the country—the introverted professor from the Siav University of Copenhagen can see nothing but evil in the vast territory from Shebech to Vladivostok.

Unfortunately for his case, though fortunately for truth, the professor from Copenhagen overdoes his stuff. No one can be so prejudiced against Soviet Russia as to seriously believe that it contains nothing but 140,000,000 criminals, idiots and fools. Furthermore, the professor doth protest too much. The entire book is written in a high hysterical falsetto; the author gesticulates violently; the foam runs down the corners of his mouth. His entire case consists of alleged quotations from the Soviet press (he never gives dates by which these quotations can be verified) which criticise certain evils. That there are evils and difficulties the Bolsheviks are the last to deny; that the Bolsheviks are carrying on an open war against bureaucracy and inefficiency the Copenhagen professor will be the young to see. His logic is simple: the doctor who fight against a disease is responsible for that disease!

It may be that the esteemed professor is not deliberately lying; certainly he is a thin skinned literat. Why repeat over and over in what is supposed to be a serious political book that every Communist wears boots and spurs? Anyone who has been in Soviet Russia knows it is not true; but if it were true, in what way would that invalidate the Soviet Government? Another serious charge against the Bolsheviks is that the young girls use Coeamyon paint, bob their hair, and smoke. Many of them do smoke, and many do bob their hair; but for every Russian girl who bobs her hair there are ten American girls who do the same. Russian girls do NOT paint; American girls do. Very interesting facts. What is their connection with the Soviet state, with the workers' and peasants' revolution? Why does the professor from Copenhagen talk about these young Russian Communists with the voice of John Roach Stratton, over and over again?

I recommend the book only to those who are interested in the psychiatry of politics. —JOSEPH FREEMAN.

FACTS ABOUT NEGRO WORKERS.

Negro Labor in the United States. Charles H. Wesley. The Vanguard Press. 50c.

This book fills a long felt want. It is the first full-length study in its chosen field. The author traces the history of the Negro worker in America, from the time of his arrival in the country as the slave of southern tobacco and later cotton kings to the present. He gives an interesting picture, backed up by figures, of the Negro's distribution through the varied industries of America. Painstakingly Mr. Wesley follows the course of the colored laborer, from his start as a field hand, notes his development as a skilled worker, then shows him at work in the growing factories, shops and mines.

The study represents a vast amount of effort. The work is heavily documented. A long list of references supplements each chapter. A further extensive bibliography is furnished at the end of the book. Among the criminals, idiots and fools. Furthermore, the professor doth protest too Negro organization, the National Labor Union.

To my mind the most stimulating parts of the work are the chapters dealing with the history of Negro unions. These vital pages will furnish much needed encouragement to the colored worker, for here he can find lessons, to guide him in his future union plans. It is heartening, indeed, to know that the Negro has a long tradition of organization. The colored man was in the American labor movement from its start. Negroes were early members of the Knights of Labor. Later on colored workers formed a notable portion of the young A. F of L. In some places, because of prejudice, Negroes had to organize separately. On the other hand, Mr. Wesley records an instance where white union men in New Orleans, went on strike, to back up the demands of the organized colored draymen, of that city.

With capable leaders like Isaac Meyers, this mass movement went on expanding. The organization continued to flourish until elements, other than worker, ware allowed membership. These persons, politicians for the most part, strewed the idea of allegiance to the Republican Party. Following this line, the hitherto energetic bodies sank to the level of tame political clubs. Here is the important point for the present growing union movement to mark.

Some space is given to figures of wealth accumulated by Negroes. Unless these sums are the result of the co-operative efforts of workers, I can not see that they properly belong in a volume devoted to labor. Perhaps, though they are justified, since they give some insight into the growth of a colored leisure class.

The book makes almost no mention of the colored woman worker. A few meagre statistics are offered about her and nothing else. This is clearly an oversight. The Negro woman has always been an important factor in the economic life of the country. Today a much larger number of colored women are gainfully employed than white. A group like this in which nearly every member is a worker, should not be ignored in a study of Negro labor.

No social or economic theory underlies this work. The author draws no conclusions of any sort from his great mass of material. He raises no questions. The book is, however, a reservoir of facts. As such it will remain, for some time, the outstanding reference work on Negro Labor.

NOW that the Snyder murder case is off the front pages of our moralistic capitalist press the victims of the Mississippi flood may get a little publicity. It is certain now that they are getting more than publicity, and getting it in the neck. As the editorial in yesterday's DAILY WORKER pointed out, that international ghoul, Herbert Hoover, is down there in the interests of the gigantic hawk shops known as banks to fasten a loan around the necks of the poor homeless and helpless flood refugees that will keep their noses to the grindstone for the rest of their lives.

THIS is the man, touted as the "trouble man" of the Coolidge administration, who used the money of the government's relief organization in Hungary to crush the workers' and peasants' revolution in that country. Again in Russia he sent in an army of stooligeons in the garb of saviors to help the counter revolutionists do their best to wreck the developing Soviet government. Instead of signing the United States treasury for money to aid the unfortunate people along the path of the Mississippi overflow, Hoover has called the bankers together and showed them how they can make more profits out of the misery of the sufferers.

THE government that can spend millions without the flicker of an eyebrow on military expeditions to subjugate Nicaragua and blow Chinese citizens into smithereens can do nothing better for the victims of the Mississippi flood than to pull off a public panhandling scheme for the glory of the professional panhandlers and bless the bankers in their schemes to transmute misery into profits. This episode is typical of the rule of the capitalist system and all its votaries who put the making of profits above all other considerations.

WITH the conviction of the two murderers of the artist Snyder, several sobsisters, philosophers, playwrights and authors will be obliged to advertise for extra work. Out of the muck of testimony that cluttered the pages of the capitalist press for weeks two facts stand out clearly. One is that these two 100 per cent Americans—thoroly averege Americans—killed another typical American for his insurance. They took a chance on their chair for the consideration of the face of the policy—$96,000. The other fact is that out of the thousands of words dragged out of both culprits on the witness stand nothing indicated that either of the two ever read a book of any kind, not to mention a book that would meet with the disapproval of a Boston policeman.

HAD the murderers been addicted to literary fare such as Elmer Gantry, An American Tragedy or The DAILY WORKER, this tendency would be blamed for their fall from the straight and very narrow path they had hitherto trod and might have been successfully used by their lawyers in pleading for their acquittal. But they had no such luck. According to all indications they are tabloid patrons and the lawyers would not spoil good pictorial publicity by hitting at its source. Yet The DAILY WORKER is charged with sending obscene matter thru the mails while the average capitalist newspaper makes a living at the game with impunity.

ONCE upon a time a friend of mine went to a priest to confess his "sins." He attended a rationalist meeting and purchased a copy of the "Age of Reason." He was shocked by its contents, nevertheless intrigued and he read it from cover to cover. Still his conscience smote him and he felt that he needed relief. He told the priest of his deviation. The holy man frowned and branded Tom Paine's splendid contribution to mental emancipation from superstition as a thing of evil. But my friend, being of an inquisitive nature wanted to know if the priest read the book and was answered in the affirmative. Of course the priest read the "bad" book in order to be in a position to

FARMERS PREFER FLOOD TO HOOVER; IGNORE WARNINGS

Risk Lives; Save Stock; Can't Afford "Relief"

NEW ORLEANS, May 10. — Although the flood's toll in property damage in Louisiana will not be known for weeks, machinery for profiteering on the staggered agricultural industry of the state was functioning today. A conference here yesterday between Secretary of Commerce Hoover and Louisiana private financial agencies culminated in the formation of an "emergency credit bank" similar to those previously established earlier this week in Mississippi and Arkansas.

Hoover Loans $9,000,000.

The Louisiana bank will have an initial operating capital of between $700,000 and $1,000,000 subscribed by private interests of the state. Through this and the rediscount machinery of the federal intermediate credit banks, a total of approximately $10,000,000 will be available for Louisiana rehbilitation credit. Nothing will actually be given to the farmers. They can mortgage their land, and borrow money, that is all.

After perfecting details of the financial organization, Secretary Hoover planned to leave tonight for Baton Rouge, headquarters of former Governor John M. Parker's relief organization.

Farmers Will Stick.

With the flood waters of northeastern Louisiana already washing over the Bayou Des Glaises levees, relief agencies of the state were confronted today with the refusal of thousands of farmers in the threatened parishes south of the levee line to heed the evacuation warning issued a week ago when engineers declared a break in the Bayou dikes to be inevitable.

Women and children have left the four hundred square miles in Avoyelles, Pointe Coupee and St. Landry parishes, immediately beyond the wave-washed dikes, but throughout the entire region men remain behind with their cattle and crops apparently determined to rely on their efforts to save something, rather than trust to the greedy financial interests they see flocking over the south, offering to "rehabilitate" them at good, big interest rates after their stock is drowned and their houses are destroyed.

Try To Make Them Quit.

The Bayou Des Glaises is the sole and fragile barrier that stands between the flood waters of the northeastern parishes and the rich cotton and sugar lands to the south. When the danger of inundation of the southwestern parishes from a possible crevasse in the Des-Glaises-Atchafalaya system of dykes first became apparent, warnings were sent by telephone, telegraph, courier and later by radio to the residents of the entire section, to take their household goods, farm equipment and livestock and leaving merely a read guard of men to work on the levees to flee to safety at once. These warning fell upon the ears of a people who have fought floods for generations. They have learned to take their stock to the levees, move their children and furniture to the second flood, tie a rowboat to a front porch post and let the flood take its course. They will try it again, even at the risk of their lives.

No Relief Session.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—May 10.—There will be no extra session of Congress to consider flood relief.

Putting a definite end to the hopes of flood sufferers in the Mississippi Valley for such a session, President Coolidge today sent that message, through his secretary, to Senator James A. Reed (D) of Missouri.

$4 a Day, Government Money, Buys Consent of Bene's Father-in-Law

BERLIN, May 10.—Diplomatic and social circles here are greatly interested in dispatches which state that Eduard Benes, Jr., son of Dr. Benes, Czecho-Slovak foreign minister and important figure in the League of Nations, has announced his engagement to Sari Gronsberger, a Budapest cabaret dancer.

Benes is said to have installed the Gronsberger family in a luxurious apartment in Budapest and to have rewarded the father of his fiancee a pension of $4 a day.

Coal Strike Resumed at Lehigh and Wyoming Co.; Union President Mauled

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., May 10. —After an attempt had been made to stampede back to work the miners on strike against the Lehigh and Wyoming Coal Co. mines at Dupont, near here, company gangsters slugged the president of the local union. The men had been told the mine had settled, and they went back to work. Three hundred came out again at the news that the battle was on again.

ANNOUNCE DRIVE ON LEFT WING IN PASSAIC'S UNIONS

Officials Call for Hunt Against Militants

PASSAIC, N. J., May 10.—Kick out the militant left wing leaders in the Passaic unions.

With this as a guiding policy, the reactionary officials have called for a heresy hunt among the unions in this textile town. The demand was voiced by James Starr, a vice president of the United Textile Workers at the last meeting of the Passaic Labor and Building Trades Council, held at Vincentine's County Club, Saddle River Road.

Referring to the aggressive left wing fighters who led the textile strike as "this element," Starr declared that he had been picked to "be the goat in straightening out one of the dirtiest messes on which I have ever seen." Starr opined that the "element" would "destroy the labor movement if they should get in control, for their thoughts do not run in the same channels as ours."

"Housecleasing" Near.

"There is going to be a housecleaning in some unions in Passaic," he wound up.

Paul W. Fuller, director of the Workers Education Bureau's activities in Passaic, took occasion to hit out at what he termed "partisan" education conducted by the Workers (Communist) Party.

Defining the W. E. B. brand of education as a "search for the facts without bias or partisanship," Fuller condemned training for militant trade unionism backed by the principles of Marxism and Leninism.

Workers Boycott W. E. B.

He complained that the textile workers had practically boycotted the namhypnnby education sponsored by the Matthew Woll controlled Workers Education Bureau.

Fuller denied remarks attributed to him by local newspaper in which he was quoted as saying that the "element" is preaching "hatred among workers for everything—religion, employers and the labor movement."

U.S.S.R. Tells Plute Confab It Won't Check Socialism

GENEVA, May 10.—That European industrial magnates have combined in seventeen huge international trusts for the purpose of boosting world prices was revealed today by the investigations conducted by the industrial commission of the World Economic Conference at Geneva.

Repulsing the attacks on her on the socialization of her trade, the Soviet Union held the center of the stage in the commerce commission. Delegates of the Soviet Union announced that they would refuse to consider any proposal which would check socialism in the USSR.

Of the seventeen international trusts, ten are between Franes and Germany; nine include Great Britain; while two controlling the production of pneumatic tires and incandescent lamps, include the United States.

Fight Company Unions.

SCRANTON, Pa. (FP).—A fight against company unions in the Lackawanna rail shops will be staged this summer if the plans the Central Labor Union of Scranton is discussing mature. The plans are to conduct a drive in every unorganized trade in the city. The American Federation of Labor will be asked to send general organizers.

LARGE VOTE FOR LABOR MEN CAST IN PASSAIC, N. J.

A. Preiskel Supporters Use Terrorism

(This edition of The DAILY WORKER went to press too early to have the election returns. Full report in tomorrow's editions.)

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

PASSAIC, N. J., May 10.—According to all indications a large vote is being cast for the labor candidates in today's local election. All day long from 7 a. m. when the polls opened until 8 p. m. when they closed, supporters of the labor group: Albert Weisbord, Simon Bambach and Simon Smelkinson, were rounding up the voters who were slow in casting their ballot.

Closes With Bang

The labor campaign closed Monday evening with a blaze of excitement. Three large open air meetings were addressed by Weisbord, Rambach, Sylvan A. Pollack, Emil Gardos, M. Kushner, Louis A. Baum and several local speakers.

During the entire campaign the capitalist candidates tried to disturb and break up the working class rallies. On Monday night they were out in full force to create trouble.

Continuous Uproar

The meeting on Oak St. opposite the police station was in a continuous uproar as a result of the disruptive efforts of supporters of Abram Preskiel, assisted by policemen and detectives.

At Hope and Monroe Sts., a truck with Preskiel banners circled around the meeting several times while Weisbord was speaking, creating noise. Many other devices to terrorize the workers were used but to no avail, as the overwhelming majority of the audience supported the labor men.

Return Lists

The labor campaign committee once again appeals for the immediate returning of the contribution lists with the names inscribed. Many debts must be paid and the strengthening of the local movement be continued after the campaign. Return all lists to 27 Dayton Ave., Passaic, N. J.

Bring Sixty Bodies Up At Everettsville Mine; Blast Was Preventible

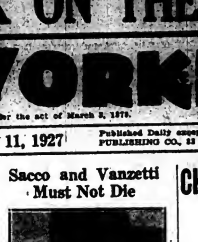
MORGANTOWN, W. Va., May 10. —Sixty bodies have now been recovered from Everettsville mine, it was reported here today by rescue workers, leaving a total of 37 entombed miners still unaccounted for, 11 days after the fatal blast. Exploration of the entire mine, with the exception of the fire area, has been nearly completed.

The mine was wrecked over a week ago by a gas and dust explosion, of the nearly called preventible by the U. S. Bureau of Mines. The state officials in charge of rescue work spent a great deal of time trying to stop the fires which were destroying the coal underground.

The New England Coal and Fuel Co., operators of the mine, is a non-union concern.

Evict Mine Families At Coverdale Monday

PITTSBURGH, May 10.—Ten families of striking miners at Coverdale, now living in houses of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corp., have been ordered to move under penalty of eviction next Monday. Sheriff Braun is carrying out the company's orders.



Navy Won't Hunt Any Longer for Nungesser; Plane Sinks Quickly

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The navy today practically abandoned hope that Captains Nungesser and Coli, French trans-Atlantic flyers, ever would be found alive.

Navy air experts reported to Secretary Wilbur that there is only the slightest possibility that if Nungesser's plane landed in the Atlantic it is still aflot. They said his type of plane would sink within a few hours.

In the opinion of navy officials, a remote hope exists that the Frenchmen may have been picked up by a ship without wireless, or may have landed at some remote place.

A. GARFIELD HAYS ASKS REMOVAL OF WEBSTER THAYER

Calls for Impeachment at Columbia Meeting

One thousand Columbia students, meeting at the McMillin Theatre, Columbia University, voted unanimously Monday evening to send a petition to Gov. Fuller of Massachusetts asking him to appoint a commission to re-examine the entire case of Sacco and Vanzetti.

This followed close on the heels of the petition signed by 14 members of the Columbia Law Faculty who earlier in the day sent an appeal to the governor asking for an impartial review of the case. Prof. Karl N. Llewellyn, of the Law Faculty, read the resolution which was adopted with enthusiasm by the entire audience.

Celia Politzik, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti Students' Committee, which called the meeting in conjunction with the Social Problems Club and Students' Council of N. Y., said: "The Sacco-Vanzetti Committee sprang up when the students heard Sacco and Vanzeti had been found guilty. Our aim is to work for their freedom. We will work until the prison doors swing open, and they are free."

Impeach Judge Thayer.

Arthur Garfield Hays, of the American Civil Liberties Union, was vigorously applauded when he said, "Although I am hopeful Gov. Fuller will pardon Sacco and Vanzetti, I will not think the job has been completed

British Rail Men Demand Review of Great Labor Case

BOSTON, May 10.—The National Union of Railwaymen of Great Britain, representing all of Britain's railway workers outside the locomotive cabs and the clerks, left the appeal laid before Governor Fuller today. The N. U. R. represents 300,000 workers. The Workers' Union of London also asked a review of the case.

Services of George Brenting, Swedish lawyer, son of Prime Minister Hjalmar Branting, have been offered to the Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee. The offer, a gratuitous one, came from the Tidnin Gen Vrand, Stockholm newspaper and organ of the social-democratic party.

A meeting of the committee will be held tomorrow night to decide on the offer. Branting would assist William O. Thompson, defense counsel.

Burns of Allegheny College sent appeals for a review to the governor yesterday.

CHINESE PROTEST BOMBARDMENT BY U. S. AND BRITISH WARSHIPS

Civilians Killed in Unprovoked Shelling; Suspect Chiang Truce With War Lords

SHANGHAI, May 10.—The toll of lives snuffed out by American and British warships is mounting rapidly.

Imperialist warships, when hit by stray rifle bullets as they were "patrolling the Yangtse," have bombarded peaceful villages along the river. Although no accurate estimates have been made of the damage done by the bombardments, it is understood the loss of lives has been heavy since the imperialist vessels often brought their main batteries into action.

The Chinese press is full of reports and of protests against bombardments in the vicinity of Nanking and Chinkiang. According to native newspapers two American vessels poured more than a hundred shells into the village of Namensha, last Monday, ten miles from Kiangying, destroying thirty houses and killing and wounding a number of civilians.

Score MacMurray.

There is a good deal of dissatisfaction among missionaries here with the attitude of John V. A. MacMurray, American minister to China, who has allied himself with the British diehards and who is understood to favor an ultimatum to the Nationalist government. American missionaries at Peking are reported to have protested to the state department and demanded MacMurray's recall.

Rights Arrest Labor Leaders.

CANTON, May 10.—The right wing here is continuing its persecution of left and labor leaders. A number of labor leaders were arrested yesterday and charged with plotting against the right wing administration at Canton.

Workers' and peasants' unions continue to control many towns and villages in this vicinity, however.

Chiang Truce With War Lords.

SHANGHAI, May 10.—Dr. C. C. Wu, notorious "running dog of the imperialists" has left for Nanking where he will act as minister of foreign affairs in the government that Chiang Kai-shek is attempting to form.

The virtual cessation of hostilities with the northerners across the river indicate that Chiang Kia-shek is either short of ammunition or has made peace with Sun Chuan-fang, Anhwei war lord.

KELLOGG RUSHES MORE MARINES TO CRUSH NICARAGUA

Sacasa Rejects "Peace"; Labor Fears U. S.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—An additional force of 800 marines and 9 airplanes is to be sent at once to Nicaragua to "aid the pacification" of the country, Secretary of the Navy Wilbur announced late yesterday afternoon.

The dispatch of the new contingent is in keeping with the frank and brutal threat of Colonel Stimson, representative of President Coolidge, to use the whole force of the United States to crush the liberals and place Diaz in power.

3,000 Marines.

With the additional marines the American force in the little Latin-American republic will be increased to 3,000 and the airplane force to 15. Twelve American warships are in Nicaraguan waters.

MILLIONS STOLEN BY "BIG FOUR" OFFICIALS CHARGED TO SALARIES

PREVIOUS EVENTS OF INSURANCE EXPOSE.

The targets of this expose are the Metropolitan, Prudential, John Hancock and the Colonial Life Insurance Companies.

As a result of this series, which started on April 11th, Governor Smith ordered Superintendent of Insurance James A. Beha to conduct an inquiry into the charges as made in the Harrison articles.

Among the charges made are misuse of "mutual" funds, overcharging, fraud, graft and subornation.

In spite of the Governor's action the "Big Four" officials have remained silent. The DAILY WORKER awaits Beha's action.

By CHARLES YALE HARRISON.

If the forty million policyholders in the "Big Four" knew that for every dollar paid to them by Haley Fiske & Co., about 65c was used for "management expenses," it is very doubtful if the number of cash customers would remain long at the forty million mark.

These are the official figures as submitted to Mr. Beha. During 1925 the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, the senior limb of the "Big Four," paid to its policyholders 177 million dollars in claims, maturities and dividends. Its management expense was 114 million dollars. Sixty-five cents to every dollar paid out.

Costly "Management"

The Prudential paid out 141 million dollars to its "mutual" customers and charged them 81 million dollars for running the show. Fifty-seven cents to the dollar.

The John Hancock disbursed 85 million and charged 22 million to "necessary management expenses." Sixty-five cents to the dollar.

The Colonial Life Insurance Company reported $1,634,536 as management expense while its total payments to policyholders were $1,164,708. A dollar and a half expenses for every dollar paid in claims, etc.

This corporation should be denied the right to do business in the State of New York. The fact that Mr. Beha takes no action in the Colonial case leads one to believe that he has a motive in not doing so.

Extortion Prevents Bankruptcy

If any other business were run on the drunken sailor principles which guide the weekly premium life insurance business it would be bankrupt in a year.

Included under the heading of management expenses is anything from a $12 a week clerk's salary to $150,000 a year salary for one of the officials.

ROUMANIAN LABOR LEADER FACES DEATH AT HANDS OF COURT-MARTIAL

An urgent request was received here yesterday from the Communist Party of Roumania asking the workers of the United States to cable their protests against the court martial trial of Comrade Stefanov, Communist Party leader, which is taking place in Bucharest.

Not only is the government using force and violence against the Communists but it dissolved the convention of the independent trade unions by armed force.

Needle Trade Defense

The Concerts At the Bazaar.

One of the most interesting features of the Needle Trades Workers' Bazaar, which opens at the Star Casino, 107th Street and Park Avenue, tomorrow, will be the concerts given by the Workers' Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Hyman Weiss-berg, the well known conductor, is putting many famous artists among the Bazaar performers. Among them are Mischa Violin, Famous Russian Violin Virtuoso, Jan Cellist, Pier Celesto Carbonell, Soprano, Coloratura, Laura Newell, Harpist and Irma Dubova, Soprano.

European Training.

A word about the artists: Irma Rozdolf was born in London, England of Russian Parents. At 6 years of age she began her musical education, and later continued her studies in Petrograd. She is a graduate of the Royal Conservatory and has received the highest honors as a pianist-composer.

Mischa Violin was born in Russia and studied abroad. Mr. Violin is a young artist who appeared as soloist with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Violin is most certainly a violin virtuoso of rare accomplishments and has made for himself a reputation in all parts of the world.

Professionals.

Jos. Kmenta is a cellist of no small ability and received first prize as a Soloist. He is a graduate of the Belgium Conservatory and toured several European countries and gave concerts with tremendous success. He is at present in New York and recently signed up with the New York Symphony Orchestra, as a soloist.

Laura Newell is a harpist of rare ability. She was formerly Soloist with the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra and is now Soloist with the Capitol Theatre Symphony Orchestra.

Irma Dubova, a descendent of Count Leo Tolstoi is a Dramatic Soprano. Miss Dubova has appeared in Concert here. She has a remarkable voice and was enthusiastically received only three weeks ago when she gave a recital at Aeolian Hall.

Bazaar Opens Tomorrow.

The Cloakmakers and Furriers Defense Bazaar, opens at the Star Casino, 107th Street and Park Ave., tomorrow. We will have a number of fine merchandise that will have to be sold within a period of four days.

This affair is featured by the great quantities of unbroken lots of merchandise to be sold. There will be a thousand men's straw hats, a full line of men's suits and overcoats, a thousand ladies' cloaks, suits and dresses, a thousand ladies' pocket books and bags, brief cases and other leather goods, in addition to great quantities of shirts, shirtwaists, hosiery, underwear, jewelry, novelties, neckwear, white goods, etc., etc.

The Committee in charge will have a Brand New Chevrolet Touring Car that must be sold at the Bazaar.

Three fine concerts under the direction of George Koukley have been arranged for Thursday, Friday and Sunday evenings. There will also be dancing every night with a grand ball for Saturday.

Young Workers Collect.

One hundred and ten members of the Young Pallet Shop, 29 W. 23rd St., have pledged themselves to contribute 5 cents per week, and used the money to buy shirts at the manufacturers' price from the committee. The result was a donation of two dozen of the finest Pallet shirts now on the market.

The workers became so enthusiastic that they are planning a collection each day for the opening day of the Bazaar; they hope to have at least another 2 dozen shirts in addition to a half dozen shirts promised by the firm. With a few exceptions all the workers in the shop donated in this collection. Just two weeks ago twenty-eight of these same workers subscribed to the $100,000 Roll Call Fund.

A Half Day's Pay.

The Joint Defense Committee received the following resolution, together with a check for $118.80.

-Whereas the International Officialdom formed a united front with the bosses and

Whereas they use guerillas, the Industrial Squad and all the black forces to compel the workers to register in the yellow union, and

Whereas through attacks of the Forward and the Schachtman-McGrady Company, nine of our best union members were thrown into jail, and

Whereas we know that the present administration of the Joint Board is functioning for the good and welfare of the workers, we therefore Resolve to express our confidence and pledge our financial and moral support to the present administration of the Joint Board. Knowing that a large sum of money is required for the defense of our martyrs, we donate one half day's pay for that purpose. We call upon other workers to follow our example.

(Signed) Workers of the S. & L. Cloak Company.

A Few More Booths.

Related requests for booths at the Bazaar have been received, from the Cloakmakers Women's Council No. 2, Consumers League Bronx and the Furriers Women's Council.

Talking about booths, the Cap-makers with 300 caps for the Spring and Summer promise to do a good job. These caps were all made of goods donated by friends of the defense and do not cost a penny for labor or material.

Some Letter.

Friends of the Joint Defense:

I am a member of Local 35, Ledger No. 5193. I borrowed a dollar and send it to you. If I could I would surely send more. Tomorrow I go to the synagogue to make a memorial for Sigman and Compers with the curse upon him that he suffer like my wife.

WORKERS! STOP THE MURDER OF SACCO AND VANZETTI

Lawyer for Firm Vanzetti Fought Urges His Murder

(By Federated Press)

BOSTON, May 10. (FP)—Vanzetti led the big Plymouth Cordage strike in 1916. And his enemies have neither forgotten nor forgiven. John Noble of the exclusive Boston law firm of Loring, Coolidge and Noble has written Governor Fuller, urging him not to review the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

The cat comes out of the bag when it is recalled that Noble's firm represented the Plymouth Cordage Company at the time of the big strike.

This big corporation dominates the old Pilgrim town. It is popularly called the "Cordage Trust." And never before the big strike had its plants been crippled by a labor walkout. For weeks the manufacture of rope and binder twine was cut off at a time when prices were rising. And Vanzetti's eloquence and energy was constantly on the picket line.

Never Forgive Vanzetti

The company had to pay. Large wage increases followed the strike. Vanzetti has never been forgiven. For 18 weeks a watcher followed him. The plain-clothes "shadow" dogged his heels as he went about the town. He was blacklisted by the Cordage company and the smaller employers they controlled. And seeking livelihood and freedom he boarded a push cart and went peddling fish and eels from door to door in the Italian and Portuguese quarters of the town.

But the company had not forgotten. When Vanzetti was tried for attempted highway robbery before Judge Thayer at Plymouth in the summer of 1920 one of the 12 men on the jury was a foreman of the Plymouth Cordage Co. named Nickeraon. The foreman was never challenged by Vanzetti's attorney, John Vahey. Vahey, since exposed by Vanzetti for his betrayal of his client, is said by a brother attorney to have been a stockholder in the Cordage Co.

Superintendent Brown did his bit too, Vanzetti says. Brown, he charges, knew that he was in town peddling fish on the day he was alleged by the prosecution to have been in Bridgewater. Had the Cordage superintendent given his testimony Vanzetti would have been freed.

Charge Trio Attack Queens Working Girl

Three men were under arrest at the Glendale police station in Queens yesterday on serious charges made by a fifteen year old girl who said they kidnapped her last night in an automobile and attacked her in the Mount Judith cemetery, in a deserted section of Ridgewood, Queens. Detectives say the men confessed.

The girl said she was returning home from a paper box factory in the eastern district of Brooklyn when she was employed.

The Comus, which sailed from New York last Saturday with passengers and freight, was due to reach New Orleans next Friday. Another ship is standing by the Comus.

READ THE DAILY WORKER EVERY DAY

Guard the Freedom of the Press

The attempt of certain societies, with the help of the government, to suppress The DAILY WORKER, is nothing more or less than an attempt to interfere with the fundamental right of the freedom of the press. It is an endeavor to stifle the most militant voice of opposition to the advancers of American imperialism in China and Nicaragua. It seeks to crush the organ of the struggle against the capitalist offensive which is seeking to destroy the labor movement. The land of Mussolini could boast of no more brazen act of autocracy, than this which is being carried on under the smoke screen of American democracy.

The workers will not permit their organ to be silenced. Against the forces of reaction we will mobilize the forces of labor, the forces of progress. To allow the employers to succeed in plans against The DAILY WORKER, means to leave the workers defenseless before the attacks of the bosses.

The attack of the combined forces of reaction against The DAILY WORKER, and against the freedom of the press must be met with the combined forces of the labor movement, mobilized for the protection of its most militant organ, and the protection of the right to freedom of expression generally. The foremost advantage of the reactionaries is their ability to secure adequate financial aid for their nefarious work. Labor must meet this situation by immediately raising money for the defense of The DAILY WORKER. Working class organizations must get on the job—party units, clubs, unions, co-operatives must combine into one solid united front for the defense of The DAILY WORKER and the defense of the rights of labor.

For Arbitrary Act

SCRANTON, Pa., May 10.—Operating under the Lever Act, which was passed during the war, Judge Witmer, of the United States District Court, has issued a temporary injunction against the Hudson Coal Co., superseding the international agreement between the operators and the district president.

Maximilian Cappellini has suspended Stanley Dzierzgiewski "without any reason whatsoever" and without giving him a proper hearing, the committee charges. The resolution forwarded to Indianapolis reads:

"Whereas, President Cappellini had charges preferred to the district executive board against Stanley Dzierzgiewski, a member of Local Union No. 1672, U. M. W. of A., without any reason whatever, and

Whereas, district executive board suspended Stanley Dzierzgiewski from United Mine Workers of America without giving the man a fair and proper hearing before the executive board, therefore be it

Resolved, that we, the members of General Grievance Committee of Hudson Coal Company composed of twenty-two local unions, at a meeting held this date, protest and condemn the action of the district executive board, and be it further

"Resolved, that we appeal to international executive board to investigate Stanley Dziengielewski's case immediately. The situation in District No. 1 is bad enough now and this action of district executive board will cause more friction and dissatisfaction amongst the membership in the district, and be it further

"Resolved, that a copy of this resolution be sent to International President John L. Lewis, and be given to local newspapers and United Mine Workers' Journal.

Rush More Marines to Put Down Nicaraguans

"Being ready as ever for conciliation, I sent delegates. I learned, and was greatly surprised, that Colonel Stimson had notified my delegates and General Jose Moncada, generalissimo of my army, that if we did not accept the continuation of Diaz in the presidency, American marines would disarm our soldiers.

"I cannot understand why the government of the United States, heedless of public opinion on this continent and in the United States, should persist in supporting the Diaz presidency even at the risk of shedding blood of the American soldiers, when the Nicaraguan people have never offended them nor threatened the basic interests of that great nation, whose power and prestige, based on justice and impartiality, would greatly encourage the fraternal solidarity of this continent."

Will Die Honorably.

MEXICO CITY, May 10.—A flat denial that the Nicaraguan liberals had accepted the terms that Henry Stimson, Coolidge's representative, was attempting to impose upon them, was issued yesterday by Dr. Pedro Jose Zepeda, Sacasa's minister to Mexico.

"We are going to struggle honorably until we die," he said. He branded the action of the United States as a violation of the most "rudimentary precepts of international law."

NICARAGUAN LABOR LOSES

By LAURENCE TODD.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Nicaraguan labor loses far more than the upper-class leaders of the Liberal party can lose. In the surrender forced upon the Liberals at the points of ten thousand modern guns by the Washington administration. That is what is at issue when the Liberal forces refuse to recognize the Diaz Conservative regime in Managua—Diaz is kept in office by American guns until after the election promised for 1928, and meanwhile Diaz will not liberate the trade unions that have been the backbone of the revolt in the industrial centers. No pledge of neutrality toward workingclass activities is made by Henry L. Stimson, agent of Secretary Kellogg in dictating the conquest of the country.

Dr. T. S. Vaca, Liberal spokesman at Washington, bitterly comments upon the Stimson performance.

Wall Street bankers, investing in Nicaraguan railroad, bank and other concessions years ago, backed the Chamorro-Diaz military adventure which has cost thousands of lives in Nicaragua in the past two years, for various economic reasons. Chief of these was the threat labor organizations might come to play as big a part in Nicaraguan destiny as they have in Mexico. Nicaraguan workers might preach high wages, short hours, national self-improvement and anti-imperialism to the workers of the rest of Central and South America. American marines and marines have trampled this budding labor agitation into the tropic mud.

until some action has been taken to impeach Judge Thayer."

He said that when he goes to radical meetings, he reads signs saying "Sacco And Vanzetti Must Not Die," but that in conservative groups, he hears people say "Sacco and Vanzetti Must Die. They have been convicted by a jury, and a jury never makes a mistake."

Sacco and Vanzetti, he said, had perhaps not quite conformed with the best Massachusetts traditions; that Sacco had gone so far as to say that Harvard was not a college for poor men's sons, and quoted Vanzetti who said he had worked with men of all nationalities, and did not want to kill anyone, that he loved them all.

Diffrarent in 1920.

When this statement was applauded by the students, Hays retorted, "Yes, you applaud now, I don't know how many would have applauded in 1920." Hays concluded, "Sacco and Vanzetti have done more for justice while they have been in jail, than any two men out of jail during that time." Robert Dunn, representing the Civil Liberties Union, called the Sacco-Vanzetti case "a ghastly frame-up," and urged the students to get as many letters as possible to Gov. Fuller.

Prof. Morris R. Cohen of the Philosophy Department of City College, spoke of the intense antipathy to Sacco and Vanzetti by Judge Thayer and other conservatives, because they were "outsiders—were foreigners and anarchists." He compared their case with the famous Dreyfus case in France, where Dreyfus was convicted, although he could not possibly have committed the crime he was accused of. He urged the students to have intellectual integrity and "not let others do their thinking for them."

Democracy at Stake.

Rev. Henry Sloan Coffin, president of the Union Theological Seminary, spoke of the war hysteria when Sacco and Vanzetti were arrested, and said, "I was convinced then men were not being given any fairness whatsoever. But I am so worried about Sacco and Vanzetti as I am about our American institutions.

"When I look at the case, I grasp for the props. Our democratic institutions are at stake."

He said he had just returned from Boston where there was a rumor that Gov. Fuller had already asked an impartial committee to look into the case, but suggested that the audience "send a very respectful request to the governor" asking him to appoint a commission.

The resolution unanimously adopted follows:

"1.—That we address to His Excellency, Governor Fuller our petition that in the interest of faith and confidence in American government, he appoint a commission to re-examine the entire case of Sacco and Vanzetti.

"2.—That we express to His Excellency our belief that the public report of such a commission will be a vital service to the judicial and governmental institutions of America."

Prof. William P. Montague, of the Philosophy Department of Columbia, was chairman.

SEAMAN JUST OFF ORGANIZED AUSTRALIAN LINE CONTRASTS POOR CONDITIONS ON U. S. VESSELS

NEW YORK, May 10.—A seaman coming from Australia is sure zeamed for a shock especially if he intends to follow his vocation. Leaving a country where his craft is organized one hundred per cent, he arrives in a country where unionism, among seamen at least, is a farce.

As I have just arrived in New York from Australia, and having experienced the above shock, I feel it incumbent on myself to use my voice and pen to point out to my craft, and incidentally, my class, the dire need for organization.

Wages Lower Here.

I will give a brief outline of wages and conditions, also the method of organization, in Australia; then we will analyze conditions here. I feel positive that my working class readers will agree with me that working conditions are of vastly more importance than are wages; however, the seaman's wage in Australia is much higher than here, as indicated by the following comparison:

	Australia.
Donkeymen	£19.2.6
Firemen and oilers	18.2.6
Coal passers and wipers	16.2.6
Bo'sun	17.2.6
A.B.'s	16.2.6

	United States.
Oilers and watertenders	$65.00-72.50
Firemen	57.50-65.00
Coal Passers and Wipers	50.00-60.00
Bo'sun	70.00-80.00
A.B.'S	55.00-62.50

The messmen, ordinary seamen and boys' wages are in proportion, and as I am a fireman I am not sure what their pay is, so have omitted it, but the above is sufficient to show that wages are higher. Note this: the cost of living in Australia is cheaper than here, good board and lodging for a single man costs only £1.10.0 per week. (Exchange value £1 here is $4.86). Just figure this out yourself.

Conditions Worse Here.

Now, we will look at conditions. In Australian ships both three watch system is in vogue; eight hours constitute a day's work, any work over and above eight hours must be paid for at overtime rates of 2/9 per hour, any work done which occupies less than 30 minutes, half an hour at overtime rates must be paid; if over 30 minutes and less than an hour, one hour at overtime rates must be paid, and so on. For the firemen and coal passers the dumping of ashes is overtime, for the sailors the clearing of decks, etc., is overtime; also, where seamen assist in working cargo a differential rate is paid, which means the seamen's wages are made equivalent to that of the longshoremen; the donkeyman or fireman for keeping steam, and the deckhands for working winches, etc., are paid differential rates.

Time Off.

Again, seamen are entitled to weekly time off. A seamen must have four clear hours off from duty in his home port, or be paid overtime rates for same. Home port means the port where the seaman signs Articles. This leave time can be allowed by mutual consent to accumulate and be taken off as whole days, a day in port being from 7 A. M. to 6 P. M.

When a ship arrives in port he watches must be broken, unless the ship leaves the same day. If watches are not broken overtime rates must be paid for all watches worked between 6 P. M. and 7 A. M. Again, the seaman is entitled to seven days leave of absence on full pay for each six months' continuous employment.

Supplies From Bosses.

Also, mattresses, blankets, eating utensils, soap and towels, separate bath and mess rooms must be provided by the shipowners. Another point is that the seamen do not have to run around the ships or companies' offices looking for jobs, wearing out shoe leather or paying fares. The seamen gather together at the Shipping Office where a waiting room is provided by the government, between the hours of 9 to 11 in the forenoon and 2 to 5 in the afternoon, and where there are vacancies the engineer or officer must pick his men at the waiting room between the above hours, or go without. The seamen of Australia will not take a ship to sea short-handed. The Captain can read the Riot Act until he is blue in the face and the seamen will be adamant; they are organized.

Meet On Company Time.

We will now deal with organization. Every seaman is a member of the Federated Seamen's Union of Australia. He cannot leave the waiting shed to sign on without his book; the members see to that. The seamen's union holds its business on the shipowners' time. On the last Tuesday of each month, the seamen leave their ships to attend the Stop Work Meeting at the various Trades Halls in the different ports between the hours of 8 to 12 noon.

Here, they discuss any grievances they have and formulate tactics to combat them; also, of course, to create new precedents, further improvements, etc. The meeting being held on the shipowners' time, all the seamen in Port assemble together and the open forum being the order of the meeting, an unanimous decision is easily and quickly arrived at; the men then act in unison. Hence, their success.

While they may not have an El Dorado in Australia, they are at least on the right track. The Stop Work Meetings are centers of education; also, decisions made at meetings are enforced by the members. No official can defy resolutions for long, expulsion stares them in the face.

What No Democracy?

Let us see what we find here. I joined an American ship in Newcastle, N.S.W., Australia. Although the wages were lower, I had heard that conditions were good on American ships; also that jobs were plentiful and commodities cheap, and that America was a democracy. This little illusion was soon to be destroyed. I soon discovered that the eight hour principle did not apply to American ships. On several occasions I had to assist for two hours in filling oil tanks, also scrub foc'sl and paint it, pack glands, do scouring, etc., all extra work, for not overtime pay. The food was an abomination and there was even a scarcity. To protest was to protest alone which, of course, is futile. Out of the whole crew I found only three men in a union. Verily, the ship owners have it their own way. For such an important section of the working class as the seamen not to be organized is a tragedy.

In my talks with seamen they tell me the union will do nothing for them, forgetting that they themselves are the union; that without them there can be no union and conditions must inevitably get worse.

Wages Rise, Italy's Prices Fall As Lira Goes Up

ROME, May 10.—Italy is going thru a period of severe economic depression.

Workers are suffering wage slashes, business failures are rapidly increasing, and prices, despite the increased market value of the lira, have not declined.

Economists here attribute business depression to Mussolini's attempt to cover himself with glory by raising the market value of the lira. Mussolini has borrowed enormous sums of money from foreign bankers in an effort to stabilize the lira, and the increased market value of money has increased the cost of production for Italian manufacturers. There has been a corresponding drop in foreign orders.

While business failures in 1918 and 1926 averaged twenty-five per business day, failures for the first three months of 1927 have averaged thirty-five and have often run as high as seventy-five per day.

warn his flock against them. But my friend was unconvinced. He read himself away from the confessional. It is not surprising that the forces of reaction should favor the index expurgatorio.

THE change in its Chinese policy announced by the British government is akin to the reformation of a played-out roue. Britain failed to induce the United States and Japan to conduct an officially aggressive campaign against the Chinese people, even tho the naval agents of the United States on the spot are enjoying themselves pouring shot and shell on Chinese towns and cities.

WHILE Calvin Coolidge is using the language of peace General Butler in command of its marine forces in China is boasting of the ability of one American to lick several hundred Chinese. The general did not make an estimate of how many marine officers it would take to beat one Philadelphian. (For the benefit of the uninitiated General Butler went into the Quaker City with the object of cleaning it up. Well, to put it mildly, the general beat a hasty and rather undignified retreat and Philly is still the same old Philly. I am informed.) The hypocrisy of certain liberal opponents of the policy of force in China is demonstrated by their ostrich-like refusal to see the wide gulf between the word of the Coolidge administration and the acts of its satellites in China.

THE hour set for the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti is approaching. As the waves of feeling pro and con develops it is becoming more and more evident that the opposing sides care less about the technicalities of the case than about the social ideals put forward by Sacco and Vanzetti and opposed by their persecutors. And if the governor of the state of Massachusetts decides to pardon the victims of capitalist injustice it will not be because his eyes have been opened to the palpable frame-up that sent them to the shadow of the electric chair but to the mighty wave of opposition erousled all over the world against the threatened execution.

THE governor of Massachusetts should be given distinctly to understaud that the masses of workers, farmers and progressives in the United States and shruout the world will consider a commutation of the death sentence to life imprisonment as an insult added to the injury that has already been inflicted on our two comrades. They must be freed. They are innocent of the crime with which they are charged. And when the prison doors close behind them, and they are on the right side of those doors, the perpetrators of this notorious frame-up should he put on the carpet. And the People of Massachusetts should see that the most notorious of those conspirators, Judge Thayer, should never again sit on a judicial bench.

New York Bankers Loan $5,000,000 To Soviet Union

Credit amounting to $5,000,000 will be granted by London and New York bankers to finance shipments of American machinery to the Soviet Union, it was announced yesterday by the Fox Brothers International Corporation. The credit is the first of its kind known to have been advanced to the Soviet Union to aid American trade with the U. S. S. R.

American exporters will be paid in cash for goods exported to the Soviet Union. This arrangement is satisfactory to American manufacturers and satisfies the need of the U. S. S. R. for long-term credits.

Bigger Credit for 1928.

"While Russia received credit of $100,000,000 from Germany last year, it was found that the cost of this credit to Russian importers was reaching as high as 30 per cent," said S. Grossbard, vice-president of Fox Brothers International Corporation.

Officials of the Fox Brothers said that if the plan met with a satisfactory response, a $10,000,000 credit would be arranged in 1928.

Rail Merger Hearings Start.

WASHINGTON (FP)—From six months to a year is the time which Interstate Commerce Commission experts estimate will be required to determine whether the Pere Marquette Railroad is to be merged with the Chesapeake Ohio, in the newest Van Swearingen promotion scheme. Hearings on the petition of the C. & O. for permission to acquire a controlling amount of stock in the Pere Marquette began at the headquarters of the commission on May 10. Minority stockholders of the C. & O. are fighting the application.

They were able to defeat an earlier merger attempt by the Van Swearingens.

Employes of the Pere Marquette are threatening to strike, to compel President Aifred to apply the standard rules in the same way that competing systems apply them. They also demand a wage increase. If the strike runs through many weeks, it will deflate the market value of the company's stock.

Sooner or Later You Will Become a Co-operator
WHY NOT NOW?

LENIN ON THE IMPORTANCE OF COOPERATION

"With us, so it seems to me, insufficient attention is paid to co-operation. It is doubtful whether all understand that since the October revolution, and independently of the new economic policy (or alternately thanks thereto) cooperation has acquired a most exceptional importance. . . In the new economic policy we made a concession to the peasant as also to the trader, with regard to the principle of private trade, and hence the gigantic importance of cooperation teontrairwise to what some people think) Essentially speaking, the co-operating of the Russian population, widely and deeply and to an adequate extent in presence of the new economic policy, is all we require. . . Out of cooperation and cooperation alone, which we formerly treated as a trading affair, and which we are entitled to treat similarly now, under the new economic regime—is not this all that is necessary for building up a complete socialist society? It is not the building of a socialistic society, as yet, but it is quite requisite and adequate for the building thereof. Ilere is the very circumstance unappreciated by many of our practical workers. They look negligently on cooperation, without understanding the exceptional importance of cooperation has, firstly from the standpoint of principle (the ownership of the means of production in the hands of the State) and secondly, in view of the transition to a new order by a possibly simpler, easier and more accessible way for the peasant."—Lenin in Soyus Potrebitelei, June, 1923.

A WORD FOR YOUR MOST SERIOUS CONSIDERATION

Comrades:

For many years we have been busy preaching cooperation to our comrades. For many years we have been trying to tell you that cooperation is important for the workingclass; that it is one of the trinity of weapons the workers must use in their fight for liberation. But our work so far has been much in vain. Our voice has been much ignored. Large numbers of comrades have not understood the cooperative movement as of any importance.

Comrades! The cooperative movement is your movement. Workers should not separate themselves into three contradictory movements: political, unionistic and cooperative, each pulling in opposite directions. They belong together. Arising from the same cause, they are related in time, circumstance and purpose. They all sprang out of the social anarchy created by the industrial revolution. All of them aim to delivering the workingclasses from the bondage of capitalism. All of them should work together conscIously for the common purpose.

You must give active support to the cooperative movement. This does not mean platonic affection. It means that you do your daily shopping at your cooperative store. You must remember the cooperative organizations all the time, not only in the time of need as heretofore.

An ideal radical worker is he who is a member of a union, the workers' political party and a consumers' cooperative organization.

Chamberlain's Apology for the Temporary Defeat of Britain in China

Sir Austin Chamberlain, the foreign secretary of the Baldwin tory government, indulged in some plain and fancy brain contortions in order to justify the change of British policy in relation to China, when he appeared before the House of Commons to explain the diplomatic retreat of his government in face of the refusal of the United States to participate with the other powers in a second threatening note to Eugene Chen, foreign minister of the Kuomintang goverment.

In the face of the decline of Britain's once colossal empire, the tory politicians have to resort to the most adroit misrepresentation even to their own party supporters. So, instead of admitting that the British change of policy was due to the split of the imperialist front because Washington refused again to play the British game, Chamberlain declared the changed policy was due to a shift of military and political forces in China itself.

Incidentally, it is worthy of note that official Washington, in order to aid in perpetuating the fond illusion that Britain and America are united on policy, announces that Chamberlain's speech is no surprise as the position of Britain was known and approved some weeks ago. Neither Washington nor London dare openly admit the facts regarding the conflict on policy. To state the facts is to lay bare the forces driving toward another world war. The only point on which the two imperialist giants of the world now agree is that they both await a more favorable opportunity for the situation in China to serve their own conflicting ends and give one the advantage over the other.

Although careful to conceal the fact that the British about face was prompted by the refusal of the United States to participate in a second note, he did reveal the fact that the apostate, Chiang Kai Shek, is the agent of British imperialism, and gave as the reason for the British change in policy the excuse that he did not want to "embarass this new nationalist government in course of formation at Nanking, in its task of introducing order."

This means that Britain, defeated for the time being in its policy of using as pawns the other imperialist forces in China to regain its sphere of influence in the Yangtse Valley, will revert to its old game of bribing mercenary war lords, and that Chiang Kai Shek is at present the chief beneficiary of this policy.

But the union of the proletariat and peasantry in the Hankow Kuomintang government can be depended upon to write finis to the career of Britain's latest bribed champion.

Drive the Right Wingers Out of the Kuomintang.

The conflict now going on in China within the ranks of the former nationalist movement is one of the most difficult and at the same time the most decisive of the whole revolution. It is a fight launched by the nationalist capitalist elements, backed by the imperialist interventionists, against the workers and peasants.

The development of Chinese industry did not bring about a similar development of the Chinese capitalist class. The profits produced by Chinese industry, instead of enriching a national industrial class, went, for the most part, into the hands of the great banking capitalists of the imperialist nations. But since the working class must grow with industry the proletariat of China, as the one cohesive class, has become the leading political factor.

In the early stages of the revolution the working class, the peasantry and the bourgeoisie were united under the leadership of the Kuomintang (Nationalist Party). As the movement developed, the left wing under the dynamic leadership of the Communists, put forth more determined class demands, which frightened the petty capitalist elements. Unable to lead an independent political existence, the bourgeoisie of China had to ally themselves with some greater power than their own. They had to choose between the workers and peasants on the one hand and becoming servants of the imperialist powers on the other. They have gone into the camp of the latter. They prefer the role of servants of imperialism with a chance to help foreign finance capital exploit the native workers, than to have to bow to the demands of the workers and peasants.

This new development makes it impossible for the three economic and political groups longer to exist side by side in the same party. Since the Kuomintang has come to signify the revolutionary struggle in China and since it carries the tradition of that great leader and insurrectionist, Dr. Sun Yat Sen, it is important that the party be defended from the bourgeois elements who have sold out to the imperialist butchers. And the Hankow government is taking the right course in scourging from its ranks the native capitalist class elements who support the traitor and renegade, Chiang Kai Shek.

All the right wingers would be relentlessly hounded out of the Kuomintang in China. In other parts of the world, where the Nationalist liberation movement, in its early stages, attracted Chinese business men as well as workers, the same procedure should be followed. The first sign of support for the atrocious butcher and imperialist hireling, Chiang Kai Shek, should be a signal for kicking out of the party all questionable elements.

The Next Step in Nicaragua

The course followed by the United States government in Haiti is being applied in exact detail to the present situation in Nicaragua. Now that the disarmament program imposed upon the liberal forces by Coolidge's special representative, Henry L. Stimson, is under way, the government has announced the next step in grabbing control of that unfortunate country for Wall Street bankers. As in Haiti, the marines are to police the country, eight hundred more of them are proceeding under military orders to occupy that territory, while attempts will be made to create a native constabulary, under the control of American officers.

Such a native constabulary will certainly be composed of those mercenaries who served in the army of Chamorra, the Wall Street tool, who, with the assistance of the United States marines, usurped the presidency of the country, overthrowing the duly constituted government, and paved the way for his successor, Diaz.

The sum total of Stimson's achievement will be to disarm the supporters of the liberal government, change the name of the Diaz bandits to native constabulary, substitute well-trained American officers for the inefficient native officers and then set up a reign of terror so that a fake election can be pulled off in 1928 to cloak with legality the imperialist steal in Nicaragua.

It is to be hoped there are sufficient determined fighters in that country to give battle to the imperialists and that the other Latin-American countries will rally to the support of Nicaragua against Wall Street and its armed minions. The ravaging of Nicaragua should aid in the creation of an anti-imperialist bloc against the United States.

Women's Council of Passaic Reorganized Into Language Groups

A membership meeting of the working women's councils of Passaic was held in Passaic, Sunday, May 8th at 27 Dayton Ave.

The Central Committee of the United Council of Workingclass Housewives to which the working women's councils of Passaic are affiliated, sent out letters to all the members to come to the membership meeting to hear Weisbord and after the meeting to be re-organized into language groups.

Weisbord Speaks.

The meeting was scheduled for 7 P. M. Before 7 the members from the different councils started to fill the hall. At 7:30 every seat in the hall was occupied. K. Gitlow opened the meeting, explaining the purpose of the meeting and introducing Sister Duboff of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union of New York as chairman.

Brother Weisbord was the first speaker. He was greeted with prolonged applause and cheering. He urged the women to help build up the workers' organizations, to cement them together for the next fight as the fight between the workers and the bosses is never over.

Antony Wechsler of the Hungarian Women's Council of New York spoke in Hungarian and a Polish speaker spoke.

Have Four Councils.

K. Kitlow then took over the meeting with the help of Comrades Wechsler and Duboff and others from Passaic. The women were reorganized. An English speaking council, a Hungarian council and a Russian-Ukrainian council were organized in addition to the Polish councils which are active and well attended.

"The Woman at Home and in the Shop" and "The Working Woman" were sold.

Meeting adjourned in fine spirit with everybody eager for work.

Workers School to Give Lecture Course On Chinese Upheaval

In view of the growing importance of the Chinese Revolution and the significant implications of that struggle for the American workers, The Workers School, at 108 East 14th Street, New York, at 108 East 14th to offer a special 4 session course on "The Chinese Revolution" beginning on Friday, May 27, at 8 P. M., to run for four consecutive Fridays from 8 to 10 P. M. H. M. Wicks, one of the editors of The DAILY WORKER, who has made a special study of this question, will be the instructor. It will be a lecture course with plenty of opportunity for questions and discussion.

The breakdown of feudalism in China, the imperialist invasion, the Nationalist Movement, class divisions in China, the Kuomintang and Sun Yat Sen, Whither China?, the United Front in China, the role of Soviet Russia, the danger of Imperialist War —these are some of the phases of the question that will be analyzed.

All workers who want to understand this important and complicated question; all who wish to be able to follow the rapid developments that are taking place in that war-ridden country; those who desire to take the message of the struggling Chinese masses to the workers of this city,—should register immediately for the course at the office of the Workers School, 108 East 14th Street, Room 32. The fee is $1.25 for the 4 sessions.

The opening date of the course May 13, to Friday, May 27, due to the debate between Bertram D. Wolfe, Director of the Workers School, and Arthur Garfield Hays, at Community Church, 34th Street and Park Avenue, on Friday Night, May 13th, and to the Concert and Ball given by the Chinese Workers Alliance, at Webster Hall, 119 East 11th Street on May 20.

Industrial Crime and Criminals.

Dear Comrade Editor:

In the Studebaker Motor Co., Dept. 334, there was a man killed on March 25th.

The man was oiling a machine uights, working 13 hours every night.

When he climbed above the running punch-press, which had no safety devices, he slipped down between the big turning gears. He leaves a wife and three children to the mercy of this capitalistic system. Right after this worker was killed they installed safety devices about the machine.

The men in this department are working on these dangerous machines 12-13 hours a night. The pay on the job is so small that the men have to work at a crazy speed-up to make miserable wages.

The safety director is a white collared office man. His name is Klzer; that is what they call him.

They have sixty bags on the machine setters, but they have so much of their own job that they have no time to take care. In the same room, Dept. 330, there is an assistant foreman by the name of Pete. He is selling jobs, and giving to his friends jobs of better price.

If you do not buy chocolate from him, or if you do not eat chocolate, you are out of luck. You will be given the worst job, and at last fired.

Of Hero-Worship.

Comrade Richard's letter of April 26th positively outraged my feelings. From bitter experience, I have been forced to learn that, without sympathy, enthusiasm and even hero-worship, we are nothing but walking sacks begging to be filled.—W. B. Brooks.

A Sacco-Vanzetti conference will be held Wednesday evening 8 o'clock at 56 Washington Ave., Brooklyn. It has been called by Barber's Union, Local 513. All labor organizations are urged to have delegates.

Conference to Hold Vanzetti Meeting At Public Square

CLEVELAND, O., May 10.—The International Labor Defense is using all means to rally the workers of this city in support of Sacco and Vanzetti.

There have been mass meetings in almost all neighborhoods within the last three weeks, at which speakers in English and other languages called upon the workers to protest the frame up.

Twice there have been large demonstrations on the Public Square, and on April 23 four hundred workers stood in the cold for hours to hear Fred Biedenkapp, former organizer for the defense of Sacco and Vanzetti, tell the story of the frame-up.

Big Meeting Saturday.

Saturday, May 14, there will be a demonstration on the Public Square. The meeting will open at 2 p. m., and continue until 6. There will be several prominaut speakers, including Albert Coyle, editor, Locomolive Engineers' Journal; John G. Willert, district organizer of the Socialist Party; I. Amter, district secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party; Carl Hakeer, of the I. L. D. and others.

Mothers' League Demands Freedom.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 10.—The Mothers' League of Strawberry Mansion, an organization of workingclass mothers, after listening to a speech by Vera Bush, adopted resolutions asking freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti and condemning American intervention in China.

Labor Defense Explains Vajtauer's Deportation; He Fought U. S. Empire

(By International Labor Defense.)

The International Labor Defense has the unenviable task of reporting that Comrade Emanuel Vajtauer, late editor of "Obrana" left this country the other day on a deportation order of the Department of Labor.

The Vajtauer case is typical of the many cases of anti-working class action by the bosses. Coming to this country legally in 1923, Vajtauer at once became active in the ranks of the Czecho-Slovakian workers. Soon he took over the editorship of the "Obrana."

Bosses Hate.

He incurred the wrath of the bosses as all honest class-conscious fighters do. In 1924, he was arrested as the result of an "anonymous complaint" to the effect that he was "inciting the people against the government." On the basis of that report, a deportation order was filed against him. He was released from Ellis Island on $2,000 bail.

The International Labor Defense took the case to the Supreme Court. The opposition of the bosses was too strong, and at the beginning of this year, the Supreme Court resolved that Vajtauer be deported. In spite of all the persecution, Vajtauer's spirit remained unbroken—his opposition to Imperialism unwavering.

Fight U. S. Imperialist.

In bidding farewell to the I.L.D., he made the significant statement: "No matter where one goes, the U. S. Imperialism can be fought."

The International Labor Defense sends its greetings in solidarity with its splendid fighter, Emanuel Vajtauer. All who believe such deportations are anti-working class, should join the I.L.D. so that we can better fight them.

Let's Fight On! Join The Workers Party!

In the loss of Comrade Ruthenberg the Workers (Communist) Party has lost its foremost leader and the American working class its staunchest fighter. This loss can only be overcome by many militant workers joining the Party that he built.

DRAMA

New Playwrights Group Plan Extensive Program

Optimism seems to be getting motive of the youthful group of dramatists forming the directorship of the New Playwrights' Theatre. They are announcing more and extensive plans for their season.

Michael Gold's play of Mexican life "Fiesta," which was postponed from this season, will probably open in the Fall. Six other new plays are also being planned—each play to run at least four weeks. The organization is also planning to recruit a permanent company of players. A new and larger theatre is also in view—the Fifty-second theatre, used this season, wasn't up to the standard necessary for an experimental theatre. John Dos Passos, one of the directors, says it is their intention "to give full opportunity to much of the fine, young untried talent in the theatre, not only players, but in all branches of scenic design and production."

Broadway Briefs

"One For All," a new play by Ernest and Louise Cortis will be ushered in at the Greenwich Village Theatre tonight. Madeline Delmar and Allyn Joslyn play the leading roles.

A special matinee performance of "The Second Man," will be given this Friday afternoon for the benefit of the Mississippi flood sufferers, at the Guild Theatre.

William A. Brady is planning a revival of "The Private Secretary." According to the announcemeut, he is seeking a star for the part once played here by William Gillette. The farce was written by Charles Hawtrey and originally produced in England in 1883 with H. Beerbohm Tree as the Rev. Robert Spalding. "The Private Secretary" was revived here in 1910 by Mr. Gillette at the Empire theatre.

The Gilbert and Sullivan operetta "Patience" will open at the Theatre Masque on Monday, May 23. Vivian Hart and James Watts will head the cast. Robert Milton is staging the presentation which will have costumes by Clark Robinson and scenery by Cleon Throckmorton. Perke Hamberg is the producer.

"The Tales of Rigo," opens at Werba's B'klyn Theatre on May 23. The new production is based on a play called "Drift," produced at the Cherry Lane Theatre about a year and a half ago. It is the work of Maurice V. Samuels and Hyman Adler and will have a score by Ben Schwartz.

12,000 WORKERS MAY SOON WALK CITY'S STREETS

Plumbers in Front Line Trenches in War

Within a week, the Building Trades Employers' Association may have a lockout order against 125,000 building trades workers in Greater New York.

This threat to break a score or more of contracts with unions developed yesterday from the Brooklyn plumbers strike and the general city wide lockout of all other union plumbers and was sanctioned from sources high in the Building Trades Council.

One official, who firmly refused to be quoted publicly, declared that the plumbers strike and lockout had reached an impasse with the building bosses apparently determined to make New York City the scene of a national showdown with the workers.

No Conferences This week.

In addition a high international official of the Plumbers' Union declared that negotiations with C. G. Norman, head of the Employers' Association, had been broken up for the entire week, with the prospect of decisive action over the week-end. He did not indicate whether the "decisive action" would be a general lockout or a settlement of the Brooklyn strike for $14 a day, a $2 increase and the five day week.

The presence of International President John Coefield of the Plumbers in the city last week prodnced no settlement nor did Secretary Burke's assiduous effort to have the lockout order withdrawn meet with any better luck.

The New York bosses, at the very center of the national building industry, have decreed that the day of wage increases is passed. The demand for the five day week, precipitating a savage industrial struggle in Seattle, is also to be fought to the last ditch.

Close to the financial control of the great bond and mortgage houses in Wall Street, the contractors are acting not only on their own desire not to give additional wage increases, but are following a policy laid down by Wall Street itself.

The Plumbers' Helpers Association opened its kitchen at the Church of All Nations, 9 Second Avenue Monday, serving a substantial meal to hundreds of strikers who are penniless through the strike because they were unable to save on their $4 a day wage. The helpers are out for recognition and a $9 scale with the five day week.

Bakers' Local 3 of the Amalgamated Food Workers has agreed to contribute $30 a week in food for the strikers' kitchen.

Progressives Ask Joint Action.

The Progressive Building Trades Workers of Greater New York in a leaflet distributed among building trades workers this week have appealed for a united front with the plumbers and their helpers in the fight for a 5-day week and a $14 day.

Warning that a defeat of separate unions seems possible, the progressives are asking joint action not only to defeat the threatened general lockout but to gain for all workers the objectives sought by the plumbers.

Plumbers Helpers Thrown Into Jail

Sam Winnick, Harry Kaplow, Jack Weisman, and Herman Reich were arrested in Queens while picketing the job at Sloan St. and Elenhurst Ave. late Monday by Officer Mac-Levy of the 60th Precinct. They are held under $500 bail at the Flushing Ave. court, on the charge of disorderly conduct.

C. E. Miller, president of the helpers' union, said: "Those men were arrested while picketing in a strike that is a fight for an American standard of living—it is a fight against a wage of four dollars a day. Our pickets every day are instructed to picket peacefully and keep within the law, and we are sure that the employers are in back of this arrest and that those men are innocent."

Boston Young Workers Open Drive With Dance

BOSTON, May 10. — Young Workers' League, District No. 1, is holding an entertainment and meeting Sunday, May 15th at 3:00 P. M., at 62 Chamber Street, Boston, announcing the public opening of the Rothberg Membership Drive.

The main feature will be the presentation of the Russian Banner sent from the Costroma District of the U.S.S.R. Speeches by prominent members of the League and a musical program of a big variety, violin and vocal selections.

The aim of this affair will be to obtain members of the Y. W. L. A quota of 200 members was set for District No. 1. Each unit has been given a quota and prizes will be offered to the most successful units, fractions, and individuals.

CLOAK PRESSERS BRAND SIGMAN AS WRECKER OF FUND

A rising vote of denunciation of Morris Sigman, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, was given Monday by members of Cloak Pressers' Local 35 who had learned of Sigman's misappropriation of the unemployment insurance fund, "every cent of which belongs to the cloakmakers," so the resolution of condemnation stated.

Manhattan Lyceum was crowded with members of Local 35 who came to protest against the frame-up of Manager Joseph Gerstein, who was scheduled for trial Monday but whose case was once again postponed. The pressers stated their opinion of Sigman in no uncertain terms, and resolved "that we express our solidarity and faith in the leaders of the Joint Board, and we promise to use all our power to liberate the martyrs who are in prison. We also promise to stand firm in this struggle until Sigman and his clique are out of the union forever, and the union is captured for the workers."

The chairman of the membership meeting was Morris Goldstein, who is chairman of the local and chairman of the Executive Board. The speakers included Joseph Gerstzky, Phillip Goodman, Henry Turk—whose shop is still on strike because of his discharge for refusing to register—H. Kermtz, and Louis Ilgman, manager of the cloak and dressmakers' Joint Board.

Hyman was greeted with great enthusiasm, and many of the workers remarked that Local 35 never had a meeting like this in the old days when Sigman ruled it. There was never such fine spirit when the old gang was in power.

Crime and Fraud in Lawyers' Ranks Given Approval by N. Y. Bar

Only being "caught with the goods" brings punishment to New Yorkers at the hands of the Bar Association. Otherwise, the boys stick together and clients' complaints are just so much wasted breath.

During 1926, complaints against 1,804 lawyers were made to the Bar Association. Just 12 of these were penalized; and the causes were misuse of clients' funds in seven cases, and conviction of crime in five cases. Nine of these lawyers were disbarred; 2 were suspended; 1 was censured.

All the other 1292 complaints were dismissed, as tho they were wholly unjustified. Even "The Panel," the monthly bulletin of the Association of Grand Jurors of New York County thinks this sounds rather fishy. The workers will realize that it is all part of our "system of justice" which they taste much too frequently in our courts. "The Panel" points out that there are no rules compelling trial judges and district attorneys to investigate suspicious acts of lawyers, and these representatives of the law are "after all, lawyers holding temporary official positions"—and are not willing to start action against the members of the bar.

There has been much talk lately of cleaning out the "shyster" lawyer; but judging by its record, it will not be the Bar Association which will do the cleaning.

Three Hands Off China Meetings in Cleveland

Cleveland will hold three "Hands Off China" meetings.

The first is May 11th, at the National Institute, 13309 Kinsman Rd., The speakers will be A. Brahtin, member of the roofers' union; a representative of the Young Workers League, and a member of the Pioneers of Cleveland. Mr. Jong, president of the Cleveland branch of the Kuomintang will talk about the conditions in China under the unequal treaties system, and her struggle to free herself from these galling chains. N. Schaffer will be chairman.

The second meeting will be held May 12th, at Gardina Hall, 6021 St. Clair Ave. The speakers will be I. Amter, secretary of the Workers' (Communist) Party; Mr. Jeong, a member of the Young Workers and one from the Pioneers. There will also be a Croatian speakar. E. Boich will act as chairman.

The third of these meetings will take place May 18th, at the Hungarian Workers Home, 4309 Lorrain Ave. Here also I. Amter will speak as well as representatives from the other named organizations. J. Fromhols will be chairman.

All meetings begin at 8 P. M. Admission is free and the halls should be packed.

MACHINERY MULTIPLIES WORKERS' OUTPUT OF GLASS BY FORTY-ONE TIMES; NO WAGE RAISE

By LELAND OLDS.

The displacement of labor by automatic machinery is nowhere more dramatically illustrated than in the glass industry, according to a U. S. department of labor bulletin. The department shows that in the production of 4-ounce bottles the output per man is more than 41 times as great as before the development of the Owens automatic machine.

The department's figures show that the average output of bottles per man-hour has increased from 79.56 years ago to 3173 in 1925. On the basis of present wages this means a reduction from $1.777 per gross (144 bottles) to $0.042 in direct labor cost. In the pressed-ware branch of the industry the development of the Hartford Empire twin press has increased the production of tumblers from 21 pieces to 280.7 pieces per man-hour, reducing the labor cost from $1.96 per 100 tumblers to 8.1$.

More and Faster.

The department shows an increase in the production of 40-watt electric light bulbs from 54.21 pieces per man-hour by the old process to 1,160.59 per man-hour using the new Westlake automatic machine. This means a reduction in labor cost from $12.88 per 1000 to $0.47.

In glass tubing modern machinery has increased the output per man-hour from 10.27 to 75.17 pounds, reducing the labor cost from $8.83 per 100 pounds to $1. In window glass the increase has been from 0.709 boxes to 1.55 boxes per man-hour with a reduction in labor cost from 96.5 cents per box to 29.9 cents. The continuous automatic process has increased the production of rough plate glass per man-hour from 43.39 square feet to 63.63. The total labor cost of producing polished plate glass has been reduced 43.5%

Figures Tell.

The U. S. census of manufactures shows the yearly output per man employed in the branches of the glass industry in 1899 and 1925 as follows:

Output per man per year in glass industry.
Kind	Unit	1899 1925
Bottles and jars	Gross	274 1,200
Pressed and blown ware	Pieces	28,694 91,272
Windowa glass	Boxes	500 1,359
Plate glass	Sq. ft	5,240 10,581

The wages, whose productivity has so greatly increased, are averaging only about $1250 a year but the owners are making as high as 218% on their investment.

Owens' Prodnction.

The Owens Bottle Co. reported in 1926 profit of $6,928,656. Owens paid a profit of $9.15 on each $25 share of common stock, or 36%. But the Owens Bottle Co., has been built up largely out of the excess profits of previous years. These reinvested profits have been capitalized in stock dividends which raised the outstanding stock from a present $5,000,000 to $17,377,525. Taking these stock dividends into account the 1926 profit represents a return of 218%. In the last 5 years the stockholders have received nearly $80,000,000 on their original $3,000,000 investment.

The Pittsburg Plate Glass Co., a dominant figure in the production of window and plate glass, made a 1926 profit of $10,016,247, giving stockholders a return of $20.36 on each $100 share. Taking into account the increase in capitalization through stock dividends this means a return of 34.9% of the nominal investment of the owners prior to 1917. In 5 years this big Malion concern has taken a profit of $42,862,960, equivalent to about 228% on the original investment.

PERE MARQUETTE PRESIDENT FORCING STRIKE; WOULD NOT APPLY HIS OWN ROAD'S RULES

By LAURENCE TODD
Federated Press.

WASHINGTON May 10.—Between 4,000 and 5,000 organized employes of the Pere Marquette Railroad are now completing a strike vote, because President Alfred of the Pere Marquette has undertaken to pick a fight with nine of the rail labor brotherhoods and unions and to defy the purposes of the Watson-Parker railroad labor law.

The dispute between Alfred and the train service brotherhoods goes back some years. It represents an accumulation of violations by him of the ordinary application of the standard working rules which are in force on all train railroads. It also includes a wage issue, as he has failed to meet the wage settlement reached by the engineers, firemen, conductors and trainmen with the roads in the eastern district, in which the Pere Marquette is located. Wage increases have also been demanded, in vain, by the railway clerks, the telegraphers, the maintenance of way employes, the switchman and the longshoremen. The latter union's members handled the road's business at the Detroit and the Lake Michigan train ferries.

Alfred Hard Boiled.

"Mr. Alfred is a law unto himself," said D. B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, to The Federated Press.

"He has opposed giving standard application to the standard rules that are in effect on his railroad. In other words, he refuses to apply the rules in the way the managers of all other railways apply them. That is the basis of the present controversy.

Won't Arbitrate.

"He has declined to submit the dispute to the eastern train service board of adjustment which is now operating. He has declined to arbitrate. There was nothing left for the employes to do but to take a strike vote."

When the train service brotherhoods filed their application for a wage increase, some months ago, Alfred refused to go into the eastern regional conference on a settlement. When settlement was made with most of the roads, and he was asked to accept its terms, he failed to do so. Even the Pennsylvania and the Stock Trust's road—the Bessemar & Lake Erie, accepted that agreement. Finally, at the end of April, the Pere Marquette announced that Alfred had promulgated an order for a wage increase of 7½ percent, but he declined to apply the rules which go along with it. The brotherhoods tried this as wage order as simply an attempt to confuse the situation. He had blocked all their peace efforts for a year, and even the U. S. board of mediation had been balked in its attempts to secure a settlement.

Why Does He?

In quarters in Washington where rail mergers, rather than rail labor disputes, are being watched, the strike cloud over the Pere Marquette has raised a question of Alfred's motive in seeking trouble just now. The Pere Marquette is controlled by the Van Sweringens, who want to bring it into their proposed merger of the Nickle Plate with the Chesapeake & Ohio and the Hocking Valley. Before the Interstate Commerce Commission will agree to the deal, the Van Sweringens must buy some more stock of the Pere Marquette for the Chesapeake & Ohio. If Alfred were trying to help the Van Sweringens to get P. M. stock down to a low price, he would force a strike. For he knows that the brotherhoods never permit him to flout their standard rules which all other roads accept; they will fight for years instead. If Alfred wanted to improve the business and the value of the stock of his company, he would accept regional adjustment proceedings or arbitration.

SHIP SUBSIDY IS COMMERCE CHAMBER PROGRAM; ORGANIZED BIG BUSINESS WANTS TO RUN FLEET

WASHINGTON, May 10. (FP)—In spite of an earnest plea made to it by Malcolm M. Stewart of Cincinnati in favor of continued operation of the government merchant fleet by the shipping board, the 15th annual meeting of the Chamber of Commarce of the United States turned thumbs down on that proposal. It adopted resolutions protesting against further dalay of the return of shipping to the realm of private ownership and private operation for private profit.

What is more significant, from a political standpoint, the Chamber of Commerce went on record for government aid to private operation of ships. That means government subsidy—the old scheme of American shipowners which President Harding tried in vain to fovce congress to accept.

No Government Ownership.

"We view with grave concern," says the Chamber resolution, "and are opposed to proposals that the government should enter upon a new program of building merchant ships, and are opposed to congress placing additional restrictions upon the authority of the shipping board to dispose of ships to private parties. Such a policy as proposed is against the public interest and national welfare."

This refers to the proposal by Chairman Jones of the senate committee on commerce, that congress provide for building new and modern ships to keep step with the Germans and British.

Private and Profitable.

"The government," it goes on, "has already sold many of the principal trade routes and these are being successfully operated under private ownership . . . The explicit statement made . . . by Chairman O'Connor of the shipping board, that the board does not contemplate the investment of public moneys in new ship construction, and his clear statement at that time that the board is determined to dispose of all ships and trade routes to private enterprises at any sacrifice, if with reasonable assurance of continued service on those routes, accord with the adopted principles of the Chamber, and at this time it is necessary only to impress upon the shipping board the need of energy in placing this shipping in private operation and with such support as is necessary to make private operation effective."

A Subsidy.

Now, what is meant by the support necessary to make private operation effective is not explained. The White House, when challenged on this issue, refused to discuss it beyond saying that President Coolidge has not changed his views. His last known view was that it was too bad that the government was in the shipping business, but he did not like to see private business depend on government support.

RECOGNITION OF U.S.S.R. IS ASKED BY CAPMAKERS

A unanimous demand for recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States, and the immediate establishment of diplomatic and trade relations, was made in a resolution passed Monday by the 16th Biennial Convention of the Cloth Cap, Hat & Millinery Workers' International Union, meeting in Beethoven Hall, 205 East 5th Street.

Just previous to this, the convention voted to "condemn as unwarranted" the strike conducted by Local 7 of Boston, in February 1926. This was a subject of discussion for part of the afternoon session, and for most of the evening.

"The whole thing is an attack upon Local 7 because it is a progressive local," said G. Schecter, one of the Boston delegates. "We are accused of calling a strike for the sake of getting credit and for the sake of politics."

Secretary Treasurer Zuckerman made this accusation, and General Organizer J. Roberts stated that the Boston leaders had merely wanted to get the 40-hour week in February instead of waiting until July as the rest of the locals did.

Take Bosses' Word.

This was shown to be untrue, for the demand for the 40-hour week was only formulated after it was decided that a strike was necessary to prevent the introduction of the contract system by the employers who were even then sending some work out of the factories. Boston delegates showed that the general executive board officers had accepted reports of the situation from the employers instead of from the representatives of the workers. Of course the bosses said the strike was not necessary.

Altho a majority of the Resolutions Committee favored a change in representation on the General Executive Board whereby all locals of a thousand or over should have at least one delegate, and no two out-of-town delegates should come from one city, the plan defeated by vote of the convention. Instead, the report of the minority was adopted enlarging the Executive Board to 15, guaranteeing no representation to each large local, and allowing two delegates from out-of-town to be chosen from one district.

The convention also defeated a resolution proposing that the election of the president should be by a referendum vote of the membership.

Defense Committee Chairman Removed

The Joint Defense and Relief Committee of the Cloak and Dressmakers and Furriers makes public that Harry Robbins, the true chairman of the defense, has been removed as chairman of the defense committee as well as from every phase of defense work.

Among the reasons for his removal is the fact that he has refused to hand over the receipt book on which he has collected money for the defense and also because he could not give a full account for the tickets of the moving picture show "Breaking Chains" which he has handled.

The Defense Committee hereby notify all contributors to defense funds not to contribute any money to Harry Robins hereafter because of his removal from the defense work.

Yellow Taxi Firm Denounced as Scab By Organizers Here

Taxi organizers hit on the head yesterday all presumptions of the Yellow Taxi Company that it has not been involved in labor troubles.

The DAILY WORKER, in reports on the explosion in the Yellow Taxi Company's plant on the East River, in which seven were killed and 40 injured, denounced the company as "scab." Vice President Carroll Sinnott was so affected by the charge that he rushed into print with lengthy denials that his outfit had been involved in labor troubles.

But during the 1926 express men's strike, the Yellow Taxi drivers were mobilized by Sinnott around the Grand Central Station and at the piers with orders to handle trunks and baggage. The New York Transfer and Westcott's were the principal firms involved.

Broke Up Meeting.

In the spring of 1924, the teamsters' organizers called a meeting of taxi men at Beethoven Hall, but when they convened there were more company inspectors and stoolpigeons than bona fide drivers. The police broke up the meeting. At all times the company had been aggressive in breaking up the slightest indication of union activities.

Carroll Sinnott is a brother of the John P. Sinnott, the son-in-law of former Mayor John F. Hylan, who distributed favors for the Hylan organization. Through that connection, the Yellow Taxi came from Chicago, got preferred position in New York and waxed and grew strong.

Taxi drivers recall that there have been two big fires in Yellow Taxi garages here, in addition to the frightful explosion last week.

Opium Smugglers Fight Police; Chinese Crew Of Vessel Had No Arms

BOSTON, May 10.—A pistol battle on the deck of the Far East Steamship Malayan Prince at her dock in South Boston followed the seizure of $100,000 worth of opium and the arrest of three early today.

Customs guards Richard Bagley and John Monahan were pursuing the ship's boatswain, one of the men who had attempted to bribe the guards.

Reaching the deck of the Malayan Prince, the guards were greeted by a salvo of pistol shots. The customs men replied. The battle on the deck continued for some time, at least thirty shots being fired. Finally the boatswain was captured in the forecastle. The Chinese crew was searched but they had no arms.

FURRIER VICTIM OF COURTS TELLS OF 'RATS' WORK

Sam Mencher Writes to Comrades From Jail

Samuel Mencher, chairman of the picket committee during the furriers' strike, is in jail in Mineola. Four weeks ago he and nine other workers were seized by the police, arrested bail by a labor hating judge, and remanded to jail to await their trial on charges framed up against them by the Bachman clique that is seeking to destroy the Furriers' Union.

Writing from his prison cell, Samuel Mancher gives his impressions of the farcial trial, which sent him and seven others to jail. "I could not express in words the feeling of condemnation I had for these double-crossing rats," he declares, and calls upon all workers to condemn the A. F. of L. officials who assisted in the frame up, even supplying manufactured evidence day by day through the trial.

His letter follows:

"Many thoughts come to my mind about the four weeks which I have spent in Mineola jail—the trial of which ninety per cent of the people who witnessed it, were convinced was a frame up, the verdict of the jury, the action of those connected with the prosecutors.

"There is one thing which I especially want to say. Every worker, no matter if he be 'right,' 'left,' or 'impartial' (if there are still any of those so-called 'impartials') must recognize the provocative tactics of these so-called 'labor leaders.' I have understood that these leaders of a labor movement, consisting of the Forward and the International, and others have degenerated into mis-leaders. Nevertheless I never thought them to be so degenerated that they should turn out to be the provocateurs of the labor movement.

"In court during those ten days, I watched, day after day, as they supplied everything necessary to complete the frame up, as they prepared witnesses for the court, as they brought out leaflets and parts of the 'yellow Forward' to build their case against us.

"When I was given some of those clippings to read on the witness stand, I could not express in words the feeling of condemnation I had to those double crossing rats. I would like to see them condemned by every class-conscious worker and by the public as well.

"As for the comrades and myself sitting behind iron bars, we feel that we are not the first ones that have had to suffer for the labor movement. There were comrades who sacrificed more than we did. We are well and in best of mind, and do not feel forged for one moment that you are with us with your hearts and souls. We are only waiting for the time to be with you again, and will give everything in us to the best of our ability towards the betterment of the labor movement.

"SAMUEL MENCHER."

MURDER

The New American Industry

By CHARLES YALE HARRISON.

"There's nothing like a good murder trial to increase circulation." In an old newspaper axiom. Consequently when Henry Judd Gray and Ruth Snyder beat the latter's husband to death with a sash-weight and the police presented bigger and better details—Judge, the New York editorial executives wiped the drivel-ing saliva from their lowis and awaited the increase in circulation. It came.

If it were made to order the press could not have had a better story. A big blonde beauty, feminine interest; a dapper corset salesman, comic relief; a little nine-year-old daughter, human interest; a garden-loving murdered husband, respectability.

Sensational murder trials mean increased circulation; increased circulation means higher advertising rates; higher rates mean more dividends; more dividends mean a successful industry, and newspapers, among many other scandalous things, thrive on murder.

To be quite sure that the public would be aroused to the proper pitch of sadistic frenzy, the newspapers began a campaign of "special writing." The ordinary news reporting would not do. "Trained seals" and writers of note were hired to increase the shriek.

Novelists, philosophers, evangelists, reformers, prominent panders and celebrated divorcees were engaged to write "exclu" stories. The dull gaze in the public eye turned to a bright glitter.

The ultra-respectable New York Times devoted pages of space to interviews and "color" stories. A prominent actress whose sole claim to fame was that she had "married" six or seven times, and whose reputation is none too savory, gave vent to this bit of psychology, "Gray weak—Ruth love-boss." Half a million New Yorkers licked their chops and went to bed to dream.

Came the day of the trial. Into the spacious courthouse in Long Island City swarmed hundreds of spectators. Crowds milled around the doors seeking entrance. At the press-tables sat 125 newspapermen and feature writers. In a nearby room a tangle of special and leased wires clicked the crazy tattoo to the uttermost ends of the earth. Everybody basked in the limelight of the two unfortunates' misery.

The New York Telegram (now a Scripps-Howard Newspaper) howled blood and thunder, engaged the knock-'em-dead, up-to-the-minute American philosopher, Will Durant—and waited for the circulation to go up.

Quoth he, "How it illuminates the revived matriarchate of our day—the control of man by woman in the home and in the street—that this gladiator of the cabaret, this corset corsair (philosophical alliteration, C. Y. H.) should be led by the nose from madness to murder under the artistry of a woman's eyes and the electric touch of her fingers on his flesh."

Professor Durant goes from The Story of Philosophy to the Telegram—or from bad to worse.

Mrs. Aimee MacPherson, the honest-to-goodness Sharon Falconer, said, "If only Ruth had known Jesus—"

The Reverend John Roach Straton, Christ's first assistant here on earth said, "If only Mrs. Snyder knew the Ten Commandments."

Peggy Joyce, the marathon matrimonial champion said, "If only Ruth knew how to love."

The circulation departments said, "It's going up."

The spectators stormed the doors early every morning. Some they the riff-raff one sees in common or garden courtrooms. They were, what a journalistic friend of mine calls "the respectables." They, too, had husbands whom they despised slightly. They too had sick aunts ($450 still owing). They, too, had stereotyped houses cast from the same mould. And they, too, had looked with a bleary bourgeois eye on the gayer thing: of life—and dared not—or maybe they did.

They crowded into the spacious courtroom and beheld a good show. "Just imagine, she had everything a woman could want—that's what happens to people when they become unsatisfied. I simply said I'd be a sort of care a good living and treats you Christian-like—why that's good enough for any decent woman. It serves her right leading him astray. Oh, I hope she gets it good an plenty."

"What'll we do tomorrow, honey, I got two tickets to Keith's Palace or a reporter friend of mine says he can let us in to see the Snyder trial."

The amplifiers catch the testimony and hurl it into eager ears with a metallic intonation.

"She told me that same night that she didn't believe in God. I told her there must be a God."

"Your husband provided for you well and permitted your mother to live with you, and you had a nice home and good clothes and an automobile and a motorboat."

"Yes."

"Yet you say you were unhappy."

"Yes."

"You didn't do anything? You were a perfect lady?"

"Yes."

Laughter breaks out in the court room. Cold, hard, unsympathetic, American laughter.

The show is on. Virtue is triumphant—respectability and the home are vindicated; disrespect for a Buick and a mortgage and good clothes stands pilloried. Hefty matrons clasp their hands and tighten their mouths. Telegraph instruments click and clatter in the neighboring room, reporters dash out for a bite to eat.

On the newsstands throughout the country special editions are hurled off the presses. Whee-e-e, the circulation's going up.

All day long in thousands of newspaper offices the telegraphic instruments ticks off the murder news, hundreds of thousands of words of testimony, "trained seal" stuff, yards of special writing.

Human interest stuff, "Mrs. Snyder broke down and wept on the stand when Hazleton asked her if her husband was disappointed when Baby Lorraine was born, because she was not a boy. "Yes, that's right," said the witness, breaking into tears.

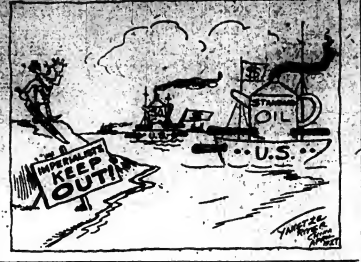
On the third day of the trial the mob stormed the police lines and tried to gain entrance to the overcrowded courtroom. The red-faced crowd jammed the doors and reporters who tried to get out with their copy were shoved back and manhandled. Riot prevailed. Middle-class justice was being meted out.



Downtown in the neighborhood of Park Row, newspaper executives sit with tight smiles playing about their mouths. "Yessir, it never fails, play up a murder and up she goes." Too damn bad it didn't come in July."

Graphs appear in the New York press. The Daily Mirror carries more advertising, etc., etc., etc. The New York Times more display advertising than all other. . . . During the month of April, the New York World, etc., etc. . . . More advertising, more graphs, more headlines, more circulation.

"There's nothing like a good murder trial to increase circulation."

SEND IN YOUR LETTERS

The DAILY WORKER is anxious to receive letters from its readers stating their views on the issues confronting the labor movement. It is our hope to develop a "letter Box" department that will be of wide interest to all members of The DAILY WORKER family. Send in your letter today to "The Letter Box," The DAILY WORKER, 33 First street, New York City.

"The Rough Road"

Translated from the Russian of A. Novikov-Priboi by Vera and Violet Mitkovsky.

Dear Friend:—Your second last letter reached me while I was still a captain of the first rank, commanding a large dreadnought. That was about two months before the events of February. I was then extremely surprised by your cheerful tone, your hope of an early end of the war. Many years have passed since then, terrible years, shaking Russia to the very depths of her strongly established system. Where are our former friends? Some, the revolution scattered like autumn leaves over the whole world, some frightened off their warm nests, drag out a miserable existence, while others are no longer among the living and it is long since a mass was said for their souls. This made it most pleasant for me to receive an envelope with a close, familiar writing. I thought you were dead, and here you are across the border, safe and well. This news caused me great joy. The fate of your estates, however, was very unfortunate.

I remember every corner of them, every detail. Perhaps it is so indelibly impressed on my memory because it was there I first met the Baroness von Berman and there first spoke my love. As I write this letter, she, my wife, having lived with me for over thirty years, sits at the table mending stockings. You would not recognize her. She is an old woman now, in every sense of the word, bent, in a cheap grey dress and spectacles, one of which is cracked. Sometimes I look with sadness at the gray hair hanging in wisps about her wrinkled face, into her black eyes, once scorching with their passion and now faded by tears.

You ask how I live and what I have experienced during the revolution.

I shall attempt to answer you in a long epistle. It will be a sort of tale in which I shall interweave my recent life with reminiscences of the past. You know my old habit. I like to record all my more or less vivid impressions on paper. Before me now lies a thick old notebook. On its pages is splashed a part of my soul. Sometimes, out of this material, I shall write an interesting book. In what I am sending you now however, you shall see how the unexpected sometimes breaks into our lives.

At the end of the civil war I left the naval service, in which I had occupied a rather important position. I was begged to remain but refused, and the age limit saved me from conscription. I wished to live another life. There began a series of attempts. First I tried the shoe-making business, then selling small wares at the market, and working in a co-operative grocery store. All this failed to satisfy me; only ships and the water attracted me. At last I realized my desire; I joined the merchant marine service. My duty was to fasten the cables of ships coming into dock. I occupied this position for two years and was content. Then I joined the crew of a sail boat on which I serve as the present time. The boat is old, needing much repair to fit it for use. It is for sale and secretly docked. Three of us take turns watching on it, guarding government property. My fellow-workers are two old sailors. All our work consists of coming for the seals, which we hand over to each other on signing in the watch-book.

This work is of the easiest kind, permitting me to rest in body and soul. In my spare time I read contemporary literature. Books have awakened in me a desire to tramp through all of Russia, to know my people closer, and to learn to what distant point steers our young republic.

My salary is about sixty roubles, but that is not the point. The point is, that occupying such a democratic position, I can clamor and howl at this or that injustice and be quite immune. A sailor is forgiven much. If I cannot carry the point myself, I have at my back such a powerful body as the Seamen's Union. In spite of my former calling, that of an officer of the first rank, I enjoy all the rights of a Russian citizen. My rent is proportional to my union standing, an insignificant sum. Adding to this what I earn by lessons, I am quite well off. My wife and I need little now that we are left alone. Our only and beloved daughter Claudia has married for the second time. How much sorrow she has caused her mother! But of that we shall speak later.

After all, we live not too badly. I will add that my former baroness need not mend stockings but that in years of famine she had become so miserly that she saves every crumb of food and puts away in a trunk all worn-out clothing. I too have become very modest in my demands of life. The navy shtee with meat, and buckwheat with butter, warm clothing in winter, comfortable temperature in the house, are anffitient to keep me in a good humor. Occasionally I threat myself to a thimbleful of brandy. My health is excellent, far better than when I held my rank and dangled myself nothing.

It is different with my wife. She cannot reconcile herself to the new order and constantly grumbles and protests. It seems to me she will end her days in an insane asylum.

I, on the other hand, on contemplating the new conditions of life, arrive at a totally different conclusion. A new life is arising, not in the least resembling the old. It is different to the times of millitary Communist dictatorship when we lived on frozen potatoes and stood in endless breadlines for ¼ pound of coarse bread or perhaps some sunflower seeds, or garters; when they wanted to equalize not only people but the stars. In this respect our leaders have become more modest. At the same time, it is not what it was in the Csar's time and not what is now the breath of Europe.

Cooperator's Festival.

At the cooperators festival May 15 at Ulmer Park, foot of 25th Street Brooklyn, a display of posters prepared by cooperators of Finland, Russia, Germany, Poland, Sweden and France will be shown.

There will be a musical program with sports, athletics, and dancing till midnight.

Prehistoric Skull

The first replica of the only skull of Neanderthal man which ever has been found outside Europe, has been sent to the medical museum of Western Reserve University, Cleveland, O. The original was found by Terville Petre, British scientist, in a cave near Tiberias on the Sea of Galilee. Dr. T. Wingate Todd, above, professor of anatomy at Western Reserve, who took part in discussions of the skull when it reached the Royal College of Surgeons, London, Eng., says it probably is that of a young man of about 25 who lived perhaps 40,000 years ago.

Naggin' de Niggah

By WILLIAM MELVILLE SUTTON.

ARTICLE III

"Pushin' the niggah in his place" is the favorite sport of the well to do Southerner in search of a myth. This means that he is taught that he is a child and that because he is a child, all the privations, all the torture, all the denials, all the oppression and suppression to which he is subjected is for his "own good." He must not dare yearn for the education that is provided for the white. He must not yearn for the jobs that white men hold. He must remember that he is serf, not even so exalted as a vassal. And he must remain embalmed in ignorance and fear so that when northerners come down he may be pointed out as a "child."

A Law Piece.

Above all, he must remember that the white man is his peer, his overlord. Though he has been benignantly of late granted the right to walk on the same side of the street as his master, he must always be the cringing servitor, the obsequious side-stepper. He must not "block" the path of the white.

Jim Crow Hearses.

And when he dares to ask the assistance of an interne from a white man's hospital or a white man's undertaker or funeral ambulance driver—always on the scene of an accident on the look-out for customers—though he may be dying, the Negro aspires to such dazzling heights that the white man is stung to homicidal wrath. This in the face of the fact that Tom Lee, Negro though he be, risked his life for nearly a score of worthless politicians, carousers and hangers-on on the fatal day the steamer Norman went down in the Mississippi near Memphis more than a year ago, two of his race lay dying back in August, 1925, while white ambulance drivers, forgetful of the fact that a man may be black and still be human, stood by, refused him succor, ignored his plight and all but laughed.

The newspapers of Memphis—it was in this eminent Mississippi port that the outrageous drama was enacted—gave vent to righteous indignation after the first act. The undertakers and ambulance drivers promised to be good. Eight days after, Act Two was put on for the benefit of the southern audience—this time a dead Negro could not be transported to his own funeral parlors. The excuse? The typical southern excuse. A white southerner's corpse could never rest in peace, if when he was still living, he had been brought to the hospital in an ambulance contaminated by a Negro, or if his carcass were brought to the cemetery in a chariot that had carried a Negro.

Two more incidents must I record from this southern land of the free, where human beings, because they are not white, are household slaves at two to five dollars a week, as much the property of their white employers as their ancestors, who got lodgings and clothes and food for their services—two incidents which I handled for the Memphis sheet on which I was working, the sympathetic, depressing stories of which were received with sneers by the newspapermen of that eminent city.

Tubercular Prisoner.

Hattie Johnson, tubercular, poverty-stricken, shunned by blacks and whites alike, was accused of shoplifting. Perhaps the charge was true; perhaps it was not. If it was, the real criminals are the white overlords. Convicted on a count of petit larceny, she was sentenced to jail for sixty days and fined $100. At the end of her term, if she could not pay the fine, she was to spend five months longer in jail, at the current penal rates of forty cents a day, in order to "work out" the fine.

In jail her cell was a sick-room. But no one came to plead her cause; no one cared whether she lived or died. When her sixty-day sentence was nearing its end, a kind-hearted lawyer—an anamoly, to be sure—sought to have her freedom restored to her, so that she might regain health outside prison walls. His arguments were based not on the law—for he could plead no law, since she had not money wherewith to pay the fine—but on humanity. For freedom she must have bondsmen. The good and noble county commissioners refused to accept the two persons, whites, who would help her. Heaven and earth could not move them. So back to prison went Hattie. She may be dead now, for a cell would be fatal to a frail body, wracked by disease. I don't know. But I remember her face, as she sat in the courtroom and wondered, I am sure, what Lincoln would say and what on earth is all this justice one hears so much about.

Corn Stealing.

The other incident was made for the telling by a good and kind probate judge of Shelby County, Tennessee—county seat, Memphis. It involved a black boy, Davy Polk, fourteen years old, and a family of poor white trash—not so much white trash because they had sunk to such levels as to live next door to a niggah family, but because of their behavior in the case of Davy, which condemned them even in the eyes of the other whites in the county. Two young sons of the family of trash and several other youngsters went into Davy's patch of corn and very generously helped themselves to ear after ear with which to replenish, inexpensively, the family larders. Davy caught Willie, his nelgbbor's youngest son, spanked him and sent him home. The next day, as the result of the machinations of a family of whites in lower standing than a family of blacks in the south, Davy was on his way to an industrial school, where he was to spend those years of his life between fourteen and twenty-one. I can still see the headline written over my "story," out of which had been whipped all humane sentiments and such deprecations that are anathemas to the southern ear and eye:

"Chastiser is Chastised."

I keep my clipping telling about Davy, for both the story and the smart-alecky, smug head over it epitomize one of the most vicious campaigns of oppression ever waged in America.

FUNERAL

By JOSEPH KALAR

A funeral cortege passing down the street, quietly, stealthily,
as if ashamed of itself.

Beautiful lady, open not the window with your hands
gemmed with scintillating jewels, call not on the footman to find out what the hell is raising such a racket on the street.
It is nothing.
All will soon be quiet again.

There is no need to shed tears.
Just another hunkie unfortunately crushed by tons of iron ore.
Just another wop.
you see the timbers were rotten, like paper. . .
It is nothing.
All will soon be quiet again.

This Cock-Eyed World.—Former Secretary of War, Stimson, has finally obtained "peace" in Nicaragua and 800 additional American marines are being sent to that country. Kerensky is writing articles for the New York "Times" and the editors of The "DAILY WORKER" are being hailed to court on framed-up charges. About 300,000 are homeless in the Mississippi flood regions and the price of cotton is going up because of flood damage to cotton fields. More than 90 miners are killed in a West Virginia explosion and the Department of Labor announces that despite the strike the off coal supplies are larger than ever. The fascist aviator De Pinedo is given official receptions and Enea Sormenti, editor of the Communist paper "Il Lavoratore," has been ordered to leave the country within 60 days.

Journalism As Is.—The Snyder-Gray case is going the way of all sensations. A few days more and it will be as completely forgotten as the world-rocking affairs of Peaches Heenan, Aimee McPherson, Hall-Mills, etc., etc. Already a thousand editors are racking their brains—or at least their heads—in search of another thrilling inanity. Maybe the suit of Freda Hempel against old moneybags Heckscher will be ballyhooed into a world-beater. Maybe a sex comic will break propitiously. But something will be found to quench the thirst of a bored decaying society for thrills. Something will be found to guard the masses against infectious news from China, stimulating news from Geneva, etc.

HALLELUJAH, I'M A BUM.

They call me bum.
They!
Who are they that call me bum:
The dolled up gentlemen
With their damosels
(Damosels hell! I'd like to call them what they are)
Under their arms
Cooing (ain't that the cat's) cooing in the shadows of a leafy tree . . .
And how they startle
When they see me coming . . .
And why shouldn't they?
They know what I want.
Gee . . . Listen to him mumble;
No, he ain't got no change, no!
The lousy little pasty-faced runt. . . .
Bum!
God damn it, I am a bum
If that pop-eyed arrow-collared wcazel
Is a gentleman.

—PUNCHINO.

What's In a Name.—From the New York Times, Sunday, we clip: "Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer Elllott announce the bar mitzvah of their son, Norman," etc. So why fear for Judaism? Someone suggests (in a low timid voice) that there must have been a Mortimer-phosis.

PORTRAIT OF A KU KLUXER.

Tiny twinkling grey eyes nearly lost in the crevices of a fat round face. Somehow the impression of flatness, like a smiling moon.

The full beaming countenance surmounted a short stocky body almost without the aid of a neck. Of course a modest paunch beneath the vest, not too prominent yet.

Driving home with his boy, a manly youngster just entering his teens, on vacation from school. The lad alert. Would he become bland as the father?

The two talked eagerly together; quite affectionately, for this sophisticated age. The father put his hand simply on the boy's knee when the youngster leaned over to ask from the authority. They laughed together, too.

Father tremendously proud of his son. He thought public schools among the world's wonders to teach boys like that. And yes sir, that Oregon state law prohibiting private school instruction for children was a good thing. It wouldn't give anyone a chance to feel superior on account of his exclusive school. Democracy, that's the thing!

The Ku Klux were trying to do something for America, too,—for democracy. But the newspapers were no account; wouldn't give them much publicity. Of course the Klan are against Catholics, Jews, Japs and Niggers. Fine thing, their Americanism. He couldn't belong because he was an alien; born in Australia, been in Canada and England. Yes, Mackenzie is the name. Furniture salesman. Make this territory every month.

"You know, I always find the world pretty good. If you look at it the right way it's bound to be. Always treats me well. I don't go looking for trouble. . . .

"This is a good country; fellow can make all the money he needs. Been at it for 14 years hereabouts. Fine country."

Warms up with the food he has been packing down.

"Waiter, bring my check. . . . Oh, I certainly didn't expect you to pay. Always take someone in my back seat for ballast; car rides easier. Well, thanks. Glad to have met you; hope you get on all right."

The hitch-hiking workers shove off down the street, looking for a flop. The Kluxer and son go on in the auto.

POWERS DRIVE OUT PACIFIC UNION CONFERENCE

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

FROM Boston comes an obviously fake dispatch to the affect that new evidence derogatory to Sacco and Vanzetti has been placed in the hands of Governor Fuller. We may expect many stunts of this kind to be pulled between now and the date set for the execution, unless the governor pardons the victims, in the meantime. The most important business before the American workingclass now is to save Sacco and Vanzetti. The wave of protest that has already swept the world should assume tidal wave proportions and compel the murderous crew that would strangle two innocent workers in the electric chair to scale the mountain of oblivion for safety.

WE hope there is some truth in the report that Judge Thayer is off his beam. Again we don't. Thayer might be favored with a delusion that he had saved the country from annihilation by helping to send two innocent men to their doom and thus kid himself into happiness. We would like to see the labor movement made an example of Thayer by forcing him from the judicial bench and sending him back to retirement.

OTTO KAHN, the versatile banker does not spend all his time financing little and big theatres and encouraging hopeful artists with a mission. He does a little travelling on the side. Otto likes Mussolini but that fact does not prevent him from liking Mustapha Kemal Pasha of Turkey who is as fond of Mussolini as a mouse is of a cat.

IN his role of art lover Kahn may cast admiring eyes on the mosques of Constantinople (are they art?) but in his role of banker listen to Otto: "I am impressed with the energy, determination and vision of the new Turkey and wish that America would begin to exercise the traditional role of active sympathiser with a nation endeavoring to realize democratic ideals. Justice of the new laws warrants the influx of American capital." But, then if Otto did not do a job of work now and then our young playwrights might spank him.

IN all probability the two courageous French fliers who tried to make the non-stop hop from Paris to New York have paid for their piece of their daring with their lives. Mussolini will rejoice, since a victory for the Frenchmen would dwarf the accomplishment of the fascist Pinedo who has been busy writing fascist advertisements in the American sky. And Arthur Brisbane may now sleep a little more comfortably since the danger of thousands of European airplanes flying over our heads and holding us for ransom (we are so infernally rich, you know) is obviated for the moment.

THE vatican is not interested in the candidacy of Governor Al Smith, and this official statement will be believed by about one half of one per rent of the population of the United States. The pope will keep his hands off the next presidential election but his excellent machine functioning thru the churches, parochial schools, Knights of Columbus and scores of religious societies will save his holiness the trouble of leaving his palace on the Tiber to awaken the angry K.K.K. tiger in America.

THE United States will have peace In Nicaragua even if has to fight for it. We are told that rear-admiral Latimer has taken steps to disarm conservative and liberal alike. This is funny. Coolidge sent Stimson down there to make peace and he did the trick. Stimson told the liberals that if they did not stop fighting he would blow them into smithereens. Being blown into smithereens even for a worthy cause is not the most sensible solution of a situation that cannot be solved by force. So the liberals threw up their hands. The conservatives, beaten in Nicaragua, won in Washington.

SELF-determination goes marching on. The fourteen points of Woodrow Wilson's war aims are now fourteen daggers in the hands of Wall Street and those daggers are pointed at the hearts of weak peoples whose wealth is coveted by our imperialists. That the United States is doing in Nicaragua is exactly what Great Britain would like to do in China, but

KELLOGG ALLOWS FAIR ELECTION IF DIAZ AGREES

But Diaz Obeys Kellogg And Will Not Agree

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The United States might entertain a suggestion that one or more Latin American countries join in supervising the Nicaraguan elections only if such a request should be jointly made by the Sacasa and Diaz factions in Nicaragua, it was said today at the State Department.

Unless the request of the Sacasa group is endorsed by the Diaz government, however, no consideration probably will be given the idea.

Diaz Needs U. S.

Since Diaz is a mere hireling of American bankers, and has no chance of being elected in any balloting where the polling places are not filled with marines to keep his opponents away, it is not expected that he will request any Latin American watchers.

Slow to Disarm.

Rear Admiral Latimer, commander of the naval forces occupying Nicaraguan waters, has taken certain preliminary steps towards the disarming of the Liberal nationalists. Altho General Moncado, their commander in chief, was bulldozed into agreeing to surrender of all arms and ammunition, many of his subordinates refuse to place themselves defenseless at the mercy of the Diaz mercenaries and the United States marines.

The Airplanes Fly.

To intimidate the recalcitrants, Admiral Latimer has prepared a proclamation, which will be showered on the country from airplanes. It threatens the liberals with force. It speaks of disarming the Diaz army too, but only after the Liberals have given up their weapons. The country will be policed by troops. Officered by Americans, and made up of the "disarmed" Diaz mercenaries, re-equipped with the product of the Springfield arsenal, U. S. A., and known henceforward as "The Nicaraguan Constabulary."

To Boss Elections.

Latimer's proclamation is as follows:

"The United States government, having accepted the request of the Nicaraguan government to supervise the elections in 1928, believes general disarmament necessary for the proper and successful conduct of such elections and directs me to accept the custody of the arms and ammunition of those willing to give them up, including those of the forces of the government, and to disarm forcibly those who do not peaceably deliver up their arms.

"The Nicaraguan government has expressed willingness to deliver the arms under its control and I have directed that such be accepted in the same proportion that arms delivered by the forces of the opposing government.

"The Nicaraguan government has granted general amnesty to all political and armed opponents. To facilitate the return to peaceful occupations of those heretofore opposing the Nicaraguan government, that government will pay ten cordobas ($10) to each individual delivering a serviceable machine gun or rifle to the custody of the United States forces.

Coolidge Worried Over Necessity of Sending Kellogg to Arms Meet

WASHINGTON, May 11.—President Coolidge, under the sudden necessity of finding somebody equal in rank to the Japanese Viscount Maito, and the British First Lord of the Admiralty, who will be at the Geneva arms limitation conference, finds he may have to send Kellogg. The secretary of state has made himself so ridiculous thru the Mexican "stolen letters" and other such episodes, that his presence at such delicate negotiations is almost a calamity, but Coolidge must either send him or repudiate him.

PASSAIC BEATS PREISKEL, FOE OF BIG STRIKE

Weisbord Given Thousand Votes by Gang

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

PASSAIC, N. J., May 11.—Abram Preiskel, arch-enemy of the Passaic workers went down to defeat in yesterday's election.

In spite of the refusal to allow the watchers for the labor candidates in the polling places while the votes were being counted, 1,080 votes were given to Albert Weisbord; 414 to Simon Bambach and 406 to Simon Smelkinson. The three labor men ran for city commissioners as Communist candidates.

The capitalists were nervous while the vote was being counted, afraid that the labor men might be elected. Chairman Stokes, of the New Jersey Republican State Committee phoned one of the Passaic newspapers at a late hour last night to find out how many votes were cast for Weisbord. He did not ask about the votes of any of the other candidates. Preiskel, a member of his own party for the time being, was of no interest to him.

Turner Elected

The five men elected are Mayor John H. McGuire, John J. Reegner, John R. Johnson, Anton L. Pettersen and Benjamin F. Turner. With the exception of Turner, the four are commissioners at present. Turner will become Commissioner of Public Safety, the position now held by Preskiel.

Bar Watchers

Yesterday afternoon the county election board notified the labor campaign committee that their watchers would be recognized on presentation of credentials signed by the committee. When they went to the polling places they were barred. Appealing to the election board they were notified that the local prosecuting attorney had ruled that they should not be admitted.

Not Citizens

It is believed by many people that the barring of the labor watchers resulted in the stealing and voiding of many votes cast for the labor men. Another fact to be taken into consideration is that many of the workers are not citizens.

Issue Statement

The labor campaign committee issued the following statement today:

"The result of the Passaic election for City Commissioners is of a great importance to the American labor movement. In spite of the fact, that the Communist candidates conducted the fight single-handed, attacked and sabotaged by all the representatives of the capitalist class, for the labor

HANGMAN OF SACCO AND VANZETTI IS BREAKING UNDER WEIGHT OF HIS GUILT

Whereabouts Unknown as He Showers Demands On Governor Fuller Not to Intervene

(Special To The DAILY WORKER.)

BOSTON, May 10.—Judge Webster Thayer, persecutor of Sacco and Vanzetti, is insane.

This is the conclusion being forced upon local newspaper men as they follow intently the official and personal life of the notorious judge through the mazes of the world-famous case.

In those legal circles where the course of Massachusetts justice has been followed first with amazement and then with indignation, a demand is being formulated that Governor Fuller remove Thayer from the bench because of mental unfitness.

The astounding story of the collapse of Judge Thayer's mind under the heavy burden of guilt imposed by his effort to murder two innocent men was told to a DAILY WORKER representative today by newspaper men close to the case. (Cont. on Page Five)

SACCO COUNSEL WITH FULLER IN PARLEY ON CASE

Governor Expected to Announce Decision

BOSTON, May 11.—Attorney William G. Thompson, counsel for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, today called at the home of Governor Alvan T. Fuller.

It was understood that Thompson was to discuss with the Governor seven affidavits alleging that trial Judge Webster Thayer was prejudiced.

It was rumored that the Governor was to announce whether he would let the death sentence stand or review it by a public commission. The Governor's secretary, Herman MacDonald, stated, however, that no decision would be forthcoming today.

Secretary of State Kellogg today sent to Governor Fuller, four telegrams received by President Coolidge from Mexico demanding the release of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Among the letters received today was a petition signed by 65 lawyers of the Rochester, N. Y., bar in which they request the appointment of an impartial committee to review the case. According to the letter accompanying the petition the list includes one judge, two former judges, a former district attorney and a former United States Marshal during the war period.

Brophy Battling For Dist. 2 From Convention Floor

DUBOIS, Pa., May 11.—John Brophy, militant miners' leader and former president of District 2, led the fight from the floor on President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers at the convention of District 2 here yesterday.

Lewis deliberately carried out his union-wrecking policy in District 2 in an effort to ruin the prestige of his chief foe within the union, Brophy.

The progressive candidate for president in the recent international election charged that Lewis went over the heads of local unions in District 2 to sign contracts and had forced the men to go to work under threat of cancelling their charters. In many cases, the men were forced to go to work for big coal corporations which were operating non-union mines in neighboring districts.

Vice president Philip Murray was charged with distorting figures, both at the national convention, and locally.

Brophy is putting up a brave fight against the Lewis machine from the floor. An effort was made to keep him from the convention on the assumption that he was living in Pittsburgh. The Lewis-Marks forces have control of the convention.

Indianapolis Mayor Says County Prosecutor Used Office to Cheat Justice

INDIANAPOLIS, May 11. — Charges of conspiracy to defeat justice and of malfeasance in office were hurled at County Prosecutor William H. Remy by Mayor John L. Duvall of Indianapolis in a letter presented today to Judge James A. Collins, of the Marion County criminal court, who is presiding over the investigation of alleged political corruption in Indiana.

Mayor Duvall demanded a grand jury probe of the conspiracy which he alleged was entered into against him by Remy and Thomas H. Adams, militant Vincennes, Ind., publisher.

ACQUIT MORALES; FRAME-UP FAILS TO HANG MEXICAN

Prosecutor Howled for Death; Cop Was Killed

CHICAGO, May 11. — Augustin Morales, the young Mexican worker who was framed by the police of Melrose Park for the murder of Officer Stahl in that suburb, Dec. 7th, was acquitted at six o'clock Tuesday by a jury in the court of Judge Harry B. Miller. The acquittal came on the first ballot, after a most poisonous appeal by the persecutor for the death penalty.

The Mexican consulate immediately wired the news of the acquittal to the consular and diplomatic circles in this country, as the case has been regarded as a test of the rights of Mexicans in this country to the same treatment as other nationals.

Woman Attorney

Mary Bello Spencer, Morales' attorney, was showered with congratulations by spectators in the court and noted criminal lawyers who were on hand to watch the case.

Insurance Manager Admits The Daily Exposes the Facts

(By Nationalist News Agency.)

HANKOW, May 11.—The most important military events are taking place in northern Honan where certain units of the Mukden Army are still remaining in an effort to check the advance of the Nationalist northern expedition in its march toward Peking. Mukden troops are being held along the Peking-Hankow railway and a section of the Lunghai railway. General Tang Shen-chi making a strategical disposition of Nationalist forces and sending reinforcements northwards preparatory to a general attack. Everything is now ready for the great offensive.

Another important factor in the situation is Feng Yu-hsiang, whose men have been concentrated on the Shensi-Honan border, and are now driving rapidly eastwards toward Chengchow, which is the junction of the Peking-Hankow and Lunghai. Feng's advance from Tungwan began April 8th. Feng's First Army has already smashed Liu Cheng Hwa's troops and occupied the city of Henchow after a ten-hour battle.

SHANGHAI, May 11.—The frantic efforts of the imperialist powers and Chiang Kai-shek to thwart the opening of the Pan-Pacific Labor Conference have been futile. Delegates from China, the Soviet Union, the United States, France, Great Britain and Java will gather at Hankow on May 15th to lay the foundations for an alliance of trade union organizations of countries bordering on the Pacific.

Force Postponement.

The imperialist powers have succeeded, however, in preventing the delegations of Japan and Australia from attending the conference, while Chiang Kai-shek's right wing supporters at Canton have forced the conference from Canton to the Nationalist capital at Hankow. The meeting was scheduled to have opened May 1st.

Losovsky (head of the Red International of Trade Unions) Ismailoff and Budnik, delegates of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions were held by British authorities at Canton for two hours at Hangkong, although they had British transit visas. After remaining for two hours under arrest aboard a river steamer, the delegation, escorted by police and detectives, was brought by a police cutter to the American steamship Jefferson. All night, while the steamer remained anchored in port, British guards paced the corridors outside of the delegates' cabins, despite their protests.

The conference cannot be held at Canton, Losovsky explained in a press interview, because delegates from the All-China Federation of Trade Unions might meet death at the hands of the Chinese Laundry Workers Use Bundles as Medium For Revolutionary Appeal

BOSTON, May 11.—Kuomintang members here have found a new way to place the cause of revolutionary China before the public.

In every bundle sent out by Chinese laundrymen this week, a four page pamphlet entitled "An Appeal to the American Public from the Nationalist Government of China" is being inclosed.

P. A. Chan, head of the Kuomintang executive committee here declared that the majority of the party's membership of 700 work in laundries and had therefore decided to reach the public quickly and effectively through their business mediums.

"We appeal to you," reads the pamphlet, "to oppose armed intervention in China, to smash the united front of the British and American imperialists against their own people and the people of the world."

DEFRAUDED BIG FOUR VICTIMS CALL FOR INVESTIGATION

PREVIOUS EVENTS OF INSURANCE EXPOSE.

The DAILY WORKER herewith continues its expose of the fraudulent methods employed by the "Big Four," who are the Metropolitan, Prudential, John Hancock and the Colonial Life Insurance Companies.

In this series it is charged that these companies who monopolize the weekly payment life insurance business are guilty of fraud, misuse of "mutual" funds, manipulation of policyholders' money and corruption, to perjury.

On April 27th Governor Smith ordered Superintendent of Insurance James A. Beha to make inquiries into the charges contained in the Harrison articles.

So far the official apologist for the insurance companies has not submitted his report. The expose has caused something resembling panic in insurance circles. It affects upwards of 40,000,000 American policyholders.

By CHARLES YALE HARRISON.

The Insurance expose bread cast upon the waters is bringing in a rich harvest of outraged policyholders. Letters arrive from all parts of the country protesting against high rates, misrepresentation and fraud. Defrauded workers who have been paying exorbitant weekly premiums for years have suddenly taken to figuring out just how they stand in the swindle.

One reader writes and says, "My mother, who is forty-six years of age took out a policy for $500 paying seventy-five cents a week for twenty years. This means that she will pay to the company $780 during the premium paying period, thus losing $280 on the deal. This is a crime. (That's putting it mildly—Ed. note). Our family pays $3.75 every week to the "Big Four" on policies which amount to $3,385 after twenty years. We can look forward to a loss of over $1,000."

All Want To Know

All letters received strike the same note, and ask for advice on how to handle the question of life insurance.

As society is constituted at present no one will deny the necessity of life insurance. That it is in the hands of a gang of unscrupulous Wall Street insurance does not lessen the work-ability in this respect. As yet the workers have not taken over this essential business and the need for adequate insurance protection persists.

[illegible] FOUR" VICTIMS ARE DEMANDING INVESTIGATION

These insurance problems confront the worker: when he dies he must be buried, his children must be educated and nurtured and helped in that direction, in his old age a thousand or two might help considerably—but weekly payment life insurance will not achieve these ends.

We have shown in previous articles that weekly payment life insurance is exorbitantly high in rates and outstandingly harsh in its policy conditions. Otherwise how can one account for the fact that 75% of all policies lapse before they have been in force for three years.

The average policyholder buys his insurance in the best of faith. The agent's rosy picture of the future sounds good—independence in old age, education for the kiddies, own your own home via a weekly payment life insurance policy—yes, these things sound very promising. The agent, who very often is as ignorant of insurance as his prospect is, glosses over the question of cost and surrender values.

Hide the Facts

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in a booklet called Talks to New Agents says, "Keep cost in the background. Do not dwell on surrender values. Do not leave sample policies. Do not show many figures."

The question of cost is usually evaded by such phrases as "it only comes to ten cents a day" or "you'll never miss the money and then when the Glad Day comes, you'll welcome that ol' check." And so on. If you've ever been harassed for insurance you know the tactics.

Forced To Drop

But when the premiums keep mounting higher and higher due to increases in the amount of insurance and the assistance of your agent, the day inevitably comes when the load is too heavy to carry. The premiums are abnormally high and when the chill wind of unemployment or illness blows the insurance is dropped.

Weekly payment insurance has no loan value as is the case with "ordinary" insurance and so the result of years of scrimping and saving goes up the flue.

If the policyholder has had the good fortune and patience to hang on to his unfair policy for ten years he may surrender his policy for its cash value and suffer a 66⅔ loss.

The "Reserve" Pot

This is industrial insurance. This is the type of life insurance which the Superintendent of Insurance permits to be hawked about in the State of New York. The "public," which in this case is the worker, as usual foots the bill. The hundreds of millions of dollars which the "Big Four" makes on lapsed policies goes into a "reserve" fund which the "public" will never see, although these companies are supposed to be "mutual."

There are about 70 million of these weekly policies in force in the United States and Canada on about 40 million lives. The "Big Four," who monopolize the business, have assets of nearly 4 billion, their annual income from all sources is upwards of one billion dollars.

All efforts to make public the enormous swindle of weekly payment life insurance have been met with ruthless attempts at suppression.

This paper, which is the only New York newspaper which was courageous enough to expose the fraud practiced on 40 million Americans, now faces a framed up charge of printing a so-called unpatriotic poem.

Dare Not Answer

The "Big Four" dare not come into the open and answer the charges which are contained in this expose, because by doing so they will be compelled to answer still graver charges which may be preferred against them.

Their only defense is a cowardly silence. In this case, he who hides or runs away may live to swindle another day.

I hold no brief for the "ordinary" companies, but as things are now they offer the worker the best that he may buy in life insurance.

If our readers feel that they must carry life insurance, by all means let them carry "ordinary" insurance and not the murderously weekly payment life insurance which is offered by the "Big Four."

The Way Out

It would be an advantageous thing for the country at large and for the American worker in particular (if I am correctly informed he is the country at large) if a social institution like life insurance were taken out of the hands of Wall Street operators and put into the hands of those who contribute to its upkeep. But maybe this is asking too much in a graft-ridden country.

In answer to the thousands of policyholders who are fretting about the wisest plan of insurance to carry, I submit the following tables which show comparative rates between "ordinary" life insurance and weekly premium or "industrial" life insurance.

The table below shows the cost per thousand dollars of insurance at age 35 at various plans:

	Ordinary Industrial
15 yr. Endow.....	$37.13 $91.82
20 yr. Endow.....	41.06 68.00
Life	19.91 41.60
Term	9.08 ———

As a general rule it may be stated that weekly payment life insurance is 100 per cent higher in cost than ordinary.

Nor is this all; weekly policies have no loan value whatsoever, ordinary policies have a loan value after two years; ordinary policies have a cash surrender value after two years, the weekly payment policyholder must wait ten years until he can "sell" his policy. Such a sale usually results in a 66 per cent loss of his deposits. Ordinary policies pay dividends after two years, "industrial" policies after five.

Tell Your Story.

We hope that our readers will help us make this expose effective by seeing that neighbors and co-workers are acquainted with it. When you are through with this paper do not throw it away. Leave it in a place where someone will be sure to see it.

Already the expose has more than caused a stir in the seats of the mighty. Governor Smith has ordered the Superintendent, Insurance, James A. Beha, to look into the charges as made in this series of articles.

This is not enough. Nothing short of a legislative investigation, honestly conducted (if that is possible) will ever bring about a curbing of the "Big Four."

Propaganda may not be art—but it sometimes scares the wits out of public looters.

lieutenants and the American Legion, the ticket polled 400 votes, while Albert Weisbord, the strike-leader, when all these agencies tried to make responsible for the present situation got 1,300 votes. And all this was done with all the handicaps of a Communist campaign, the lack of funds and proper election apparatus, the sabotage of the press and the usual wholesale stealing of votes.

Preiskel's Defeat

"The defeat of Preiskel, the man mostly responsible for the police brutality during the strike is also a great achievement, even if his successor may not be much better. SIGMAN PLAN TO BREAK UP UNION IN CHICAGO FAILS

Would-Be Czar Retreats --Threatens New Attack

(By A Worker Correspondent)

CHICAGO, May 11. — President Morris Sigman of the I. L. G. W. U. has returned east after a decisive defeat at the hands of the Chicago union, and without being able to break the solidarity of the Chicago members to their left-wing Joint Board leadership. The purpose of his visit was supposedly to present the facts of the New York needle trades fight.

It was clear from the first day however that he hoped to enforce a registration in Chicago, as was done in New York, expelling the progressives. Finding, after a week of verbal skirmishing, charges, facts and counter charges, that the rank and file were solidly against him and with their left-wing administration, he retired from the scene, promising, however, to return within ten days and to complete his canvass of the union locals. This is interpreted by the Chicago workers as a threat to renew the offensive for right-wing control as soon as some further pretext can be manufactured.

Sigmen Begs Off.

At the Joint Board meeting on Friday, April 29, not only union officials but rank and file members packed the hall. Sigman spoke for three hours, repeating his familiar charges that the N. Y. cloakmakers' strike was conducted by Communists, who betrayed the workers, and justifying the action of the general executive board in expelling the thousands of members making up Locals 22, 9 and 2, the three largest locals in the International. He said with reference to the Chicago situation that the only points at issue were minor ones, to be taken up with the officials in private. When he stopped speaking, Ida Rothstein of the Chicago Joint Board demanded a discussion. Although it was then midnight, the rank and file expressed their willingness to remain, but Sigman insisted it was too late.

Answering Sigmen.

It was decided to continue the meeting next night. This was done, the local officials answering Sigman's assertions one by one. Ida Rothstein attacked his claim to a belief in democracy within the union, citing the Boston convention, the raising of the dues without a referendum as required in the constitution, the $20 assessment, the wholesale expulsions, and other acts of the general executive board. "Democracy?" she flung at him. "I challenge anyone to come out and say that we in Chicago do not tolerate all opinions within the ranks. Under our left-wing administration there have been no expulsions or suppressions of right-wingers. We have one of the best agreements in the country—made by whom? The left-wingers!

You say you come to Chicago with certain charges against the union officials. Why do you not make these charges openly? Because you realize that sentiment is against you. You came to start registration and you see that it is impossible at present. I tell you that at no time will you be able to disrupt our union as you tried it in New York."

Levis Demands Frankness.

Manager J. Levin struck the same note, demanding that Sigman say what he had to say without concealment, and declaring that there is no secret diplomacy within the Chicago union. The left sentiment of the meeting was evident from the prolonged applause which greeted Joint Board members when they took the floor.

In the locals the same spirit was expressed. The Cutters (Local 81) gave a cold reception to the idea of registration. The Cloakmakers Operators (Local 5) warned Sigman not to start a fight, as he would be unable to break up the union. In Local 100 many speakers took the floor against him. In Local 18 a motion was made "to stand loyally with the International,"

Communist International Ridicules Chiang Tso-lin Attempt at Unprecedented Frame-Up

The Secretariat of the Executive Committee of the Communist International has published the following declaration:

"The Chinese press appearing in the territory occupied by Chiang Tso-lin is publishing a series of forged documents alleged to have been found during the recent raid upon the premises of the Soviet Embassy in Pekin by the police. This 'material' is now being published by the whole bourgeois press as "revelations" concerning the work of the Comintern. These documents are being quoted in the British House of Commons with a view to inflaming bourgeois public opinion against the Soviet Union. The great fuss which is being made in imperialist circles about these fantastic documents is alone sufficient to prove clearly the intentions of the Chinese police when they raided the Soviet Embassy in the interests of foreign capital. The aim of the raid was to lend color to the system of forgery adopted by the British conservatives in their anti-Chinese campaign and to make the 'documents' which are a pack of lies from beginning to end appear credible.

"According to these documents, which Chang Tso-lin declares to be 'Secret Instructions from Moscow,' the Comintern has recommended that 'the Chinese masses be stirred up against the foreigners in China with a view of provoking a foreign intervention in China.' The Comintern is thus accused of nothing less than supporting the plans of the imperialists in China!

"Further, these 'instructions' recommend that 'in order to achieve this aim, i.e., the provocation of an imperialist intervention, plundering and the murder of foreigners be carried out, irrespective of the class status of the foreigners so murdered.

"All this utter nonsense, bearing on its shoulder the stamp of political ignorance and obviously fabricated by experts in the service of the foreign espionage organizations, is so ridiculous that a refutation is hardly necessary. It can only be understood by hopelessly naive persons or by deliberate swindlers who seek to justify the imperialist robbery of their governments in China by such dirty methods. The Comintern can only pillory these disgusting and wretched methods carried out so carelessly by the deadliest enemies of the Chinese revolution, in the eyes of the working masses of the whole world. The workers of the world will correctly estimate this action of Chang Tso-lin which was inspired by the foreign capitalists in order to throttle the great movement of the Chinese working and peasant masses. The contemptible purpose of the imperialists can be best served with such clumsy forgeries and such mean deception."

AN UNFORTUNATE PREDICAMENT

The French fat boys are in a most unfortunate predicament. Their scramble with the capitalist robbers of other nations for the world's gravy forces them to build huge armaments and to make military preparations which overburdened French taxpayers can ill-afford.

WHAT has become of the bituminous coal strike? Or rather the lockout. The operators that John L. Lewis co-operated so loyally with in persecuting the radical members of the union are going about the business of organizing their mines on the basis of the open shop in so far as they are permitted to do so by their employes. What is John L. Lewis doing? What service is he rendering the miners in return for salary of $12,000 a year? Lewis is not interested in the welfare of the miners. His pockets are lined and no matter what happens to the miners there is a life of ease and plenty ahead of him.

Only when the masses will throw the exploiters off their backs will the need for charity cease to exist.

German Ambassador in San Francisco

Nicholas Longworth

Speaker of the house of representatives, but better known as the husband of Alice Roosevelt.

May. 14th is to be a gala day in San Francisco. Horns will be blowing, flags flying, salvos of applause re-echoing, and the whole city decked in sporttre mood, because it happens to be the occasion on which Baron A. von Halltron pays us a visit. The noble baron happens to be none less than German Ambassador to the United States, and this is the incentive for all the tumult and the shouting.

Not Like 1913.

Not so many years ago a friendly visit on the part of the ambassador would have had dire consequences. His presence would have been regarded as a hostile act on the part of the "horrible Huns" to disseminate their peculiar culture to the detriment of American ideals. At that time we were engaged in a war to further the ends of a chloroformed democracy, and we regarded Germany as the arch-conspirator that counter-acted our humane endeavors. A visit from any official representing the German nation at that time, would have meant jail for the miscreant, and additional anathemas for the nation that sent him.

"Hun" Is Feted.

On his arrival, Baron von Haltron will go to his quarters at the Fairmont Hotel to prepare for the festivities that await him. On Sunday he will be entertained at the Mill Valley home of Dr. Kurt Zoepfel, German Consul General in San Francisco. On Monday the Baron will pay his respects to the heads of the army and navy, and no doubt congratulate them upon their effective efforts in the cause of culture. The same afternoon, in the rotunda of the City Hall, the Mayor and Supervisors will formally receive our distinguished visitor, and give him the keys of the city, with the modest request, no doubt, that he refrain from pillage.

No Word From Labor.

The League of Women Voters will be the next to do homage, and they have arranged a neat little luncheon that ought to meet all the requirements of our visitor's appetite. Afterwards, he makes a call on Stanford University, and winds up with a swell feed at the Palace Hotel under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce.

During his entire stay in San Francisco, the Baron will have no conference with any working class organization, and no message to them from the revolutionary workers of Germany. From beginning to end, the whole procedure takes the form of capitalist propaganda of an international nature. It makes little difference what the name of the country is, or who represents it, so long as the exploitation of the masses is the basis of its existence, capitalism can well afford to rejoice and make merry.

PACIFIC UNION CONFERENCE MOVES TO HANKOW AFTER IMPERIALISTS AND CHIANG MAKE ARRESTS

right wing elements who control the city.

Japanese workers who were to have attended the conference were placed under arrest by the Japanese government, while the Australian delegation has been refused passports.

During the stay of the delegation of the Soviet Union in Canton, Losovsky said, several hundred workers, most of them Communists and left wing leaders, were executed. Peasants thruout Kwantung Province, Losovsky declared, are rebelling against the right wing dictatorship.

Arrest Hindus.

Arrests at Shanghai continue. Eight persons suspected of left wing activities were arrested and much literature confiscated. Four Hindus were arrested charged with planning the assassination of the Anglo-Hindu police chief at Shanghai and handing out revolutionary literature.

Party Membership Leaps.

HANKOW, May 11.—According to reports submitted to the Central Committee at the Third Congress of the Chinese Communist Party, which opened here on May 1st, Chinese Communists number 57,967, while the preceding Congress, held in 1925, represented on 994 members. The Communists youth rose from 2,265 in 1925 to 35,000 in 1927.

10,000,000 Organized Peasants.

Workers organized in trade unions in 1925 are estimated at 125,000, whereas 2,800,000 Chinese workers are at present organized. Peasants unions have grown in the same period from 200,000 to 9,829,000. Student unions have 420,000 members.

Workers form the bulk of the Communist Party membership.

Chiang Bankrupt.

SHANGHAI, May 11.—The Nationalist News Agency reports that ing serious financial difficulties. Merchants are refusing to accept paper money issued by Chiang Kai-shek, while soldiers are on the verge of revolt having received no pay for some time.

A citizens' committee has been appointed to Changsha, which is in the hands of the Nationalist government at Hankow.

Predict Peking Capture.

HANKOW, May 11.—Wang Chin-wei, chairman of the military council and chairman of the political committee declared today that he expected the Nationalist capture of Peking shortly. Generals Feng Yu-hsiang and Yen Shi-an had aligned themselves with the Nationalist, he said.

Chiang Isolated.

MOSCOW, May 11.—The correspondent of Pravda communicates from Shanghai that Chiang Kai-shek has failed in securing the support of any considerable number of members of the Kuomintang.

Despite the efforts of the right wingers to mask their counter-revolutionary coup by revolutionary phraseology, the masses have not followed them. The Nanking group is a headquarters without an army. The best proof is that on neither the first nor the fourth of May (Students' Day) could Chiang Kai-shek organize a single impressive demonstration.

Chiang. Now War Lord.

The bourgeoisie supporting Chiang Kai-Shek in the struggle against the revolutionary Kuomintang instead, of continuing the northern expedition more energetically urges compromise. Compromise will reduce Chiang Kai-shek from a nationalist to a provincial force. Even now the Nanking group is beginning to strikingly resemble the former clique of Sun Chuan-fang. it is in that light that the more reasonable militarists regard him.

Chiang Kai-shek's press continues to flirt with the workers and peasants, prattling about the national and even the world revolution; but this doesn't prevent the English papers from advising Chiang Kai-shek to give up the naval plans and devote himself from making "Kiangsu a model province."

From the military viewpoint Chiang Kai-shek's position is rapidly degenerating to the position of Sun-Chuan-fang being essentially like the latter a temporary alliance of generals which can fall which under the pretext of fighting the Communists is attempting to secure control of the region falling into their hands.

Chiang Kai-shek and his followers seem to be realizing the fiasco of their enterprise. Therefore their hopeless flirting with the workers their desperate efforts to secure the support of any prominent leader of the Kuomintang and their vain appeals to the widow and son of Sun Yat-sen from that too follows their servility to America as the hope of receiving assistance from her is the straw to which they cling.

NEWS FROM SOVIET UNION SHOWS POPULATION, PRODUCTION GROWTH

MOSCOW, APRIL 18 (By Mail)—A special conference was held at the People's Commissariat of Education to deal with the question of restoration of the Russian Archeological Institute at Constantinople, which had been closed, while all its contents were handed over to the Turkish Ottoman Museum.

In the number of volumes, works and collections, this Institute is the richest in the world for the study of the Byzantine epoch. According to information available, the books of the institute have been perfectly well preserved.

The request which the All-Union Academy of Science tended to the Turkish Government regarding the resumption of the institute's work has met with a most favorable reception.

Economic Situation.

Speaking at the All-Russian Congress of Soviets, M. Rykov, chairman of the Council of People's Commissaries stated that the rown area is 105 per cent of the area of 1916, while the total yield is 92 per cent. Sowings of technical cultures have increased and their dimensions are considerably larger than previous to the war. There was 11 million hectares of land allotted for cultivation in 1925-26. Throughout the RSFSR the number of tractors working was estimated, in 1925-26, at 13,600. The production of agricultural machinery exceeded the pre-war production by 29 per cent. 17 million roubles was assigned in 1926-27 for anti-drought measures, as against 12.5 million roubles allocated for the same purpose last year.

Grows One Fourth.

The growth of the industry in RSFSR will be 22.6 per cent this year. The fundamental expenses of the industry of RSFSR which have been allocated for current year 1926-27 reach the sum of 1985 million roubles, as against 1587 million roubles last year. Out of a total of 643 million roubles which have been assigned for fundamental outlay in the all-Union industry, over 340 million roubles are to be invested into industry situated in the territory of RSFSR. The building is being proceeded in this year of such big works as the Dnieper-on-Don works manufacturing agricultural machinery, the tractor mills, at Stalingrad, the metal works of Kerch. Preparations are being made for the erection of works in the Magnet mountain, in the Ural; at Tuapse an oil distilling plant is being constructed, and so forth. One of the biggest schemes of construction which is being started this year is the Semirech railway, whose importance for the development of industry is enormous. Another huge construction is the Volga-Don canal; to this latter problem, the government has been paying the closest attention.

Population Grows.

The natural accretion of population of the Russian Socialist Federated Republic was 1.89 per every ten thousand people in 1926, 1.78 in 1924, 1.93 in 1925, as compared with 1.61 on an average in 1908-13.

The number of marriages has been rapidly increasing during the post-war years, reaching 132 per cent of every ten thousand inhabitants in 1922, as against 81 marriages in 1911-12. In 1925 the number of marriages as registered went down again, reaching 91 per cent of every ten thousand inhabitants.

Room For More.

The birth-rate in the R.S.F.S.R. fluctuates parallelly with the fluctuations of the number of marriages. However, in 1925, the birth-rate rose steadily, in spite of the decreased number of marriages. In 1925, there were 414 births per every ten thousand inhabitants against an average of 447 in 1908-12.

The death-rate is actually much lower than that of the war, when, in European Russia, it was put at 272 per every ten thousand inhabitants; for 1925, the corresponding figure was 221.

Foreigners in R.S.F.S.R.

In the R.S.F.S.R. there live 150-170,000 foreigners. Most of them live in the Far East. The number is yearly increasing of foreigners opting for citizenship of the R. S. F. S. R; thus about 10,000 foreigners opted for Soviet citizenship in 1925, and 5,800 during the first half of 1926.

The export of oil products during the first half of the working year 1926-27 reached 887,800 tons, against 626,000 tons during the first half of the preceding year, an increase of 41.8 per cent.

Among the different countries of destination the export of oil products was distributed as follows: in the first place stands the United Kingdom, the export to which increased, as compared with the preceding year, by 39.4 per cent. Oil exports to Egypt increased by 112.9 per cent; to Italy—by 29.8 per cent. Out of the total Soviet oil exports, 59.2 per cent went to European countries, the rest being exported to the countries of the Near East.

How the Reactionaries Have Helped the Daily Worker

This is an authentic photograph of a dyed-in-the-wool dollar paytriot speculating upon the results of the attack upon The DAILY WORKER. Contrary to their expectations that the attack would crush the paper, it has stimulated increased support from workers throughout the country. Every mail brings evidences of sympathy and support in our fight against the forces of reaction.

If any worker was not convinced about the militancy and the fighting character of The DAILY WORKER, of its efficacy in the struggle against American capitalism, then the attack of the so-called patriotic societies would convince even the most skeptical. It is very evident to the most doubtful one, that The DAILY WORKER is being attacked because it is waging a militant struggle against the forces of American capitalism, on every front.

Every dollar contributed to the Defense Fund, is not only a demonstration of support for The DAILY WORKER, labor's militant organ. It is a demonstration against the efforts of the reactionaries, to reduce the workers of America to silent acceptance of conditions of industrial slavery. Let no worker fail at this time to show where he stands. Send in your contribution at once to show your solidarity.

Britain's Gains From American Co-operation in China.

Although defeated on the diplomatic field in its policy to take advantage of the Nanking "incident," for a joint military assault of the imperialist powers against the nationalist revolution in China, Great Britain nevertheless made substantial gains because of the assistance already given her by the United States government. The joint shelling of Nanking, in which British and American warships stood side by side and poured death and destruction into that Chinese city, paved the way for the atrocious regime there of the bestial Chiang Kai-shek. All students of the conflicting elements in China, all those who can see beneath the surface the deep underlying social and economic forces, realize that without support from the imperialists neither Chiang Kai-shek at Nanking nor the bandit monster, Chang Tso-lin in Peking, could hold out against the mighty sweep of the nationalist liberation movement representing the workers and peasants under the leadership of the Kuomintang, which in turn has as its motive force the Communist Party of China.

The role of the United States as a pawn of Great Britain deserves special study and special analysis. In the early days of the nationalist advance, when the Koumintang represented a combination of workers, peasants and the bourgeoisie of China, united in the Northern drive, both the United States and Japan adopted a policy of awaiting developments and frequently indulged in sympathetic expressions about the hoped-for "unification of China."

But when the northern advance showed conclusively that the unification of China was proceeding along different lines than they anticipated; when it became apparent that new forms were being assumed and that the part played by the Communists, the workers and the peasants, carried with it a threat to the imperialist powers, then the American minister to China, MacMurray, aligned himself with the British policy of intervention. His first request for approval of his action—the joint shelling of Nanking—met with the sanction of the state department as did his draft of the first identic note to the Chinese foreign minister, Eugene Chen.

Meanwhile Britain, and undoubtedly the United States agents in China, aided in the coup d'etat of the renegade, Chiang Kai-shek, sanctioned the vandal attack upon the Russian legation at Peking by Chang Tso-lin, aided in spreading lies about the documents forged against the Soviet Union, and stood approvingly by while the Manchurian bandit strangled to death one of the outstanding leaders of the Chinese Communist Party, Li Tai-chau, and 19 others.

Events in Japan also aided the game of Britain, by bringing into office a new cabinet headed by Tanaka, a fervid apostle of the revival of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance that served effectively for so many years as an instrument of imperialism against China.

Britain wanted to drive forward with a policy of immediate armed intervention, recognize the spurious government of Chiang Kai-shek, and regain completely its old "sphere of influence." The difference in policy between the United States and Britain cannot be interpreted to mean that Washington favors the nationalist liberation movement while England wants to crush it. They both want to bring about its destruction. But Wall Street will not permit Britain to take the lead and thereby reap the benefits from the subjugation of China, because a perpetuation of the old policy of "spheres of influence" will shut out from some of the most productive parts of China the investment capital of America—will be a violation of the "open door" policy, whereby the United States hopes eventually to be able exclusively to exploit all of China.

This conflict over policy, a weakening of the co-operation that could only exists temporarily because of the world rivalry of the two great powers, will give the Chinese nationalist movement a chance to consolidate its forces and prepare for a determined drive against the imperialist hirelings in command of mercenary troops.

In this country it is the imperative duty of the working class to demand that Washington cease being the tool of Great Britain; that it not only abandon open joint action against the nationalist movement, but that it keep its hands off the internal situation and permit the Chinese masses to work out their own destiny; that it withdraw its consular agents from Peking and Nanking, where by their silence they now give aid and comfort to the systematic butchery of all who do not bow to the demands of the bandit hirelings of imperialism.

Labor Bank Merges With Scab Herders.

The Brotherhood Bank of Philadelphia, a labor bank, with deposits of $1,000,000, has merged with the Mitten Men and Management Bank and Trust Company, with deposits of approximately $13,000,000. This labor bank, like others of its type, spent a great deal of time and money on propaganda trying to convince the workers that the labor movement had left the old path of strikes and militant struggle and had entered upon a period of co-operation with capital, a period in which every worker could eventually become a capitalist. After hoodwinking the slaves out of as many dollars as they could secure on deposit, this bank also solicited funds of business men.

It now sells out to the Mitten management, the notorious strike-breaking outfit at the head of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company. Mitten not only broke the strike and destroyed the organization of the carmen of that city, but he makes a business of furnishing professional strike-breakers for every other traction concern in any part of the country that has trouble with its men. Mitten, himself, is to be president of the consolidated banks, while F. B. Snyder, former president of the Brotherhood bank will be vice-president. Five other former directors of the labor bank, all of them locomotive engineers, will join the board of directors of the scabby Mitten concern.

A splendid example of the manner in which the workers buy out the capitalists!

The only difference between this labor bank and the others is that it openly merges with the big banks of the employing class, while the others simply have interlocking directorates, as in the case of the main Brotherhood bank and the Empire Trust Company, so they may share in the discounting of industrial stock issues, the most profitable phase of banking.

Banking is a capitalist game and one that the workers can never utilize to their own advantage. The Philadelphia merger ought to force that realization upon some of the workers who are still being fooled by the fakers who play the labor banking game.

THE SHAME OF PEKIN

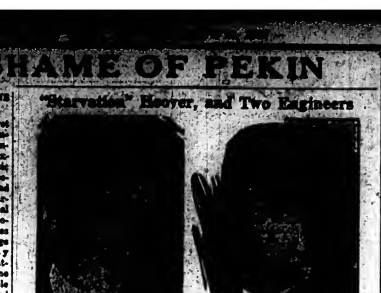
By Professor Stanislaus Dr. ALPONS SOLMSBERRY (Sorbonne)

When on the 7th April, the first reports arrived that the Soviet Embassy in Peking had been stormed by the Chang Tso-lin troops with the express permission of the Diplomatic Corps, it was immediately clear to me, who loved this town[illegible] All written and unwritten international law[illegible] makes the inviolability of the Embassy buildings of all countries. The people of Antiquity, in the Middle Ages and even in the so-called New Age regarded this inviolability as something unalterable and any attempt to interfere with it as one of the worst crimes. Is it possible that such a crime could be committed against the Soviet Embassy in Pekin and is it at all conceivable that international diplomacy should have given their permission to the commital of this crime? For centuries, even down to the present day, the school books have recorded the attack made upon the inviolability of the imperial Councillors Martinitz and Slavata on the 23rd of May 1618 in Prague and have declared that attack to have been the justifiable commencement of the Thirty Years War. And to-day, when we are proud of having secured all the "ideals of Humanity" and the rights of the peoples, through the League of Nations, it is just the official representatives of all these things who ignore the simplest and most natural rights as though a Diplomatic Embassy were No Man's Land during the war.

The Embassy Raid.

The unbelievable became a fact. The news was confirmed from all sides. The most threadbare excuses were used to justify the crime. First of all, they said, it was not the Embassy building itself, secondly there were criminals in this building who were conspiring against the life of the leading political personalities in Pekin and thirdly, this building contained documents which clearly and conclusively proved the guilt and the machinations of the Soviet diplomacy against the Pekin powers.

Just imagine the affair even if all these accusations had been true to the last syllable, but that the Embassy had been not the Russian, but the British or even the Italian, and it had been the "machinations" of these ambassadors. Suppose the bandits of Chang Tso-lin had broken into the Italian Embassy, etc., etc. But that is unthinkable. First of all the diplomats would never have given their consent, and had such a raid nevertheless taken place, what would have happened then? The world would have experienced a terrible storm of unprecedented proportions. The whole world would have risen with the clank of weapons. But it was only the Soviet Embassy, and so in a few days the excitement had subsided.



Lies Are Exposed

In the meantime three weeks have passed. It turns out that there is no proof, not the least vestige of proof against the alleged criminals. Of the 70 of them, that is more than half of the arrested, had to be released. This is made more than significant by the fact that the Chinese militarists are not too particular about what happens to any unfortunates that fall into their hands. But there was no proof against those who were retained in arrest. The world knows, it is true, the press of the infamous Zinoviev letter forgers reported that important documents had been found. The truth of the matter is to be seen from a telegram from the "Berliner Tageblatt" of the 29th of April:

"The attitude of the Doyen of the Diplomatic Corps deserves most severe condemnation, for the publication of the material confiscated as a result of the raid on the Soviet Embassy up to the moment, shows a very sparse result. Further, the genuineness of the most compromising documents is extremely doubtful. For instance, the reports to the Russian Military Attache in Pekin are written in a most uncertain manner and only partly in accordance with the modern and official methods of Russian orthography. Another very remarkable fact is that these documents which are really compromising were only published three weeks after the raid, whilst the documents which were first published were simply ridiculous and insignificant."

Imperialists Share Guilt.

Clumsy forgeries, no documents and no criminals! But what do the diplomats who permitted the raid on the Soviet Embassy, care about that? What does Chang Tso-lin, the murderous bandit whose name will persist in world history together with the names of Cesare Borgia and Cortez, care about these things? He ordered a trial to take place, but whilst the accusations against the arrested were still being examined, he ordered the coffins to be placed ready, a piece of cruelty and cynicism to which it would be difficult to find an equal. The diplomats in Pekin and their colleagues in London, Paris, Washington, Rome, etc. were well aware of the tragedy unrolling itself before the

From the days when Herbert Hoover "Hooverized" the whole U. S., making it eat food substitutes in order to win the war for Morgan and Co., thru the period of his as monopolizer of the food supplies of the beaten Central Powers in Europe he used starvation as a club to beat down youthful Soviet Republics in Hungary and elsewhere, up to his present attempt to help the banks profit from the Mississippi flood, he has capitalized human misery, and made money out of flood, famine and war. The only time he failed was when he organized the famine relief program along the Volga. That was a plot to set up industrial espionage, win over the people, and re-establish capitalism. The people of the first Workers Republic took his food, and did not turn back to capitalism.. When Hoover saw the plan was failing, he called off the relief.

cont. They were well aware that death awaited the accused. A word from them would have been enough to save the victims from the hands of the hangmen, but the word was not spoken, they were responsible for the raid and they must bear the full responsibility for the consequences of the raid.

Human life can be destroyed in many ways. The Mississippi has broken its banks and swallowed up everything in its way. That is a natural catastrophe, like an earthquake, a lightning or a tornado. The bloody history of the world is full of most frightful cruelties, burnings at the stake, burying alive, scalping, castration, rape, and a hundred other cruelties have been thought out by the bestial sapiens and practised in cold blood or with fanatical sadism.

Greatest Crime in Years.

Thousands of cruelties which are being practised in this very moment, never penetrate outside through the prison walls, cries of pain and shrieks for mercy are only heard in the cells of the tortures. But the most horrible murders, more horrible than the skinning alive practiced by Marsya, more horrible than the millions of crimes committed in anger, which stain humanity, more horrible than the raging crimes of Pizarro in Peru or of Cortes in Mexico, more horrible than all the fanatical thumbscrews and wheels of the Middle Ages is the cold-blooded murder permitted by people in safety, the planned murder, the murder which the representatives of the so-called cultured countries did not prevent, although one word, one single objection would have been sufficient to have made it impossible. The destruction of 20 lives by the strangling of 20 living breathing, thinking and sentient bodies, that was a horrible crime committed from a writing desk, the famous diplomatic writing desk. That was a most horrible crime of recent years.

Things have gone so far in Pekin that Chinese begging for protection are not merely refused it, but Europeans are even prohibited from offering Chinese asylum in European houses. The correspondent of the "Berliner Tageblatt" reports that the Germany Embassy has also warned all its nationals against fulfilling this elementary human duty. Is it true that human beings begging for their lives are officially driven to certain death?

Supported By Diplomats.

I have feverishly recalled all I have read and heard of such cruelty. I know no worse example of cold-blooded brutality than the use of this go-between, for Chang Tso-lin is nothing but a go-between, an instrument of the Pekin Diplomats. His power would collapse to-morrow if the powers would declare an effective neutrality. We will not approach the governments whose lackeys have carried out this horrible crime. We will not approach the League of Nations which is only the instrument of these governments. But we know there are millions and millions of human beings in the world who feel just as we do, who are filled with horror and anger at this crime. These millions must cry the shame of Pekin throughout the world, they must knock at the doors of their diplomatic representatives until they are heard.

This must be done today, for perhaps to-morrow the crime will be repeated perhaps to-morrow the strangler will again be at work. Perhaps lies and false reports are already preparing the way for new murder. Do not permit the diplomats and hangmen to commit new crimes!

Philadelphia Forms A United Front Body For Hands Off China

PHILADELPHIA, May 11. — The organization of a permanent "Hands Off China" conference here is proceeding through a temporary committee, brought together two weeks ago upon the initiative of the executive of the Koumintang Party.

Represented on this committee are the Koumintang Party, the Central Labor Union, the Workers Party and the Young Workers League. Members of trade unions and other organizations have also attended meetings in an unofficial capacity.

At the first meeting a temporary chairman and secretary were elected and a resolution adopted calling for the withdrawal of troops from China and abolition of unequal treaties, etc.

At the second meeting May 8, a temporary executive committee was elected and a resolution was ordered sent to President Coolidge, Secretary of State Kellogg and Senator Borah.

The secretary of the committee was instructed to get in touch with other "Hands Off China" committees throughout the country. Further steps will be taken in Philadelphia to build up a large and fully representative "Hands Off China" conference.

A joint meeting called by the International Workers Aid and the Kuomintang Party was held Sunday afternoon, May 8th, at Labor Institute Hall in support of the slogans: "Hands Off Revolutionary China" and "Hands Off Soviet Russia."

When application for a permit to hold the meeting was made, the chief of police refused it, giving as his ground the fear of violence. Accompanied by a lawyer of the Civil Liberties Union, Meyerson of the I. W. A. visited the chief of police to demand permission to hold the meeting. This was not granted, and it was decided to hold the meeting notwithstanding.

News of the refusal of the permit spread, leading many workers, in the belief that the meeting would not be held, to stay away.

Nevertheless, a good crowd turned out.

Speeches were made by F. Biedenkapp, just returned from Europe, and Funk Sing Quong.

Union Delegates Cooperate.

WASHINGTON (FP), May 11.— For the first time since the October revolution in 1917, an official delegation from Soviet Russia has been received in an international conference in the United States. Sol G. Bron, representing the State Grain Export Bureau in the Soviet Union, headed the Soviet delegation which took part in the recent international grain pools conference at Kansas City, where Secretary of Agriculture Jardine delivered the address of welcome.

With Bron, who will remain in this country as head of the Amtorg, or Soviet Union export and import trade organization dealing with America, were delegates from the consumers' cooperatives and the producers' cooperatives in the Soviet federation. Bron delivered a speech which was well received, and upon his return to Washington he expressed his gratification. He said he considered this conference was of great significance.

Gilbert and Sullivan's "Ruddigore" Slated for Revival

Lawrence J. Anhalt announces a revival of the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta "Ruddigore," with many of the players who appeared in the same opera at the old Park theatre (now the Cosmopolitan) six years ago. The new presentation will be made here within a fortnight at a theatre yet to be announced. The last revival of "Ruddigore," announced for an engagement of two weeks, continued over twenty-three weeks. Among the players who appeared at that time and who have been engaged for the new production are: Craig Campbell, William Danforth, Herbert Waterous and Sarah Edwards. Charles Jones, who staged the revival of "Princess Ida," two seasons ago, will direct "Ruddigore." Harry Gilbert will direct the chorus which will include eighty voices.

About the same time, Robert Milton is planning to bring his revival of "Patience" to the Masque theatre. With two Gilbert and Sullivan revivals of "Iolanthe" and "The Pirates of Penzance" this past season by Winthrop Ames, it does seem as if the English masters of operetta are not neglected in the theatrical world of blase Broadway.

Broadway Briefs

The Erlanger theatre, being erected on West 44th Street, is rapidly nearing completion, and will be opened next September. The playhouse will cost more than $1,500,000 for the building alone.

"One For All," announced to open Wednesday has been delayed, and will now have its premiere this Friday night at the Greenwich Village theatre.

LILLIAN GISH

is featured in "Annie Laurie" the new film at the Embassy theatre.

Margaret Anglin will not give her contemplated "Electra" at Jolson's theatre, as previously announced in these columns. Miss Anglin may give regular performances next season, however.

Dorothy Chamberlain has joined the cast of "The Circus Princess" at the Winter Garden.

"Queen High," the musical comedy at the Ambassador Theatre, will reach its 300th performance tonight.

WATCHERS FOR LABOR EJECTED FROM PRECINCTS

Candidates of Workers Tricked by Officials

PASSAIC, May 11.—The hottest city election in years took place yesterday in this city to the accompaniment of fraud and corruption on a huge scale.

In a deliberate effort to steal the victory from Albert Weisbord and his two associates on the labor ticket, watchers for the labor party were thrown out of the polls although all other candidates were allowed representation in the balloting and counting of the votes.

Assured by the city clerk that they could issue their own credentials to watchers, and that election judges would honor these certificates, the labor campaign committee proceeded yesterday to enroll hundreds of watchers. But at the eleventh hour today when the watchers presented themselves at the polls to perform their duties, they were told that the city attorney had reversed the clerk's opinion and that they were barred for legal reasons.

Gross Discrimination.

Protests to city authorities brought no remedy, although but one other candidate had fulfilled the instructions handed down by the unexpected order of the city attorney. Watchers for all candidates of the republican and democratic machines were permitted in the polls.

The campaign ended in a flare of circus stunts, with planes flying bands playing and all the hokuspokus of election corruption on tap. Only the three labor candidates, Weisbord, Bamback and Smelkinson made any effort to meet city issues intelligently and seriously.

Stress Race Issues.

Rumors flew thick and fast, with racial issues stressed. In the Dundee section it was whispered that Weisbord and Preiskel, the commissioner of public safety who fought the taxi-cab strike tooth and nail last year, were running on the same ticket. This was supposed to swing labor votes to Preiskel.

Five candidates, Cabell, Turner, Johnson, Schachter and Welker were alleged in the gossip assiduously circulated, to be running on a Ku Klux Klan ticket while Rudolph Preiskel, candidate, was alleged to have made a deal with Turner, the captain of detectives.

All these candidates are seeking the five city commissionerships to be filled today.

A 20 per cent vote for Weisbord and the labor ticket was confidently expected.

Closes With Bang

The labor campaign closed Monday evening with a blaze of excitement. Three large open air meetings were addressed by Weisbord, Bambach, Sylvan A. Pollack, Emil Gerdos, M. Kushner, Louis A. Benn and several local speakers.

During the entire campaign the capitalist candidates tried to disturb and break up the working class rallies. On Monday night they were out in full force to create trouble.

Contienaua Uproar

The meeting on Oak St. opposite the police station was in a continuous uproar as a result of the disruptive efforts of supporters of Abram Preskiel, assisted by policemen and detectives.

At Hope and Monroe Sts., a truck with Preskiel banners circled around the meeting several times while Weisbord was speaking, creating noise. Many other devices to terrorize the workers were used but to no avail, as the overwhelming majority of the audience supported the labor men.

Return Lists

The labor campaign committee once again appeals for the immediate returning of the contribution lists with all funds on hand. Many debts must be paid and the strengthening of the local movement be continued after the campaign. Return all lists to 27 Dayton Ave., Passaic, N. J.

Postpone Kushner's Case Entire Week

Hearing of the case against Matthew Kushner, arrested several weeks ago with Herman Moskowitz for distributing "Hands Off China" leaflets, was postponed until May 17 when it came up yesterday in the 4th district police court.

Moskowitz, found guilty, is now serving a six month sentence in the work house. His case will come up for appeal the same day that Kushner will be tried. They are active members of the Young Workers' League.

Read The Daily Worker Every Day

Anxiety, bordering on fear, has been created in both the camps of the reactionary international Fur Workers' Union, following the return to work of a large number of workers from the locked-out shops.

It is understood that these workers have been back to the shops for the registering, in accordance with a well-defined plan of the Joint Board for meeting the attack of the International and the A. F. of L. leaders upon the furriers' union. This move on the part of the Joint Board was totally unexpected, and the employers and International officials who have been collaborating in their attempt to smash the union are at a loss as to just what the Joint Board has up its sleeve.

The Joint Board has begun the formation of a $100,000 fund called the "Fund for the Defense of the Union," and its understood that a leaflet is soon to go out to the fur workers urging them to build up this fund just as quickly as possible. In the meantime, systematic mobilization work is going on at Joint Board headquarters. Committees of active members are being shaped into organizations for further action against the right wing, and these manufacturers who have been forcing their workers to register.

At a loss to know just what to say about the situation in the furriers' union, the Jewish "Forward," organ of the right wing officials, has started rumors—printed them too—stating that Ben Gold, manager of the Joint Board has been visiting shops proposing that the manufacturers reconsider the pay of the workers in return for their support of the Joint Board.

This is an old, moss-covered lie, quite familiar to the workers, and especially ridiculous in this instance since wages in the fur trade are 35% higher now than they ever were before the left wing came into power. The "proposal" of Ben Gold, employer, head of B. Gallet & Sons, or saying that Gold had visited him. When this rumor was questioned by the workers and said, "You know Gold must have been very shy" "I can say he was!" the boss replied, "and in that fight, anything is permissible—even deliberate lying."

No doubt the real reason for circulating these stories of visits from Gold is to divert the attention of the workers from the fact that the right wing officials—International and A. F. of L.—have been doing just this sort of visiting in an effort to sell out the workers by making deals with the bosses.

Letter to Associated Members.

In a letter received by each member of the Associated Fur Manufacturers Inc. this week, the Joint Board pointed out, "Your experience with the Joint Board membership and their representatives has unquestionably convinced you of their determination to defend and, if necessary, fight for their rights and continue to fight until justice prevails. * * * Mindful of the welfare of the fur workers whom it represents, the Joint Board is sincerely concerned in maintaining peaceful and contractual relations between the worker and the manufacturer. But when the rights of the workers are invaded, when an irresponsible group of manufacturers act in bad faith and break the collective agreement (as the Associates has done) and thus threaten to cause suffering to the fur workers and and create chaos in the fur industry, then the Joint Board conceives it to be its highest duty to live up to its responsibilities to the fur workers and the fur industry. The Joint Board is determined to fight against irresponsibility and arbitrariness."

Workers' Lives in Danger From Leaky Gas Boiler in Shop

According to the police, twenty-four women dressmakers employed by A. Rosenblatt & Son of 333 Seventh avenue, dropped unconscious in the shop yesterday, overcome by carbon monoxide fumes coming from a faulty gas boiler on the next floor.

It took a full hour to revive some of the girls, and two of them, Elizabeth Wilcox of 123 West 124th St. and Marion Ralston of 65 West 128th St. had to be taken to the New York Hospital even after they had been worked upon with a pulmotor by members of the police force and the Consolidated Gas Company crew.

Seventeen other members of the shop revived without the pulmotor and went to their homes. Their names were Fannie Blader of 128 Humboldt St., Brooklyn; Clara Winkler, of 554 Grand St.; Rita Cola of 86 West 115th St.; Mario Cox. of 323 West 141st St. and Constance Scheefer, of 134 West 116th St.

Scranton Workers Plan War on Company Union

SCRANTON, Pa., (FP) May 11.—A fight against the company union in the Lackawanna rail shops will be staged this summer if the plans the Central Labor Union of Scranton is discussing mature. The plans are to conduct a drive in every unorganized trade in the city. The American Federation of Labor will be asked to send general organizers.

1,000 Printers Laid Off Thanks to Cal

WASHINGTON, (FP) May 11.—A thousand union printers in the government printing office in Washington have been notified that they will be laid off for 9 days each, between now and July. This means a loss in wages of $75 per men. It is due to lack of work, which in turn is due to President Coolidge's refusal to call Congress in extra session to deal with holdover legislative matters.

No Lreedom Fight Yet

SOPERS RANCH, Ventura County, Cal., May 11.—Jack Dempsey has made no definite arrangements to fight Paulino Uzcudun, the Basque woodchopper, on July 9, the former heavyweight champion said at his training camp here today.

Manufacturer Leaps Railing

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Joseph F. Herman, a manufacturing, today plunged 200 feet to his death from the Connecticut Avenue Bridge.

The death leap was witnessed by John Bay, Negro janitor, to whom Herman waved farewell as he jumped over the bridge railing.

Relatives said that Herman had worried over some unfortunate investments.

Aida Halted by Union When Newark Company Evades Labor Contract

NEWARK, N. J., May 10.—Because the New York Opera Co. attempted to evade union regulations, the theatrical and stage employes' union has called a strike at the Miners' Theatre, tying up scheduled performances of Aida, Rigoletto and other operas.

The curtain was rung down Sunday evening on Aida at the end of the first act when the stage employes, acting under instructions from their international officials, walked off, refusing to shift scenes.

Plumbers Helpers Negotiating With Boss for $9.00 Day

The Plumbers' Helpers' Association was negotiating yesterday with Edward A. Weiss, a contractor of 396 Broadway, Astoria, Queens, for a full union contract with $9 e day and the 40-hour week, President C. F. Miller announced yesterday.

The four pickets arrested Monday were fined $5 each in court yesterday due to the feilure of counsel for the defense to appear. President Miller asked to be allowed to plead for the strikers, but was barred.

A general meeting of all building trades workers has been called by the association for Friday evening at Ace Hall, 182 Claremont Ave., Williamsburgh.

Van Swerlegen To Testify

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The possibility that O. P. Van Sweringen, master mind in the proposed billion dollar Van Sweringen railroad merger, would be called to testify before the Interstate Commerce Commission regarding various phases of the unification plan, loomed large today.

Van Sweringen's representatives today confirmed the report that a company is being formed to take over all the interest which the Nickel Plate Railroad, owned by the Van Sweringen brothers, holds in the Chesapeake & Ohio. This company, it was stated, will issue securities for a capital structure involving about $50,000,000. The stock in the new company will be distributed to the individual stockholders of the Nickel Plate in proportion to their holdings and the equity of their stock in the Chesapeake & Ohio and to the Vanses Company, which represents the Van Sweringen personal holdings.

Betts Had Million

RIVERHEAD, N. Y., May 11.—The gross value of the estate of the late Louis F. Betts, is $1,239,970.81, and the net value $864,082.85, it was shown by a transfer tax appraisal filed with Surrogate George P. Pelletreau of Nassau County here today. The bulk of the estate was bequeathed to relatives. Betts, who lived in Southampton, died June 30, 1926.

RIGHT WINGERS DESPERATE EFFORT TO GET PEACE

Pious Protestations Are Belied by Action

While the convention of Cloth Cap, Hat & Millinery Workers assembled at Beethoven Hall Tuesday falsely protested that they wanted to see peace in the needle trades of this city, they voted down the resolution calling upon the general executive board to bring both factions of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union together and arrange a referendum of the membership. They also voted down a resolution condemning the American Federation of Labor for the disruptive policy it has been pursuing in the furriers' union.

Right wing delegates resorted to a bitter attack upon the "left wing," but gave no reasons why they, who professed to have the interests of the workers at heart, should refuse to take steps to bring about a settlement of the controversy in the ladies' garment unions.

"You all say that you are in favor of peace," said Delegate I. Feingold. "I say it is hypocrisy to say you are for peace and to oppose the resolution instructing our representatives to call both factions together. We need not say which is right and which is wrong. We can simply permit the membership to express its opinion."

Defeat Impossible.

Some right wing delegates remarked that the left wing is afraid it is about licked, to which Feingold replied:

"Not only are we not licked, but we never will be licked. The left wing has taken such deep roots in the masses of the workers that nothing will ever be able to uproot it."

A heated discussion on the problem lasted for most of the afternoon session, which closed with Feingold's statement. Feingold is from St. Louis.

"I went to say to the delegates who are laughing at our appeal for unity in the labor movement. The one who laughs last will laugh the best'." This was received with tremendous applause from both delegates and visitors.

A resolution calling for amalgamation of the needle trades, and asking that the cepmakers' International be instructed to call all Cloth Hat Millinery Locals together to bring about amalgamation, was defeated by the convention. In its place a substitute resolution was passed, urging the formation of an "alliance" of the Internationals, and full cooperation with all other groups.

Attack Local 42.

Yesterday morning's session opened with the presentation of the officers' report, in which the chief article of controversy was a section condemning Local 42 for disregarding the constitution of the union, and for failure to cooperate with other locals, especially in the formation of a Joint Board.

Local 42 defended its actions, and retaliated by introducing a resolution condemning the officers for putting into their report the part referring to Local 42. The convention accepted the officers' report as it was presented; then the committee on this report endeavored to smooth matters over by softening the condemnation statements.

According to M. Golden, a right wing delegate, "Local 42 is the most abused local in the union, except Local 7 of Boston"—which last night was condemned by Golden and his group for running a successful strike.

For Sacco and Vanzetti.

Tuesday session of the convention, after refusing to censure the A. F. of L. for expulsion of the Furriers' Joint Board, end to demand reinstatement, went on record "for immediate release of Sacco and Vanzetti and for all political prisoners."

The convention refused to pass a resolution asking for the formation of a labor party to include "all political, labor and economic organizations"; but adopted an emendment to the labor party resolution pledging support of a party which the General Executive Board of the union "shall see fit to support."

A report on union organization work from H. I. Goldberg, member of the General Executive Board, closed last night's session.

Girls Join Strike of 700 White Drivers in Harlem Laundry Walkout

Twenty-two white laundry drivers and about 80 Negro laundry girls are continuing their strike against the North American Laundry in Harlem. The drivers, who have been averaging 60 hours a week with $40-$45 compensation, struck first. The Negro girls loyally walked out with them.

Nine strikers have already been arrested for picketing. Organizer Max Brody of Local 810 has been released under $500 bail.

Kiev Glass Plant To Cost $3,000,000; Delegation Leaves

F. A. Rataichak, president of the Porcelain and Glass Trust of the Ukraine, has left the United States after a stay of over a month, in the course of which arrangements were made with American firms regarding the construction of a $3,000,000 glass plant at Kiev, in the Ukraine. The arrangement was announced yesterday by the Amtorg Trading Corporation, 165 Broadway, New York. J. B. Seldes, another members of the Glass Trust delegation, sailed with Rataichak, while F. S. Kariagin was left behind to complete the arrangements.

"An American firm has been asked to prepare plans for the equipment of the Kiev plant," said Rataichak. "Your production methods which we had a chance to study in 30 plans through the courtesy of leading firms in the glass and ceramic industries, command the highest admiration."

The equipment of the Kiev plant will cost over $2,600,000, of which equipment valued at $1,200,000 will be purchased from American firms with deliveries beginning next July. The Kiev plant will have an output of 22,000 metric tons of assorted glass per year.

Production of glass in the Soviet Union fell to less than 4 per cent of pre-war in 1920. At present the output is higher than pre-war. The industry increased its output 40 per cent last year, and a further increase of 30 per cent is expected during 1927.

Would Cut Tax On Glass.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The revolutionary process of plate glass making, invented by engineers and scientists of the Ford Motor Company in 1920 to provide cheap windshields for Ford cars and since then used by all the other automobile companies of the United States by the Pittsburgh and other glass manufacturers, is the basis of an attack on the present tariff duties on glass.

In hearings under way today before the United States Tariff Commission, American consumers of plate glass, both domestic and imported, are demanding reduction of the duties on the ground that the Ford process has lowered the cost of glass manufacture 50 per cent.

U. S. Oil Trust Beats British in Soviet Union Deal

BERLIN, May 11.—The Standard Oil Company today won an important skirmish in the world wide fight for oil. Standard scored heavily against its great rival, the Royal Dutch Shell, and demonstrated a lesson in practical business to the European governments now theorising about the best way to deal with the Soviet Union at the Geneva conference.

The Standard's victory consisted in signing a contract by which Standard gets the Soviet government oil trust, the "Aeneft," $3,000,000 credit for the construction of a pipe line from Baku to Batum.

The contract provides further credits in the course of a year. Though the announcement does not state what Standard is to receive, European experts are confident that the contract signifies the first step in the achievement of the American company's ambition to beat the Shell people in the Russian oil market.

Both the Shell and Standard have sought for years to secure a monopoly of oil in Russia, but the Soviets have refused. Ivy Lee, Standard's agent, is now in Moscow and is believed to be responsible for the contract.

40 Bakers' Pickets Jailed Since Strike Against Two Plants

The strike of the 300 bakers of the Pechter Bakeries and the Massing Brothers bake shops is continuing, with spirited picketing every day.

More than 40 picketa have been arrested to date. When brot before the magistrate court they have been discharged.

THE WORKER AND WEIGHT OF GUILT AND TERROR

The whereabouts of the $30,000 stolen in Dedham cannot be traced from right close his last appearance in Dedham court.

Not in the past few weeks he has been frantically rushing letters and telegrams to Governor Fuller, praying "for God's sake" not to intervene in the case hoping that he be protected from exposure as the worst fraud in the history of the Bay State bench.

Near Physical Collapse.

Reporters who attended the last Dedham session declared the judge seemed near the point of physical collapse. In a tremulous voice he read his prepared statement, his face buried in the papers. His hands shook as if with palsy. He never looked at Sacco and Vanzetti while he condemned them to burn in the electric chair on July 10 nor did he dare look up when Vanzetti upbraided him for his cruelty and utter lack of humanity.

As soon as he was done with the bloody business, Thayer rushed to the phone. His voice quivering with fright, he attempted to reassure his wife. "It's all over now," he ejaculated. "Everything's all right."

Whereabouts Unknown.

Immediately thereafter Thayer disappeared. His whereabouts is unknown to his Worcester friends.

For an entire year the man who wrote his name in large and ugly letters over a sinister page of American labor history has been in practical retirement. With the exception of one small hearing, he has not been involved in any court proceeding. Last summer when asked to rule on the Madeiros motion, he practically begged counsel to let it go until fall.

But the wretched little old man is living a double life in which fear looms large during night and day. For at last he realizes, if he did not from the start, that he is sending two innocent men to the electric chair in the biggest case ever handled by a Massachusetts judge.

Malignant Psychosis.

Stubborn, utterly biased against the end, caught inextricably in the grip of his class hates, Thayer has developed a malignant psychosis. That psychosis, the result of a mental transaction, is wrecking the old man's mind, just as body has been wrecked of the past few years.

The consciousness of his own guilt coupled with a knowing fear that the reds will get him" is proving the judge's undoing. For bombs, stiletto and their reputed vengeances.

Under Constant Guard.

Around every corner lurks a "red" intent on his life. Although guarded every minute of the night and day by state police, Thayer cannot escape that delusion—indeed, the presence of the police as an ever-constant reminder, inflames his tottering reason.

See Inferiority Complex.

Psychologists here who have found in Judge Thayer one of the best examples in abnormal psychology in their experience, also traced a decided "inferiority complex" in the old man's actions.

Having taken an utterly wrong stand on the case from the start, this simple man has not had the courage to admit his mistake. And the older the case gets, and the bigger, the more impossible it is for Thayer to admit his tremendous error.

Truth to tell, a country town lawyer whom even Worcester, his home town, did not know well when he was elevated to the bench. Thayer has never been big enough to fill the superior court job he holds. All the while he has had to put on a bluff, a pose, that he is really the sort of man qualified to hold down a second line judicial job in Massachusetts.

Mental Collision.

But his own inferiority has constantly denied his qualifications for the job. His pose has set up a mental contradiction which the Sacco-Vanzetti case has pried wide open. And when two opposing forces of great power contend in a men's mind, psychologists will tell you, a collision is bound to result.

The collision has resulted in Webster Thayer's troubled little mind. It has just about wrecked him. A few more months. and Thayer will not dare face the world from a bench.

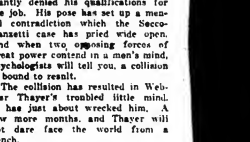
Chicago Youth to Use Their Shanks On Next Sunday

CHICAGO, Ill., May 11. — The Young Workers League is hurling like a sworm of Parisian barflies over the scheduled hike of section four from the Windy City to Desplaines next Sunday.

Under the leadership of Lillian Gennes, secretary of the section, the young stalwarts will start bright and early for their points of concentration. Those leaving from the west side will be at 1239 So. Sawyer Avenue and the Northwest siders will leave from 2441 West Division Street at 9 a. m. sharp.

Joseph Gigantl, of the progressive barbers has volunteered to place poles at the end of the nine lines to guide the travelers on their way. Way-farers are warned not to make for the nearest barber shop. After the poles are passed there will be no more temptation of that kind until the green grass invites the footweary pedestrians to get closer to nature and recuperate for the next number on the program.

Sacramento School Strike



SACRAMENTO, Cal., May 11.—Police reserves were called out today to control more than 1,000 students of Sacramento High School who went on strike as a protest against the dismissal of Principal John F. Dale.

Dale urged the students to return to their classes, but more then half of the throng refused, parading about the city with banners bearing the slogans: "No Dale—No School." The school has approximately 2,500 students.

SYDNEY, Australia.—The labor government in New South Wales has introduced legislation to compel landowners to break up their large estates and allow the land to be used for closer settlement and agricultural purposes. Where lands above the value of $50,000 are not subdivided, a stiff land tax, ranging from 5 cents to 12 cents per acre is imposed.

SYDNEY, Australia.—The decision of the navy department to offer school teachers $5 per head for every school-lad they can induce to join the Australian navy looks like a revival of the bad old "blood money" days when press-gangs were paid so much per head for every recruit they could conscript.

The state labor governments are protesting against the navy department's offer on the ground that unscrupulous teachers in need of cash will adopt questionable methods to coax lads to join the navy. It is held, too, that as school teachers are paid to educate children they should not devote their time to scalp-hunting for the navy.

The labor governments also take the view that if the navy department wants recruits it should offer decent rates of pay, decent conditions on the ships, and undertake to teach the lads trades while in the navy so that they will not become industrial "deadenders" when their terms of service expire.

That the navy department has to resort to "blood money" tactics to secure recruits, indicates that the youth of Australia are not too keen in offering themselves as cannon fodder.

SYDNEY, Australia.—The Labor Council of New South Wales has decided to organize a campaign throughout Australia to boycott the celebrations in connection with the visit of the Duke and Duchess of York. A resolution carried by the Council declares all celebrations organized to receive the Duke as anti-working class and imperialist, and calls upon all unionists and labor officials to refrain from attending such celebrations; calls upon all members of the working class to boycott the celebrations; instructs the unions to organize a great "Hands Off China" demonstration on the day of the Duke's landing, and calls upon the labor councils in other parts of Australia to act similarly, and bring about an all-Australian boycott of the celebrations arranged for the Duke's visit.

In many centers throughout Australia unemployed demonstrations will take place when the Duke arrives. The unemployed desire that King George's son shall get a close-up view of their economic condition. Unemployed returned soldiers, in particular, are to demonstrate.

WELLINGTON, New Zealand.—Because of the policy of ugrestricted immigration, unemployment in New Zealand has now reached an unprecedented figure. Even the employers are now protesting against the presence of too many jobless and hungry men. The Premier of New Zealand (Mr. Coates) has now announced a partial suspension of immigration until such times as the local unemployed are absorbed in jobs.

MELBOURNE, Australia.—Matters of national importance will be discussed at the annual conference of the Australian Labor Party which takes place at Melbourne during Easter week (April).

The conference will be asked to carry resolutions demanding the abolition of compulsory military training, no participation in the manufacture of war munitions, no naval and military forces to be used in any trouble outside the coastline of Australia. Unions will be asked to refuse to co-operate in the transport of troops or munitions of war for use outside Australia. Conference will demand the complete revision of the Versailles Treaty, and other peace Treaties based on force; the mutual cancellation of all war debts; the termination of all military alliances; the reorganization of the League of Nations, on the basis of mutual service and co-operation; acceptance of arbitration for all disputes; the universal application of the right of self-determination; and that all nations bordering on the Pacific Ocean be invited to a conference to discuss the advisability of immediate disarmament. Other recommendations are that in the interests of peace, Australia should appoint ambassadors to Washington and Tokio; that no prime minister be allowed to leave Australia during his term of office; and that compulsory profit-sharing, with adequate representation of the workers on the directorates of all industries be introduced.

The Rough Road

Translated from the Russian of A. Serafimovitch by Voya and Yuska Semenoff.

In vain some men argued a waste of the old regime, which was the cause of life. That is inexcusably gross. I, a non-party man, though I took an active part on the front in the struggle with the Whites, do not know whether we will survive, but am very clearly that there is no turning back, that our retreat is cut off. Such an impression I received from the fight as a sober onlooker. Where are our Russians who, bearing foreign arms, rose against the people? Where the almost world-wide blockade, without a leg to stand on, our republic with fire and famine? I now move in the lower walks of life. The common people often grumble at the Soviet government for bids or that, but they will never recognize the former power—never! That is why it is better to be a janitor or chimney-sweep, anything, than to live on false hopes.

Yes, what happened had to happen.

In the beginning of 1917 the war had lost its popularity with the masses. Disintegration was creeping into the lousy, hungry and half-clothed army. There was not enough ammunition. Recruits drilled with dummy guns. The economic system of Russia was undermined. Our capitals and other large cities found themselves menaced by famine. Such slogans as "Czar and the Faith" were completely worn-out and ready for the ash-heap. The new government could think of no way out and the end of the war was nowhere in sight. Above all circled the rumors of treachery in our higher circles. These rumors penetrated all nooks and corners of our spacious Russia, creating a vague alarm. Discontent with the whole order and himself stirred in the soul of every Russian.

Our squadron was concentrated in the port of N——. Large battleships stood in ice at the dock, under the protection of the fortress. Preparations for the summer campaign were under way.

I was in command of the "Thunderbolt". This ship was worthy of its name and represented enormous power. The men under my command numbered 1,500. Sometimes I looked at the sailors. They worked, docile, destined as a sacrifice. What thoughts were in their brains? I got no answer.

One incident astonished me and gave me food for thought—an incident which later played an important part for me.

One of my lieutenants was named Brasov. I cannot tell what caused it, but he treated the sailors with an inborn hatred as if they had taken his wife from him. He despised them, referring to them in the lowest terms. A sharp antagonism existed between him and the crew.

One day, just before dinner, I went out on the upper deck and witnessed a wild scene. Lieutenant Brasov was beating a sailor, beating him with a fierce enjoyment, muttering:

"I'll smash your vile face."

The head of the sailor was pitching backward, forward and sideways with each blow. His face was covered with blood, the eyes staring in terror. Then I saw in them a hardly controlled anger. He bared his teeth and, as if feeling no pain, crept repeating with stubborn determination.

"Hit again, you have the power, hit."

In his trembling voice, in his whole body, heaving forward, was a fierce challenge to his officer.

I shouted with unnatural loudness.

"Lieutenant Brasov! What are you doing?"

"I shall have you court-martialled!"

He turned toward me, straightened and saluted.

I glanced at the sailor. He was spitting blood and his clenched hands trembled. In his eyes was a look as if he were disappointed that I had interfered with this encounter.

I was beside myself with anger. Disregarding the presence of many sailors on the dock, I shouted at the lieutenant and then ordered him to be arrested. This closed the incident.

Astronomer Will Leave Earth if His Nerve Holds Out—and the Machine Works

A daring young astronomer and airman of Munich, Germany, Max Valier, has made up his mind that he would like to make some exploring trips through space including a visit to the moon. For that purpose he has built the model of a great rocket or plane in which he expects to be shot through space sometime during 1927. He is raising funds for the venture in Europe. The photo shows a drawing of the proposed plane with an inset of the astronomer, Max Valier.

THE CARDS ARE STACKED

The farmers of the Mississippi Valley are caught between Devil Hoover, and the Deep Blue Sea of the flood. Enormous sums will be required to rebuild the farm houses, barns and fences swept away; and to restock the fields and re-plant the corn, cotton and sugar cane. Hoover, and the bankers, have a nice little scheme of "rehabilitation corporations" by which the bankers at least will profit by the releasing to the flood victims of government money supplied them for next to nothing.

A LETTER TO AUGUST CLAESSENS

A Letter to August Claessens

The following is a letter from Comrade W. Brodowsky, English Branch 4, Section 5, Bronx, Workers (Communist) Party, to August Claessens of the socialist party. Claessens wrote to Comrade Brodowsky, inviting him to take the leadership in organizing a branch of the socialist party.

Dear Comrade Claessens:—In reply to your letter in which you invite me to your apartment for Thursday evening, April 28th, I find it necessary to reply to your letter.

You state in your letter that you got my address thru the enrollment board and that you noticed that I enrolled for the socialist party.

I did that as a protest against the other two parties, but comrade, I am pleased to tell you that I voted a straight Workers (Communist) Party ticket.

About fifteen years ago I joined the socialist party, but as a class conscious worker, I could not remain in your party, for I have seen since that your party works hand in hand with all the enemies of the workers. Today, your party is working hand in hand with the reactionaries to blackmail the militant workers and the leaders of our party, to sentence them to long terms in jail; and why? Because they strive to show the class conscious workers how to organize to better their conditions. The party you represent does not like to see that because it is composed of traitors to the entire working class. All over the world your party betrays the working class in every way, supporting the reactionary capitalist class against the working class.

The class conscious workers understand this and they are bringing this message to the rest of the workers. Why even the liberals are protesting against the brutal verdict in the Sacco and Vanzetti case. What are you and your party doing about it? You stand aside. If you had the power, like your friends in Germany, to slaughter and shoot down workers in the streets, you would do the same. Since you cannot do it this way, you do it in other ways.

You support the enemy class against the working class. Did your party ever protest against the Fascisti in Italy? Did your party ever protest against the bloody actions of the Lithuanian hangmen or the Hungarian barbarians when they murdered workers? Did your party ever protest to our own government when they sentenced and jailed militant workers and even attempted to kill workers as in the Sacco-Vanzetti case? Did your party ever protest against the brutalities committed in West Virginia? In Passaic? Did your party ever protest against our government's intervention in China, in Nicaragua, in Mexico. Your party did not! And it calls itself Socialist! What a farce. In fact, your party in conjunction with bureaucratic union labor leaders are in agreement with the tactics of the United States government in their support of the capitalist class.

You state in your letter I should come to your apartment to try to work out ways and means to organize a socialist party branch in the section in which you live. Comrade, it is useless. The workers of today will do better to join a real workers' party which is fighting day in and day out for the working class, a party whose leaders are giving their lives for the working class. You all must admit that. A party which is affiliated with the Third International. The workers are not only trying to join the Workers Party but they are joining it. When the call will come for a real struggle they will be ready to fight and die for their class.

With the Young Worker

BUT MILLIONS ON THE Y. M. C. A.

By A. GUSS.

The Y. M. C. A. has launched a campaign to give the American youth a "chance" to enjoy the privileges which are extended to them by this great organization. This they are trying to do at the expense of thousands of workers whose children they are aiming at. It is to the fathers who are employed in the various industries to whom they are directing their appeal.

"Give the Boys a Chance" is their slogan—and under this slogan of fatherly consideration for the poor American boys who are not under proper care and guidance, they are seeking to organize the young workers and students as well as many adult workers against the organizations of their own class. They are implanting deep in the minds of these boys the ideal of equal opportunity and devotion to their exploiters.

"Give the Boys a Chance," and by that they mean give US a chance to get more of your sons (at your own expense) so that we can teach them how to scab and how to protect the intersts of the rich bosses, many of whom are the chief directors of the Y. M. C. A.

They intend with this campaign to get the workers to pay for the improvement of the Y. M. C. A's. By means of this campaign they hope to train these to more effectively train good American patriots who will defend Wall Street in times of political and industrial crises.

There is the danger of a world war approaching, a war in which America will play an important role. American patriotism is not so high at present, too many still remember the horrible disasters of the last World War.

It is now up to the Y. M. C. A.'s to help create this needed sentiment of 100% American patriotism. The slogan they have issued is not only to raise the money with, but also to show that they are interested in the future of the American youth, which means to secure them for the defense of the capitalist system.

"Give the Boys a Chance," is their slogan—and the slogan of the workers and young workers should be, "Not one cent to support anti-labor organizations, not one cent of the workers to support the Y. M. C. A. which is against all the interests of the working class. The American working class must show the Y. M. C. A. that they are becoming class-conscious and will not support an organization which fights the very idea of class division and class struggle.

Opposed to the Y. M. C. A.'s is the Young Workers League, the organization of the fighting youth of America, which opposes all panhandling, grafting, anti-labor organizations such as the Y. M. C. A. If you are a young worker, join the Young Workers League which fights for your interests.

Statement on the Arrest of M. Kushner And Moskowitz

Fellow Workers and Students!

With the arrest of two members of the Young Workers League for distributing "Hands Off China" leaflets, American capital shows its fear of exposure of the imperialistic role it is playing in China.

American marines and sailors are actually participating with English and other imperialistic troops to throttle the onward march of the victorious Chinese Revolution. The Americans are told that the part played by the marines and sailors is to protect our countrymen and women in foreign waters. Actually we are protecting the concessions wrested from the Chinese by military force.

The Chinese Revolution, despite betrayals, is consolidating its forces for a victorious advance against all imperialism and with the Soviet Union as its only friend, they become the hope of the exploited of the earth and a menace to the capitalists of the world.

The first blow is always directed against the vanguard of the labor movements; this time the youth of the Communist movement. The arrest of Kushnir and the sentencing of H. Moskowitz to six months clearly shows the ought wage against anyone who fights against the policy of the Coolidge administration.

It is for the profitable investments of the Wall Street and British bankers that millions of American young workers and students will be sent to war on the people's of China and of the Soviet Union. A war on China and Russia means to convert the whole world into a new slaughterhouse. Millions of American, English, Chinese and Russian young workers and students will be butchered and gassed on the battlefields of Asia, to make the English POUND and the American DOLLAR safe in China.

Fellow Workers! This is not an idle threat. Already the American government is preparing itself for war. The young workers of America under the camouflage of recreation, are being trained as future soldiers in the Citizens Military Training Camps, the students are compelled to train themselves in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps. Undoubtedly the youth of America is being militarized.

The capitalist persecution will not stop the Young Workers (Communist) League from mobilizing the working class youth against the future war. Every young worker must rally to the banner of the Young Workers (Communist) League, which is the only organization which fights for the betterment of their economic conditions and against imperialist war and capitalist persecution. Young workers! Rally to the defense of your interests. Rally to the defense of the working youth against the dangers and miseries of new imperialist wars. Fight for the freedom of imprisoned young workers.

Against the C. M. T. C.!
Hands off China!
Peace with the Soviet Union!
Long Live the Y. W. (C.) L!

Here's one of the best bits of news that has yet come from the brain factories. Chicago University has elected Richard Dudlin, a Negro student, as captain of its university tennis team. This is the first instance of a Negro elected to the captaincy of any of the Big Ten teams. This instance of breaking down the barriers of race prejudice in our schools is a fine bit of news. Let's have more of it instead of the flagrant practice of barring splendid athletes because of color. This is also further proof that not everything smells bad in Chicago.

SECRETARY of State Kellogg denied the report that he would be a delegate to the Arms Limitation conference which is scheduled to meet in Geneva on June 20. The state department is said to be looking for some other person of national prestige to head the delegation. In view of Kellogg's record for indulging in the luxury of prevarication even the seasoned capitalist liars there will gather in Geneva feel that they would be suffering from too heavy a handicap in having to cope with Kellogg.

IF what the state department is looking for is a more finished clown than Kellogg why not select Will Rogers, the roving buffoon who was director of the National Security League in recognition of his services to the cause of national defense, according to General Robert Lee Bullard of that organization. Rogers has said unkind things about Washington's imperialistic ventures in Nicaragua and China, but he is a fascist at heart and a pet of the big army, navy and airplane boys. Tho he kids our rulers at times he is permitted that liberty like the court jesters of feudal days. His jibes do the ruling classes no harm and being a jester he amuses the crowd.

THE capitalist papers critical of the policy of force in China are not concerned in the least over the slaughter of Chinese labor leaders and Communists by the warlords of the north, and the renegade Chiang Kai-Shek. Chamberlain's transparent gesture of a change of policy was attributed to the alleged discrediting of the radical wing of the Kuomintang which was said to be responsible for the looting at Nanking. Chamberlain claims that the guilty ones were punished. He had reference to the murder of trade unionists by Chiang Kai-Shek, Britain's newest tool.

THE capitalist critics believed that it was best for the interests of American capitalism to adopt a friendly attitude towards the nationalist movement in China and let England pull her own chestnuts out of the fire. But they looked askance at the growing power of the Communists and felt relieved when Chiang Kai-Shek betrayed the cause. In all probability if the right wing of the Kouimintang had not deserted to the enemy and if the workers and peasants of China had succeeded in developing a strength sufficient to enable them to deal with their oppressors.

SINCE the right wing elements in the Kouimintang Party of China have gone over to the imperialists and are no longer of any service to the nationalist revolutionary movement, they must be driven out of the party. This is the attitude of the Communist International. This does not mean that the Koumintang Party, from now on must be exclusively composed of workers and peasants. The anti-imperialist sections of the middle classes have still a role to play in the unification and emancipation of China and as long as they remain true to the principles upon which the Kouinintang was founded they have a place in the ranks.

U. S. AMBASSADOR REFUSES TO HEAR OF FAIR VOTING

Won't Help Liberals to Get Neutral Watchers

MEXICO CITY, May 12.—American Ambassador Sheffield today refused to grant a formal interview to Dr. Jose Moncada, representative of the Nicaragua liberals, who sought to convey a proposal to Washington that some Latin American republic be invited to cooperate with the United States in supervising the Nicaraguan general election next year. Ambassador Sheffield stated that he is not the proper person to receive such proposals, but suggested that they might be transmitted to Henry L. Stimson, envoy of President Coolidge in Nicaragua.

Stimson is the man who threatened the native Nicaraguan government with war if they did not turn all arms over to the United States, and recognize the Wall Street vice-regent, Diaz, who claims to be president of Nicaragua.

PHILADELPHIA, May 12. — Ramsay MacDonald, former premier of England, was discharged from the Jefferson Hospital here this afternoon and quietly caught the one o'clock train for New York. MacDonald had almost fully recovered from a recent throat ailment and planned to visit rich friends in New York before sailing for home on the Berengeria, hospital attendants said.

MacDonald was brought to America by the Jewish Daily Forward for right wing propaganda in the New York unions, but entered the hospital and remained quietly there shortly after news reached America that his own party, the Independent Labor Party of England had practically repudiated him.

BRITAIN, JAPAN IN ARMS CLIQUE AGAINST U. S. A.

LONDON, May 12.—Great Britain and Japan have agreed upon a progress of naval disarmament to be placed before the proposed tri-partite naval disarmament conference to be called the suggestion of President Coolidge, it was reported here today.

The reported program is not likely to meet the views of American naval experts, it is predicted.

British Started It.

The program, which is said to have originated with British experts, is outlined as follows:

1.—Reduction of the size of future capital ships from 35,000 tons to 29,000 tons.

2.—Limitation of future cruisers to 6,000 tons, instead of 10,000 tons.

3.—Limitation of cruisers' armaments to six-inch guns instead of eight-inch guns.

4.—Limitation of submarines and destroyers to 1,000 tons.

5.—Limitation of the personnel of the British and American navies to 100,000 men and of the Japanese navy to 70,000 men.

The British government refuses to confirm reports that it will propose such a program.

U. S. Will Fight It.

American naval officers predicted that the American delegation to the tri-partite conference would vigorously oppose it, pointing out that to reduce the size of capital ships would not materially injure Great Britain but would work a severe hardship on America. For instance, they said that Great Britain, with naval bases all over the world, could use smaller ships in defense work.

CORDON AROUND TRADE DELEGATION OFFICES; DRIVE ALL CLERKS OUT

Make Mystery of Whole Affair; Refuse to Tell Purpose of Invasion of Treaty Rights

Soviet Union Trade Delegation Headquarters Located in House Perhaps Not Entered

LONDON, May 12.—A surprising, unexplained police raid was made today on the premises of the bank, Arcos, Ltd., at Margate, where are located the offices of the trade delegation to London from the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

A large force of police surrounded the building, permitting few to enter or leave. Several plain clothes officers entetred the building and carried on investigations for two hours. No explanation of their actions was forthcoming.

At six o'clock tonight the premises were still carefully guarded. It is generally believed that the trade delegation's offices were the object of the investigation tho it has been stated that they were not entered. Clerks and other employes were escourted from the building by the police.

Like Peking Raid.

There is no fundamental difference between the raid on the Soviet trade delegation's headquarters in England and the raid on the Soviet embassy in Peking. The difference is one of degree. Chang Tso-Lin's cutthroats were able to get away with the murder of some of their prisoners. The British are not refraining from murder because of humaneness but because of fear—fear of the British working class and of the Red Army of the Soviet Union. The same hand that ordered the raid on the Peking embassy also ordered the raid on the headquarters of the trade delegation.

This latest violation of its agreement with the Soviet Union by the British government is closely related to the gigantic struggle that is now looming in Great Britain between the organized workers on one hand and the employers government on the other over the trade union dispute bill.

No doubt the clever British forgers,

ILLINOIS MINERS' CONVENTION ON RECORD FOR REINSTATING HOWAT

Breaks Thru Terroristic Policy of Lewis-Fishwick Machine; Welcomes Kansas Leader

PEORIA, Ill., May 12.—Illinois miners were on record today in favor of the reinstatement of Alexander Howat, former president of the Kansas miners, into good standing in the national organization, after listening to an address by him.

Howat advocated the nationalization of the mines, a six-hour day, and a labor party. He urged unionization of the non-union fields.

Fishwick Terror Policy.

Before Howat arrived, the delegates had been writhing under a system of terrorism set up by the district officials in the convention.

By the threat of "Red Raids" under the authority given them by the Indianapolis convention to expel all Communists, the delegates had been cowed into voting down a motion attacking separate agreements with which the Lewis machine had split the forces of the miners on the verge of the strike.

Resolution Against Split.

The motion against separate agreements was also designed to protest against International President Lewis' announced policy of signing up separate agreements, by districts, to end the lock-ont whenever the employers desire. This would split the union into fragments, perhaps permanently, and the progressives in the Illinois Miners Convention appeaied to the membership against it.

The district officials attacked the motion as "Communist propaganda written in the office of The DAILY WORKER," and because of the anti-Communist law established by Lewis, terrorized some of the delegates out of supporting it.

Howat A Militant.

Howat, the fighting miner from Kansas, who defied the Kansas Industrial Court, or "no strike" law, and went to jail for it, was very welcome to the convention, after several days of Fishwick-Lewis chicanery and class collaboration. The delegates greeted him with wild applause, and heard him with pleasure.

Howat, at the time of his imprisonment, was president of Kansas district of the U. M. W. A. International President Lewis arbitrarily and unconstitutionally removed him from office, and later had him expelled from the union.

Howat is back in the union, and campaigned for the Brophy, "Save the Union" ticket in the last international election, but has not been allowed by Lewis to run for office.

"Big Four" Grip Economic Life of Nation

PREVIOUS EVENTS OF INSURANCE EXPOSE.

The DAILY WORKER herewith continues its expose of the fraudulent methods employed by the "Big Four," who are the Metropolitan, Prudential, John Hancock and the Colonial Life Insurance Companies.

In this series it is charged that these companies who monopolize the weekly payment life insurance business are guilty of fraud, misuse of "mutual" funds, manipulation of policyholders' money and subornation, to perjury.

On April 27th Governor Smith ordered Superintendent of Insurance James A. Beha to make inquiries into the charges contained in the Harrison articles.

So far the official apologist for the insurance companies has not submitted his report. The expose has caused something resembling panic in insurance circles. It affects upwards of 10,000,000 American policyholders.

By CHARLES YALE HARRISON.

"Because of the intricate and intimate relationship between insurance and every other enterprise of the modern world, the socialists have for a long time desired to make a state monopoly out of it. They realize that if they can accomplish this they have taken the longest forward step toward the socialization of all business, and their reasoning is altogether logical:."

Thus spenks H. S. Ives, vice president of the Chicago Casuulty Insurance clearing house. Nor is Ives a disgruntled critic of insurance. He is one of its pampered beneficiaries. He is an official weil up on the beap.

He says further, ". . . the assets of the American insurance companies is the largest reservoir of private wealth to which business has access."

Latest Facts.

The latest information on the subject of life insurance companies' assets has just been issued by the Insurance Department of the State of New York.

Forty-one life insurance companies doing business in the state have assets totalling over $11,000,000,000 (eleven billion dollars).

Of these 41 companies the "Big Four" have over $4,000,000,000 (four billion dollars). That is to say, one-tenth of these New York companies hold more than one-third of the aggregate assets. These four companies are the only companies in the state which sell the petty larceny form of protection known as "industrial" insurance.

Have Milliems.

These four companies have over 70,000,000 weekly payment insurance policies on over 40,000,000 lives in this country and Canada.

Why "Industrial."

So exhorbitant are the premiums charged to this enormous mass of the population, and so weighted with fraud and chicanery are the policy conditions, that more than 75 per cent of all policies issued each year lapse before they have accumulated a "legal" cash value.

The owner of a weekly payment life insurance policy cannot pay on it for ten years before he is allowed to draw

The telegram states: "It is with astonishment that we learn that some members of our Party, with a feudalistic and capitalistic bent, are inclined to indulge in reactionary actions, deceived by enemy rumors and attracted by offers of personal gain.

"We, Feng Yu-hsiang and Yu Yu-jen, consider it our supreme duty to support the Party authority and pledge our definite and wholehearted loyalty to the central organization. BOSTON, May 12.—Sacco and Vanzetti stand in peril of electrocution July 10 for a crime they never committed.

This warning is being emphasized today by friends of the two Italian workers who are alarmed by a growing impression that they have practically been saved from the electric chair.

While millions of workers and groups of university men, intellectuals, jurists and liberals have been appealing in one voice to Governor Fuller to save Sacco and Vanzetti, while published reports have indicated that he is susceptible to ordering a review of the frame-up, while labor organizations generally are beginning to feel that their efforts have nearly succeeded in freeing the victims of Massachusetts justice, the enemies of Sacco and Vanzetti have been tirelessly, but quietly, at work.

Their work is not represented merely by the ridiculous letters of the professional patriots and superheated defenders of law and order, but by diligent and unbearable efforts to amass a new mountain of perjury against the two men in Dedham jail.

Contrasted with the noisy patriots,

To Assist Sacco

George Branting, prominent Swedish lawyer, has sailed for the United States to aid Sacco and Vanzetti, radicals convicted of murder in Massachusetts and sentenced to die in July. Swedish labor organizations are sending Branting.

TEST DEFENSE FROM BRITISH

Elaborate War Game On New England Coast

"War" has been declared and next week a decisive battle will be fought off the coast of New England.

Crack divisions of regular United States army troops are today concentrating "somewhere in New England" preparing to resist an invasion from the sea. They will have the assistance of harbor ships, long range fort guns and aircraft.

As dawn Monday, the powerful American fleet of 137 vessels and 30,000 sailors will steam out of New York harbor, where they are now stationed, for the "war area" and soon will strike—with all its resources—at the southeast coast of New England.

It will be the annual joint army-navy war maneuvers, to take place in the vicinity of Newport, R. I., and last from May 16 to May 21.

British Fleet Is Attacked.

The contending forces represent the attacking British fleet and the American defenders of the whole new England coastline.

For the purpose of the maneuvers, the "war" is now actually in progress—has been, in fact, for several months. It has now reached the decisive stage. The American land forces have theoretically denied advance into Yankee territory. But the British fleet has recently gained control of the north Atlantic and is in a strategic position to strike.

British Try Landing.

So, everything is ready for an attack—the big battle is imminent.

Can the British fleet land marines on the New England coast? The fleet is practically within striking distance to make the attempt. Landing of the marines would tend to draw the American forces from what might prove to be the main battle front.

Such a thrust from the sea also offers a tempting objective because of the densely populated and well equipped industrial centers in New England. Then, too, the alternative objectives of reaching New York City by overland operations or by cutting off New England from other American territory make probable an attempted landing on the southeast coast of New England.

While the "Big Four" are avowedly "mutual" companies, actually the terrific power as represented in the company assets are left in the hands of a comparatively small group of Wall Street financiers.

Somewhere on the policies issued by these companies we find this pretty legend, "The election of Directors of the Company is to be held in New York on the second Tuesday of April, 1927, and every second year thereafter. The holder of this policy while it remains in force . . . will have a right to vote, either in person or by proxy or by mail."

Hard to Vote.

This sounds very nice, but in fact, not ½ of 1 per cent of the policyholders ever vote. The privilege of voting is so bound up with red tape, and the nomination of directors is so fixed and faked that the franchise is a huge farce.

So much so, that on the boards of directors, year after year, we find such names as Charles M. Schwab, of the Bethlehem Steel and the Chase National Bank; Henry Ollesheimer of the Chase National Bank and the Broadway Safe Deposit Company; Frank P. Noyes, president of the Associated Press which supplies news services to 1,200 newspapers in the United States and Canada; Albert H. Wiggin, president of the Chase National Bank and director of a string of million dollar companies.

Leland Olds, statistician for the Federated Press, in a press bulletin recently said, "The big insurance companies are really great reservoirs of capital, but the administration of this enormous power is left in the hands of private bankers like J. P. Morgan & Co., to be used in furthering their plans to dominate the country. The directorates of the . . . leading companies interlock with practically all the great banks and trust companies, the railroads, public utility corporations and big industrial combines which control the country's economic activity."

It remains which the "Big Four" offer to economic life of the nation lies in the fact, that, due to the murderous overcharges and forfeitures their assets pyramid more than twice as fast as do those of the "ordinary" companies.

Aggregations of Wealth.

In 1905 the combined companies operating in the State of New York had 10 billion dollars worth of insurance in force with total assets of two and a half billion dollars. Twenty years later these companies had 47 billion dollars of insurance in force with a little over 10 billion dollars in assets. Thus we see that the ratio of asset-increase with ordinary companies is proportionate with their increase of insurance in force.

With the "Big Four" it is different. In 1905 they had three billions of insurance in force with total assets of $215,000,000, less than a quarter of a billion. Twenty years later we find these ghoulish outfits with a total of 20 billions of insurance in force with over three and a half billions of assets.

Geometrical Progression.

While the "ordinary" companies increased their assets in ratio to insurance in force, the "Big Four" pyramided their assets more than twice as fast as their increase of insurance in force.

We may well look with fear to the day when these four companies will dominate the economic life of the nation completely.

Today these four companies hold more assets than there is currency in circulation. These assets are in quick form and can be liquidated within 48 hours.

This colossus rests on base built on petty life insurance policies which may be found in every American worker's home.

It Goes On.

Fraudulent, cynical and ironically contrary to even the theories of modern business "ethics" the swindle continues unabated.

Humane Laws of the Soviet Union Pension Workers at Fifty-two

MOSCOW.—At the age of 52 a person's useful life is officially finished in the Soviet Union, says the State insurance and social pension statute, which makes workers eligible for a State pension when they have passed their fifty-second birthday, if they have already completed at least seven years of work.

The pension applies to workers of every kind. Every employer, whether a housewife hiring a servant, or the State employing thousands of office workers and factory hands, must pay a monthly social insurance, premium ranging upward from 18 per cent of the salary each month. The so-called old age pension becoming effective at the age of 52 applies to everybody who earns a wage. The pension is calculated on the salary earned in the last year.

ZARITSKY BACK IN PRESIDENCY OF CAP UNION

Denounced by Feingold As Quitter

Max Zaritsky, former president and vice president of the Cloth Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union, and erstwhile insurance agent and employe of the Jewish Daily Forward, was yesterday elected president of the union once more by the delegates to the 16th convention, meeting in Beethoven Hall.

Zaritsky had been serving as permanent chairman of the convention, and in allowing himself to be nominated for the presidency he declared the capmakers' union was "the only place he felt at home." This sentimental return of the prodigal did not rouse much sympathy in those delegates who remembered that Zaritsky had refused to return to the union when it was preparing for a general strike for the 40-hour week, and when his help was much needed.

I. Feingold of St. Louis stated that "in my opinion, due to all of his statements and actions he has shown himself to be physically and morally unfit to lead the organization."

Zaritsky A Quitter.

M. Golden, a delegate from Local 42, declared that Zoritsky was "a quitter at the time when the union needed him most."

In spite of this opposition, Zaritsky received 51 votes; Feingold had 19 votes and 9 delegates refrained from voting.

The secretary-treasurer, M. Zuckerman, tendered his resignation, but the convention insisted that he accept re-election until the General Executive Board appointed someone to take his place. Objections were raised by some delegates, and J. Miller of Boston was nominated; but the original motion passed.

Members re-elected to the General Executive Board were S. Hershkowitz, A. Mendolowitz, A. Rose, J. Roberts, A. Weingarten, I. H. Goldberg. From out-of-town were S. Lisitzky from Chicago, M. Lemoff from Philadelphia; H. Gordon from Twin Cities; H. Saltzberg from Canada. Two extra delegates, Lucy Updepheim and Max Goldman, Fraternal delegate to the Hatters' Convention, J. Roberts.

The entire session yesterday was devoted to the selection of officers. The convention closed last night with a supper given to the delegates at union headquarters in Beethoven Hall.

Go to the Bazaar.

The first night of the Bazaar has proved itself a tremendous demonstration in favor of the prisoners and against the enemies of the union.

Artists are donating their services, workers have made, donated, begged and brought piles of wonderful merchandise and the result is astounding.

Another great concert tonight. A Grand Ball tomorrow and a Final Concert Sunday Night, and an affair that will be talked of for years to come will be over.

A New Way to Collect.

At a house party given in honor of a Local 22 girl who left for the Coast, at which only about 15 people were present, a collection of $14.40 was raised for defense. This success was the result of an original idea that occurred to Sister Rose Kuhn, who playing the part of waitress, served the guests and demanded tips for the defense.

Want Adultery Only For Divorce Cause

PITTSBURGH, May 12.—An effort will be made to restrict causes for divorce recognized by the Presbyterian Church at its general assembly to be held in San Francisco May 26 to June 1, it was announced here today.

An amendment has been prepared to the church law that would recognize adultery as the only justifiable reason for legal separation.

Under the present church regulations, adultery and wilful and long desertion are recognized as reasons for divorces.

Tried for Murder

Floyd E. Streitenberger, former city detective of Canton, O., is the latest person to face trial for the murder of Don R. Mellett, crusading publisher, for which Patrick E. McDermott and Ben Radner already are serving life sentences.

Trial for Murder of Ohio Detective Nears End; Editor Killed

CANTON, Ohio, May 12.—The state is expected to end its testimony today in the case of Floyd Streitenberger, Canton city detective, on trial for his life in connection with the slaying of Don Mellett, Canton publisher, here last July.

Streitenberger's attorneys declared today they would attempt to "tear down" the story of Louis Mazer, Canton, jointly indicted for the Mellett murder, who testified for the state yesterday.

Mazer implied that Streitenberger was the instigator of the plot to "beat up Mellett," which resulted in the assassination of the newspaperman.

Foes of Saccco, Vanzetti Heap Lies On Fuller

the efforts of these assiduous forces have been accompanied with utmost secrecy. Without fanfares or public attention, they have been ferreting out new sources of prejudice, fear and hate against the radicals. Their evidence, such as it is, is accumulating in a great sheaf of affidavits and statements upon which no publicity has been sought.

Today a portion of their "evidence" lies upon the desk of Governor Fuller. He is reading it, probably being slowly poisoned by the insidious hints and rumors, dignified by supporting affidavits purchased at so much an oath.

Attorney William G. Thompson was closeted with the governor yesterday for nearly an hour. He is understood to have requested the privilege of looking at this new evidence. Neither he nor the governor would discuss the outcome of the session.

The particular danger of this new mass of accusations, falsehoods and insinuations against Sacco and Vanzetti lies in the extra-judicial nature of the entire investigation being pursued by Governor Fuller. There will be no challenging of these affidavits, no cross-examination of the men and women who swore to them, no opportunity to show their falsity.

Unlike the great pile of new evidence collected by the defense, which has been given to the world as soon as it was prepared, the material being gathered by the foes of the two Italian anarchists is being guarded from publicity with utmost care.

The defense is utterly in the dark as to the nature of the new attack upon the principals of the world-famous case.

Workers the world over must continue their insistent demands for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti. The emergency of the present situation calls for the most aggressive, militant activity on the part of labor.

Sacco-Vanzetti conferences in every state and city to mobolize labor and progressive strength are urgently needed.

ANIAM PREISKEL, PASSAIC CLUBBER IS BOOMERANGED

Knocked Out of Office By Own Tactics

By ART SHIELDS
Federated Press

PASSAIC, N. J., May 12.—Rap, rap, the policemen's clubs were tapping on the skulls of textile strikers during the long historic struggle of Passaic in 1926. And with every rap the police were knocking out the chances of their boss, Abram Preiskel, for re-election as Commissioner of Public Safety.

At the city election May 10, Preiskel was the only commissioner to lose his job. He fell below the lowest of the five winners by 222 votes, getting 6,726, to his rivals 6,948.

It was the defeat of an old tyrant of the town. Preiskel broke a spontaneous strike of the textile workers in 1919 with arrest and clubbings. And in the two years that followed, when the Amalgamated Textile Workers' Union was in the field his copper cops locked up hall doors. One night in 1920 Lewis Gannett, Norman Thomas and Harry Ward read the Constitution to each other by candle light at a test free speech meeting staged by the American Civil Liberties Union. Preiskel had driven away the audience and switched off the lights.

Cordon Around "Arcos" Offices in London

those past masters in every form of deceit, will be able to produce forged documents with which they will seek to convince the British government that the government in bringing forward this iniquitous scab bill is not fighting the workers but fighting the Soviet Union. This is in principle the same kind of a stunt that the tories pulled off during the last general election when they produced a forged document alleged to be a letter of instructions from Gregory Zinoviev, then president of the Communist International instructing the Communist Party of Great Britain to organize a revolt in England. Owing to the blundering of Ramsay MacDonald, labor premier who at first accepted the faked letter as genuine, the tories succeeded in arousing enough red hysteria to enable them to carry the election. An official trade union committee afterwards declared it a palpable forgery.

It is also quite evident that the tories are doing their best to goad the Soviet Union into breaking off relations. They had the Soviet embassy in Peking raided hoping that the Soviet government would take punitive measures against the bandit Chang Tso-Lin. But Moscow refused to be tricked or goaded into Britain's trap.

Demanded Ousting.

Ever since the general strike The Daily Mail, tory organ, and the mouthpiece of Winston Churchill, has persistently called for the ousting of the Soviet trade delegation. No doubt Joynson Hicks, British home secretary and chief of the stool-pigeon agency known as Scotland Yard will be as ingenous in discovering "documents" as was Sir Basil Thompson during the war. Sir Basil by the way was convicted recently of moral perversion having been caught by a policeman in Hyde Park in an act of gross indecency with a prostitute. Sir Basil was one of the most vociferous defenders of British womenhood against the wicked Bolsheviki.

It is significant that the head of the Soviet trade delegation M. Kinchuk, is now attending the International Economic Conference at Geneva, where the Soviet delegates have frequently clashed with the British.

Violation of Agreement.

While trade delegations do not enjoy absolute immunity as is supposed to be accorded embassies of foreign governments the raid is undoubtedly a violation of the Anglo-Russian trade agreement. A similar raid made several years ago on the Soviet trade delegation in Berlin on the orders of the social-democratic minister of the interior drew abject apologies from the Reich and has never been repeated. It was afterwards learned that the British ambassador had a hand in the raid.

The wave of opposition that is rising against the tory government in England owing to the war against China and the offensive against the trade unions is driving them to desperate straits. There is reason to believe that the Churchill, Hicks, Locker, Lampson, Hogg, Birkenhead wing of the cabinet is in favor of establishing a fascist dictatorship.

Great Exodus of Chicago Youth to Come Off Sunday

CHICAGO, Ill., May 12.—Final arrangements for next Sunday's hike from here to Desplaines are being made by section four of the Young Workers League.

Due to the number of attractions offered—the least of these not being the old and young celebrities who are expected to attend—and to the splendid publicity work, the committee of arrangements expect the most successful affair of its kind pulled off in Chicago.

At 9 a. m. sharp young workers from the west side of the city are urged to meet at 1239 South Sawyer avenue and the Northsiders will report at 2444 West Division street.

Johnny Edwards, one of the founders of the Young Workers League and noted wit has promised to take part in the hike.

Martin Abern, the famous full-back, and former secretary of the Young Workers League, is expected to umpire the baseball game.

Black Bottom Contestant

Wigmore, Sacco Foe, Was Red Baiter in Post - War Frenzy

BOSTON, May 12.—Dean John H. Wigmore, of Northwestern University Law School at Chicago, is a very bitter opponent of Sacco and Vanzetti. And now a reason appears. Following his second attack on Professor Felix Frankfurter of Harvard, for the latter's support of the two Italian radicals, the Federated Press looked up Wigmore's record.

It found that the dean had himself been somewhat involved in the redbaiting campaign of 1920 that preceded the arrest of Sacco and Vanzetti. And A. Mitchell Palmer, the author of the Palmer "Red Raids" spoke in high terms of Wigmore at a congressional hearing in May, 1920.

The attorney-general was testifying at a congressional hearing into charges that had been made against Louis F. Post, the liberal assistant secretary of the department of labor under William B. Wilson. A few days before the anarchist Salsedo had been murdered and Sacco and Vanzetti arrested. Palmer praised Wigmore's views on free speech.

"Freedom of Speech or Freedom of Thuggery," was the title of one of Wigmore's articles which the attorney general admired. It appeared in the Illinois Law Journal, March, 1920, and was a violent attack on the advocates of freedom of speech as revolutionists.

GUNMEN ASSIST FITZPATRICK TO SPLIT FURRIERS

Federation Head Runs Local Union Meeting

CHICAGO, May 12.—Aided by the police, scores of gunmen and gangsters and under the chairmanship of John Fitzpatrick, President of the Chicago Federation of Labor, the right wing of Local 45 of the Furriers' union captured themselves (minus the membership) and proceeded to expel the leaders of the progressive forces without trial or hearing under the chairmanship of the same Fitzpatrick.

The last meeting of the local, which was held Friday night, at the Musicians' hall was opened by Ida Weinstein, vice president of the International by the grace of the old corrupt Kaufman machine. She immediately informed the membership present that Fitzpatrick was going to act as chairman of the meeting. Appeals made by the members against this unheard union procedure were ruled out of order and Fitzpatrick proceeded to read a telegram from Shachtman, international president, authorizing him to take over the chairmanship of the local. Fitzpatrick further stating that he had an order from Wm. Green, president of the A. F. of L., to take the Chicago Furriers' situation in hand.

Nichols on Fair Play.

After giving the floor to Ed. Nichols, Secretary of the Federation who ranted on the floor for several minutes on "fair play" etc., Green of the painters' union, notorious gunman, representing the United (?) Hebrew Trades was given the floor and indulged in the regular red baiting speeches concluding by making the statement, "dat dis meeting his called to any vich is de strongest de communists who ar breaking up the unions of de Hamerican trade unionists."

Mr. Hannock, secretary of the Hebrew trades (Forward agency) was given the floor to defend the "gangsters." He was very angry because the Communist Daily Freiheit had put these "socialists" in their right place.

Fitzpatrick next ordered the minutes of the executive board read, which stated that Goldberg, president of the board, Finkelstein, president of the local, Brothers Shenberg, Greenberg, and Goldstein, were suspended for one year under the charge of being Communists, unable to run a union, using slander, etc.

Israelson Betrays

Motion was immediately made to adopt the minutes, and Israelson who was elected as business agent by the aid of the progressives as against the reactionary Milstein, made a vicious attack against the New York joint board, repeating the already blown up charges of "police graft" and accusing the progressives of wanting to break up the union. Due to the outstanding the fact that it was exactly the same Israelson who was forced to expose the Milstein gang's shortage of funds a year ago in the statement later published by the progressive group.

The only explanation is that he has proven that he was too much of a yellow coward to stand the pressure was brought from the Federation. The only progressive recognized was Brother Summinsheh who protested against the violation of the constitution and pointing out that no trial had been held and also called the attention of all to the interference of the United Hebrew Trades with the internal affairs of the union.

Gangsters Watch Vote

Goldstein, one of the suspended members, demanded a secret ballot according to the constitution and stated in true Skinny madden style, "That we are going to have a Bully Goat vote, and that if you want to appeal to the International you can do so."

In an "Aye and No" vote with sluggers and United Hebrew trades gangsters, painters and butchers, etc. even then the "Noes" were in a majority, but Fitz declared the vote carried in spite of an appeal and demand for division, and after this exhibition in "democratic control," he adjourned the meeting.

One of the progressive members of the local was badly slashed on the forehead by gangsters led by Morris Lieberman, who is now at large and for that reason has been taken off the executive board.

He was taken to the emergency hospital where he was treated; several stitches taken after which he was taken to his home.

Fitzpatrick Splits Union

Fitzpatrick thus has carried out the wishes of the Fur bosses in the city of Chicago to split the union, and in the methods of procedure made Skinny Madden, former chief of the Federation and notorious crook, look like a piker.

The progressive forces in the Chicago labor unions will protest against this unheard-of violation of all constitutional rights of the members and complete disappearance of democracy within the union.

SACCO and VANZETTI SHALL NOT DIE!

THE QUESTIONS OF THE CHINESE REVOLUTION

Theses of Comrade Stalin for Communists Approved by the Executive Committee of the C. P. of the U. S. S. R.

I.
The Perspectives of the Chinese Revolution.

The chief facts which determine the character of the Chinese revolution are:

(a) The semi-colonial situation of China under the financial and economic dominance of the imperialists.

(b) The yoke imposed by the remnants of feudalism to which is added the yoke imposed by the militarists and the bureaucracy.

(c) The growing revolutionary struggle of the millions of the Chinese people, both workers and peasants, against the yoke imposed by the feudalists, the bureaucrats, the militarists and the imperialists.

(d) The political weakness of the national bourgeoisie, its dependence upon imperialism and its fear in face of the advancing wave of the revolutionary movement.

(e) The growing revolutionary activity of the proletariat and the growth of its authority amongst the toiling millions of China.

From these facts present themselves two possibilities of development for the events in China. Either the national bourgeoisie will defeat the proletariat and come to an agreement with the imperialists and then undertake a joint action with the latter against the revolution in order to make an end of it by the establishment of capitalism, or the proletariat will push the national bourgeoisie on one side, consolidate its hegemony and lead the toiling millions in town and country, break down the resistance of the national bourgeoisie and achieve a complete victory for the bourgeois-democratic revolution in order then to push it further along the lines of the socialist revolution with all the consequences arising out of the latter.—

One thing on the other. The crisis of world capitalism and the existence of the proletarian dictatorship in the Soviet Union whose experience can be utilized successfully by the Chinese proletariat, make the chances for the second course of development for the Chinese revolution much brighter.

But the fact that the imperialists are attacking the Chinese revolution unitedly as far as all essential questions are concerned, shows that at the present moment the imperialists are not as divided and not so weak in consequence, as they were, for instance, before the October revolution. This fact indicates that the Chinese revolution will meet with far greater difficulties on the way to victory than did the revolution in Russia, and that during the course of the Chinese revolution there will be far more cases of treachery and disloyalty than was the case during the civil war in the Soviet Union.

The struggle between these two possibilities is therefore the characteristic feature of the Chinese revolution.

The First Stage of the Chinese Revolution.

During the first stage of the Chinese revolution, the period of the first campaign against the North, when the national-revolutionary army neared the Yangtse and won victory after victory, although it was not yet possible for it to be supported by a powerful movement of the workers and peasants, the national bourgeoisie went together with the revolution. This was the revolution of the united national front. This does not mean that there were no differences between the national bourgeoisie and the revolution. It means merely that the national bourgeoisie supported the revolution and at the same time endeavored to utilise the revolution for its own ends and to limit its sway by advancing it towards external demands.

The struggle between the right and left wings in the Kuomingtang in this period was the reflection of these contradictions. The attempt of Chiang Kai-Shek in March 1926 to drive the Communists out of the Kuomingtang was the first serious attempt of the national bourgeoisie to bridle the revolution. (As will be remembered, the Central Committee of the C. P. of the Soviet Union was already at that time of the opinion that the "policy of keeping the Communist Party inside the Kuomingtang must be maintained" and that "the expulsion or the resignation of the right-wingers from the Kumingtang must be contrived." April 1926.)

The aim of this policy was to continue the development of the revolution, to work closely together with the left-wingers in the Kuomingtang and in the national government, to consolidate the unity of the Kuomingtang and at the same time to expose and isolate the right-wingers, to utilise the right-wingers, their connections and their experience, so long as they subordinated themselves to the discipline of the Kuomingtang, or to drive them from the Kuomingtang if they violated discipline or attempted to betray the interests of the revolution.

The events which followed proved the correctness of this policy completely. The powerful development of the peasant movement and the organization of peasant unions and peasant committees, the powerful strike wave in the towns and the formation of trade unions, the victorious advance of the national troops against Shanghai which was besieged by the fleets and the troops of imperialism, all these and similar facts prove that this policy was correct. Only this circumstance can explain the fact that the attempt of the right-wingers in February 1927 to split he Kuomingtang and to form a new centre in Nanchang failed in face of the unanimous defence action of the revolutionary Kuomingtang in Wuhan. But this attempt was a preliminary sign that a re-formation of these forces was taking place in the country and that right-wingers and the national bourgeoisie were not resting but increasing their work against the revolution.

The Central Committee of the C. P. of the U.S.S.R. was therefore right when it declared in March 1927 that (a) "at the present time the Chinese revolution is experiencing a critical period in connection with the re-formation of class forces and the concentration of the imperialist armies, and its further victory is only possible if all efforts are made to develop a mass movement," (b) "the police of arming the workers and peasants and turning the peasant committees in the provinces to real organs of power with armed possibilities of defence, must be continued," (c) the Communist Party must not conceal the treacherous and reactionary policy of the right-wingers in the Kuomingtang but must mobilize the masses around the Kuomingtang and the Communist Party at the same time exposing the right-wing." (3rd March 1927.)

It is therefore not difficult to understand that in face of a further powerful swing forward of the revolution on the one hand and the attack of the imperialists in Shanghai on the other, the national bourgeoisie inevitably went over to the rump of the counter-revolution, just as the occupation of Shanghai by the national troops and the strikes of the Chinese workers united the imperialists to throttle the revolution. And thus it took place. The shootings in Nanking serve as the signal for a still further separation of the fighting forces in China. By firing on Nanking and issuing an ultimatum, the imperialists wished to make it clear that they sought the aid of the national bourgeoisie for a joint struggle against the revolution. By shouting upon workers' meetings and by his coup d'Etat Chiang Kai-shek answered the imperialists indicating his readiness to join the national bourgeoisie against the workers and peasants and to make a bargain with the imperialists.

II.
The Second Stage of the Chinese Revolution.

The coup d'Etat carried out by Chiang Kai-shek signifies the abandonment of the revolution by the national bourgeoisie, the formation of a centre of national counter-revolution and bargaining by the right-wingers with imperialism against the Chinese revolution.

The coup d'Etat of Chiang Kai-shek means that the revolution has entered into the second stage of its development, that a change has taken place from the revolution of a national united front of all classes to a revolution of the millions, the masses, the workers and peasants, that the agrarian revolution has commenced which will increase the intensity of the struggle against the imperialists, against the landed gentry, against the feudal landowners, against the militarists and against the counter-revolutionary grouping around Chiang Kai-shek.

This means that the struggle between the two possibilities of the revolution, between the supporters of a further development of the revolution and the supporters of a liquidation will intensify from day to day. This struggle will occupy the whole of the present period of the revolution.

This means that the revolutionary Kuomingtang in Wuhan will be transformed into an organ of the revolutionary-democratic dictatorship of the proletariat and the peasantry by a decisive struggle against militarism and imperialism, whilst the counter-revolutionary group of Chiang Kai-shek in Nanking by separating itself from the workers and peasants and seeking a rapprochement with the imperialists, will finally share the fate of the militarists.

It follows from this, however, that the policy of maintaining the unity of the Kuomingtang and of isolating the right-wingers inside the Kuomingtang and utilizing them for the purposes of the revolution, is no longer in accord with the new tasks of the revolution. This old policy must be replaced by a new one, the policy of driving the right-wingers out of the Kuomingtang, of fighting them to the end, by the policy of concentrating the whole power in the country in the hands of the revolutionary Kuomingtang. A Kuomingtang without right wing elements, that is a Kuomingtang formed from a bloc between the left-wing elements and the communists.

From this it follows that the policy of working closely with the left-wing of the Kuomingtang inside the Kuomingtang becomes particularly significant and necessary in this stage of affairs, that this co-operation, the alliance of the workers and peasants which is being formed, will reflect itself outside the Kuomingtang, that without such co-operative work the victory of the revolution is impossible.

It follows further, that the chief source of strength of the revolutionary Kuomingtang is to be found in a continued development of the revolutionary movement of the workers and peasants and the strengthening of their mass organizations, the revolutionary peasant committees, the workers' trade unions and the other mass organizations as the preparatory elements for the Soviets of the future, that the chief guarantee for the victory of the revolution is the growth of the revolutionary activity of the millions of toilers and that the most and most important weapon against the counter-revolution is the arming of the workers and peasants.

From all this it follows finally, that the Communist Party whilst fighting in the same ranks with the revolutionary Kuomingtang members, must preserve its independence more than ever as a necessary condition for ensuring the hegemony of the proletariat in the bourgeois-democratic revolution.

IV.
The Errors of the Opposition.

The chief error of the opposition (of comrade Radek and Co.) is the failure to undrstand the revolution in China, to realize in what stage of development the revolution is at present and to realize the international situation of the revolution.

The opposition demands that the Chinese revolution develop in something like the same tempo as that of the October revolution. The opposition is dissatisfied because the workers of Shanghai have not commenced the decisive struggle against imperialism and its lackeys. It does not understand that the revolution in China cannot develop as quickly as the October revolution, because the international situation to-day is not so favorable as it was in 1917. There is no war between the imperialists. The opposition does not realize that it is not possible to commence a decisive struggle under unfavorable circumstances, before the reserves have been rallied up, just as for instance the Bolsheviki in April or even in June 1917 did not undertake any decisive struggle. The opposition fails to understand that not to avoid a decisive struggle under unfavorable circumstances when it could be avoided) is tantamount to lightening the task of the enemies of the revolution.

The opposition demands the immediate creation of Soviet workers, peasants and soldiers' deputies in China. What would that mean, to form soviets in China now? First of all, one cannot form soviets at any time, they can only be formed in a time of intense revolutionary energy. Secondly, soviets are not formed for talking purposes. They are formed primarily as fighting organs against the existing power, as organs of the struggle for power. This was the case in 1905 and again in 1917.

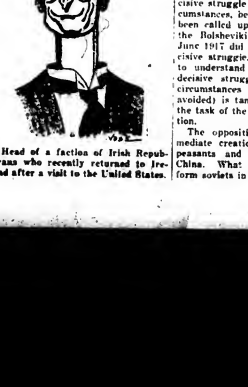
What would the formation of soviets mean at the present time, for instance in the territory under the control of the government of Wuhan? This would mean to issue the slogan of a struggle against the existing power in this territory. This would mean to issue the slogan to form new organs of power, the slogan of the struggle against the power of the revolutionary Kuomingtang, for at the present ting there is no other power in this territory but that of the revolutionary Kuomingtang. This would mean to confuse the task of forming and consolidating of mass organizations of the workers and peasants in the form of strike committees, peasant unions and peasant committees, trade councils, factory councils, etc., upon which the revolutionary kuomingtang already supports itself with the task of creating a soviet system as a new type of state power in place of the power of the revolutionary Kuomingtang. That means a lack of understanding for the present phase of the development of the Chinese revolution. That means to present the enemies of the Chinese people with a new weapon for the struggle against the revolution, to create new legends that in China there is no national revolution, but an artificial "Moscow sovietization."

By putting up the slogan of the formation of soviets at the present time the opposition is thus playing into the hands of the enemies of the Chinese revolution.

The opposition considers that a participation of the Communist Party in the Kuomingtang is purposeless. The opposition considers therefore that the Communist Party should leave the Kuomingtang. But what would it mean if the Comaunist Party would leave the Kuomingtang now at a time when the whole imperialist brood and its supporters everywhere demand the driving of the Communists out of the Kuomingtang's This would mean to leave the battle-field and to leave our allies in the Kuomingtang in the lurch to the great pleasure of the enemies of the revolution. This would mean a weakening of the Communist Party and undermining of the Kuomingtang, a lightening of the work of the Cavaignac of Shanghai and the handing over of the Kuomingtang for instance in the territory under the control of the government of Wuhan, the most popular emblem in China, to the right-wing members of the Kuomingtang. That is exactly what the imperialists and the militarists and the right-wing members of the Kuomingtang demand at the present time.



It follows therefore that by demanding the resignation of the Communist Party from the Kuomingtang now, the opposition is playing into the hands of the enemies of the Chinese revolution.

CHINA DECLARES LOYALTY TO NANK... BRITISH FEAR NATIONALIST STRENGTH

Nationalist Government with a storm of protest. They continue to clamor for open war and the occupation of the Yangtze valley.

British business men believe that Chamberlain places too much faith in Chiang Kai-shek and Chang Tso-lin. They concede the strength of the Nationalist Government at Hankow, and believe that if Great Britain desists from intervention, all of China will soon fall into the hands of the Nationalists.

British Fear Nationalists

Commenting on Chamberlain's hope that Chiang Kai-shek will defeat the Nationalists, the Hongkong Telegraph says, "We are doubtful about the consummation of such a hope, even tho it is too devoutly wished.

The change in the Cabinet's policy is regarded as a Chinese victory over Great Britain.

Rights Continue Murder

Right wingers here are continuing their merciless execution of labor and left wing leaders. The police announced the wholesale execution of an unspecified number of Communists yesterday. Only two boys were spared because of their age.

The right wingers in control have also granted merchants and compradoes the right to reorganize their armed defence corps. Workers who carry arms run the risk of immediate execution.

(By Mail)

MOSCOW, April 27.—According to a report of the Chinese National Telegraph Agency, the Central Committee of the Kuomingtang and the National government have published a declaration opposing Chiang Kai-shek and the participants in the conference of Nanking. The declaration points out that Chiang Kai-shek had long tried to form his own government and long before his present action had attempted to turn the central government of national China into an instrument for his own purposes.

When these attempts had failed Chiang Kai-shek then acted on his own in Shanghai, Nanking and other towns and commenced the path followed by other Generals. The declaration records the stages by which Chiang caused a split in the Kuomintang.

Immediately upon his arrival in Shanghai, Chiang came to an understanding with the imperialists and chose together with the latter the struggle against Communism with the methods of Chang Tso-lin. The officers and soldiers who did not agree with him he sent to the front, and them off from all support in the rear and so abandoned them to certain destruction at the hands of the enemy. He caused the political workers in the army to be arrested and had them openly executed. He instigated his soldiers to destroy the party and its leading organs. He used terrible cruelty against real revolutionary elements and their friends. All the elements in the hands of the imperialists rallied around his banner.

The declaration appeals to all, particularly the army, to rally around the national government and to overthrow and destroy Chiang Kai-shek the traitor to the people and to the Kuomingtang.

Los Angeles Communist Arrested, Charged C. S. But Later Is Released

By I. P. RINDAL.
(Worker Correspondent).

LOS ANGELES, Calif., May 12.—Joseph Siminoff, Communist, was arrested at Brooklyn and Soto Street Thursday night, May 5th. He was one of the speakers addressing an open-air gathering on the Labor Party question.

When Frank Spector, secretary of the local branch of the I. L. D., presented himself at the police station with the bail money, they locked him up also for good measure.

The first charge against Comrade Siminoff, criminal syndicalism, was dropped. The Busickam in this state is sick—but not dend. Siminoff is out on bail, charged with violations of two different brands of city ordinances.

Released.

Frank Spector also gained his freedom tonight, as they were unable to frame-up anything against him at present. Spector is, however, out on bail on another charge. He was one of 26 Communists arrested last Sunday, May 1, for unlawful parading and display of Sacco-Vanzetti protest banners. May 11 is the date of the trial.

The activity of the police since May 1 seems to have stimulated the CLASS INTEREST of the workers. They flock to Workers (Communist) Party headquarters from all directions of the city.

Soviet Revenue for Six Months Near One Billion Rubles

MOSCOW, Russia, May 12.—Revenue for the first half of the current year amounted to 49.6 per cent of this year's estimate, a higher percentage of the revenue budgeted than has been raised in former years, it was announced today.

The revenue for the period covered was 1,739,000,000 rubles (about $850,000,000). Expenditures were 1,735,000,000 rubles.

JOLIET, Ill., May 12.—Nathan F. Leopold, Jr., slayer of Bobby Franks, has been promoted from shoe shop clerk to billing and shipping clerk in the fibre factory at Stateville Penitentiary, it was learned today.

"Good conduct and education" were reasons for the promotion, according to Deputy Warden Frank Kneas.

Richard Loeb, converted with Leopold of the brutal "thrill murder" is foreman in the yard and performs clerical work in checking merchandise received at the old Joliet Penitentiary.

How the Reactionaries Have Helped the Daily Worker

This is an authentic photograph of a dyed-in-the-wool dollar paytriot speculating upon the results of the attack upon The DAILY WORKER. Contrary to their expectations that the attack would crush the paper, it has stimulated increased support from workers throughout the country. Every mail brings evidences of sympathy and support in our fight against the forces of reaction.

If any worker was not convinced about the militancy and the fighting character of The DAILY WORKER, of its efficacy in the struggle against American capitalism, then the attack of the so-called patriotic societies would convince even the most skeptical. It is very evident to the most doubtful one, that The DAILY WORKER is being attacked because it is waging a militant struggle against the forces of American capitalism, on every front.

Every dollar contributed to the Defense Fund, is not only a demonstration of support for The DAILY WORKER, labor's militant organ. It is a demonstration against the efforts of the reactionaries, to reduce the workers of America to silent acceptance of conditions of industrial slavery. Let no worker fail at this time to show where he stands. Send in your contribution at once to show your solidarity.

Preparing More Forged Documents

The Baldwin tory government that came into existence with the aid of forged Zinoviev "documents," has proved itself a virtuoso in trickery and deception. It has established a regime of forgery and resorts to its favorite weapon whenever it finds itself in a tight pinch. The raid on the Soviet trade delegation in London yesterday is so plainly another attempt to flood the press of the world with inventions about the designs of the Soviet Union that it ought not fool anyone with the slightest degree of political understanding.

There are a number of reasons why the belabored tory government should stage, just at this time, a raid in flagrant violation of every article of international law. The trades disputes bill of the Baldwin government, calculated to outlaw both general and sympathetic strikes and to prevent unions expelling from their ranks people who scab upon them, is under fire from every section of the working class. The puny criticism of the bill from the ranks of the right wing of the labor movement that in the past has served so valiantly the ruling class in its efforts to maintain power has disgusted the masses of labor who are swinging more and more to the left. The government of forgery will probably try to concoct a story to the effect that the opposition to the trade disputes bill is being directed from the offices of the Soviet trade delegation. This, in turn, will enable the die-hard tories to increase their clamor for breaking off all relations with Russia that they have dinned into the ears of the world since the general strike.

Then, also, the tories can invent documents to be used for the purpose of charging that all the opposition to the imperialist intervention in China springs from the same source. The possibilities for forgery arising out of such a raid are almost unlimited.

Stories of mysterious Soviet documents containing "instructions" to their supporters in Britain and elsewhere have become so numerous that they have lost their effectiveness. It was the British regime of forgery that was responsible for the raid on the Soviet embassy in Peking by the bandit gang of Chang Tso-lin, it was unquestionably the fine hand of the tory outfit that prepared the documents "discovered" on the Soviet ship seized by Peking authorities that resulted in the arrest of Madame Borodin and other passengers.

The only adequate reply to this depraved government and its monstrous provocations is open defiance by the British working class, determined preparations for another general strike in spite of and against the tory anti-strike law, and open preparations for insurrection combined with an appeal to the armed forces for support in order to silence for all time the Baldwins and Chamberlains and their loyal supporters, the Thomases, MacDonalds and Clynes, who were guilty of delivering the working class into the hands of its enemies in the first general strike.

The Communist Vote in Passaic.

In the official count of the vote in the Passaic election Albert Weisbord, strike leader and avowed Communist, polled 1,080 votes. The highest vote polled by any candidate was 9,882. For every nine and a fraction votes polled by the most successful of the capitalist candidates Weisbord polled one vote.

This is by far the most impressive showing yet made by a candidate-approved by the Workers (Communist) Party in any election yet held in this country. To claim, however, that all those who voted for Weisbord are Communists would be absurd, for the simple reason that the two other candidates endorsed by the Party were credited with less than half the total number of votes accredited to Weisbord. Had they been Communists the vote would have been identical for all three of the candidates.

It does prove that the bogey of Communism has no effect upon thousands upon thousands of workers in Passaic. Certainly no one, even republicans and democrats, are so gullible as to imagine that many votes were not stolen from all the Communist candidates. The very fact that the petty jay bird lawyer who acts as local prosecuting attorney ruled that the Communist candidates could not have their own watchers at the polls is convincing evidence of deliberate intent to perpetrate wholesale fraude against the working class candidates. The further fact that less than one of five of the textile strikers were permitted to vote because of legal restrictions—many of them live in nearby towns and therefore cannot vote in Passaic and many of those who do live in Passaic are not permitted the right of franchise because of barriers erected to prevent them becoming citizens—proves that the vote did not register Communist sentiment. So instead of sentiment being smaller than the vote would indicate, it is much greater.

Communist sentiment in Passaic is due almost wholly to the confidence inspired among the workers of that bleak mill slave town during the great strike, and the fact that the election manipulators were forced to record more than a thousand votes for the leader and organizer of that strike proves that Communism has made a lasting impreas upon the workers there and that it is now and will in future be the dominating factor in the life of the workers of that community.

At all times during the campaign and in the preparatory work before the campaign the Communists wanted a united front with all labor so that a straight united labor ticket could be placed in the field against the capitalist candidates. This was sabotaged by the miserable crew in control of the official American Federation of Labor machine, but the showing of the Communists has made the position of these fakers more difficult. Another struggle will expose to the workers that those supported by the labor agents of the mill owners are just as bad as the notorious police commissioner, Preiskell, who was defeated for reelection by a detective chief who is not one whit better.

The Execution of 20 Communist Members of the Kuomintang in Pekin

By TANG SHIN-SHE.

On the 28th of April 20 of the best fighters of the Communist Party of China and the revolutionary Kuomintang were executed in Pekin by strangulation. Chang Tso-lin has murdered 20 revolutionists at the order of the foreign imperialists. The murdered comrades were arrested of the 6th of April during the raid on the Soviet embassy in Pekin, which was instigated by the diplomatic corps. Five hundred armed bandits of Chang Tso-lin entered the foreign legation which, according to the agreement forced upon China by the imperialists in 1900 after the Boxer uprising, had not been entered by any armed Chinese.

Forged Documents.

As no "suitable material" against the arrested was found, the necessary documents were quickly fabricated. Upon the basis of these forged documents an "extraordinary court" then sentenced the arrested to death by strangulation after farcical proceedings lasting two hours. The sentences were immediately executed.

Murder Party Leader.

Amongst the murdered was the prominent leader of the Chinese revolution and of the Communist party, comrade Li Tai-chao. His death like the deaths of the others means a tremendous loss for the Chinese proletariat and for the Communist party of China. He was a permanent member of the Central Committee of the party. The party had instructed him to work especially in North China. After the insurrection against the imperialists on the 18th of March, 1926, in Pekin, the Pekin government issued an arrest warrant against him. He fled and remained for some time in Moscow, but soon afterwards he returned to Pekin in order to continue his work illegally. Despite the fearful white terror of Chang Tso-lin, Li Tai-chao and his comrades fearlessly and tirelessly continued the work of organizing the revolutionary struggle. For this reason the militarists of North China and their imperialist supporters cherished a special hatred of Li Tai-chao.

Confidant of Lenin.

Comrade Li Tai-chao rendered special services in the establishment of cooperation between the communists and Kuomintang. At the instance of comrade Lenin he tried as early as 1921 to persuade the Chinese communist group to participate in the national revolution. As long as General Wu Pei-fu gave himself out as a friend of the national emancipation of China, Li Tai-chao maintained touch with him, but immediately Wu Pei-fu commenced his reactionary activities, he was abandoned by Li Tai-chao. In 1922 Li Tai-chao joined Sun Yat-sen. Li Tai-chao was the first communist member of the Kuomintang and Sun Yat-sen accepted him with enthusiasm. Li Tai-chao was elected a member of the executive committee of the Kuomintang at the first congress of the Kuomintang in 1924.

Organized R.R. Workers.

Another great service rendered by Li Tai-chao was the organization of the railwaymen, who played a great role in the revolutionary movement. Previous to 1921 the railwaymen were organized in the "Railway Association" under Ong Jai Chuang, a reactionary monarchist clique. Li Tai-chao utilized his temporary association with Wu Pei-fu in order to organize the railwaymen and drive them over to the side of the revolution. The great Tangsan miners' strike and the railwaymen's strike in 1923 took place under his leadership. Whilst the imperialists regarded him as their irreconcilable enemy, the workers regarded him as their true leader and were passionately attached to him.

Aided Koreans.

As early as 1919 comrade Li Tai-chao played a leading role during the student disturbances. Together with comrade Chen Tu-shu, the present general secretary of the Communist Party of China, he was one of the heads of the "free thought" movement. He also rendered valuable assistance to the movement of the Korean people for emancipation.

Comrade Li Tai-chao was a well-known author and professor of the Pekin University for Law and National Economy where he was well-liked.

He once contributed a splendid article for the jubilee of a bourgeois newspaper, the "Shanghai Shun Pao" in the Paris commune, which drew thousands of Chinese students into the revolutionary movement.

Defied Bandit Court.

Before the extraordinary court comrade Li Tai-chao declared proudly and openly that he was a follower of Marx and Lenin and that he would fight for the emancipation of the proletariat with the last breath in his body.

Li Tai-chao and the other executed comrades will live forever in the hearts of the Chinese workers and peasants, in the hearts of the international working class. The Chinese revolutionaries and the proletariat of all countries will continue the work of these comrades until the final victory.

At the quarterly meeting of the board of directors of General Motors Corporation held here yesterday, an extra disbursement of $2 was ordered in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of $2 on the common stock. The extra dividend is payable July 2, the regular June 13, to stockholders of record May 21.

Following the meeting President Sloan announced that cash and marketable securities of the corporation aggregated $150,000,000.

WOEKERS! STOP THE MURDER OF SACCO AND VANZETTI

Why Coolidge Will Not Aid Victims of the Flood.

The widespread flood devastation along the Mississippi river in the South that has driven from their habitations thousands upon thousands of poor whites and blacks who, at best, in normal times eke out a miserable existence raising cotton, has brought insistent demands for a special session of congress to appropriate government funds to relieve the bewildered mass of suffering humanity.

Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, that irreconcilable opponent of the Coolidge-Mellon-Hoover administration, is making the welkin ring with demands for a special session. In a denunciatory speech in Kansas City Reed assailed Coolidge for refusing to call a special emergency session to deal with the flood calamity. He declared eleven senators approved such a session and emphatically refuted the president's contention that the government is doing all it can for the refugees. He pointed to the fact that the government, a few years ago, gave $100,000,000 to European sufferers.

Senator Reed displays typical middle class credulity regarding the reason for the existence of the government. He holds the fond illusion that capitalist governments exist to protect the inhabitants of their countries, instead of for the purpose of serving the interests of small and powerful ruling classes against all the rest of society.

The American government is the agent of the great bankers and industrialists of the nation and exists for the specific purpose of defending their interests; in short its purpose is to perpetuate inequalities—to maintain the supremacy of the exploiting class against the workers and farmers.

It is true that this government did place millions of dollars at the disposal of relief agencies in Europe. That was not for the purpose, however, of relieving suffering, but of getting a strangle hold on European territory so that the Wall Street bankers could realize profits from their investments. In the devastated flood regions of the South there are no rich rewards to be derived for Wall Street, hence the government remains indifferent to the pitiful pleas of its own people, and confines itself to dispatching Hoover there to ascertain just what possibilities there are for the investment of banking capital. What happens to the tenant farmers, both whites and blacks, who have had their poor belongings washed away by the torrential waters, is of no concern to the government. Its sole interest lies in the future possibilities of cotton raising and if the present victims migrate to industry new methods of raising cotton will be devised so that the bankers realize the average rate of profit off their investments. If the stricken regions of the South held possibilities for the investment of an enormous amount of bank capital and profits could be realized only through aiding the farmers such aid would be forthcoming through a special session.

The special session is refused by Coolidge, the servant of Wall Street, because it won't pay. That is the grim reality of the case.

Young Pioneers Answer Attack by Forward on Their Children's Camp

It has come to the notice of the office of the Young Pioneers Camp that the Jewish Forward has devoted considerable editorial space to an attack upon our camp. We wish to make the following statement:

1. The Young Pioneer Camp was started on the initiative of the Young Pioneers of America, in 1925, by taking out to the country 25 children per group every two weeks. Its' rapid growth from 25 chindren to 75 children per group in 1926. During which summer we had over 250 children and have had to turn away perhaps an equal number, has proven that workers have recognised our camp as a place where workers' children have an opportunity to spend their vacation in an environment which tends to counteract all anti-labor and militarist propaganda which these children get during the school year; where workers' children are permeated with ideals of loyalty to the cause of labor, and that the Young Pioneer camp charges rates which are low and within the reach of workers.

No Mixing of Names

2. The Young Pioneer Camp has no intention to confuse its name with that of the Young Pioneer Youth of America. The Pioneer Youth of America claim that we use a letterhead which is similar in appearance to the one they use, and that we have names on our letterhead of people who are known to be interested in the "Pioneer Youth of America." As to the letter-head, we would say that that does not merit reply. On our Advisory Committee are Ben Gold and Louis Hyman who are known for their views and the position they held in the Labor Movement. Then we have M. J. Olgin, and others who could hardly create any impression that they are in sympathy with the Pioneer Youth.

The Young Pioneer Camp certainly has no desire to be mistaken for the "Pioneer Youth Camp." In the "Times" of May 5th there is a letter by Joshua Lieberman, Executive Secretary of the Pioneer Youth of America, which states about that organization that "it concerns itself chiefly with experiments in education—and makes no political propaganda."

The aims of the Pioneer Camp are on a level entirely different. We have enumerated what they are above.

Forwards Envions

What has enraged the Pioneer Youth and the Forward is the fact that a call was sent out for a conference of trade unions and labor organizations in support of our camp, and that the response for the conference (on May 16th at the Labor Temple) as well as for our campaign in general, is splendid.

We have reached the stage where our camp has become a mass workers' children's camp and has long ago outgrown the position of being a camp for members of the "Young Pioneers of America" only. We have launched a campaign to establish our camp on a permanent basis, and we will undoubtedly be successful. We have had splendid support from many trade unions and labor organizations in the past two years and recognition of our work is increasing.

Our policy is not one of attack on any organization which carries on experimental education. We carry on some experiments ourselves. On May 20th at the Labor Temple Auditorium, we have arranged a symposium on the question "Does the present educational system in the U. S. meet the needs of the children of the American workers?" We herewith invite representatives of the "Pioneer Youth of America" to take part in the symposium and state their views. We will have other very prominent speakers.

We feel that this attack by the Forward is nothing new in the Progressive labor movement, and will serve further to rally the support of the labor movement in the support of the Young Pioneer Camp, the only Camp for workers' children.

Submitted on behalf of the "Young Pioneer Camp" by David Lyons, secretary, Martin M. Gottfried, director.

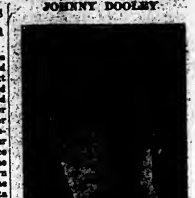
Milwaukee Br. Young Pioneers Names Babies

A unique ceremony will take place in the Party Hall, 802 State street, Milwaukee, on Saturday, May 21, at 7.30 P. M.

A party speaker in a short address will expose the treacherous role organized religion plays in the lives of the workers from the cradle to the grave, and show the necessity of repudiating its influence from the very beginning.

A number of new born babies of party members will publicly receive their names and be enrolled into the local branch of the Young Pioneers.

This is to be an annual affair, and is intended to replace bourgeois "christenings."



A dance and general jollification will round out the evening's program. All party members, close friends and sympathizers with their children, the Young Workers' League and the local Pioneer Groups, are invited to help make this a successful annual feature.

The proceeds will be equally divided between The DAILY WORKER and the District No. 8. Admission 25 cents. All children free.

DRAMA

JOHNNY DOOLEY

The diminutive comedian is one of the amusing high-lights in the "Earl Carroll Vanities" at the Earl Carroll theatre.

Schwab, Mandel Plans For the Coming Season

Two new musical productions announced by Kaufman, Schwab and Frank Mandel for early starring next season. The first of these, titled "Hold 'Em, Yale!", formerly called "Rah, Rah, Boy!" will be put on by the Ambassador Theatre about Labor day. This will follow an early engagement in Atlantic City and four weeks in Philadelphia. Lawrence Schwab and B. G. DeSylva, wrote the book which has lyrics by Lew Brown and music by Ray Henderson. The next production will be an operetta called "Peggy," due here early in October. It is the work of Guy Bolton, Frank Mandel and Oscar Hammerstein 2nd, with a Sigmund Romberg score.

In addition to the New York company of "The Desert Song" there will be two other companies; one opening in Chicago about Labor Day, and the other for presentation in the principal cities. The Casino theatre troupe following their local engagement, will play Philadelphia and Boston.

"Queen High" now current at the Ambassador Theatre will open at the Four Cohans Theatre in Chicago in the Fall, while a second organization will tour the big cities.

Screen Notes

Buster Keaton's next production for United Artists will be a new comedy entitled "College."

Mary Astor will play the lead in "Two Arabian Nights," the film drama in which Louis Wolheim and William Boyd are featured.

"Starlight," the Gladys Unger play will shortly be made into an elaborate film by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Lionel Barrymore and Helen Chadwick have been added to the cast of "Anna Karenina." Greta Garbo, will play the principal role.

Mary Roberts Rhinehart's story, "What Happened to Father," will receive an early screening at the Warner studios. Warner Oland will play the chief role.

May McAvoy will be starred in a new Warner Brothers film titled "Irish Hearts," a story by Melvilla Crosman, and adapted by Graham Barker. Walter Perry, William Demarest and Kathleen Key are in the supporting cast.

"The Heart of Maryland," will find its way to the screen soon. Mrs. Leslie Carter made quite a hit when she played the heroine many years back. Dolores Costello will play the screen role.

GARFIELD HAYS ASSERTS JUDGE WEBSTER MERE ADVOCATE

Loses All Pretence of Impartiality

Judge Webster Thayer's complete obsession with the Sacco-Vanzetti case was commented upon yesterday by Arthur Garfield Hays, well-known New York attorney, after he had read The DAILY WORKER'S story of Thayer's serious mental condition.

"Whether or not his psychosis bears on insanity," said Hays, "there seems little doubt that he has an obsession on this case."

Hays cited the statements of William Thompson, attorney for Sacco and Vanzetti, as to the way the Judge had no other topic of conversation but this case to discuss with everyone he met.

"His mental attitude toward the case in indicated also," Hays declared, "by the fact that he became an advocate instead of a judge; and that his opinion instead of being a judicial announcement was substantially an attack upon the defendants and their lawyers. It was an attempt to sustain a point of view rather than to analyze the evidence."

The DAILY WORKER'S story Wednesday announcing the mental breakdown of Judge Webster Thayer under the consciousness of his own guilt and terror will prove the opening of an entirely new phase of the celebrated Sacco-Vanzetti case, New York newspaper men declared yesterday.

Hitherto the case has revolved around the two points of the innocence of the two workers and the grossly unfair trial given them at Dedham. Although Thayer has been under a constant fire of accusations for his biased conduct of the case, they pointed out, no newspaper has yet had the courage to denounce the judge as mentally unfit in the later phases of the case.

BOSS PLUMBERS DEFY JUDGE IN LOCKOUT HERE

Injunction Mere Scrap of Paper

Boss plumbers and the Building Trades Employers' Association yesterday just laughed at the court order declaring the lockout of the New York's 6,000 plumbers to be illegal. Despite the injunction granted by Supreme Court Judge Thomas W. Churchill in the Bronx, not one plumber in that borough had been re-employed when the working day ended.

Churchill declared the lockout illegal because the plumbers in the four city boroughs outside Brooklyn have contracts which have not yet expired. The Brooklyn plumbers, on strike for the five day week and a $14 scale, are also within their rights because their contract had expired, the jurist declared.

The master builders had paid no heed to the Bronx judge. International officials of the Plumbers' Union admitted yesterday. They declared that certain legal steps in connection with serving the papers would not bring results until Friday or Saturday. A similar court order in the Queens court last week was utterly ineffective also, and later was ordered vacated.

Great interest was manifested among building trades workers Wednesday by the mass meeting for all workers in the trade called by the Plumbers' Helpers' Association for Friday evening at Ace Hall, 182 Claremont Ave., Brooklyn. A discussion of the perilous position confronting building workers in the plumbers lockout and helpers strike for the five day week will be the leading issue.

Plumbers' helpers have signed up with Edward Weiss, an Astoria contractor, for a $9 scale and the five day week, President C. F. Miller announced. Negotiations with another firm are pending with a settlement expected today.

Oil Chiefs Try to Figure Out Means To Cut Production

Capitalists machinery for the production of crude oil seemed near a complete smash-up Wednesday when heads of the profit-taking industry met on the call of Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

Teagle conferred with Secretary of the Interior Work last week in Washington on the over-production in the Seminole field of Oklahoma where the yield has jumped from 100,000 barrels daily last November to 250,000 barrels now. Crude oil prices have slumped 50 per cent in the meanwhile.

The big oil producers want the government to step in and bar the so-called "wild catters" or independents.

American Legion Behind Move to Squash "Spread Eagle," Anti-War Play

Jed Harris, producer of "Spread Eagle" an expose of American imperialism in Mexico announced yesterday he would consult with his lawyer the question of taking action against the motion picture producers.

Harris claims that the producers have placed a ban on filming the play. He added that he might also seek damages from patriotic societies which he declared, had been instrumental in keeping his production from the radio. The producer asserted that several posts of the American Legion were behind the radio ban.

Lockout Follows Slipper Workers' "No" to Wage Cut

The Riverside Felt Slipper Co., 48 Walker St., has locked out its crew.

About two weeks ago Chester W. Bixby, business agent of Local 55, Shoe Workers' Protective Union, was called to the factory at which he was informed that one of the members of the firm had been bought out, and that Meyer Kaufman, another member of the firm, was to withdraw. They asked that the crew be allowed to finish the work which they had started, so that they could take stock and clean up for the purpose of making a settlement, and then Mitchell, the remaining member of the Riverside Company would start again.

Last Saturday, Mitchell informed the business agent that he wished to change the cutters' price list from week work to piece work, giving as his reason that as there would not be any member of the firm to look after the factory, that he felt that he would get a greater production from a piece work system.

Wants Wage Cut.

Monday, Mitchell handed an ultimatum to the agent in the form of a proposed price list which is about 22½% below the general prices for that work, with the statement that they would work under those conditions or not at all.

When the agent reported to the Executive Board at their meeting Tuesday night he was instructed to notify the firm that the organization would not sign the price list which they have with the firm until its expiration September 1, 1927. When Mitchell was notified of this, his answer was "Then we will wait."

The firm cannot wait very long if they intend to stay in business as this is the time of the year when they must make their goods if they are to have any to sell in the selling season.

Trick To Beat Workers.

Since these events took place it has been learned that Kaufman has not withdrawn from the firm and it looks like a trick to beat the workers down, but there is no chance of that as the workers are standing solidly together.

The lockout will be considered and action taken in the local meeting of Local 55 at 98 Forsyth St. tonight. The members of the crew have all been instructed to stay away from the factory until instructed otherwise by the union.

I. R. T. Payroll Car Robbed by Bandits

In a bold day-light robbery which took less thnn a minute to execute, seven armed bandits held-up an assistant paymaster and two guards of the I. R. T., on 72nd St. near Avenue A, yesterday and escaped in a fusilade of bullets with a payroll of $9,000.

One of the bandits is believed to have been wounded in the battle during which, more than 20 shots were fired.

Investors in Ireland Get Some Cash Back

Subscribers to bonds of the "Irish Republic" will get what is left of the $6,000,000 raised in this country under a decision handed down Wednesday by Supreme Court Justice Curtis A. Peters.

The court dismissed the suit of the Irish Free State for possession of the money, holding the state had failed to prove title to it. The court likewise ruled that Eamon DeValera and Stephen O'Mara, trustees of the funds, were not entitled to use the money for further activities in furtherance of the establishment of an Irish Republic.

By NANCY MAKHOFF.

The report of H. I. Goldberg to the general executive board of the Cap and Millinery Workers' Union in convention here contained numerous attacks upon active left wing organizers and members of the Millinery Joint Cap Makers' Union, upon the DAILY WORKER and upon the Trade Union Educational League. It expressed the threat that the "we have practical deliberation towards them (the left wing) and even employed them as organizers . . . we would recommend that the convention should express itself in the strongest possible terms of those elements in our ranks who interfere with and obstruct the constructive work that the general organization is engaged in."

An outstanding feature of this convention is the delegation representing the left wing leadership. It is composed of a comparatively small group of capable and earnest men and women who have devoted their entire lives to their union and to the labor movement. But most striking and outstanding is the delegation representing the newly formed Millinery Local 43, composed of young women millinery workers. And it was from this group that came the voice of protest against the attack upon the left wing leadership in the industry.

Joan of Arc.

This protest was led by Gladys Shechter, a slender girl looking not more than eighteen summers, and tipping the scales maybe at 100 pounds. But one look into this little person's face tells you there is character, courage determination. This is the "Joan of Arc" of the Millinery Workers' Union.

Delegate Shechter read the Minority report on Committee on Official's Report. "We want to take issue with the General Executive Board as well as with the majority of the committee, on the chapter dealing with factional fights in our union. We contend that the developments in our union during the past two years since our last convention are in complete contradiction to the analysis and conclusions drawn by the General Executive Board's official report with reference to the activities of the left wing in our union. A careful reading of the report will prove most decisively that they have these statements not been a hindrance to the work in our organization but on the contrary are the very ones who are responsible for some of the progress with the gains made by our union during the past two years.

Progressives Got Gains.

"An analysis of the figures on the growth of our membership will prove beyond a shadow of a doubt that these increases came mainly in such locals as are under the control of the progressive elements and in locals where the progressives are a powerful factor. The best example of this is Local 43 which, under a progressive administration, has carried thru a successful organization campaign increasing the membership from 400 to that of 3,000. Similar have been the results in Boston as well as Chicago and Los Angeles. In all these locals it was the left wing that constituted the backbone of the organization campaigns and made possible the achievements in which we all take pride.

Condemnation Unwarranted.

"We believe the recommendation of the General Executive Board to 'expel' condemnation of the left wing in our organization is in complete contradiction to a policy of tolerence and not conducive towards the preservation of unity in our ranks."

Lifting her eyes from the report she added the following: "On the one hand to urge the G. E. B. to continue its policy of tolerance and steer clear of factional fights and on the other hand to ask the convention to condemn those who have, according to the majority report's own contention, helped build the organization, is impossible. You cannot do two things that are in direct conflict to each other at the same time.

"We are in full accord with the International to steer clear of factional fights and if we are to continue this policy then, brother chairman, I urge you to accept the minority report."

In the report of the General Executive Board the left wing members were attacked as "disrupters of the union."

Delegate Sorin of Local 48, an unseated left wing delegate from Los Angeles, denied that the left wing in the Pacific coast, where he comes from, could be termed destructive. "Our local is of a constructive character. By condemning these people you take away the courage of these earnest fighters, but let me assure you that that is not possible.

"You claim that the left wingers disregard fairness, but have you been fair? You have chosen only to point out the mistakes of the left wingers. I say there is nothing in the activities of the left wingers in our union to find fault with."

Delegate Feingold from St. Louis, upon whom has fallen the task to be the spokesman for the left wing throughout the convention, then called the attention of the convention to the fact that the General Executive Board has failed to submit a financial report for the past two years.

Consort of Millionaires Haled Into Court Under Charge of Drug Addiction

Mrs. Annabelle Leonore Van Alen Ottman Fuller Landgren, often noted as a famous beauty who married three millionaires in succession, yesterday appeared in court charged with giving a false name and address to obtain narcotics. Trial was adjourned until May 18.

Mrs. Landgren's first husband whom she married as the age of 15 was Harry D. Ottman, wealthy New Yorker. She was next the wife of George Fuller, San Francisco capitalist, from whom she was divorced in 1916 with a large cash settlement and $12,500 annual alimony.

In 1926, in San Francisco she married Eric C. Landgren, match magnate, who later had the marriage annulled on grounds of drug addiction. Mrs. Landgren had the annulment revoked and was awarded a divorce.

APPALLING CONDITIONS AT THE CORTICELLI SILK MILLS

By A. ALDEN

The Corticelli silk mills are the oldest and largest in New England. The company has large mills at Florence, Leeds and Haydenville, Mass., also at New London and Norwich, Conn.

Corticelli is America's best known silk manufacturing company. Its trade mark, a kitten with a spool of thread, is seen advertised in most magazines and papers. The mills at Haydenville and Leeds handle the raw silk material. At Florence it is woven into dress silks, satins, silk hosiery and so forth.

As I had an opportunity to stay a short while in one of the mills at Leeds, I will describe some of the working conditions there.

There are several large brick buildings and one large wooden building. The town of Leeds is only a small country place and the workers come from nearby towns and farms. As the farmers in that vicinity are poor, it is not an uncommon sight, early in the morning, to see a child driving a span of horses, while behind come sisters and perhaps mother to work. The women are forced to go out to earn some money in order to help their husbands or father pay the interest on mortgage of their farms. There are quite a number of such farm women working here.

There are great numbers of Polish people working here; they perhaps make up a majority. There are also quite a number of French workers.

The building, called the "Button shop," is a rickety two story wooden structure. It looks as if it had been built for lodging house or a hotel, remodelled into a sweat shop. There are no air ventilators. The benches and the machinery are crowded, leaving narrow aisles. This necessitates the crowding of humans—making the air unhealthy.

Picking.

On the top of the floor there are about 75 girls working at what is called "picking." They spread the raw silk floss on glass tables, underneath which two strong electric lights burn. They have to pick out any straw, hairs and all the foreign matter that has gotten into the silk. The windows of the room are all darkened so that no light from the outside will fall on the floss. As the girls pick over strand by strand the dust flies into their mouths and noses.

The foreladv (for fear of losing her job—she gets slightly more pay) is very mean. The girls must behave as in church. They mustn't even whisper. As there is no noisy machinary in this room, each tap-tap of the fingers is heard. It is very tedious and monotonous work. The hours drag by slowly.

The electric lights glaring under the glass tables hurt the eyes. Working there any length of time injures the eyesight so that glasses are needed even for the strongest eyes. For this tedious labor the girls get only $10.00 pay a week.

Spreading.

The lower floor has machinery for what is called spreading. Here there is plenty of noise and hard work. The fibers are spread in even layers in the machine where they are prepared for spinning. The girls working day work get from $13 to $16 a week.

Health Rules Broken

The toilet facilities break all health rules. They are downstairs in a dark corner. There is no window to the outside, and the ventilation and light comes thru a small window into the hallway. They are dirty and filthy beyond words.

Lunch.

There are a couple of small rooms downstairs assigned for lunch rooms. Here the women bring their lunches and eat them. Here also feast cockroaches and countless numbers of flies as the windows have no screens.

Here with their lunch they get some liquid which very much resembles soap-suds but is called coffee. Some bring sandwiches from home, others only sliced bread or crackers and swallowing that with a cup of so-called coffee, the hustle to slave the other half day.

Unorganized.

The Corticelli mills at Haydenville, Leeds and Florence are scab mills. Workers have no organizations or unions.

In 1922 at the general wage cut season, the workers in Leeds went out on strike, but as they did not understand that in order to win a strike they must organize and build a union in the mill, they only stayed passive, taking no action of any kind, so naturally meekly went back to work without any results and with a hostile feeling towards strikes. They haven't any workers who could take leadership and so the opportunity to organize was lost.

The mills produce millions of dollars worth of silk each year; the workers work for starvation wages—day-work pays ranging from $10 to $17. At piece work thru their "speed up" the workers make a little more.

Though the workers in these mills are not class-conscious and are hardened to their work and conditions, they are human and when they can be aroused when their patience gives out so they ought to be approached with facts about the power of organized labor.

Hands Off Union, Furriers' Warning To Reactionaries

"Hands Off Onr Union", is the slogan raised by the Joint Board of the Furriers' Union in a leaflet issued yesterday to the workers, and signed by Ben Gold, manager.

Not only are the employers who are collaborating with the reactionary leaders of the International and the A. F. of L. warned to "watch their step"; but they are promised that "the surprise given to the traitors with the Trimming Association agreement will not be the last surprise for them.

"The stoppage of the two thousand workers which lasted three four weeks, is neither the only nor the last weapon to force the manufacturers to refrain from playing union politics. The struggle for the preservation of the union and union conditions is only just beginning."

All shops are urged to organize in accordance with the instructions of the Joint Board which the workers were given on returning to work. Workers are urged to pay their dues and taxes "in accordance with the Joint Board Plan", and all registered as well as unregistered workers are called upon to help build the $100,000 union defense fund as quickly as possible.

Higher Salaries Main Transit Board Intent

The transit commission's main efforts are directed toward salary increases rather than unification of the subways, in the opinion of the state department of public service.

La Follette Sees Coolidge Conquest

its facilities; send arms and ammunition to the conservatives. Any one of these acts against a civilized power would have involved us in war the moment it was committed.

"In his recent New York address the president uttered these words:

"'Our attitude toward all nations is one of friendship and good will. Toward those who are yet struggling to improve the conditions of their people and achieve a larger liberty, it is especially one of forbearance.'

Just A Smoke Screen.

"In view of his rudest action in Nicaragua, these high sounding phrases are exposed as a smoke screen behind which his policy of imperialism is being conducted with renewed vigor."

Meanwhile the sugarmanent today went ahead with arrangements to disarm the rebels and police the republic. Rear Admiral Julian Latimer, in charge of the American forces of occupation, issued a formal proclamation calling on the rebels to lay down their arms or risk the danger of the "shedding of blood."

More Marines Leave.

To help enforce his demands and thoroughly police the country, the first contingent of 800 additional marines embarked at Quantico, Va., for duty there today. They embarked on two tenders, the Aroostock and Medusa.

The Aroostock sailed first with 120 marines aboard. She is to stop at Hampton Roads to pick up 45 more and at Charleston, S. C., for 100.

Norris Committee Angry

First voice to the indignation with which the liberal half of political Washington has met the Coolidge-Kellogg-Stimson use of the mailed fist in Nicaragua is given by Morcer G. Johnston, secretary of the National Citizens' Committee on Relations with Latin America. This is the organization of which Sen. Norris is honorary president.

"The action of Henry L. Stimson, personal representative of President Coolidge, in compelling Liberals in Nicaragua to accept Adolfo Diaz as president and lay down their arms under threat of force by the United States," says Johnston, "deserves the condemnation of every American who remembers the origin of our own government.

"Immortal."

"It is as unfair and immoral for the giant strength of our government to be used to force Adolfo Diaz upon the great majority of the people of Nicaragua today as it would have been for the Emperor of Prussia to have butted in during our revolutionary war and forced Benedict Arnold upon the thirteen Colonies.

"Throughout Latin America there is a strong belief that Diaz is a traitor. The grounds for this belief could hardly be better. LaPrenza, the leading organ of Latin American sentiment in the United States, has openly denounced him as an auctioneer of his country's honor and integrity. Even in Washington these facts are intimately find it possible to believe he has any sense of public morality whatever."

This plain speaking by the liberal organization which was established to keep watch over anti-Mexican and other imperialistic moves by the admi-nistration in dealing with Latin America, is privately applauded by the Latin American diplomats in Washington. These men have been astonished at the coolness with which Coolidge, Kellogg and Stimson, in the absence of Congress from Washington, have gone about the job of unauthorized and unconstitutional war upon the majority element in Nacaragua.

Johnston described Diaz as "a bad specimen of the "machacho presidente" (servant president) it is the present policy of our State Department to set up to do its bidding in the small republics to the south of us. Through these "machacho presidentes," placed and kept in power by our marines, these republics are gutted of their sovereignty and reduced to a condition of practical political peonage."

Stimson, in a letter to General Moncada, Liberal commander, made the declaration that President Coolidge had authorized him to say that Coolidge intends to accept the request" of Diaz to supervise the elections in 1928; "that the retention of President Diaz during the remainder of his term is regarded as essential to that plan, and will be insisted upon; that a general disarmament of the country is also regarded as necessary for the proper and successful conduct of such election; and that the forces of the United States will be authorized to accept the custody of the arms of those willing to lay them down, including the government, and to disarm forcibly those who will not do so."

This is a declaration of conquest under threat of war if it is anything. Congress has not been consulted. Hoover seems to protest mildly against the policy, fearing a trade boycott in South America.

NEWTON, N. J., May 12.—A verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, with a recommendation for life imprisonment, was returned by a jury here today in the case of Franklin Van Sickle, tried for the murder of Edward Raser, his former employer in Sandyston township two years ago. It was the quickest murder trial in the history of New Jersey.

DEFENSE BOARD CLOSES ROBBINS INCIDENT HERE

Cutters Welfare League Expels Him

The Joint Defense Committee of the Cloak, Dressmakers and Furriers Wednesday issued the following statement regarding Henry Robbins, former chairman:

"In answer to the statement in the press with reference to the removal of Henry Robbins as Chairman of the Defense Committee and from all participation in the defense work, the Joint Defense Committee desires to state that the enemies of the defense will not be able to make use of this unfortunate Robbins incident to injure the defense work. The fact that the Committee has taken this step against its own chairman is the most conclusive proof that the defense committee has but one object, namely, to raise funds to defend the imprisoned cleakmakers and furriers and to maintain their families; not to defend members of the committee who have been dishonest in handling defense funds.

We are not surprised at the attempts that the opponents of the defense work are making to use this incident for their purposes, as we know that their policy in such instances has always been to defend people responsible for similar acts and not to expose them as we have done.

Records Are Open.

The defense committee considers the question of the defense work more important than the reputation of any individual and we have done what we consider our duty. The defense committee hereby wishes to state that its books and the records of all its activities are open for investigation before any impartial committee, who may be interested and desires to look into the truth.

The money raised by the defense committee is used for one purpose only: to engage lawyers for the defense of the imprisoned workers and for the maintenance of their families.

This will be very clearly shown thru an investigation of our books. The only discrepency in the matter of the defense funds that confronted the committee was the fact that Robbins could not account for a hundred odd dollars.

With this statement we close the entire incident.

The Welfare League of Cutters' Local 10 has expelled Henry Robbins from membership, it was announced yesterday.

Robbins was subjected to a cross-fire of examination from a score of members but was unable to answer questions to the league's satisfaction. Charles Zimmerman pressed charges against him.

Brooklyn Unions In Vanzetti Rally Plan Big Campaign

Sixty delegates representing 21 unions and 60,000 members met Wednesday evening at 66 Washington Ave., Brooklyn to plan steps to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair.

Called under the auspices of the International Labor Defense and Barbers' Local 913, the conference decided to hold a series of meetings in every section of Brooklyn to arouse sentiment. Enthusiasm was at a high pitch as delegates debated measures to awaken the workers of the big borough to the significance of the case.

Florida House Smothers Anti-Evolution Bill

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 12.—The anti-evolution bill sponsored by Rep. Stalnaker was sent to death in a pigeonhole today when, shortly after it had been taken up as a special order of business, the Florida house voted 55 to 38 to recommit the measure to committee.

Green Intends to Spend A. F. L. Cash on Floods

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 12.—The executive council of the American Federation of Labor, now in session here, was expected today to take up consideration of united action by American labor in behalf of the Mississippi River flood victims.

William Green, president of the Federation, said some sort of action is anticipated by the organization, and the subject will be brought before the council for a decision as to what form the aid will take.

LESSONS OF THE PASSAIC CAMPAIGN

By SYLVAN A. FREEDEN.

The Passaic campaign has ended and the election is over. While many workers are disappointed at the small vote polled for the Labor candidates the campaign has resulted in a developing and strengthening of the militant labor movement of that city.

Over 1,000 votes for Albert Weisbord, standard bearer of the labor group out of a total of 17,000 votes cast is quite an achievement when one considers the circumstances of the election. It means that one voter out of every seventeen voted for a Communist candidate in a city where before the textile strike of 1926 the Workers (Communist) Party had practically no influence or prestige among the workers. Where the Workers' (Communist) Party branch was no factor in the life of the city, being just a little group of workers who held their regular branch meetings and an occasional mass meeting with a comparatively small attendance.

Communist Leadership.

As a result of the textile strike and the leadership given by Albert Weisbord and other Communists, the movement changed from a little sect to a living, dynamic part of the local labor movement, a thorn in the side of reaction wherever it showed its head.

When the time for election drew near and it was found impossible to form a labor party due to the peculiarities of the laws of New Jersey, that compel the election to be run as a so-called non-partisan affair, the Workers' (Communist) Party selected three of its members to enter the campaign as labor spokesmen, with the endorsement of the Workers' (Communist) Party.

Standard Bearer.

Albert Weisbord, leader of the strike, Simon Bambach, a textile worker and former striker, and Simon Smeklinson, a garment worker, were picked as the standard bearers. With raw material to work with as a campaign committee, and with limited finances the campaign was started. Several large indoor meetings and about a dozen street meetings were held.

Thousands of leaflets and 5,000 copies of a special issue of The DAILY WORKER were distributed. These were eagerly grabbed by the workers, many of them for the first time reading Communist literature.

Why the Small Vote?

Some readers might ask after reading the account given above, why the vote cast for the Communist candidates was not larger than it was. Several factors have to be taken into consideration when analyzing that question.

In the first place, if you consider the 16,000 former strikers as potential voters you have to face the following: The largest percentage of them are not voters. Many of them are foreign-born and never had the opportunity of taking out citizenship papers. Several thousand others, born in America, are not yet of voting age.

Moved Away.

Many of the former strikers live in the towns adjoining Passaic. Clifton, Garfield, Lodi and Wallington in the home of thousands of the former strikers. Then again many of those who lived in Passaic during the strike have left the state of New Jersey, due to the difficulty of obtaining a job.

The former strikers however, were the basis of the entire campaign and if a vote of the population was taken, ignoring the regular legal requirements there is no doubt the overwhelming majority of the working population would cast their ballot for the Communist candidates. Of course, not in every case because they are Communists and many of the workers do not even as yet understand the principles of the Communist movement. But they do understand the fundamental principles that Weisbord and his Communist associates fought for—the interests of the working class.

The First Step.

The 14-month textile strike was the first step in the building of a powerful labor movement in Passaic. The recent election was the second step.

The reactionary forces are beginning to become worried at the growing strength of the left wing and Communist movement as witness the recent statement of James Starr, a vice-president of the United Textile Workers that a house-cleaning of the local union would soon be held.

Future Is Bright.

The future for the militant section of the Passaic labor movement is bright. Building the Workers' (Communist) Party branch and securing new readers for The DAILY WORKER are among the next tasks. The formation of a local labor party is the next election campaign is of major importance.

When considering all factors the Passaic campaign and election has been a great forward step for the local and national labor movement. For the first time since the formation of the Communist Party theis candidates received a relatively large proportion of the votes cast. The entire capitalist class watched with keen interest for the results. The chairman of the republican party of New Jersey phoned a Passaic newspaper election night, to ask only one question—the size of the Communist vote.

New Period.

The Passaic election campaign has ended and at the same time a new period begins for the Communist movement of this country—The Workers' (Communist) Party as an influence in the political life of the country.

The Rough Road

Translated from the Russian of A. Novikov-Pribol by Vera and Violet Mitkovsky.

A month and a half passed. The end of February approached. A rumor that something was going wrong in Petrograd reached us, the officers. A dark shadow fell across our spirits.

Soon after, the commander of the fleet summoned all the captains, myself among them, to the flagship. When we had all assembled, the admiral ordered the doors to be locked and sank heavily into a leather upholstered chair. Dark puffs under the eyes gave him an old and tired appearance. We took chairs about the long table, understanding that a secret council was before us.

"Gentlemen", began the admiral glancing at all present with his strained grey eyes, "I have unpleasant news to communicate to you. There is mutiny in Petrograd and it is impossible to tell how it will end . . .

He looked at the clean sheet of writing paper before him and his shoulders stooped as if under the weight of their golden galons with the black eagles. His head shortened and the shoulders hunched up. For a few minutes in the salon, brightly lit with electric lights, reigned such silence as though every man had ceased breathing. The rosewood walls black-lacquered grand piano and nickle door knobs all shone with a cold glitter.

The admiral suddenly threw up his head and extended his chest, covered with orders, as if to appear more inspiring. His stubby ears turned red. His voice sounded irritated and unsteady.

"In any case, we must be prepared for any emergency. The revolutionary contagion may reach even the ships. Then—there is nothing more to say, you remember very well the years 1905-6."

The red spectre of those years loomed before us as though a dark curtain had lifted and revealed the past. Details crowded in of the mutiny at Kronstadt on the "Potemkin" and "Memory of Azov," direct, bloody and terrible.

The council was long. We decided to adopt measures: to let no one of the crew ashore, to keep all rifles on every ship in the officers' quarters only, to watch the wireless that news of the events in Petrograd might not reach the lower ranks, to communicate with the admiral in code messages only. In concluding, the admiral declared that all attempts at mutiny on any ship must be suppressed by the officers, acting jointly with the engineers and junior officers, in the most thorough manner, stopping at nothing. If, however, a ship were to fall into the hands of the mutineers, it must be sunk at once by gun fire from the other ships.

"Communicate to your officers, gentlemen, that I will tolerate no weakness. Determination is what we need, now, more than ever, yes, determination!"

These were the last words of the admiral that I ever heard. I have not seen him since and will never see him again. He fell in the mutiny.

I returned to my ship in ill humor. It seemed to me that the commander of our fleet had not told us all, that he was withholding something. Intuition whispered that the end of our power was approaching. This was confirmed later. We began to receive wireless messages from Petrograd. The whole capital was swept by the revolutionary movement.

Late at night I ordered the officers to assemble in the mess-room. They already knew everything. Some looked downcast.

I addressed them with a question.

"What are we to do if revolutionary ferment begins to work in our crew?"

Everyone kept perfectly still. Regarding my assistants, I began to feel some of their alarm.

"And what do you think, Vasili Nikolaavitch?" I tried to draw out the oldest officer, Iamaeiov, a captain of the second rank.

"It all depends on the turn of events," he answered hurriedly. At present only Petrograd has mutinued, and we still have Moscow—the heart of Russia—and other cities. Besides, we do not know the temper of the army; the sequence depends on it, one way or the other. In any case, we must hold on to the very last."

The rest of the officers expressed themselves in the same spirit. Some of them began to revive their courage, and their opinion was such: there are many sailors, but with bare hands they can do nothing, while we, armed with rifles and revolvers, can if need be, slaughter them like a herd of sheep.

Lieutenant Brasov was gloomier than the rest. He sat at the table, leaning his head on his hands and clenching an unlighted cigarette between his teeth. Evidently the advice of the officers did not satisfy him. Finally he straightened, his eyes glowing with determination.

"I propose that first of all we join the officers' quarters with the shell store-room by electric wires. We should be ready to blow up the ship if necessary. I beg to be entrusted with this task. At the right moment I shall press the button without the slightest hesitation."

I looked sternly at Brasov.

"And what then?"

He continued in a steady voice.

"We shall be blown into the air together with the mutineers, those desperadoes who know neither honor nor conscience. That would be a noble and instantaneous death. It will save us from torture and shameful abuse."

At these words the officers shuffled uncomfortably in their seats.

"On no consideration," I answered sharply. "That would be a horrible betrayal of our country. We must remember the war. I hope gentlemen, no one among you would allow Russia to be over-run by the Germans."

We arrived at no decision but resolved to wait and see the course history was steering and to be constantly on the watch.

On the second day we received a wireless message stunning us with tidings of new events. Revolutionary winds had arisen to a gale and were sweeping away the decaying masts of the old regime. The throne of the Czars was shaken. The majority of my officers completely lost their heads. Each one carried a revolver but I already doubted if, at the necessary moment, he would get an opportunity to discharge it at his opponent.

On what was the commander of our fleet depending? Why is he keeping the sailors in ignorance? Why does he not join the revolutionary movement? In what way only could he save the officers.

Meanwhile, on my ship all was orderly and quiet. The first officer attempted to sound the sailors through his secret agents, but could learn nothing. No signs of mutiny were visible. There could be only two explanations, either the crew suspected nothing of what was happening in Russia, or the Reds were conducting their conspiracy so warily that it was impossible to detect anything. In the matter of obedience, the sailors became even better than before, performing their duties cheerfully, as people perform some heavy labor for the last time, after which they expect to enjoy a long rest. This circumstance, more than anything else, gave cause for suspicion.

A year before the revolution, several arrests of sailors had been made in our squadron. Investigation showed that strong political organizations existed on many of our warships. It was apparent that the fleet was preparing to mutiny though it is true no sailor had yet been arrested on the "Thunderbolt." We merely increased the secret surveillance of the crew, but this led to no result. At the same time it was hard to believe that the revolutionary contagion had not penetrated the men under my command. That is why the last few days I felt distrust. My men seemed terribly unreliable in their unquestioning obedience. I knew that there were advanced men on board who were not quite trustworthy, in the political sense. Of these, chief and most important was the head telegraphist, Smirnov. The first mate had brought him to me on more than one occasion, proposing that we discharge him on some pretext. There were no definite charges against Smirnov so I treated the matter tolerantly. Moreover, he was clever and intelligent and there is a weak strain in my character—I like such people.

A thought entered my mind: does he know of the beginning revolution and how will he act toward me? I decided to see him. He was summoned, and on entering my cabin spoke calmly:

"I have the honor to report, sir."

He stood before me in a respectful attitude with his cap in the left hand and the right arm down by his side. A well-fitting sailor suit, polished shoes, and cleanshaven face with a small black moustache, gave the impression that this man was neat and orderly in all respects. His blue eyes gazed at me inquisitively as if to divine purpose of this interview. I began a conversation about telegraphy, of the condition of his apparatus, and whether it needed any repair. He answered with businesslike gravity—all was well in the radio room.

"Very glad to hear it, my good man," I said. "I was concerned because we must prepare for the spring campaign in spite of any happenings in Russia."

The last words reduced no effect on Smirnov. He knew everything.

"You may go."

"Yes sir," said Smirnov and, hesitating just for an instant, glanced at me with something like sympathy in his eyes.

Ten Years of Revolutionary Press

(PRESS DAY IN THE USSR).

THE "Pravda" re-appeared in Leningrad soon after the February Revolution. For some time it was the only Bolshevik paper in the country, but soon militant labor papers were published in Moscow, Ekaterinoslav, Tsaritzen and other towns. Wherever the Bolshevik wing grew in influence, Bolshevik papers appeared.

This was an extraordinary difficult period for Bolshevik papers. They were persecuted, their work was hampered by a vicious campaign of the bourgeois and menshevik press, which in some cases was very rich and had at its disposal excellent typographical facilities.

After the Revolt.

Even after the October Revolution, the Soviet papers had to fight for months in succession against the torrent of lies and mockery coming from the counter-revolutionary papers. But the situation at the front and the civil war made the situation for the Bolshevik press ever more tense. In the throes of hunger, desolation and the immediate danger of the restoration of the old bourgeois rule, the press assisted the toilers in mobilizing their forces and fighting strength in order to repel the White marauders.

New Tasks.

When the fronts were liquidated, new complicated tasks of economic construction arose for the press as well as for the public in general. The press was called on to adopt new methods and to expend more energy in dealing with questions of restoration of agriculture and industry, the questions of livening up public works, and the more complicated situation in general.

The Soviet press met with certain difficulties on the termination of the civil war in what may be termed the transfer to a business basis. During the years of civil war, the editors did not have to worry about money, the paper supply, or the circulation. Now all these questions were raised in their full scope and the editors who were used to receive their paper and typographic "rations," however meagre, were at a loss. The reader who hitherto received his paper free of charge was slow in getting used to the idea of having to pay for it. This also affected the circulation of the press. Before NEP there were 803 newspapers with a circulation of 2,261,189 copies in the U. S. S. R. NEP dealt a blow both to the number of papers and to their circulation and in 1922, when the press was placed on a business basis, there were only 382 papers left with a circulation of 1,287,905 copies.

Got Going Again.

But the Soviet press, which is a live revolutionary press, firmly linked up with the masses and responsive to the requirements of the masses, soon got over this stage. There are now in the U. S. S. R. about 600 papers (December 1, 1926, there were 582) with an enormous circulation which is three times more than that of the pre-war period. During the first months of this year, the press circulation was estimated at about 8,000,000.

But the success of the Soviet press is not measured by the growth and circulation alone. The mighty growth of the worker and peasant correspondents' movement serves as a no less importance. The Soviet Union press, which began by securing the collaboration of individuals, had in August, 1924, already 100,000 worker and peasant correspondents, and at the present time their number has increased to 250,000.

The work of the magazines has also extensively developed. There are at the present time OVER 1,000 journals with a circulation of 6-7,000,000. Some of the journals have a circulation of over 200,000. They are printed on good paper and on modern European printing machines. The journals deal with the most varied questions; there are mass worker and peasant journals, literary, critical, scientific, political, economic and various other journals dealing with all phases of life, customs, economy and politics.

These facts may all be regarded as achievements during the first ten years after the revolution. The press does not develop at such a rapid rate in hardly any other country in the world. Only in the U. S. S. R. is the press entirely at the service of the world revolution.

BOOKS

INDUSTRIALIZING A LEGEND.

"The Adventures of Paul Bunyan," by James Cloyd Bowman. The Century Co., New York.

In the days when logging was done with little crews, and primitive methods, by a special group of frontiersmen, thrown forward from the teeming civilization back of them, but not too much affected by it, the folk-lore tale of Paul Bunyan was developed. That was a story of a giant logger, who, by the aid of attendant trolls, "The Seven Great Axmen," and "Babe," his "big blue ox," performed simple prodigies such as woodsman might find interesting. He made an enormous ax, with a flexible handle, with which he could mow down a quarter section of trees at a stroke. His ox could pull anything; he pulled the road up by one end, and replaced it where desired.

Paul and the Seven logged off the dense forest covering North Dakota, and left it the present rolling grassy plain, on which trees will hardly grow. They set up Niagara Falls, gouged out the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, and dug Puget Sound.

Paul's camp had in it various exaggerated persons, miracle working bookkeepers, blacksmiths, cooks, etc. And there was talk of "the year of the blue snow," the time of the "blue moon" and more like that.

As the standing timber decreased, and the market price rose, logging became a capitalized, monopolized, machine industry, in which cuss gave way to donkey engines and the yarder; the logging road became a railroad; and the class war raged.

The interests of the highly skilled mechanics who now took the place of the old time "Viking" lumberjack were not that there should be huge production, but that the camps should be clean, have good food, the pay go up, the bunkhouses be not overcrowded, not filled with steaming dirty socks drying over the stove, that the men should have individual bunks, not arranged tier on tier, but located in separate rooms or at least on the same level.

By organizing into the I. W. W. they succeeded in securing some of these reforms, all of them in some parts of the country. Men who were satisfied with the old conditions, "coffee and doughnuts and a lousy old bed" were stigmatized as "scissor-bills"—who cut wages and lowered the standard of living.

Of course in this materialistic and sophisticated atmosphere the Paul Bunyan legend died. Paul Bunyan was the arch type of a scissor bill, and no worker admired him any more.

Now somebody is spending a lot of money reviving that legend. Numerous "Paul Bunyan" books have appeared, one by James Stevens, one by Esther Shepard, one by Ida Virginia Turney, and most significantly of all, one, given away, by the Red River Lumber Co., which is a brutal taskmaster to the unorganized men who work for it.

None of these seem to have had much influence on the loggers themselves.

But another, the latest, by James Cloyd Bowman, is more likely to do the propaganda work evidently intended; it is deliberately written to children.

"The Adventures of Paul Bunyan" is pure, unadulterated poison. Paul Bunyan becomes a great lumberman, with ten thousand loggers working for him. He runs a camp in which double bunks are pictured, rising one above the other.

Overwork, preventible dirt, and bad conditions, such as are cheap for the boss, and deadly to the men, are represented as high adventure, which a "real man" will gladly undertake.

The whole emphasis is on production of timber for the boss. The men are simple, childlike creatures, who care for nothing but to establish the record Paul tells them they must make, as the greatest loggers in the world. "What I need is a crew of lumberjacks to help me get out all this forest timber that is standing idle around here, going to waste. What I need is a band of real savages, real honest-to-the-stars-and-stripes he-men," says Paul to the timber cruisers. We hear no more of the "Seven Great Axmen," and instead Paul makes long speeches to his "merry he-men" (they're called that in the book), on "camp loyalty," "loyalty to the boss," etc. These actual words are used, over and over again, as the to hypnotize the little potential lumberjack who reads the stuff.

Paul picks out a staff of Swedish bosses to actually handle the men. "Swedes are the only men for bosses," he says, "they keep their mouths shut except when they are eating or growling orders . . . and they're bully when it comes to fighting. In case of an uprising in camp, the Swedes will make me a tough body-guard."

Divide and rule! If the new little lumberjack who reads this book ever gets into a rebellious frame of mind, he will, if a Swede, feel hesitation about attacking his kind, if not a Swede, he will hate and suspect his Swedish fellow workers.

Of course all the trouble that happens in camp is blamed onto the men, who are only big children after all, according to the author, and don't know what is good for them. One of them insults Paul's wife, and the camp loses a good cook. It's the fault of the "bull-cook" who spreads: "the insidious propaganda that it is easy to shirk."

Typical of the trickery in the book, is the attempt to give a new definition to this very word, "scissor-bill." Many in the Northwest use it as a term of contempt. Perhaps children do not always know what its derivation is. For them an original explanation is supplied. The bookkeeper says to Paul: "You have dead timber in camp. These men I refer to are either too lazy to work, and so imagine themselves the victims of some ailment or other, or else they are moral cowards. They haven't the nerve to stand up and make a place for themselves. The result is the men kick them around from cutters to swampers, and then to 'chikadees' . . . finally they lie around in their shanties and become bunkhouse grouches . . . the men all call them 'scissor-bills.' "

I think the cunning, the ulterior motive and the class bias of these "Adventures" is well enough typified by this little extract, to let it go without further comment. Except perhaps for the matter of "chickadees." Those are low paid workers, not so skilled—they clean the roads. In the book there is a constant striving to call attention to the necessity for class divisions and subdivisions among the men—no division between the men and the boss—nothing there but "camp loyalty."

The thing ends with Paul advising all his gang to marry, settle down, and become farmers, as the woods grow smaller their work is done.

"The Adventures of Paul Bunyan" will surely have a circulation—the West Coast Lumbermen's Association will see to that. The only antidote for it that I know of is Herminia zur Muehlen's fairy tales, which has in this case the disadvantage of not being specific enough—lacks the lumber jack terminology—tho after all that is not any too well done.

SEX STARVED LADIES.

The Best Stories of Mary E. Wilkins. Selected by Henry Wysham Lanier. New York: Harper and Brothers. $2.50.

I can't picture a worker being violently moved by "Little-Girl-Afraid-of-a-Dog," or "The Gospel According to Joan," or "The Revolt of Mother," or any of the stories in this collection. But Mrs. Wilkins, although she flourished in the nineties, is easier to swallow than most of the modern writers about New England who write under formula about pale sex starved ladies rushing through mounds of dry, baked prose. The starvation is in and understanding you are always aware of the small area she is covering. Mrs. Wilkins' stories but it is not exploited. In spite of her fine integrity and while her people are humon you are stifled by their provincialism and daintiness.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE British government is determined to break off diplomatic and commercial relations with the Soviet Union. This is a policy of desperation and the situation confronting the empire is a desperate one. The two main reasons why Great Britain has become the chief antagonist of the Soviet Union are: the slumbering resentment towards British rule on the part of the peoples of India and Egypt, which is liable to burst into activity at any moment and the revolt of the 400,000,000 Chinese workers and peasants against foreign imperialism, the chief sufferer from the revolt being England which has exercised practical sovereignty over large sections of China.

THE natural corollary of this condition, resulting as it has in considerable loss of trade, is the growing radicalization of the British working class movement, due to the decline of British imperialism and the progressive inability on the part of the capitalists to buy off a favored section of the workers at the expense of surplus profits from their colonial coolies. In this social panorama the robber empire sees the artistic brush of the Soviet Union and well it may. For the Soviet Union, thru its government based on the emancipation of workers and peasants has set the blood of the world's slave classes tingling with a desire for freedom and if the Communist International never issued a proclamation the red star shining in Moscow would still inspire the victims of imperialism everywhere to new struggles against their oppressors.

WHEN the French revolution planted the revolutionary hoot on the neck of the feudal order in France there were repercussions from that act in very quarter of the world where the people were under the yoke of native or foreign oppression. Those were the days when the Irish rebels sang: "Oh, the French are on the Say" and when the toiling peasants of Europe heard with joy the tramp of the marching hosts of revolutionary France. And tory England then filled the people of the world with lurid tales of French atrocities, and with armed force and the corrupting power of her gold she made war on that revolution as she is today on the Russian revolution. Britain did not then stop at assassination, and more than one leader of the French revolution died with a British-purchased dagger in his back.

ENGLAND tried to organize the world against the French revolution and succeeded in finally defeating Napoleon but only after Napoleon betrayed the revolution. However it was written in the stars that the death-knell of the feudal order was sounded, despite the treachery of individuals even tho the Paris masses who bore the brunt of the initial smash against the corrupt feudal government reaped little of the advantages from the revolution. The feudal order did not go down everywhere at once. Indeed some of its trappings are to be seen in Buckingham Palace today that leave is little left outside of the uniforms.

GREAT Britain is leaving no stone unturned to organize an international capitalist bloc against the Soviet Union just as she did against revolutionary France. But it is written in the heavens that the Soviet ideal is bound to win. Furthermore, the base of the Soviet form of government is wide and as healthy as the French cradle of the bourgeois system which supplanted feudalism. And also the Communist Party of the Soviet Union renders that great expanse of territory a sterile field for a Napoleon.

IN a few days the forged documents planted by the Scotland Yard detectives will begin to appear in the New York Times and other capitalist sheets that have plenty of room for all the news that suits the plans and conspiracies of the ruling class. And our capitalist editors will use the changes on all the hoary old arguments against recognition of the Soviet Union by the United States adding as further proof for non-recognition the discovery of the latest batch of forged documents. It now remains to be seen whether the protest of the right wing leaders of the British Labor Party against this latest tory outrage against the Workers Republic will be vigorous or merely formal. It is a well known fact that Churchill, "Fat" and Company do not hate the Soviet Union any more than do MacDonald, Thomas and Snowden.

Hungarian Monarchist Proposals Considered Cause for New Conflict

BERLIN, May 13.—A joint protest against the plan of rival Hungarian monarchist factions to put either "King" Otto or Archduke Albrecht of the Hapsburgs on the throne of Hungary, will be launched by state of the little entente at a conference at Joschinsthal tomorrow. This information comes from a high political leader of Jugoslavia.

The Czechoslovakian and Jugoslavian governments have already issued semi-official warnings that the restoration of the Hapsburg monarchy in Hungary would provoke military intervention. It is also believed that a possible outcome of the conference will be recognition for Russia. Jugoslavia will press for a pronouncement against Italy's Balkan policy.

Fawn on Thayer To Shield Him on World-Famous Case

BOSTON, Mass., May 13.—The latest effort to bring support to Judge Thayer is a pamphlet written by Ethelbert V. Grahill, of Boston, Reporter of Decisions for the Supreme Judicial Court since 1899.

Grahill has issued a 37-page pamphlet, entitled Sacco and Vanzetti in the Scales of Justice, and bound most appropriately in yellow covers.

The pamphlet was printed by Samuel Usher, of the Port Hill Press, and the expense borne by him and Grahill.

Usher gets his honest graft out of the public treasury by printing the decisions of the Supreme Court. Grahill feeds the decisions to him. By skilful teamwork not a nickel is overlooked, and there is velvet enough in that Grahill may repaint on this now celebrated case, out of the largess of his own and Usher's private funds.

Half of the pamphlet is devoted to an abstract statement of the duties of the courts, the jury and the district. To give assurance that everything was done according to Hoyle, Grabill points out that Judge Thayer not only once but twice repeated the solemn oath that the jurors take before they sit in the jury box.

He confesses to have "examined with care and with a dispassionate mind" something over 2,000 pages of the record. Yet he finds but three pieces of evidence to discuss; namely, the cap found on the ground after the robbery which the prosecution claimed was Sacco's, but which, unfortunately for the government, didn't fit Sacco; Vanzetti's revolver, and the enormous significance of Orciani's failure to testify. These and the old moth-eaten claim of "consciousness of guilt."

Grahill says, "Orciani was arrested as participating in the crime. He does not tell the reader that Orciani was released one week after his arrest and was chauffeur for the defense counsel for two years, not leaving for Italy until long after the Dedham trial.

The spirit of the whole document, is revealed in its fawning flattery. Grabill speaks of "Katzman, Esquire, Williams, Esquire, the Honorable Webster Thayer, Judge of the Superior Court; the Honorable Justices of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts." Then he says, "The defendant Sacco was represented by one Moore." This is the respect paid a man who was chief counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti for four years and who gave the case international proportions.

Berlin Stock Exchange Falls Into Panic

BERLIN, May 13. — Friday the thirteenth was indeed an unlucky day for many Berlin stock exchange operators.

Something akin to a panic developed on the stock exchange, when stock cashed an average of forty points as the result of credit restrictions imposed on banks by President Schacht of the Reichsbank.

SACCO and VANZETTI SHALL NOT DIE!

LON FOX, PROSECUTOR OF ZEIGLER MINERS, ARRESTED IN DIVE BRAWL

Progressive Miners Cheer Howat While Thugs Supporting Reactionaries Riot in Resort

PEORIA, Ill., May 13.—East St. Louis was selected by the convention of District 12, United Mine Workers of America, as the place for the next convention. Peoria was found unsatisfactory by the dominant Fishwick machine, because of the fact that Lon Fox, chief prosecutor of the Zeigler boys, was arrested with four of his friends, all members of the Fishwick machine, after a brawl in a resort here, during which one of the men was stabbed with a finger nail file by one of the inmates.

Harry Fishwick is president of the district, which includes all of Illinois, and is the largest in the U. M. W. A. Lon Fox is a sub-district president. The Zeigler frame-up is a case of progressive miners in the town of Zeigler who are convicted of murder because of a fight precipitated by the K.K.K. in a union meeting. Tho the K.K.K. is an illegal organization in the mining unions, the entire machinery of the district, both under the late president Frank Farrington, and now under Fishwick, was placed at the disposal of the prosecution. None of the Klansmen were put on trial, just the good unionists whom they attacked.

Cheer Howat

The miners who had the good fortune to hear Alexander Howat speak to the convention on the eleventh remember as one of the bright spots of an otherwise boss-ridden gathering that the fighting leader who broke down the Kansas slave law, forbidding strikes and providing for compulsory arbitration, was heartily cheered, and a resolution adopted to demand that the international union officials promptly reinstate him into full membership with all rights and privileges.

Howat's Speech

Howat made a masterly speech. He declared emphatically that the deplorable conditions existing in the coal mines today can only be righted by "taking away the mines from the coal operators whose aim is to see how much money they can exploit out of the public by their outrageous prices and attempts to reduce the wages of the miners. "One of the solutions to the troubles of the miners is nationalization of the mines with a good strong labor party to back it up."

For Labor Party

"The time has come when the working class of this country should get together and try to elect more man and women to represent them in the legislative halls of this country," said Howat. "I have not changed my mind in the least and go on record for a labor party. The time has come when the working class should pull away from the two old parties that have dominated this country for many years. The workers should have a political party of its own so that we do not have to beg and plead for laws that will benefit us. It takes time to do that, but it takes time to do anything. It took time to build the miners' union, but if we never make a start we will never accomplish anything.

Six Hour Day

"Nationalization of the coal mines and a six hour day are the only things for our men," continued Howat. "They used to say that the eight hour day is coming. I feel just as sure that the time is coming and probably a great deal quicker than we expect."

British Navy Attacks Yankees in War Trial On Rhode Island Coast

Rhode Island today took on the appearance of war time, as the advance guard of the big British-American war game forces began to gather.

Twenty-two seaplans from Norfolk took trial flights over Newport and the U. S. S. Patoka, mast ship of the dirigible Los Angeles, anchored off shore with twelve planes aboard.

The U. S. S. Wright, naval airship "mother" ship, was also in port. An airbase was being set up in Middletown.

On Monday a fleet of 137 battleships and smaller naval craft, the British invaders, will launch an attack against the American defenders.

LABOR PARTY IS MINERS DEMAND IN DISTRICT TWO

Central Pennsylvania Swinging to Brophy

DU BOIS, Pa., May 13.—Over the bitter opposition of the Lewis-Marks group, John Brophy, former president of District 2, has forced through his resolutions for a labor party and nationalization of the mines at the district convention here.

The labor party resolution calls for the "lending of every aid and encouragement" to the units of the Labor Party wherever they exist in District 2 and "assisting actively in the formation" of nnits where they do not already exist.

Brophy has been fighting every inch of the way in the convention, although not seated as a delegate. Barred by a vote of 56 to 53, Brophy won a concession that he be allowed the floor when attacked. Nevertheless his supporters have had to fight for his recognition as a speaker even when his character was assassinated by the Lewis gang.

Convention sentiment has been swinging toward Brophy from the opening days and he now carries a majority on contested issues.

Navy Calls Foreigners To Design Air Terror

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Foreign airship builders will compete with Americans for the $50,000 prize offered to the successful designer of the huge new dirigible to be built for the navy, it was learned today.

Because the airship—two and a half times as large as the Los Angeles in cubic feet capacity—will be the greatest ever built, the navy offered a large prize to bring the best brains of the world to its aid.

The ship will cost $6,000,000 and will have a minimum endurance of 130 hours, officers said. It will be able to carry three airplanes, and to "mother" several more by acting as a "gas" station and refueling them while in the air.

Britain Wages War On Soviet Union at Geneva Conference

GENEVA, May 13.—Great Britain is waging her unofficial war against the Soviet Union at Geneva Economic Conference as well as in Peking and London.

Sir Arthur Balfour has been making every effort to discredit the Soviet Union and to balk the extension of credit by foreign powers to her. Despite the efforts of the British delegation, Osinski and Sokolnikoff, Soviet Union delegates, are conferring with the delegations of other countries about loans and concessions, it is understood.

When Balfour attacked the socialization of trade in the Soviet Union, Sokolnikoff replied, "Other countries have sold goods to this 'monopoly' and have received good money."

Explaining the need of the Soviet Union for credits, one of the USSR delegates said, "We want to buy locomotives and electrical equipment in vast quantities. We don't need money, we need goods. The government stands behind every transaction. It has paid for everything thus far."

3 More Levees Give Way at New Orleans; Fear Missouri Flood

BATON ROUGE, La., May 13.—Three more levees gave way today before the pressure of the terrific Mississippi flood waters.

The big bend levee crashed at Morewaville, allowing a wall of water eight feet deep and more than 200 feet wide to sweep through and inundate the countryside for miles around.

Today's break are expected to inundate a total area of 4,412 square miles and virtually open a new river through Central Louisiana to the Gulf of Mexico.

All telephone and telegraph communication with the stricken teiritory north of here was disrupted today and reports of the newest disaster cams by naval wireless from the Steamer Orleander, stationed off Simmesport.

COUNCIL BLUFFS., Iowa, May 13.—With the Missouri River running more than eighteen feet higher than normal, this city today was threatened with inundation. The river is now a foot and a half below flood stage. If the gradual rise continues hundreds of homes in the low west end of the city will be flooded, engineers said. A third of the city is on a level or below the level of the river.

AMERICAN SHIPS BOMBARD CHINESE WITHOUT WARNING

Feng's Troops Drive On Chang in South Honan

SHANGHAI, May 13.—American and other imperialist war vessels continue to "patrol" the Yangtze River between Nanking and Hankow despite fighting in the area and continual protests from the Chinese.

When hit by stray rifle bullets, the vessels have opened fire on the towns and villages along the river banks.

Shelled Without Reason.

Chinese newspapers report that the shelling of the Wulung-kiang Fort on April 16, by the American cruiser Cincinnati was entirely unprovoked. The Cincinnati did not fly a flag, defied a Chinese signal to halt and shelled the fort without any warning.

The commander of the Kiang-yin fort, which was shelled by the Penguin, an American vessel, has published the following protest:

"A telegram dated the 6th instant from the executive department of the first division of the Fourteenth army announcing that the American imperialists who are conducting a gunboat policy brought about tragedies on April 25 and May 2 at Menansha (near Kiang-yin), which is in our control, and as a result dozens of soldiers and civilians have been wounded and killed and scores of houses consumed by fire. Such an atrocity indicates the disregard for justice and is tantamount to action by barbarous races.

"The news has caused no little excitement on my part. I wish that for the present time, when China is confronted with internal and external difficulties, my colleagues in the field

Wall Street to Govern Polish Finances Thru New $70,000,000 Loan

BERLIN, May 13.—The American loan of $70,000,000 to Poland, which has been approved by the Polish cabinet, will be floated this month, according to advices from Warsaw today. The agreement will be signed in Paris.

Jeremiah Smith, who acted as financial dictator of Hungary, is favored as a possible nominee for American financial adviser to the Bank Polski, as agreed upon under the terms of the loan.

(Negotiations for loan to Poland were delayed by the refusal of the Sejm to agree to the control of Polish finances by American bankers. The terms of the loan are yet unknown).

VIOLATION OF TRADE TREATY AND OF COMMON DECENCY, SAYS CHARGE

Disregard of Immunity Ordered Directly by British Home Secretary

Police Throw Papers Around; Break Safes; Men Detectives Search Girl Clerks

LONDON, May 13.—Formal protest against the police raids in Arcos, Ltd., headquarters of the Soviet Union trade delegation and the Soviet Union trading organization in London, was made today by Charge Rosengoltz.

Rosengoltz called on Sir Austen Chamberlain, Foreign Minister, this afternoon and registered a diplomatic protest against the action of the police. It is understood that the protest was based on the fact that the official Soviet Union trade delegation has diplomatic immunity.

The announcement today that the raid was ordered directly by the home office makes the responsibility clear. It was not a simple police case, involving possible stolen documents, as Scotland Yard announced in the beginning, but even in its inception a political act.

Would Break With U. S. S. R.

There is no concealment, in informed circles here, of the fact that out of the raid the Tory government expects to manufacture an incident that will serve as an excuse for breaking off trade relations altogether with the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Tory leaders have regarded the Chang Tso-Lin raid on the Soviet Union embassy in Peking, with consent of the foreign diplomatic agents there, with undisguised admiration, and have been publicly advocating its imitation in England, both as a moral support to the North China militarists, and for what direct damage might result to the interests of the Soviet Union.

Disregard Underlining.

Charge Rosengoltz stated in his protest to Chamberlain the police had violated the diplomatic immunity of the members of the trade delegation and said that one trade representative, M. Chodorkov, had been assaulted by the police when he refused to surrender the keys to the safe which contained private documents and secret codes.

Police Search The Women.

"The raid was a flagrant violation of the trade agreement and during the raid the most elementary guarantees, demanded by common decency", said Rosengoltz.

NOT GUILTY IS PLEA OF DAILY WORKER EDITOR

Trumped Up Charge Denied by Daily

William F. Dunne, editor, Bert Miller, business manager and the DAILY WORKER Publishing Co. after pleading not guilty to charges of circulating "lewd and obscene" matter in Part 6 of Special Sessions yesterday morning, were ordered to appear for trial on May 27. Joseph R. Brodsky, attorney, entered the pleas.

From the very first day that William F. Dunne, J. Louis Engdahl, editors of The DAILY WORKER, and Bert Miller, business manager were hailed to court for a bearing on this charge, it was evident that this arrest is part of a deliberate campaign against The DAILY WORKER. Those called by the state as witnesses against The DAILY WORKER were George L. Darte, "adjutant-general" of the Military Order of the World War; and George Seitz, a "research worker" for the Keyman of America.

These two men testified to receiving through the mail copies of The DAILY WORKER containing Gordon's poem.

That they had been on the watch for just such an opportunity to prose-

Mutual Insurance Agents Defrauded by "Big Four"

PREVIOUS EVENTS OF INSURANCE EXPOSE.

The DAILY WORKER herewith continues its expose of the fraudulent methods employed by the "Big Four," who are the Metropolitan, Prudential, John Hancock and the Colonial Life Insurance Companies.

In this series it is charged that these companies who monopolize the weekly payment life insurance business are guilty of fraud, misuse of "mutual" funds, manipulation of policyholders' money and subornation, to perjury.

On April 27th Governor Smith ordered Superintendent of Insurance James A. Beha to make inquiries into the charges contained in the Harrison articles.

So far the official apologist for the insurance companies has not submitted his report. The expose has caused something resembling panic in insurance circles. It affects upwards of 40,000,000 American policyholders.

By CHARLES YALE HARRISON.

The "Big Four" do not confine their looting practices to policyholders. Not only are policyholders swindled, but clerks are underpaid, agents are cheated out of commissions and the whole internal organization is flooded with a deluge of bunk and fraud.

Ignorant policyholders who suddenly find themselves swindled of their life savings usually turn on the witless agent who is merely the cog in the vast machine.

It has been reiterated in previous articles that of all the weekly payment life insurance which is written every year more than three quarters of it lapses before it has accumulated a "legal" cash value.

Chop His Salary.

When an agent reports that certain of the business with which he is debited has lapsed, the original commission paid for the lapsed insurance is deducted from his salary.

The reason offered by the insurance officials for this outrageous robbery is that unless such penalties measures are in force the agent will indiscriminately lapse policies to the detriment of the company's customers.

Double Profit.

See how this works out. Unless a policy is paid either as a death claim or matured endowment the company calls such terminations "lapses." Cash surrenders after ten years of premium payments are "charged to" the lapsing agent.

A policyholder has a $600 policy on which he has been paying 50 cents weekly. In the ten years he has paid $260. The benevolent company then allows $30.70 as cash surrender value and the balance is forfeited. In addition to this $14 is deducted

BANKS IN SCHEME TO CONTROL AIR

Encourage Monopoly of Radio

(By A Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Despite the fact that daily complaints are being received of the most partisan censorship and class discrimination by broadcasters throughout the land, the federal radio commission refuses to do anything about the matter. The commission takes the position that under the law it has neither the power nor the authority to do anything.

The fact is that the commission has the authority to intervene and is actually doing so. Section 18 of the radio act, specifically provides that a broadcaster who grants the use of his equipment to one political candidate, or one side of an issue, must permit other candidates the same use. The law also gives the commission the right to regulate stations charged with broadcasting obscene matter. And finally, and most effective of all, through its control of the issuing of licenses and allocating wave-lengths and fixing the power that may be used, the Commission has an all-powerful control of broadcasters and could if it desired put the lid down on censorship and discrimination in 24 hours.

Keeps Out Radicals.

The Commission gravely announces at the numerous conferences it holds with the press that every station now operating will be licensed. Not all of course will get preferred accomodations, but all will be licensed. But the fact that not one labor station has been given the right to operate, that not one radical, or even liberal broadcaster is now functioning is entirely passed by, by the Commission. Quizzed about the matter, the reply is made:

"Oh, yes, as soon as we clear up the existing situation we will consider the applications of new stations."

Not the applications that have been pending for months from organized labor for permits to broadcast, no, but the "applications of new stations" in other words if organized labor, or radicals, or liberals want a station they will have to go to the bottom of the list and begin all over again. Already the big chaincis and power unscrupulous have been streampted, mostly by the American Radio Corporation. The remaining desirable places are in the hands of a small number of equally all reactionary, invariably hostile to labor, radicalism or even liberalism.

Of course the good Mr. Coolidge and the sacred members of his party can always get a national "hook-up," to broadcast their propaganda.

Broadcasting a Monopoly.

The Commission is making much of the fact that it will give all broadcasters new operating a place in the air—not quite so much just how much of a place—but still a place. It declaims often and loudly that it is showing no favors, that service, equipment, priority and past record alone will count. Which is undoubtedly true, but still means nothing. The fact is that the commission is indulging in the grossest sort of discrimination.

Instead of giving all sides, all parties vantage places on the air, the commission is merely confirming the grabs of those who already are operating. The result is that broadcasting in America today is practically a monopoly. It is in the hands of big business, controlled by big money, and nothing they don't want said is spoken.

As Attorney Ernst, of the American Civil Liberties Union, in addressing the Commission when it first organized, pointed out, these broadcasters have greater power of censorship than any other institution in the country. Yet only censorship, but the medium for spreading their views while denying the other side the opportunity to reply. In his speech, the only discussion by the way, of the many that were delivered by the numerous "authorities" interested in the radio business, that reached down and jerbed out to view the fundamental issues involved, Mr. Ernst cited scores of instances of the baldest sort of discrimination and censorship.

Vicious Discrimination.

He related how a group of liberals, men and women of international reputation, attempted to purchase time from a certain big station to answer a bigot denunciation of those who dared criticize the militaristic imperialism of Kellogg and Coolidge in Central America, made over the station's equipment by a crooked Republican boss. The operator flatly refused to allow them to use his station, although they submitted to him a list of a score of prominent individuals, one of whom he could select to do the speaking.

This was but one of many similar instances. Yet this station, and the others against whom complaints have been made, are being given every consideration and will be among those who are to receive special consideration in the allocation of power and wave-lengths.

Mr. Ernst demanded that the Commission give consideration to the demands of all classes and parties. The Commission thanked him pleasantly, spread his able address and that ended the matter.

Monopoly of Air.

The existing radio act, a makeshift bit of legislation that was dragged out in the last hours of the last session, only under the greatest duress is desperately inadequate to protect the public. Once the Commission has given a broadcaster his license for three years, as long as he obeys its rules about remaining on his wave-length and using only the power alloted to him, he can not be dislodged and can do as he pleases as far as saying who shall or shall not broadcast and what he will allow to be sent out over his station.

Under the present system it is entirely conceivable that within a few years time radio broadcasting will become a highly controlled monopoly; it is practically that as far as national broadcasting goes. This situation presents a grave evil and one that unless it is curbed and brought under control may foreclose to the masses their right to use of the air.

Dry Czar Turns From Liquor to Literature; To Bar 'Arabian Nights'

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Incensed, Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrews, "dry czar," today ordered all future shipments of the unexpurgated "Arabian Nights" and "Decameron" barred from the country.

The ban will be effective pending a final ruling as to whether these classics, or parts of them, are "obscene." Copies now held up at New York, however, will be permitted to come in because previous shipments were admitted and importers had not been notified of a change in requirements.

Establishment of a code of morality for foreign books generally will be undertaken, Andrews indicated in a formal statement.

Seamen No Longer Docile.

WASHINGTON, May 13. (FP).—Information from the Sailors' Union of the Pacific, at San Francisco, is to the effect that cheap Chinese labor is no longer "safe" for the anti-union Dollar Line to the Orient, when that line is carrying American armed forces to China. The Dollar company having bought a number of government ships at bargain prices and put coolie crews aboard, has made a "patriotic" gesture by offering the lease of these ships to the government as transports for marines and soldiers. The first ship taken was the President Grant, and before she could sail from San Francisco all Cantonese among the crew were taken off.

While Chinese crews were good enough when China was submissive to the foreign powers, the Dollar concern did not trust the Canton Chinese to safely handle one of their ships carrying foreign troops to Shanghai to overawe the Chinese revolutionists. It was feared that the Canton sailors belonged secretly to the Canton Seaman's Union, which has declared in favor of a Soviet type of government in China. If the crew were radicals, they might possibly sink the ship, drowning themselves and the soldiers together.

HANKOW, May 12. — General Feng's troops have crossed the Shensi-Honan border and rapidly moving against Chang Tso-lin's troops in southern Honan. A decisive battle is expected soon.

That China will be governed within a few months by a dictatorship of the proletariat was the prediction made by Jules Sauerwein, reactionary foreign editor of The Matin of Paris at a luncheon Thursday of the association of foreign press correspondents at the Leaguers' Club 115 Broadway.

Sauerwein was compelled to concede the strength of the left wing movement, and estimated the trade union membership of China as between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000.

$516,000 GRAFT WRECKS NEVADA STATE FINANCES

State Treasurer, Bank Pass Buck; Moratorium

RENO, Nev., May 13.—With half a million dollars missing from the state treasury, Nevada today began a five-day moratorium during which all financial activity of the state government will be halted.

Governor Balzar declared the moratorium upon completion of an audit of the books of State Treasurer Ed. Malley, with former State Controller George Cole and B. W. Clapp, former cashier of the Carson Valley Bank, is accused of embezzling $516,000.

The state treasurer, however, contends the huge shortage is in the books of the Carson Valley Bank and not in the state ledgers. By an adroit maneuver, Malley placed the state and the bank on the defensive. He appeared at the bank, presenting cashier's checks totalling well over half a million dollars and demanding payment.

The bank refused to honor payment.

Malley thereby is said to have placed upon the bank the burden of proving the checks fraudulent. Furthermore, it was said, the bank now will be forced to take legal action independent of the state prosecution.

Cedarholm, California Criminal Syndicalism Prisoner Is for I. L. D.

An echo of the big Marine Transport Workers' Strike of 1923 in San Pedro, California, was heard yesterday in the local office of the International Labor Defense. It Cedarholm, Number 58108, graduate of San Quentin, California, hit this big city and got into touch with the International Labor Defense as soon as possible, and told his story.

He was one of the twenty-seven workers arrested for being the leading spirits in the San Pedro strike. The trial started on July 4th, 1923. The charges being "criminal syndicalism" and not being authorized organizers and propagandists, the reaction from the strike had its effect on the judge, and the prisoners were sentenced to from one to fourteen years on each charge, sentences to run concurrently.

Entering the penitentiary on July 12th, the prisonere thought it was a fine building to look at. The guards jested them about their work. "You'll do damned soon find out how good it is; we'll take the wobbly ideas ont of your head."

"Some of us got 17 days and others 42 days of solitary confinement in the dark dungeons as our first prison experience. Bread and water was our only food; we had no bedding, and the ventilation was very bad."

After being reduced to practically physical wrecks, the prisoners were sent to work in the jute mills. The atmosphere was thick with dust. In case however of working there or going back to the damnable solitude of the dungeons. Medical treatment was only given when one was at the last gasp.

The prison atmosphere was maintained by the guards walking on the high walls with loaded rifles. On the mission bullets were indiscriminately fired into the prisoner's ranks wounding three prisoners. Of course the guards must have their enjoyment.

Prison Strikes

Conditions became so bad that the prisoners were compelled to lodge complaints. They were accused of striking and rioting, and punished accordingly. As a consequence, however, conditions improved towards the end of 1925.

Cedarholm was released on November 12th, 1926, the day his time gave him the necessary clothing and $5.00 with which to start the battle of life.

During the latter part of his sentence, he received regularly $5.00 per month from the International Labor Defense. This money was very welcome, enabling him to get tobacco, literature, and many other things not on the meagre prison bill of fare. He desires the following statement to go out to the workers:—

"I appeal to the working men and women of America to rally together as a solid united, mass, and go forward demanding justice and freedom for the militants in prison. It is not the millionaires who send workers to prison; it is those workers who have not yet realized the need for solidarity. I urge all class-conscious workers to support the International Labor Defense in its great work of helping to free political prisoners."

SACCO and VANZETTI SHALL NOT DIE!

Italian Workers at Ad Trades Get Ten Per Cent Wage Cut

ROME, May 13.—The object of the so-called Charter of Labor, laid down by Mussolini several weeks ago, was made clear yesterday when Mussolini announced that a ten per cent slash in the wages of workers in five branches of production would take place within a few days.

The wage slash is not a temporary measure, it was announced yesterday, but will remain in effect for a comparatively long period. Its object is to help Italian manufacturers.

Although Italian factory and agricultural workers have suffered severe wage slashes in the last few months prices have not declined noticeably.

Big Insurance Bosses Cheat Own Agents

from the agents salary as a "lapse charge."

The labor turnover in agencies is abnormally high, the agent in disgust, overworked and is constantly supervised by an army of company spies "assistant managers."

In the home offices of these companies thousands of clerical workers are frightfully underpaid, fifteen dollars a week being the average wage. In addition to the wage the company throws in a free luncheon in which water plays a predominant role.

All efforts on the part of the field or home office employes to organize has been met with ruthless suppression and wholesale dismissal.

Of course there are company organizations such as the company brass band and the company theatrical company at which everybody has a good time and all are hopelessly patronized by the bosses officials who are compelled to attend.

In conclusion I list briefly the case against the "Big Four" weekly payment life insurance companies.

To begin that mortality table on which industrial life insurance premiums are based are more than 40 per cent inaccurate. The table used by these companies is incorporated in the New York State Insurance Law.

The rate of expected interest assumed by those companies in computing premium charges is 3 per cent whereas the actual interest return is nearer 6 per cent. This false interest-earning assumption is also embodied in the law.

While the "Big Four" are supposed to be mutual or co-operative companies the machinery of administration is totally in the hands of a group of Wall Street financiers who not only benefit by the enormous power which they enjoy as directors of these companies, but in addition they are also directors or officials of hundreds of railroads and public utility companies in whose bonds and securities the billions of "mutual" funds are invested. In addition to this we find that most of these companies are vitally interested in the banks and trust companies which handle their deposits and securities.

Due to the enormous overcharging of policy rates and also to the harsh and iniquitous policy conditions the insurance is dropped at the slightest misfortune or period of unemployment. 70 per cent of all weekly premium insurance lapses before it is three years old, and only 1 per cent of all endowments mature for their face value.

The superintendent of insurance in the State of New York is more than lenient with these companies and permits insurance practices which are illegal and dishonest to go by unnoticed. Many past superintendents have been taken care of by the "Big Four" and it is assumed that the present one will take over the operation of these companies this will continue indefinitely.

Assets Mount.

The presence on the board of directors of Frank P. Noyes, president of the Associated Press makes it impossible to get any capitalistic newspaper to expose the fraud practiced by this plunderbund.

As things are constituted at present the assets of these companies will continue to pyramid until, at the existing rate of increase, the assets of the "Big Four" will be over one trillion dollars in 1977.

At the time of writing their assets are greater than the entire currency in circulation in the United States. As these assets are mostly in the form of quick securities they could be liquidated within 48 hours and the country thrown into a most hopeless panic if it so suited their ends.

As the evils in the weekly payment life insurance business are ones which are embedded in the laws of the state nothing short of a legislative investigation will bring about an amelioration of the unfair conditions.

To achieve this end the millions of American workers who are defrauded under this system should see to it that sufficient pressure is brought to bear on "our" legislators which will eventually result in the much to be desired investigation.

The facts contained in this series of articles are only those which are attainable through public documents, what a legislative enquiry will reveal, is an interesting thing to think about. Time alone will tell.

BRICKLAYERS IN SIX DAYS, SCHEME OF LOCAL SCHOOL

Workers Defrauded Is Charge Filed

Fraud on workers is charged against the Union Trade Schools, Inc., of 34 West 32nd St., in complaints filed with city magistrates here.

Upon payment of $35, the worker is given a week's course" in bricklaying, after which he is sent out to a job where he works two weeks without pay.

Thereafter he is to be placed on a job where the wages are not to exceed" $8 a day.

On the face of it the so-called Uglen Trade Schools, Inc., which gives the impression that it is a trade union school, is preparing strike-breakers to destroy the conditions built up over half a century by union bricklayers' union, according to President Joseph T. Gillen, of Bricklayers' Local 1.

But actually the outfit fails to send its "students" out on any sort of job with money in it, declares Gillen, who is handling the complaints of two workers who claim they have been defrauded.

Gillen adds that the Union Trade Schools, Inc., advertises in capitalist papers, including the New York World.

Liberal Delegates Deny Acceptance of Fake Stimson Peace

PANAMA CITY, May 13. — The Liberal Nicaraguan peace delegates returning to Puerta Cabezas thru the Panama Canal have vigorously denied that they have accepted Henry Stimson's "peace terms," which would foist on Nicaragua the presidency of Diaz. "The Diaz regime, a government, says Vaca, declines all responsibility for bloodshed resulting from the determination of President Coolidge to impose upon a people of the Diaz-Chamorro militarist faction because they believed the pledges of neutrality made by the Washington authorities.

Soviet Union Charge Makes Sharp Protest

"All employers of Arcos and the trade delegation, both men and women, were detained and subjected to personal search. Among these were women, possessing diplomatic passports, including Mme. Rosengoltz and the wife of the financial attache. The personal search of women was carried out by male officers."

Rosengoltz delivered a formal note of protest to Sir Austen, charging that the raid on the Arcos building constitute a violation of the obligations assumed by the British government under the trade agreement of 1921.

He also stated he had informed his government of the search, which was still continuing at the time and he awaits further instructions from Moscow.

Employes of Arcos tell of the general brutality of the raid, and the confusion wrought in the offices, even those with diplomatic immunity.

The tables and desks in the rooms were shown deeply with papers which were prowled ever and examined by the policemen. A burly uniformed officer stood guard over the clerks and typists at the back of the rooms and prevented them from returning to their desks.

Untermyer Says He Is For Nickel Fare

Public hearings on the Transit Unification Project will be begun by the Transit Commission at its offices, 270 Madison Avenue Monday, May 22, it was announced yesterday following a conference between members of the commission and Samuel Untermyer.

The decision to air the whole tangle in the open was reached following an announcement by Untermyer, special counsel to the commission, that he had broken off negotiations with the I. R. T. and the B. M. T. officials in his effort to find some solution of the problem.

It is understood the hearings will resolve themselves into a determined effort to "smoke out" the traction company heads and find out just what they are willing to do to effect a unification of the transit lines of the city.

Traction Becomes Mum.

None of the company officials would discuss the Untermyer announcement.

The commission will sit at the hearings with Chairman F. Gilchrist, presiding. Alvin Untermyer and Clarence M. Lewis, regular counsel of the commission, will co-operate with Untermyer in the examination of witnesses at the hearings.

Untermyer indicated that he proposes with the transit representative's because of the refusal to co-operate in a reasonable consolidation plan, Untermyer indicated that he proposes to summon the officials as witnesses and question them at the forthcoming hearings.

Service New Atrocious.

Untermyer reaffirmed his allegiance to the five-cent fare and characterized the present service on subways and elevated lines as "atrocious." He asserted a higher fare would not abate or improve conditions. Vigorously advocating acquisition of Interborough and B.M.T. lines by the city, Untermyer, who will begin his public hearings next Monday, said:

"The efforts to reach an agreement at this juncture by negotiation with the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit and Interborough Companies have now been exhausted and abandoned. At the time did they include the surface roads.

Separate L's and Tubes.

"In view of the substantial and steady increase in losses shown by the Manhattan Elevated Railway, which are a heavy drain on the resources of the Interborough, counsel for the commission is reluctant to recommend the taking over of the Manhattan. That would have been to heavy a burden upon the maintenance of a 5-cent fare.

"The B. M. T. made it a finality that the city would have to take its surface lines if it took the Rapid Transit System, to which we are unwilling to assent. They further insisted that their property, if taken, should be acquired on the basis of yielding them in perpetuity the same net return in the securities of them for the property as was represented by the earnings for the past year.

"This demand was plainly inadmissable."

Hands Off China Mass Meeting in Los Angeles Adopts Hot Resolution

By L. P. RINDAL

(WORKER Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Calif., May 13.—The Anti-imperialist United Front held a big "Hands Off China" protest meeting at Music-Arts Hall.

Franklin Weng, President Sun Yat Sen Society, Sid Bush, Workers (Communist) Party, and Frank Cassidy, of the proletarian party, were scheduled to speak. Joseph Shishkoff, of the Anti-imperialist United Front, was chairman.

Chairman's Speech Pleases

The chairman explained the formation of the new-born foe of capitalism and imperialism, and called upon every workers' organization in the city to join hands in this most important workingclass movement.

Franklin Wong was the first speaker. He went into the history of the imperialists' exploitation of his country and, judging by the applause, the audience of 700 workers was much pleased with his presentation of facts and figures. He ended his interesting speech by saying: "If the aims and objects of the Kuomintang (Nationalist party) are Communistic, I am proud of being a Communist."

Anti-Imperialist Resolution

Sid Bush, the next speaker, outlined the trouble in China "in the language of the workingclass," he said, and the workers present slapped their hands as a sign of understanding.

At the point a strong Hands Off China resolution was introduced, read and adopted—unanimously. It will be sent to the press, the California delegation in congress, President Coolidge and to the left wing of the Revolutionary Party of China.

Bob Cecil, Tory partner in the Locarno mixed faction of the Conservative party, of the British ruling classes, the labor over their position to the workers and must make a show of loyalty to workingdom to-day.

WITH General Feng and the government of Nanking involved in a row, telling the world that they will support the Hankow government; with the almost certain support of the peasant military organization known as the Red Spears, and with the remarkable growth of the trade unions in China, the position of the imperialist powers is less secure than ever, despite the treachery of Chiang Kai-Shek. This is an added reason why Great Britain should wish to crush the Soviet Union, since without the aid of the Soviet government, the imperialist bonzards would be able to gorge themselves on Chinese blood for many years to come.

WHILE the General Motors corporation is handing out dividends to its fortunate stockholders, the Italian workers are getting theirs, from the famous "Charter of Labor" recently bestowed on them by their "savior" Mussolini. This has taken the form of a 10 per cent wage cut. It is consoling to note that the employers have also been requested to make sacrifices. They are willing to cut the cost of production at the expense of a ten per cent cut in the wages of the workers. This is the kind of economy that is NOT practised in the Soviet Union. There, economy is never at the expense of the proletarians. Which indicates the basic difference between Fascism and the proletarian dictatorship.

THE United States government is buying rifles from Nicaraguan liberals at the rate of ten dollars each. The idea is that it is cheaper to buy rifles than to buy reactionaries to take the place of those who might be killed by shots from liberal rifles. Here is a good chance for some enterprising patriot to make a fortune by buying those rifles from the government as junk and selling them at a high price when the United States government engages in another SERIOUS war in behalf of civilization. The Morgan fortune was started in a similiar way and in things financial the Morgans are no mean guides.

RIGHTS BARRING FURRIERS FROM INTERNATIONAL

Fear Workers Influence On Convention

Apparently moved by the fear that the fur workers will regain control of their union if too many of them are permitted to register, the reactionary leaders of the International Fur Workers' Union and the A. F. of L. Reorganization Committee are refusing to issue books of the "scab International" to those workers who have been instructed by the Joint Board to register and return to their shops.

Possibly the right wing officials are afraid these workers may have a voice in choosing delegates for the convention which they have announced for June 13 at Washington, D. C. This is the convention which should have been held early in May.

Whatever the reason, the right wing leaders are deliberately discriminating against the workers from locked-out shops. President William Green of the A. F. of L. said recently that this 'scab' union is the real union, and every fur worker is eligible for membership. Yet workers who have been members of the union since its organization are being refused the books of the International. At first they were given letters instead of books. Now the right wing is afraid to register them at all.

Afraid of Workers.

When the workers who did receive letters present them to an employer, they are refused jobs, or they are offered wages so low that they are certain not to accept. The International has deliberately told the employers not to engage these workers carrying letters. They are apt to create trouble, the right wing declares.

The reactionary officials are faced with a dilemma—more workers than they ever dreamed of registering, yet they fear to enter their names. They feel certain there is something wrong somewhere.

In the meantime "mobilization" work is going forward at Joint Board headquarters and the fur workers are urged to "hold themselves in readiness" to demonstrate their organized power when the hour comes.

Rally To Joint Board.

Four crowded membership meetings of locals affiliated with the New York Joint Board of the Furriers' Union Thursday pledged their energetic co-operation in the work of collecting the $100,000 "Union Defense Fund," and of undertaking larger preparations for a more intensive phase of the fight against the reactionary forces of the International and the A. F. of L.

Ben Gold, manager of the Joint Board, who spoke at all four meeting halls—two in Manhattan Lyceum, Astoria Hall and Webster Hall—told the workers that the Joint Board will very soon make clear why it has instructed certain workers to register in the scab union.

"The Joint Board will soon teach a lesson to those manufacturers who have seen fit to play politics with the lives of the fur workers. They will be made to realize that they are to keep hands off the Furriers' Union. The manufacturers challenged the union, and the Joint Board is prepared to accept the challenge."

Joint Board Books.

In the discussions at their meetings, and in a leaflet distributed in the fur market, every registered fur worker in the association shops is instructed to take out a duplicate union book in the office of the Joint Board.

No one is to register who is working in an independent shop or in a Trimming Association shop. "If these bosses tell you to register in the scab union, you should at once declare a strike and come to the office of the Joint Board."

Oil Magnates Petition For Bigger and Better Trusts; to Boost Prices

WASHINGTON, May 13.—In an effort to boost the price of oil, oil barons, led by Walter C. Teagle, President of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, have appealed to the Federal Oil Conservation Board for permission to restrict the production of petroleum.

The statement issued by the oil barons also suggests "joint operation" of new fields, which virtually is a demand for the legalization of oil trusts.

The move which is backed by magnates like Teagle and Harry F. Sinclair is meeting with the opposition of small oil producers.

Building Workers Discuss Crisis In Plumbers Lockout

Wide interest was manifested by building trades workers in the mass meeting called for 8 P. M. last night at Aco Hall, 182 Claremont Ave., Williamsburg, by the American Association of Plumbers' Helpers.

With the Brooklyn plumbers and helpers on strike since April 1 for the five-day week and wage increases, and the plumbers and helpers in the rest of New York locked out or on strike as a result, the building trades here face crucial tests, he declared.

The helpers are on strike to bring the present $4 scale somewhere near the level for other helpers, ranging from $8 for electricians' helpers to $11 for boilermakers' helpers. The helpers hope to affiliate with the United Association of Plumbers and Gas Fitters.

Progressives Give Analysis.

The Progressive Building Trades Workers of Greater New York are also maintaining a lively interest in the present crisis. With contracts showing a steady decline, they declare that the bosses have picked this year for a general assault on all the building crafts, beginning with the plumbers. The Building Trades Employers' Association's act in taking charge of the lockout from the boss plumbers constitutes a threat of direct war on all the crafts, the progressives say.

The Employers' Association, according to the progressives, comprises 26 associations representing 500 of the larger contractors and building employers. In addition 143 associate members represent the building material dealers, bankers, lawyers, architects and trade publishers.

Against this united force, the building crafts are pitting their individual strength, even the loose alliance of the Building Trades Council being ineffective because not used.

Ask Conference Now.

The progressives have formulated four demands:

1. An immediate conference of all building trade unions to organize the defense against the attack of the employers' association.

2. Organization of plumbers' helpers and other unorganized building trades workers.

3. One Building Trades Council comprising all building trades unions.

4. Uniform agreements for all building trades to expire at the same time.

Denounce Militants At Confab of Right Wingers Held Here

Under the chairmanship of Abraham L. Shipkowitt, who pleaded for a fight "along spiritual and moral lines," the Committee For the Preservation of Trade Unions held their secret confab at Beethoven Hall, East Fifth St., on Wednesday evening.

About 125 people were present, including visitors. The sponsors of the conference refused to allow any of their visitors to leave while the session was going on. When several visitors wanted to leave they were told to keep their seats by some of Beckerman "boys" who paraded up and down the aisles.

Sam de Witt and Morris Feinstone were the clowns of the evening. De Witt generously offered copy of his next book of poems (not yet published) to everyone who subscribed to the New Leader.

Feinstone said that all the delegates should take the New Leader home and give it to children to read.

The conference occasionally got serious. Then the Cloakmakers' Union and the Furriers' Union were denounced. So were the Communists and the Freiheit.

The representative of the International Fur Workers Union was Charles Stetsky, former vice-president who was cast out with the Kaufman regime. Julius Hochman was the spokesman for the International Ladies Garment Workers Union and according to capitalist papers the and Stetsky told the delegates of the measures adopted in their unions to oust the Communists and their sympathizers."

The committee decided to establish a permanent propaganda bureau to supply material for places outside of New York.

LITERARY MEN, PROFESSORS, DOCTORS AND LAWYERS APPEAL FOR SACCO AND VANZETTI

Harry Emerson Fosdick, pastor of Rockefeller's Park Avenue Baptist Church, comes out for Sacco and Vanzetti. Joining with 46 other pastors, professors, playwrights, poets and attorneys, his name is signed to a petition to Governor Fuller, prepared by the American Civil Liberties Union, urging a review of the entire case in the interests of justice.

"There is a widespread belief that the men are entirely innocent of the crime for which they have been sentenced to the death penalty," the petition begins. "The belief is likewise widespread," it continues, "that in the trial of these men there was a confusion of issues, as between their guilt or innocence of the crime charged, on one hand, and their acknowledged radicalism on the other."

The list of signers is here given in full:

Chauncey C. Brewster: Bishop of Connecticut, Protestant Episcopal Church.

John Graham Brooks: Sociologist, Author, Cambridge, Mass.

USE COURTS TO HAMPER PICKETS OF JOINT BOARD

Seek Enforcement of Injunction

An order to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt of court was served yesterday on Louis Hyman, C. S. Zimmerman, Julius Portnoy, Joseph Borschewitz, and 16 business agents and representatives of the Joint Board of Cloak and Dressemakers. A hearing will be held May 17 before Judge Erlanger in Part I of General Sessions.

The order is practically the first effort made for enforcement of the injunction obtained on March 24 by the Association of Dress Manufacturers, Inc., against Joint Board officers and members, and constitutes an "unprecedented case in the history of labor injunctions," according to attorneys for the Joint Board.

In discussing the order, Louis B. Boudin, connsel for the Joint Board, pointed out that the injunction was unique in that it attempted to prohibit certain acts rather than enjoining from acts that are being committed at the time of its issuance. He declared that the Association of Dress Manufacturers "apparently is attempting to punish the entire union, from Louis Hyman to the last member."

Picketing A Crime.

Affidavits accompanying the order declare that the injunction as it prohibits picketing has been violated daily by workers, who picketed the shops of employers who had discharged Joint Board sympathizers, and were declared on strike by the Joint Board.

Magistrates have refused to hold such pickets as were arrested "for violating the injunction," declaring that the workers had a right to picket, and that they had no power to enforce an injunction. This attitude of the magistrates has resulted in the recourse to the higher court, in an attempt to quench the enthusiastic picket lines.

The injunction was sweeping in its nature, restraining workers from picketing, from shouting "scab," from going to the homes of the workers or the shops of the employers and from "including the plaintiff's members and the workers of such members to repudiate the agreement" made by Sigman with the employers, and which flagrantly betrayed the interests of the workers.

SET TRIAL FOR DAILY WORKER EDITORS, MANAGER, FOR MAY 27; TRY TO STOP PAPER

only The DAILY WORKER was indicted by the Lusk law. It took counsel to have been diligent readers of the paper for a year and a half. They proved this with the first "objection" which they had discovered. Since it would be only on this technical charge that they could face the paper, there is no doubt they were watchfully waiting for the advent of just such material.

The "Patriotic Organization" which these two men represent are well-known for their persistent campaigns against all groups which are not 100 percent nationalistic. Not only do they spread propaganda against all communist organizations, but they attack even pacifist liberals and everyone who dares raise his voice in protest against either social or political wrongs.

"Adjutant-General" Captain Darte has charged the National Board of the Y. W. C. A., the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the American Association of University Women with having members of the "radical, pink or intelligentsia group"—which of course is criminal.

Keyman's Record

The Keyman of America whom the witness George Seits represented, are thoroly exposed by Norman Hapgood in his recently published book, "Professional Patriots." The organization was formed from the readers of a section in the New York "Commercial" (which is no longer in existance) which was devoted to "exposing subversive movements." The aim of this group is to supply all patriotic organizations with 'correct information and data upon which they can proceed in their own way through their members."

Hapgood Describes

According to Norman Hapgood, "The organization announces that among other duties its members should be prepared to 'help stop the growth of Communism and socialism', 'work for industrial freedom' (meaning the open shop), 'keep informed through the Information Bureau of all subversive and radical movements', 'keep the Information Bureau posted on local activities of radical movements', and 'assist local newspapers to secure and print information that will aid in this character of work'.

No doubt Seitz, "a research worker" of this organization is one who has been helpfully sping on The DAILY WORKER and is now doing his bit "to stop the growth of Communism".

Hurling defiance at the forces of reaction that are trying to destroy The DAILY WORKER, The DAILY WORKER Builders of New York City have arranged a two-day International Proletarian Carnival for Saturday and Sunday, July 23 and 24, at Pleasant Bay Park.

Part of National Campaign

This is one of the events in the nation-wide "Help Build The DAILY WORKER" campaign. All organizations are requested to refrain from holding affairs on these dates—July 23 and 24—and to give full co-operation in making the carnival a success.

The amusements at the carnival will include political skits on the situation in the needle trades and other industries, athletic events and games, and exhibitions between Workers sports clubs from New York and other cities.

Raymond Prosecution Scores.

LOS ANGELES, May 13.—"Jungle," Paul Kelly's Japanese valet, missing witness in the Ray Raymond murder trial, will be sprung as a prosecution surprise witness when the film player's trial is resumed this afternoon.

The district attorney's investigators announced the servant had been found at a Hollywood motion picture stndio and would be placed on the stand to tell of gin fizzes alleged to have been served in Kelly's apartment to Dorothy Mackaye, while her husband, Raymond, and the screen juvenile engaged in a fatal fist fight in the Raymond home.

Nearly Break Joliet Prison.

JOLIET, Ill., May 13.—Additional guards were ordered placed near the cells of Henry J. "Hilget" Fernecker and other criminals in Joliet penitentiary today following the arrest of William Evans, escaped murderer, believed to have planned a wholesale prison delivery by the employment of mustard gas bombs and enough nitroglycerine to shatter the wings of the institution. Evans was arrested as he sought to drive an automobile within the gates while posing as a missionary priest.

Landslide At Tiffin.

TIFLIS, May 13.—Fourteen bodies today had been recovered from the area which was devastated by a landslide from Davidoff Mountain.

PART B

The Defendant will be called for Pleading-Trial Sentence at the Court of Special Sessions, New York County, on at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of the same day. MAY 1[illegible] 1927

This notice is sent you in order that your undertaking may not be forfeited.

JOSEPH F. MOSS, Jr.,
Clerk of Court.

Now the real fun begins. On Friday, the 13th of May, we were haled to the Court of Special Sessions to plead against the infamous frame-up which is being cooked up against us. We were remanded for trial on May 27th. Needless to say, neither Darte of the Military Order of the World War nor Seitz of the Keymen of America were called upon to plead.

But Darte and Seitz and the capitalist system for which they stand will never be brought to justice in a capitalist court. But the workers can and will try them before a court of proletarian justice, in which thousands of workers throughout the country, will act as the judges.

Every dollar you send for the defense of The DAILY WORKER against the attacks of the reactionaries, is at the same time a proletarian indictment of these enemies of the labor movement. Sacco and Vanzetti Still in Shadow of Electric Chair

Facts in possession of The DAILY WORKER reveal a sneaking, under-handed attempt of those involved in the original frame-up against Sacco and Vanzetti to place before Governor Fuller of Massachusetts a mass of additional manufactured "evidence" against these victims of the vengeance of murderous agents of the United States department of justice and the open shoppers of that state. These culprits are known to be piling perjury upon perjury in order to prevent an investigation that, if conducted properly, would expose their own villainy and place them in the pillory.

While the friends of Sacco and Vanzetti and those liberal elements that protest at what they consider a blemish upon their sacred institutions of democracy, right and justice, are heralding to the world the rabid vindictiveness of Judge Thayer, the story of the perjured testimony and all the details of the frame-up that placed Sacco and Vanzetti in the shadow of the electric chair, the identical scoundrels who aided in the frame-up are steadily concocting new and more loathsome perjury in order to induce Governor Fuller to refuse to sanction an investigation.

It is typical of liberalism to always seek to find in events in which they participate justification for their stupid faith in capitalist institutions. They imagine that Governor Fuller, one of the wealthiest men in the state of Massachusetts, a millionaire director of the great Packard Motor Company, will see eye to eye with them and become as incensed over the astounding revelations regarding the attempt to railroad to the death chair these two Italian workers as they themselves have become. They do not perceive the fact that Fuller is likely to be more susceptible to the poison perjury of those who plotted the murder of Sacco and Vanzetti than to the facts brought forth in defense of the victims of class justice.

The working class and its advanced section that first brought to the light of day the monstrous crime against these two workers and that held back the hand of the assassin for these seven years must not be lulled into a false sense of security because of talk of an investigation. Furthermore, even though an investigation is ordered, we must always remember that powerful murderous influences will be set in motion to thwart a real investigation and endeavor to use a fraudulent investigation to whitewash those who conspired against these men.

Great Sacco and Vanzetti conferences should be arranged thruout the country and preparations made for a national conference that will have as its aim the mobilization of the masses to see that these victims of capitalism are not only saved from the electric chair but that they are returned to their places in the labor movement. Only the workers can adequately defend the members of their class victimized by the capitalist courts.

First Results of the Fascist Labor Bill—a 10% Wage Cut

Class co-operation in Italy works for all practical purposes as it does in the United States; the difference being in its method of application. In the United States the official labor bureaucracy enters into agreements with the employers and bludgeons the workers into accepting wage cuts. In Italy the fascist state enforces wage cuts against the workers through the use of its coercive force: the police, the army and other instruments of the fascist terror.

A ten per cent wage cut enforced upon all workers in Italian industry is the first result of Mussolini's "charter of labor," recently promulgated. The personal organ of the fascist tyrant, the Popolo Di Roma, declares that "representatives of the workers will demonstrate their patriotism by consenting to the request of their employers for a ten per cent wage cut." These "representatives," needless to state, are part of the fascist state apparatus whose job it is to stifle all attempts at class action on the part of the Italian workers and deliver them bound and gagged into the hands of the employers.

The reason for the vicious slash in the already inadequate wages of the Italian workers whose leaders have been hounded, imprisoned, exiled or murdered by Mussolini's armed hooligans is the desire of the Italian industrialists to compete on the world markets with the products of the lowest paid laborers of the world. This motive is admitted by the fascist grand council which announces that "the new wage contracts (?) permit business an ample margin of time to adjust itself to the new financial situation and the difficulties of international competition."

Thus state-imposed class collaboration in Italy works precisely the same as the sort of class collaboration enforced against the workers in the United States by the Greens, Wolls, and other apostles of "mutual aid" between capital and labor. In Italy the leaders of labor had first to be crushed by the state before the fascist regime could be imposed. In the United States our own gallant labor leaders at the head of the official bureaucracy conduct themselves in the manner of fascists, thereby making unnecessary an open fascist government.

The wage cut in Italy is only the beginning of a series, that must inevitably bring about such widespread misery among the workers that they will realize that revolution is the only way out. And just as the workers in Italy must fight fascism as represented by the Mussolini regime there, so in this country the fight against fascism at present must be conducted for the most part within the ranks of the labor movement against the would-be Mussolinis who use terror against the membership to maintain their jobs as agents of the capitalists.

He left, carrying away the secret of the slaughter and, remained watched down the companionway. He remembered the mate, telling me that the telegraphist had three chums, a junior officer, the assistant quartermaster and the petrolmist, whom he also suspected. They did not express themselves politically and were always efficient in the performance of their duty. Suddenly I thought struck me: each of these three had in turn some friends and so on, and this was their organization!

This suspicion was shortly confirmed.

I was in my cabin, composing a code telegram to let the admiral know that all was well with us. It was Friday about seven o'clock in the evening. I had not slept for several nights and my nerves were on edge. Suddenly I heard shots and stamping of feet, then a piercing shriek.

"It's begun!" For some reason I spoke aloud and dashed out of my cabin.

I was immediately surrounded by sailors armed with rifles, who searched me hurriedly and conducted me to the mess-room. I noticed that the rifle stand in the officers' corridor was empty. This meant that the whole crew was armed. Sprawling on the floor with a broken head, directly in our path, was the first officer. Ismailov, a pool of his blood spreading on the linoleum and shining in the electric light. I was obliged to step over the convulsed body of my dying assistant, and as I did so, my heart sank within me as if I were committing a heinous crime.

Spattering shots sounded on the upper deck, each ending a life.

On entering the mess-room I found several officers, two doctors and the priest already assembled there. A watch was set over us.

It was all done with incredible swiftness. New officers, engineers and junior officers were constantly being brought in. Then the machinists began to appear, some of them dragging the chief engineer with them, forgetting his dignity, fell on his knees and begged in a whining tone:

"Comrades, spare me, make me a stoker, I'll stand watch for two."

He tore his chevrons off himself.

The machinists threw him off with laughter and he fell into a corner like a dead weight. Rolling himself on his elbow, he crouched against the wall, moaning piteously.

Men were swarming all over the ship in movements, at first sight, of confusion, but really excellently organized. The number of prisoners increased. Somewhere deep in the hold shots sounded dully and almost at the same time the head electrician, Golovin, wearing a sailor's uniform, dashed into the mess-room. His face was covered with blood and I barely recognized him.

"Save me, sir, save me," he wailed desperately, rushing at me.

I backed away from him and exclaimed sharply,

"Leave me alone!"

Sailors appeared in the doorway. Golovin ran to a leather divan and fell on it with his head jammed into a corner and the lower part of his body raised as if to receive blows. One of the sailors, with a coarse jest, hurled his bayonet under his spine. An animal-like roar shook the splendid walls of the mess-room and ceased abruptly. Slowly Golovin raised his twitching face and tried to look about with eyes straining out of their sockets. A hoarse rattle, like the grunting of a pig, sounded in his chest.

We recoiled in horror and froze in position. The sailors, however, on finishing with the electrician, spoke calmly, as though apologizing for their act.

"Wanted to destroy the dynamo, the bastard."

"He's sly, that one. What could we do in the dark and all the scoundrels scuttling away like rats? Whom could we catch then?"

Both were already wiping perspiration from their faces. They went out, leaving the dead body on the divan, and we all looked at each other in surprise, as though seeing for the first time. The priest moved his lips in soundless prayer, concealing a large and splendid silver cross in the folds of his robe, as if fearing it would attract some misfortune to him. The boatswain, Solovelkin, began to blow his nose violently as if he had suddenly caught a bad cold. I noticed that each tried to place himself behind another, so that we were all crowded at the end of the room.

We had hardly recovered when the corridor of the officers' quarters resounded to shots, curses, shouts and stamping of feet; some struggle must be going on there. An instant later, a groaning sailor was carried in and placed gently on the table. The assistant quartermaster took charge.

"First aid, doctors!"

Both doctors seemed glad, rushed to the wounded man and began to undress him, getting in each other's way. The man was shot through the chest and was dying, even as he tried to steel his glazing eyes.

"Lieutenant Brasov treated him to this; the viper locks himself in his cabin and shoots with a revolver. Shot one man already, right in the head."

Another sailor muttered through his teeth:

"We'll get him anyway, that Brasov. If he hid in hell, We'll get him, by ——!"

Out in the corridor the noise subsided. I decided that all must be over with Lieutenant Brasov. I was puzzled to see the sailors standing by the left door begin a whispered conversation with the machinists, who quickly ran off. Two sailors left the talking group and moved past into the corridor. Each sank down on one knee, holding his rifle in position.

In a short time a dirty stoker rushed into the mess-room and, grasping for breath, called hurriedly to the sailors,

"Everything's ready. Now the play is going to begin."

A large number of sailors had gathered at the left door. Their noise ceased and they crowded their necks, peering into the corridor. I did not know what it meant but there was something in this strained waiting.

Suddenly the silence was shattered by the sound of breaking glass. A second later the corridor resounded with a human scream, mingled with the hissing sound of escaping steam. The sailors stirred, glanced about.

"Brasov's getting it good and hot."

"There's a steam bath for you!"

From further bits of conversation I gathered what was happening. It appeared that it had been impossible to get Lieutenant Brasov out of his cabin. He kept up a continual firing through the door and no member of the crew wished to risk his life further. They led the hose through from the machines, broke the skylight of the cabin and let in the hot steam.

The screams changed into an animal-like roar, so terrible that I felt the hair rising on my scalp. I thought with horror of what was happening in that fatal cabin. The steam was rushing in with great force, scalding the body unbearably. Lieutenant Brasov immediately lost his head with the suddenness of it. Perhaps his eyes had burst. Blind, he was flinging himself from one end of the tiny room to the other, stumbling against obstacles, falling and rising again, beating his head against the walls. Sometimes he was silent for a moment, then again came that inhuman bellowing. And the room was becoming hotter. He was cooking in it as meat boils in a pot. The skin was coming off his face, his hands, and still life throbbed painfully within him.

The prisoners crouched together, pale and helpless.

When the last groan had died, the sailors entered the cabin. Brasov was a boiled corpse. They carried him to the upper deck and threw him overboard.

The ship was now completely in the hands of the revolutionists.

SACCO and VANZETTI SHALL NOT DIE!

The International Labour Office

By O. FALK.

WORKERS, owners and governments have long given up feeling the faintest interest in the International Labor Office of the League of Nations and its meetings. The eight-hour day, which, the optimists said, would make international reformism laid such glowing hopes here proven beyond doubt its essential insignificance. Only the reformist press, the Amsterdam International and its national sections, and the Christian trade unions continues to appeal to it and to consider that anything whatever can be achieved through its agency.

What on earth has the Office been doing for these eight years? It adopted 27 Conventions, the importance of which grew less and less every time. The first International Labor Conference adopted conventions on the eight-hour day, night work for women and children, the minimum age at which children might be employed in industry. The two subsequent ones also passed resolutions not entirely devoid of significance, although considerably less important than the foregoing ones.

The next four conferences failed to produce a single Convention, contenting themselves with mere recommendations involving no obligations whatsoever and trivialities not worth mentioning. Even the first-mentioned resolutions came to a very sad end. That on the eight-hour day, which Albert Thomas, the Director of the Labor Office, called the touchstone of the International Labor Office's work, was ratified only by countries out of the 66 belonging to the International Labor Office, three others ratifying it conditionally, while of those ratifying it, the eight-hour day was as a matter of fact not observed. The same fate attended all the other conventions of the slightest significance.

Colorless and Featureless.

The 35th and last session of the Administrative Council of the International Labor Office was as colorless and featureless as all its foregoing meetings. Its agenda was cluttered up with trivial, insignificant questions. The only one of the slightest importance was the question of the eight-hour day for seamen. The way in which the question was presented was in itself not very promising. The session had to decide whether the question should be placed before a Special Labor Conference in 1928. At the foregoing session this was decided in the affirmative, and this was regarded by the reformist trade unions as a great victory. Final confirmation was, however, to be given at the 35th session. This time the whole show went smash. By the united efforts of employers' and government representatives the conference was postponed till 1929. Special efforts were made in this case by the British government, whose representative is the leader of the most reactionary group at the session.

Had His Own Way.

For the British government and British shipowners the shortening of the seamen's day is particularly disadvantageous. Remarkable to relate he got his own way in spite of the fact that the united front between the employers and the governments was for once broken by the zealous efforts of the French employers' representatives to get the eight-hour day for seamen accepted as soon as possible. This benevolence is to be explained by the fact that the French seamen have managed to retain the eight-hour day; and, unable to abolish it in their own country, the employers are eager that it should at least be adopted in other countries too, in order that they should not suffer too severely from competition. But the proposal ended in a fiasco.

Reproached Employers.

This was the only really important question. Besides this the session considered its own budget which, despite the protest of the reformists present, bitterly reproaching the employers and governments with their stinginess and avarice, was decreased by 140,000 francs.

The other two questions attracting a certain amount of attention were raised by the Italians—representatives of the fascist government. The fascists showed great activity at this session, perhaps because they are just beginning to feel firm ground under their feet—this time there were no longer 2 representatives of Italian labor organizations at the session and the reformists did not deny the powers of the fascist trade unions' representatives. The Italian reformists, as is well known, have dissolved their class conception and entered the service of the fascists. The "united" Italian trade union movement was represented this time by d'Arragon, former chairman of the National Confederation of Labor. The class General Confederation of Labor, revived by the Italian workers, is not recognized by the government, and was therefore not represented at the session.

Organization of Commission.

The fascists put forward the question of the organization of a special commission representing the interests of brain-workers. Altogether they display special anxiety in regard to this category of workers, hoping by this means to get them on their side and isolate them from manual laborers. The session passed a resolution on the setting up of such a commission, which still requires the confirmation of the League of Nation's Council.

Further the fascists tried to arrange through the Labor Office an exchange of films showing conditions of social life in the countries belonging to the International Labor Office. The idea behind this proposal was so obvious that even Oudegest understood it: the fascists wanted to advertise fascism and its leader Mussolini abroad. Oudegest remembered in this connection that this sort of thing had been done by Wilhelm 2nd The fascist project was somehow or other defeated.

Losing Its Only Merit.

The remaining questions were quite devoid of interest. It is extremely characteristic that the report on the coal industry at which the International Labor Office has been working for two years was not ready for this session either; it had not been found possible to collect material in the most important industrial countries. This shows that the International Labor Office is losing its last and only merit—that it is even unable to gather material on the state of industry, which so far it has more or less done.

Thus the session dragged out, colorless and featureless, like all the other meetings. The International Labor Office is gradually succumbing to cobwebs and rust. This can only be welcomed by the revolutionary working class—the less illusions the better.

Fifteen Years of Struggle

(Fifteenth Anniversary of the "Pravda," Central Organ of the C. P. S. U.)

THE history of the "Pravda" is the history of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union. The "Pravda" is a mass Bolshevik paper, which was created with the rise of the mass labor movement in Russia. The year 1912 marked a turning point in the labor movement. The Russian proletariat began to raise its head again after the defeat suffered in the 1905 revolution. This turning point was expressed primarily in the growth of proletarian struggle in the form of strikes. The Lena strike which ended with a bloody massacre of the workers served as a signal for the working masses all over the country. The task of the working class party of that time was to link up the economic struggle of the workers with revolutionary political aims and to rouse the proletariat to a struggle for the overthrow of the monarchy. The "Pravda" played an exceptional role in the solution of this work.

Fought Liquidators.

Under conditions of severe police persecution, the Bolshevik paper had to fight against Menshevik liquidators undermining the working class. It had to carry on a struggle for class education of the working masses, for a revolutionary Marxian party, whose basis at that time could have been only the revolutionary underground organization scoffed at hy the Menshevik liquidators.

The "Pravda" could perform its gigantic revolutionary work only with the support of the working masses. The working masses support their "Pravda" with unflagging devotion.

This is the only possible way to explain the fact that the Tsarist government, although it was incessantly persecuting the paper, could not definitely make up its mind to close it down once and for all. The autocracy was afraid of the growing proletarian movement. Only the imperialist war helped the monarchy to avenge itself. The war, which broke up the labor movement, which was approaching a revolutionary uprising, killed the "Pravda" as well. The party had to go entirely underground. But the revolutionary spirit inculcated by the "Pravda" into the masses of workers, continued to counteract the poison of national defense which the liquidators spread among the workers.

Its Ideas Revealed.

The second year of war marked the embryonic rise of new mass proletarian struggles. Again economic strikes were converted into political, anti-monarchist and anti-militarist strikes. This was due to the work of the Bolsheviks, due to the former work of the "Pravda." The "Pravda" was not there, but the ideas which it advocated prevailed and guided the working class.

The February revolution resurrected the "Pravda." The militant voice calling for a proletarian revolution was again raised among the masses who loved their paper. The period between February and October (beginning with Lenin's return to Russia) was a period of powerful growth of the "Pravda" and its influence among the masses. Lenin took over the leadership in the paper. Never did the "Pravda" arouse the ire of the Bolshevik enemies to the extent that it did in those days of "democratic" liberties.

The Kerensky government, following the example of the autocracy, never closed down the "Pravda,"—Kerensky's Junkers broke up the "Pravda" twice (once the office was broken up after the July events, and a second time the machinery was smashed after the days of the October Revolution). But the dying bourgeoisie and their socialist lackeys could not throttle the proletarian revolution which the "Pravda" was advocating and organizing.

Pravda Triumphant.

With the victory of the October Revolution, the "Pravda" became the organ of the party of the proletarian dictatorship. During the years of civil war, the "Pravda" was the best transmitting belt linking up the masses with the Party. The epoch of socialist construction has arrived and again we see the "Pravda" in the same role of principal link between the Party and the masses.

Throughout the period of struggle, the "Pravda" was a mass paper. It has continued to be so now. The working masses of the U. S. S. R. have grown together with their "Pravda." The "Pravda" is and will remain their organ.

DRAMA

The Tribulations of a Middle Class Family

"Kenny" is back in town after a five years' absence. Played then with Grant Mitchell in the leading role, "Kenny" returns to the Hudson to mark the beginning of a repertory season. A stock company, comprising the original cast five years ago with the exception of William J. Kelley and Myrna Lee in leading roles is presenting the play.

The management launches it's repertory with a campaign for a return to the prices scale of ten years ago with no seats higher than $2.00 and many as low as 50 cents.

"Kenny" is a comedy and a satire on the middle class American family who bids themself into thinking it rich in the hopes of the simple rule-by-law "every man is only a week ahead of the poor house." It portrays the efforts of the middle class to keep up appearances, with the head of the family nearly going mad under the pressure of everlasting bills. The children boast of their father worth $100,000 and the father spends days together in an effort to sell their home to be able to make ends meet.

A father counting coins to the extent of not counting matches or the things that come off packages, a daughter who spends $1,100 on gowns. The comedic salvation of the family depends on this daughter marrying millions. It does happen and they are saved. That's all there is to the play. There is no new tone to the theme of the play but it will draw big houses just as it did in 1862. It is entertaining, it is clever, and it is typical of the economics of the average middle class American.

"Kenny" will be followed with other plays of proven entertainment value and favorite casts, and the management is now negotiating for "The Fortune Hunter," "The Man Who Came Back," "Scandal," "Mamma," "Captain Applejack," "The Rainmaker," "Polly Molly Pop," "Turn to the right," Pop O' My Heart," "Lombard, Ltd.," "Wedding Bells," "The Richest," "Lawful Larceny," "The Wheel Between" and others.—N. W.

Herndon's "Merry-Go-Round" Here May 31

Richard Herndon's newest revue "Merry-Go-Round," will be brought to the Klaw theatre Tuesday May 31. He has taken out of the cast of "Annabelle," Evelyn Bennett, Georgie Ingram, Maryon Dale, Tom Burton, Arthur Lipson, Isabel Mason and Tom Maxwell, and placed them in his new production. Marie Cahill, Phillip Loeb are also included in the cast. The book and lyrics of "Merry-Go-Round" are by Morris Ryskind, and Owen Murphy; the music is by Henry Souvaine, who wrote the "Annabelle" melodies, and Jay Gorney; Allan Dinehart is staging the new production.

The revue will be played in Atlantic City the week of May 23rd, preliminary to its New York opening. Walt Kuhn is designing the costumes and scenery and staging the ballets. Leonard Sillman, the young dancer, who danced upstairs and down in the fantastic new Playwrights' Theatre production of "Loudspeaker" will also be included in the company.

The New Plays

THURSDAY

"GRAND STREET FOLLIES," the fifth edition of the series, will open next Thursday night at the Neighborhood Playhouse.

FRIDAY

"RUNNIONDOLE," by Gilbert and Sullivan, will be revived by Lawrence J. Schick at the Cosmopolitan Theatre next Friday night. The cast is headed by Cecil Campbell, William Danforth, Herbert Waterous, Sarah Edwards and Alexander Clark.

DOROTHY SANDS

In the new "Grand Street Follies," opening next Thursday night at the Neighborhood Playhouse.

Broadway Briefs

Edgar Selwyn who has just returned from Paris announces that he will produce Paul Geraldy's play "Son Mari," which is a current hit in Paris. Geraldy's work has been represented here by "The Nest," produced by William A. Brady, and "To Love" and "She Had to Know," produced by Grace George.

Sierra's Spanish Art Theatre will close with a final performance this Sunday night. Other closings of the week taking place to-night are: "La Maire's Affairs," The House of Shadows," "Yours Truly," "Cherry Blossoms," "The Devil in the Cheese," and "What Anne Brought Home."

When Gilbert and Sullivan operetta "Patience" is presented, it will be in the original style of the London production of 1881, according to Peter Hasnberg who is the producer. The cast will include James Watts, Vivian Mars, William Lanyon, Dudley Marwick, Beatrice Keane, Eleanor Edson and Bernice Marshon.

The Murder of a Revolutionist

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

It is now eleven years since James Connolly, military leader of the Easter Week rebellion of 1916 was taken out on a stretcher from a prison hospital, propped up against a wall and pumped full of lead from the guns of a British firing squad.

James Connolly, commander of the Irish Citizen Army, the military arm of the Dublin trade union movement, was the dynamic force behind the revolt that shook the mighty empire to her base at a time when her mercenaries were scurrying in retreat before the gray hosts of the Kaiser in Belgium and Flanders.

James Connolly could see no distinction between the two brands of democracy purveyed by the British and German governments and when the militarists sounded the war bugles in 1914, instead of burying his principles and deserting his socialist program as was done by the renegades in England and on the continent, he called on the workers to fight neither for British king nor German Kaiser but to fight—if they must fight—to save their own firesides from their historical enemy, to keep the food they produced for the use of their own people and to prevent the flower of their manhood from being turned into dust on the battlefields of Europe, so that a putrid empire, bloated with the blood of millions of subject peoples might survive the gruelling strain of war.

James Connolly, the son of a proletarian father, was born in the County Monaghan, Ireland. He was obliged to work at such an early age that he had to lie his way past the authorities charged with the enforcement of a child labor law. He was a rebel by inheritance and by nature. From the time he was old enough to make a public speech he was an active rebel and took an active part in the class struggle in Scotland, England, Wales and in the United States. But his heart was always drawn towards Ireland, the land of his birth and to the people whose moods he best understood. During the years of his exile in the United States he never lost touch with the revolutionary Nationalist and labor movements in Ireland. Always a practical revolutionist in the truest sense of the term he did not permit his knowledge of Marxist economics to excuse him from participating in the Nationalist struggle against the British Empire, as was done by others, who looked on the great rebel founder of modern socialism as a dried-up research worker interested only in facts, figures and theories and not the untiring warrior who never let slip an opportunity to put in a blow for the workers or to find some way of rousing them to struggle against the capitalist enemy.

Connolly labored effectively in the socialist movement in the United States. He was in at the founding of the I. W. W. and served that organization in the capacity of organizer. A tireless propagandist, he was constantly on the platform. His pen was always at the service of the cause. The extreme poverty in which his family lived did not swerve him from the only purpose in life that he considered worth a wrinkle of his brow.

Connolly was invited to return to Ireland by some of his old comrades shortly after the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union was organized under the leadership of Jim Larkin. When Larkin left for his speaking tour in the United States, which was prolonged beyond his expectations—he was eight and a half years here, part of the time as a guest of Governor Alfred E. Smith in the Sing Sing penitentiary for his association with the Communist movement—Connolly took active charge of the affairs of the Transport Union and from then on the headquarters of that organization became also the headquarters of the revolutionary preparations against British rule in Ireland.

In 1916 the Nationalist movement, split by the traitor John Redmond, who played the same role in Ireland that Chiang Kai Shek is now playing in China, was deplorably weak for the task that confronted it. Outside of Connolly and his associates in the Irish Republican Brotherhood, the petty bourgeois Nationalist leaders who spouted about Home Rule in the British House of Commons never had any intention of resorting to physical force. The arming and drilling that went on from the time Sir Edward Carson and the present Lord Birkenhead imported arms from Germany to equip their cohorts to fight Home Rule, was to those playboys a chance to show off their excessive patriotism to the voters but when the time for action arrived they withdrew into the caverns of constitutionalism.

This is a good place to draw attention to the monumental hypocrisy of the British government of the day—a liberal government under the premiership of that arch-fraud Asquith. The Irish Home Rule bill was on the statute book and signed by the king. But the Ulster reactionaries backed by the Tory party in England bluntly told the British government to go to hell and with arms imported from Germany proceeded to make good their threat. And the British government which is so mightily exorcised over the revolts of its subject peoples in India, Egypt and Africa permitted Carson and Birkenhead to go their rebellious ways flouting the government.

CAPITALIST JUSTICE

When human life is placed in the capitalist scale of justice on the opposite side of profits it is human life that takes the upward flight.

HEADS HIGH

Stone, steel, and dungeon,
Thus the workers paid.
You who build for the ages
Face them unafraid.

Cross, rope, and fagot,
Water, rack, and wheel,
Well the heroes faced them—
Let your nerves be steel.

Now the day is nearing,
The workers' kingdom nigh,
Who strikes a blow for freedom?
Who lives tho he may die?

The rebels from the circus,
The prophets old and grey,
Arena victims bleeding
Are tramping on today.

Look, Socrates is marching
The hemlock in his hand,
And Spartacus beside him
With all his doughty band.

Now the day is nearing,
The workers' kingdom nigh,
Who stand with them for freedom?
Who lives with them that die?

Hate, death, and prison,
These the rebels knew.
You the heirs of rebels
Must be rebels too.

—H. G. WEISS.

For raising the banner of revolt against British imperialism two years later James Connolly, Padraic Pearse and many other Nationalist leaders were brutally murdered by the same government that honored Carson and Birkenhead with positions among the highest in the land.

When the shipload of arms sent by the German government to Ireland was seized off the coast of Kerry by a British cruiser, as a result of information supplied to the British government by the United States secret service, several of the leaders of the Irish revolutionary organization planning the revolt were in favor of calling off the rising. Connolly was determined that a blow would be struck; that, even tho the attempt was doomed to temporary failure the time was ripe and the consequences of the event would have repercussions on an international scale. Connolly's determination carried the day and the forces of the Irish Republican Brotherhood and the Irish Citizen Army, a mere handful, hoisted the flag of rebellion on Easter Sunday and challenged the power of the mightiest empire that the history of the human was able to record until then. One thousand volunteer soldiers against millions!

The battle was short and swift. British gunboats shelled Liberty Hall, the headquarters of the revolutionists, British troops were brought from concentration camps, the city was bombarded and partially destroyed and after a heroic struggle that lasted seven days the survivors of the revolutionary army made terms with the perfidious enemy who violated his word as soon as the rebels laid down their arms.

Connolly was the last of the seven signers of the proclamation of the Irish Republic to be executed. And the Irish workers will not forget that an Irish capitalist newspaper, The Irish Independent, a "supporter" of the nationalist cause, reminded the British government two days before the execution that Connolly and Seam MacDermot were still living. Neither will they forget that Arthur Henderson, secretary of the British Labor Party, then a member of the Asquith coalition government, never protested against the reign of terror that was let loose by his government in Ireland and particularly against the execution of James Connolly, who, with Henderson, was a member of the Second International, that putrid fraud which today as in 1914 is busily engaged betraying the workers and stiffening the backbone of world imperialism.

The Irish labor movement for which Connolly shed his heart's blood has not followed the path he mapped out for it. It is caught in the net of reformism like the labor movements of the rest of the world. Men who fought with Connolly in the early days of the socialist movement in Ireland have grown old and weary and are content to leave the political leadership of the official labor movement in the hands of men who would feel more at home in the company of the British MacDonalds, Thomases and Snowdens than in the company of the Connollys, Lenins, Liebknechts and Luxembergs.

A virile and militant minority movement such as has been thrown up in England due to the rapid decline of British imperialism and to the guidance and encouragement of the Communist Party, has not yet made its appearance in Ireland. Only a few scattered and disunited groups swear allegiance to the Communist cause. The defeat of the nationalist movement thru the treachery of those who accepted a fake Free State in lieu of a republic and because of the overwhelming power of Great Britain spread demoralization in the ranks of the labor movement. But there are signs of an awakening. And on the eleventh anniversary of the execution of Ireland's greatest proletarian son, James Connolly, we permit ourselves the luxury of predicting that before the next anniversary comes around that the radical wing of Irish labor will get together under the leadership of the Communist International and in conjunction with the progressive elements in the republican Nationalist movement, organize for the final overthrow of British imperialism in Ireland and the abolition of Irish capitalism as well.

By error the splendid drawing titled "Strike!" in the last issue of the magazine was credited to Maurice Becker. This fine job was the work of Hugo Gellert—more of whose unusual work you will see in future issues.

Debunking the News

By T. J. O. F.

We are informed by Richard V. Oulahan of the New York Times in a Washington dispatch dated May 7 that "there appears to be no doubt from information obtained upon inquiry today that the United States government has intervened in Nicaragua."

Here are a few other items that Mr. Oulahan might vouch for their authenticity without laying himself open to the charge of handling important information carelessly:

Item No. 1.—The waters of the Mississippi have overflowed the banks of the "Mother of Rivers."

Item No. 2.—Henry Judd Gray the "little corset salesman" and Mrs. Snyder have confessed to the murder of Mr. Snyder, the art editor.

Item No. 3.—Calvin Coolidge and the "president's spokesman" are synonymous persons.

Item No. 4.—Frank Kellogg is secretary of the department of state.

Radio Karaguez by real estate salesmen, Gilda Gray's gyrations transmuted into jazz or the Heckscher Mansion, big dough and opera scandal may have caused the Mississippi flood according to a letter received by the Federal Trade Commission from a man in Hurricane, W. Va. The ethereal rebuttal, according to the Hurricane correspondent "is sometimes the other" that it "produces magnetic disturbances and ruin."

Why not turn our radio salesmen loose on the Soviet Union? It might prevent a world war in the near future by giving Mussolini some elbow room for a place in the sun.

An anti-climax: I suggest that the device be installed into visiting the desert to have his pictures taken in the act of commanding the clouds to shed tears, then before he had a chance of receiving even our real estate man, evangelist, colored "mammy" or Bess Whitemarsh's pass hand loose on the middle part of the Dark Continent. Mussolini would have earned a reputation for being the greatest "cut" in history and Italy would be thankful to the Sheik for having dried up her most inveterate spouter.

The other day came when a septuagenarian Brooklynite who pays to keep an opera singer off the air now achieves fame for abating one of the most notorious public nuisances.

Kitty Boy was what you would call a Krazy Kat.' Kitty Boy was beneficiary under the will of his late relations and was having a good time spending the unearned increment when he began to feel the pangs of conscience at the ceaseless prayers sent up to heaven by the residents of the fleatrend who could not inherit the property as long as Kitty Boy lived. Kitty Boy went and turned on the gas. So say the relatives who admit he was the greatest of cats. But we think he was nutty. Or perhaps he was insane and married. And the headline writer who captioned the story: "Rich Cat's Death Laid To Prayers" knew his species. Which proves there is still another way of killing a kitten.

Will Durant's suggestion that Henry Judd Gray and Mrs. Snyder be enclosed inside high walls for the rest of their lives received a mixed reception. Coming from the man who put the "sor" in Socrates it is rather deficient in originality. Why not a hundred Mahlers, Mr. Durant? This solution we may submit certain would be as satisfactory to the very persons most deeply concerned as it would be indigestible to the 147,000 purchasers of the "Outline of Philosophy," as any patron of a modern speakeasy will admit.

Socrates went out like a lamb, arguing sensibly to the end after his chat at lunch. Instead of wishing the fish market to hell, Socrates would have "do his by" remarking: But then, those who have read Mrs. Socrates' way find the explanation.

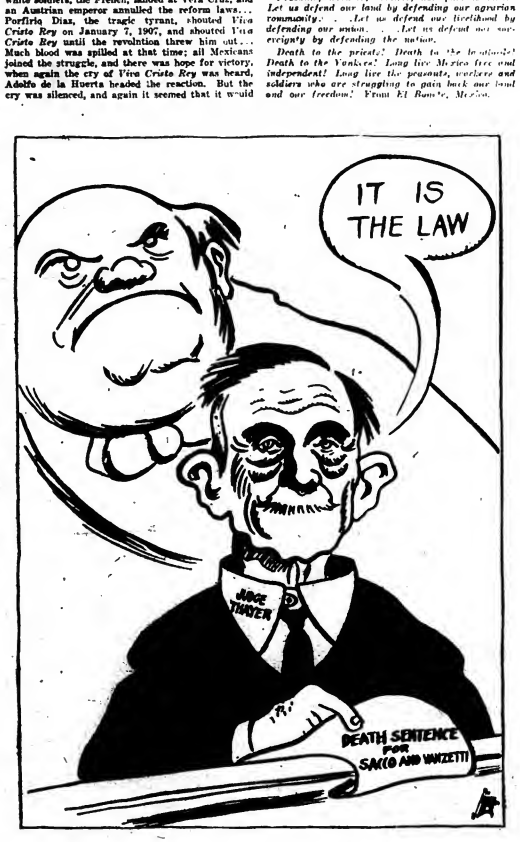
Long Live Christ the King

AND one day the happiness of the Indian was interrupted. At the shores of Mexico arrived a group of white men, armed with swords, guns—and a cross. The Indians hastened to defend themselves, and for the first time they heard a war-cry that they never forgot: Viva Cristo Rey (Long live Christ the King.). The white men were advancing; their pathway was strewn with the corpses of Indians. Viva Cristo Rey and the arcabuzes decimated the ranks of the Indians; Viva Cristo Rey and the villages of the Indians were burned; Viva Cristo Rey and the Indian virgins were violated in the presence of their fathers and brothers; Viva Cristo Rey and the sacred temples of the Indians were destroyed; Viva Cristo Rey and the independence of the Indian ceased to exist; in its place was the harshest slavery. And the Indians no longer had the land; the Spanish gentlemen had it.



The lash fell on their shoulders, and throughout Mexico just one cry was heard: Viva Cristo Rey! The years passed, many years full of sorrow and humiliation until at last the Indian resolved to free himself by fighting, and then at the cry of Viva Cristo Rey, Hidalgo and Morelos were shot, and at the cry of Viva Cristo Rey the aspirations of the Indians were silenced by an aristocracy which came into power. The years passed, and an Indian, Benito Juarez, unfurled the banner of the Indian, and the cry of Viva Cristo Rey was heard again from the mouths of those who opposed the conquests of the Indian, and at the cry of Viva Cristo Rey more white soldiers, the French, landed at Vera Cruz, and an Austrian emperor annulled the reform laws... Porfirio Diaz, the tragic tyrant, shouted Viva Cristo Rey on January 7, 1907, and shouted Viva Cristo Rey until the revolution threw him out... Much blood was spilled at that time; all Mexicans joined the struggle, and there was hope for victory; when again the cry of Viva Cristo Rey was heard, Adolfo de la Huerta headed the reaction. But the cry was silenced, and again it seemed that it would be heard no more, when the eternal cheaters and robbers of the Indian, paid by the Yankees and the Landlords, shouted it again, and along the roads there began to appear small groups who shouted in submissive voices: Viva Cristo Rey.

Against whom was this war-cry uttered? Against President Calles? Against the government? No. Today, as in 1512, the cry of Viva Cristo Rey means the very same thing: Seize the Indian's land. Deprive him of his freedom. Destroy his independence. Plunge him again into misery. Violate his wife. Tear down his temple; the union; the agrarian community. Burn his villages. Enslave him. The priest and the landlord, paid by the Yankee, carry in their hands the same arms as the first conquerors. Four hundred years of slavery is enough, and the bonfires must burn the representatives of those who burned our ancestors. The temples of these assassins must be torn down; their wives violated; their lands distributed; their bodies devoured by the vultures, and over the ruins, over their corpses, a new man, a new body and soul, pure as the first Indians, must with his own life give birth to the society of tomorrow.

Mexicans: It is a time of danger. Our brothers, still blinded by the smoke of religion and promises of heaven and threats of hell, have been led on by the priests to take up arms. They are our brothers, but it does not matter. Let us destroy with one sweep the germ of our misfortunes, and let us defend unto death the conquests we have made.

Peasants, workers, soldiers, our part is clear: Let us defend our land by defending our agrarian community. . . . Let us defend our livelihood by defending our union. . . . Let us defend our sovereignty by defending the nation.

Death to the priest! Death to the bourgeoisie! Death to the Yankees! Long live Mexico free and independent! Long live the peasants, workers and soldiers who are struggling to gain back our land and our freedom! From El Barrio, Mexico.

On the Screen

CHANG

Life in Jungles

Here is a picture of the primitive struggle for existence in Northern Siam, more thrilling than any picture of adventure. Not as fine a work as "Grass," it is intensely dramatic and surely worth seeing.

No trained actors take part in it. The story is a birds-eye view of the struggle of a Siamese family to maintain existence in the jungle. The struggle for food, the dangers of wild animals, their superstitions and the intimate family life are beautifully, vividly portrayed and worth tha ten best books ever written on the subject.

Merian Cooper and Ernest Schoedsack, the same men who produced "Grass," are responsible for this film. The work is the result of nearly two years of life with the natives, a study of their means of livelihood and its dramatic presentation. It was a courageous, dangerous task no doubt. A scene of a tiger hunt at which a native in escaping falls before an attacking tiger is breath-taking. Freed, the native, faces a tiger who succeeds in climbing within reach. The camera records this so closely that the head of the tiger rushes full into the screen in all its beautiful viciousness.

There is a splendidly portrayed attack of an elephant herd on a village which it demolishes into shreds. The daring photographers have not only succeeded in picturing this from many angles but have actually brought the colossal immensity of these tons of moving beasts to our vision in unusual photographs taken from a pit over which the elephant stampede moved. You see the fast moving mammoths rushing overhead and seemingly thru the screen into the audience. Unusually realistic action is achieved by the projection of these scenes in double the usual size of the balance of the picture. It is surely as dramatic a thing as has ever been presented in motion pictures.

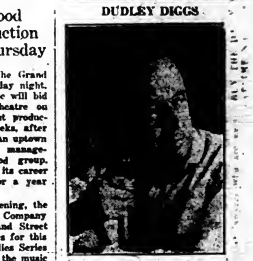
The film has more than dramatic interest. There is also a generous share of comedy contributed by a natural born comedian—a white monkey. Pet of the family, this ancestor of ours goes thru all the trials of the native family, sharing their dangers and comforts. When the home is demolished by an elephant and the family escapes into the jungle to face the dangers of wild animals, the monkey pursued by a leopard and assisted by the clever sub-titles of Achmed Abdullah, the novelist) is as good a bit of nervous comedy as you have ever worriedly laughed over. After seeing the picture I'm sure some enterprising comedy producer will go clear to Siam to sign the monk.

There is comedy and drama to the picture. So much so that both overshadow and overcolor the interesting facts of the struggle for existence. Since "Grass," splendid tho it was, did not prove a paying proposition with a tabloid-reading, jaded, thrill-seeking public, the producers of the picture were forced in a measure to play up the dramatic end to "give the public what it wants"—and the profits the producer insists on. The enthusiastic, crowded theatre was proof conclusive that this surely is a good box-office bet. Whatever fanits "Chang" may have, it is truly splendid entertainment.

The producers request the patrons not to divulge the meaning of the word "Chang." This title is derived from a character and incident in the picture. Inasmuch as the producers went to a great deal of effort to build up this sequence as a dramatic surprise, and in justice to them and to all those who come to see the picture" —we are letting the producers get away with it, for we feel it is worth paying six-bits (on week days) to find the answer at the Rivoli Theatre in New York—and wherever else it may be showing.—W. C.

DRAMA

Final Neighborhood Playhouse Production Opens Thursday



With the opening of "The Grand Street Follies" next Thursday night, the Neighborhood Playhouse will bid farewell to their little theatre on Grand Street. The present production may play but two weeks, after which it may be moved to an uptown house, but not under the management of the Neighborhood group. That organization will end its career for the present—maybe for a year or two.

And so on Thursday evening, the Neighborhood Playhouse Company will be seen in "The Grand Street Follies of 1927." The lyrics for this fifth production of the Follies Series are by Agnes Morgan, and the music by Max Ewing. In the cast are: Albert Carroll, Dorothy Sands, Paula Trueman, Lily Lubell, Blanche Talmud, Marc Loebell, Otto Hulicius, Geofge Heller, Sadié Sussman, George Bratt, May Noble and John F. Roche. The setting and costumes are by Alvine Bernstein.

Movies an Organic Part Of the Russian People

The Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is very active in the development of its film industry, and striving hard to bring the production to the highest point according to advice reaching the official channels in Washington. Special articles are appearing in the magazines of the various countries of Europe, praising the rapid strides made in the Soviet Union in the development of film making.

According to the news gathered from abroad, very few films are being imported. And the Soviet film makers are concentrating on building their own mechanical apparatus for taking and projecting the pictures. This has been brought about by the Soviet Regime because of its conception of the Cinema "as an organic part of the life of the people, instead of being as in Western Europe and America merely an amusement program. Moving pictures are a necessity and not a luxury." Every hamlet in the vast territory of the country now goes to see pictures made in U.S.S.R. Not only in the large centres like Moscow and Leningrad, but in the smaller cities, numerous theatres are in operation. Where no theaters exist the films are shown in tents or in the open.

Screen Notes

The Western premiere of Cecil B. De Mille's, "The King of Kings" will take place May 18th at Grauman's new Chinese Theatre in Hollywood.

Special benefit performances for the relief of the Mississippi River flood sufferers will be given tonight at the Warner and Colony Theatres. John Barrymore in "When A Man Loves," with Dolores Costello is at the former and Syd Chaplin in "The Missing Link," at the latter house. The special showings begin at midnight.

A first showing of the new film "Irish Hearts," featuring May McAvoy will take place at the Mast Broadway theatre beginning Monday. Melville Crossmar is the author.

Beginning today the Cameo theatre will revive "The Dark Angel." Vilma Banky and Ronald Colman play the principal roles.

Another Russian picture "The Legend of the Bear's Wedding," the story of a nobleman afflicted with bearpholia, due to prenatural causes, is due here at the end of this month. The film adaptation of this legend, made by Amkino, the producers of "Potemkin," will have its American premiere at the opening of the Fifty-fifth Street Cinema, a new little playhouse.

THE NEW OPEN SHOP DRIVE

up their complaints, group insurance and sick benefit schemes, bonus and profit-sharing schemes and many other forms of subtle bribery to divert them from real unionism. The workers for lack of anything better, and in face of the inactivity of the A. F. of L., took what they could get. Thus, instead of the growth of unionism during this prosperity period, the bosses gave the workers company unions, while Woll & Company were busy in banking, insurance and fighting the reds.

Is it not a tragedy to have a labor movement of three million living thru a prosperity period and the only notable effort of organizing the unorganized was Passaic, and that was started in spite of the A. F. of L. bureaucracy and was fought by them in true strike-breaking style. To organize the unorganized at this time would however more than ever jeopardize most seriously the imperialistic program to which the A. F. of L. leadership is committed. The orientation of the A. F. of L. leadership is not on the basis of the great masses of workers skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled, working in industries unfavorably situated, affected by imperialist prosperity, but on the basis of those favorably affected. The prosperity of the building and printing trades was due to the enormous enrplus the bosses had which they preferred to hand out to the workers instead of risking the struggle. In these trades class-collaboration can be made to look like a success to politically backward workers. It is quite some time since the A. F. of L. orientation has moved from the miners' union, its original base, to the building trades. The unions unfavorably affected by the imperialistic drive against organized labor are thus allowed to dwindle into mere shadows.

It is not to be expected, however, that strongly organized building trades employers will not take due advantage of the next chance they will get in the oncoming open shop drive. There is too much potential radicalism for them even amongst the masses in the building industry. How much of the A. F. of L. will be left after the onslaught is hard to calculate. The A. F. of L. bureaucracy by its past indications continues to move to the right and will seek to protect its own interests and investments despelling the union treasurie. How to save as much as possible from the present labor and gradually reconstitute it on a basis that follows the evolution of capitalism, this is the problem.

There is a great future of progress and mass influence in the offing. For our party the basis of which lies in the main in the masses of unorganized workers and the proper utilization of all our influence inside the existing labor organizations and the investment of all our strength for that purpose.

How to do it is the problem!

STUDY IN REVENGE

Do a Chink an injury and he'll kill himself at your door when the sun sets. . . .

Harm an Indian and he'll camp on your trail and poison the springs you drink from (Or tomahawk you two hours before sunrise!)

But make an enemy of a Capitalist, and he'll ruin your credit at the bank
Blacklist you,
fire you,
Or make you join
the "Company Union!"

INT'L. CHILDREN'S WEEK!

The week of May 16 to May 22 is celebrated all over the world as International Children's Week. During this week the workers' and poor farmers' children get together in big meetings to show the world how and the why boss farmers that the children are a part of the working class and stand "Always Ready" to fight for the working class and for their own demands.

The Young Pioneers of America is the only real, working workers' children's organization in America. They are going to take a very active part during this week. You must help them by coming to their meetings.

Below are some of the things that the Pioneers are fight for. If you are a worker's child, you also should fight for these demands. And the best way to fight is not alone, but as a part of an organization that has many members. Therefore YOU SHOULD JOIN THE YOUNG PIONEERS OF AMERICA. Anyway, read these demands carefully and write to us what you think about them.

1.—AGAINST child labor and child misery.
2.—AGAINST the teachings of religion and war.
3.—AGAINST the false teachings about labor and strikes.
4.—AGAINST the rotten school conditions.
5.—AGAINST the Boy Scouts, which trains workers' children to be soldiers and fight against their own class as in China, etc.
6.—FOR free lunches in schools, free school supplies. Free lunches and clothing for children of unemployed and unorganized workers.
7.—FOR friendship of China and Soviet Russia.
8.—FOR the Young Comrade, the only workers' children's newspaper that talks the truth about the workers and children and also fights for them.

Catholic Schools are Not So Good

By STEVE MARCHALL.

Dear Comrades: I have a boy friend who has four sisters and one brother. He cannot talk or hear very good. He talks like a small child. When he was small the children they laugh at him. We was the best of friends. He is seventeen years old. He went to go to the Catholic School with his brother and sisters. When he couldn't understand he couldn't get a holiday.

So when he wanted to quit going to school because he got many lickings. But his parents said no. He kept his promise to let him quit school. Then he told his parents said that he should go to the public school. Now he goes to the public school where I go and he is nearly the best one in the class. He can talk much better since he goes with us. But his brother and sisters go to the Catholic school.

EUROPE LIKE HERE

By STANLEY DANYLUK.

Dear Comrades: I read the weekly paper, Young Comrade Corner, and I like it very much. It is not very long since I came from Europe. It was in the year 1923 when I came from there. I worked and went to school to eat. But they had to fight for the right to work and the rich chased us from there. I went to Canada and I thought it was better here, but we found it is pretty bad here, too. My father is treated at work. The boss gets paid for to see the course of the workers. The pay is very much low, but do not get enough to buy their food. In Europe its hard to get bread, but the same is here.

OUR LEADER

By ANNA SENKUS.

In our world we have a Henry Ford,
Who has millions many,
Would he help a poor worker
By giving a red penny?

We also have a John D. Rockefeller.
With numerous bags of gold,
I wish he'd set once an Santa Claus
Before he gets too old.

But the worthiest man to workers all
Is Comrade Ruthenberg, sincere,
Who knew what he was working for,
And fought without any fear.

Comrade Ruthenberg has passed away.
We sure do miss him.
And has bade us carry on our work.
For years until we win.

YOUNG PIONEERS

By HENRY SAMPOLINSKY.

Come on Comrades!
Let's give some cheers,
Some cheers for whom?
The Pioneers.
Yeah Pioneers! the cheer rings out once more;
In the streets and halls,
The comrades know no fear,
The boys and girls, will never fear,
We'll fight until the last,
And never fear defeat,
For we know each is trying his best
Then we shall victory greet!

OUR SCRANTON REPORTER

HOPES THEY WIN THE STRIKE.

Dear Comrades: On February 12, 1927 the moving picture, "The Passaic Strike," was shown here in Scranton. It was very sad to see the struggles of the strikers. I learned many things from this show. The auditorium where the pictures were shown was crowded. That shows that the strikers have a great deal of sympathizers here in Scranton. We hope they win the strike.—MILDRED MEDELIS.

THE LITTLE GREY DOG

(From Fairy Tales for Workers' Children).

The alligator shook his pointed head thoughtfully and said: "People are peculiar creatures. No alligator would torment a little alligator, neither do we know the difference between rich and poor, and still it is said that we are evil animals. It is true that I would like to eat your little friend for breakfast, yet I will be merciful to him. I will also show you a safe hiding place. Do you see that little island." The servants of the rich man will not find you there."

"We thank you, mighty animal; but how can we reach the island? The water is rough and deep, and my little friend can't swim."

"I will carry you over on my back," answered the alligator.

Benjamin and the dog seated themselves on the scaly back of the animal, and it began to swim. What a strange journey that was! The waves played over the back of the alligator and the dog was afraid that the alligator might change his mind and eat both of them for breakfast. For that reason he spoke continuously to the alligator, flattered him, praised his goodness and declared solemnly that the alligators are the best noble animals in the world.

The trick did not fail in its purpose. When they landed on the island, the alligator called twelve of the strongest alligators to him, instructing them that they must not harm a hair on the boy or the dog, that they were his guests. He also commanded them to swim along the bank of the river and stand guard, keeping the people from coming to the island. This was well done, for when the sun was high in the heavens, five men appeared, sent by the rich man to look for Benjamin. One pointed to the island, started to go into the water, when an immense alligator pushed his head out of the water and the man crept back. "He can't be here," said the man to his companions. "The alligators here must have eaten him."

Benjamin and the dog rested all day on the island. The little boy ate the sweet berries that grew there, drank from a well, and at evening the alligator carried them back again to the bank and bade them a friendly farewell.

A Sermon by William Gropper

The New Open Shop Drive

By JOSEPH ZACK

150,000 miners are out on strike against wage reductions. The avowed view of the interests in control of that industry is to smash the Miners' Union.

In the needle trades in New York, open shop conditions are being established by the employers with the cooperation of the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. led by the president of the Civic Federation, Matthew Woll. The Master Plumbers' Association of New York under the direction of the organized building trades bosses, break their agreement with the Plumbers' Union and make a lock-out of 10,000 men in order to stop any new upward wage movements in this industry. In New England the textile industry for the last six months has seen an intensive drive to establish the 54-hour week in which McMahon, president of the U. T. W. A., A. F. of L. textile union cooperated.

The production record in a number of important industries shows a definite downward trend. These are a few of the weather signs indicating what is to come. Are we in for a period of industrial depression beginning right after the 1928 presidential elections? What is behind the present attack against labor? What is the most likely action of the A. F. of L. leadership? What can the left wing do in such a situation? These are a few of the questions our movement must have an answer for before long. We can already quite clearly perceive a few outstanding facts in this situation.

In the open shop drive of 1919-22 the capitalists took advantage of the depression in industry, consequent to post-war stabilization on a peace basis, to rob the workers of whatever advantages they gained during the war and to drive the workers' standards in several important industries even below the pre-war level. The A. F. of L. lost all its war gains, that is, over a million members in this drive. American capital succeeded in reducing standards sufficiently to be able to get ahead of the other imperialist powers who weakened as a result of the world war and captured many of their markets.

These were the days of the great organization movement, Labor Party, LaFollette 3rd Party movement, etc. These were also days when the A. F. of L. leadership instead of heading this tremendous forward movement on the political and industrial fields, surrendered to the trusts and financial combines, who were tremendously strengthened during the war, and with the coming in of imperialist prosperity, the A. F. of L. bureaucracy having executed its first great post-war swing to the right, took the offensive against the militants by outlawing the leaders of these forward movements that dared to continue in their progressive activities.

It was not sufficient however for American capital to drive labor backward to its pre-war standard and strength in order to maintain its position over the other imperialist powers whose production system was being re-established and stabilized at the expense of the workers, peasants, petty bourgeoisie and the middle classes. Production had to be driven upward at an enormous pace thru speed-up methods, labor saving machinery, etc. The A. F. of L. leadership cooperated in this and announced its new role of efficiency foremen officially in its so-called New Wage Theory resolution adopted at the Atlantic City convention and forcefully demonstrated in what is known as the B. & O. plan.

Thus the employers succeeded in obtaining a 48 per cent increase in production at but 8 per cent additional expense incurred in wage increases and bonus systems granted to skilled mechanics in industries especially favored by imperialist prosperity. To put such a policy across on the organized workers inside of the A. F. of L. was possible by the suppression, persecution and expulsion of progressive opponents. Thus we had the continual war inside the A. F. of L., a war in which the A. F. of L. bureaucracy had the whole support of the employers, the capitalist press and their government, a war which could be carried thru by arbitrary rule and the abolition of democracy inside the unions. The effect of this policy upon the unions prevented their growth and reduced the A. F. of L. membership far below the pre-war figure, present estimates being as about 2½ million as against 3 million when the U. S. entered the war.

It is the first time in the history of the American labor movement that a prosperity period is passing by without tremendous growth in membership organization, drives to organize the unorganized and big forward movements in general. The fact that in the midst of such prosperity there could even be a tremendous loss in membership shows that the A. F. of L. is rapidly deteriorating under the present leadership, that the policies of this leadership are diametrically opposed to the very evolution of capitalist production and industry and that if continued along these lines it may succumb to the fate that befell two great labor federations prior to the advent of the A. F. of L. in the United States. The capitalists of the U. S. have learned something since the days of the National Labor Union and the Knights of Labor. They have learned how to use advantageously a degenerated labor bureaucracy to obtain control over the very unions the workers build to defend themselves against their exploiters, and the bosses having the country's means and resources more under command than ever may decide to maintain a degenerated A. F. of L. as a shield and strike-breaking agency against the growth of revolutionary unionism. These are the prospects the workers are faced with on the eve of this new open shop drive.

That such a drive is coming there is no doubt in my mind. The Dawes plan has put in its work. American capital invested in the weakened capitalist empires of Europe has re-established their production and hence their competitive power on the world market. With the standard of living of millions of European workers reduced far below pre-war, an established European industry, largely under American control is now competing with American industry controlled by the same interests, and this powerful club of European competition American capital is about to use again to drive the standards of the American workers further down. Lower wages, longer hours, more child labor, more women in industry into territories with cheaper labor power which is industrializing the agricultural area of the south, and west, more speed, more efficiency, more labor saving machinery, double up, this has been going on at a rapid pace since the war. But European capitalism has had a restoration for the time being. A precarious one, it is true, but there it is and the same drive has to be doubled up. American production has to be established on a lower level of prices and at the expense of the workers; otherwise there will be a tremendous crash. Hence the new drive against labor.

What role the A. F. of L. bureaucracy will play in this, can be easily seen by anyone who wants to see it. The A. F. of L. bureaucracy has so heavily invested in capitalist industry directly and indirectly that its interests are inextricably inter-woven in the fate of a possible crash. It will therefore continue to cooperate with imperialist capital, as a part of the exploiting class, to beat its competitors in the world market. The fact that nothing is being done to support the miners to save the Miners' Union while all energies are being put forward to smash the opposition to such a policy as exemplified by the war on the left wing and the wholesale expulsion shows that the A. F. of L. bureaucracy is ready not only to fall in with this line, but to even pave the way of capital in the downward revision of the standard of living for workers.

The edge of the oncoming depression may be taken off by American success in the Far East, by recognition of Soviet Russia and the granting of credits; by imperialist success in general. This accounts for the extraordinary imperialist activity of the U. S. of late. But even off such a success cheaper products are a pre-requisite and we can expect in any event that the benefits of such a prosperity of which only a part of the population was beneficiary will be considerably curtailed even under the most favorable circumstances. But even as it is the hallyhoo the capitalist press made about the workers getting prosperous, buying homes and automobiles, etc., was considerably exaggerated, and, but for the fact that even many of our own comrades become infected by this propaganda, I would not even mention it.

Analogies have been made on the effects of imperialist prosperity corrupting the labor movement between Britain and the U. S. It is true that we can profit by the experience in Britain to some extent, but there is a fundamental difference in this case between the effects of British imperialist prosperity and the one we have. Britain conquered politically the territories in which to dump the industrial products of the British Islands. It had a virtual monopoly of these markets. Britain at the height of its imperialist development had no important industrial rival, the other European states being in the main under feudal regimes based on agriculture. While the U. S. industries have outstripped great industrial giants with American capital playing both ends against the middle.

The effect of this is that whereas in Great Britain in its palmy days of imperialism, advantages the workers derived from it were pretty evenly divided among the industrial proletariat, particularly the organized skilled workers in the U. S., imperialist prosperity has unduly enfeoffed even below pre-war level the conditions of millions of workers in industries subject to the international competition. How much did the bituminous miners, textile workers, needle workers, marine workers, etc., profit by this prosperity. Even the highly skilled in these industries were, in the main, adversely affected. What about the farmers who were bankrupted by the tens of thousands? The only ones that really profited were the skilled workers, particularly those that are organized and work in sheltered domestic industries like building construction, printing, railroads, etc.

Under radical leadership they could have profited much more even in these industries. The boom, assisted by the trade union bureaucracy and double the amount they granted in wage increases out of the workers by mass-killing speed-up rationalizing efficiency schemes, etc. The organized workers in general profited but little and that is in the form of steadier employment. And in order to get their moral cooperation and substitute the benefits of unionism, they were given company unions to take

The Fifth Congress of the Communist Party of China and the Kuomintang

THE Fifth Congress of the Communist Party of China has been fixed for April. The congress will meet at a momentous time.

The Seventh Plenum of the Executive Committee of the Communist International in its resolution on the Chinese question declared that the Chinese revolution has everything that is objectively needed to skip over the capitalist stage of development. From this point of view the present stage of development of the Chinese revolution must be regarded as critical. The general line of the further development of the Chinese revolution—the question as to whether it will be a capitalist or non-capitalist development—is being decided just at the present moment.

The movement for national freedom has been victorious in half of China. The southern Nationalist government is already the government of a powerful state with a population of 200 millions. The question as to how this state and its government should be organized, on what social forces it should rely, what should be the role of the working class, and the Communist Party in the organization of the state, now confronts us in all its magnitude.

In this journal, in an article on the "Regrouping of Forces in the Chinese Revolution"* it was stated that since the Seventh Plenum of the E. C. C. I. class friction in the towns and villages had intensified considerably during the further development of the workers' and peasants' movement, particularly in Hunan and Hupeh, owing to the increased pressure of the imperialists and the increasing menace of open intervention. Both these factors drive the right wing of the movement along the lines of concessions to and compromise with the imperialists.

The events in China are developing with a rapidity which is characteristic of a great revolution. In the period since the publication of the article already quoted, the events in China have brought forward new facts which bear witness to a further class differentiation within the national movement. The problem of organizing the internal forces of the Chinese revolution then becomes at the present time one of vast importance.

The problem of problems in the Chinese revolution at the present time is the situation in the Kuomintang, the further development of the Kuomintang as a party at the head of the Southern Chinese State.

The development of the Kuomintang reveals certain symptoms from the point of view of the interests of the Chinese revolution.

The Kuomintang is still a party of leaders. At the time of the Seventh Plenum of the E. C. C. I. the Kuomintang had 300,000 members. This is a considerable number for a political party. But it must be borne in mind that these 300,000 were not drawn into the every-day organization activities of the party. They were heard of only during congresses and conferences, at all of which the representatives of the left elements were predominant. The majority of the Executive Committee of the Kuomintang also consists of left elements, but the preponderance of the left elements in the party is not so clearly expressed in the composition and policy of the Nationalist government. In the Nationalist government power is in the hands of the right elements, the latter in most cases display decisive right tendencies.

This is even more pronounced in the provincial governments of South China. Prior to the change of government of March 20th, 1926, the left elements in the Kuomintang predominated in the Nationalist government. But in the city of Canton and in Kwangtung province, i. e., the territory which was completely in the hands of the Nationalist government, the government was and actually is at the present time in the hands primarily of the centrist and right elements of the Kuomintang. The Communists did not participate in the government; they were under the absolutely incorrect impression that they could not participate in a government of the Kuomintang.

The Right Wing.

The right elements in the Kuomintang comprise in their ranks prominent statesmen, representatives of the bourgeoisie of China, etc. According to their class origin they are closely bound up politically economically with the right elements of the Kuomintang are inclined to compromise with the imperialists; they are opposed to serious social reforms and to a further development of the revolutionary workers' and peasants' movement.

In power, the right elements of the Kuomintang hamper the development of serious social reforms. It is characteristic that on March 20th, 1926, there was no law in Canton concerning the rights of workers' organizations, and the Canton trade unions, from the point of view of actual law, were illegal.

The change in the government on March 20th strengthened still more the position of the right Kuomintang. Soon after March 20th they took definite measures against the workers' and peasants' organizations. This called forth a sharp protest from the masses of workers and peasants. Disturbances among the workers and peasants, dissatisfaction in the best sections of the army due to the elimination of the left Kuomintang and Communist commanding staff created a precarious situation at the front which compelled the new leaders of the Kuomintang to retreat and come to terms with the left and the Communists.

The May Plenum of the C. C. of the Kuomintang was again dominated by left elements. It was decided that Wang-Ching-Wei (the left leader) must return.

The centrist and right elements in the Kuomintang are opposed to workers' and peasants' control over the activities of the Nationalist government and against the government's moving to Hankow; they rely for support on certain sections of the army, etc.

A Strike Law.

Recent reports from China indicate that the Kuomintang and the Nationalist government are seriously concerned about the growth of the labor movement. The newspapers report that according to decisions of the Central Committee of the Kuomintang on this question the Canton government promulgated a new law on January 5th, 1927, concerning strikes. According to that law workers have no right to carry arms in demonstrations, or to arrest merchants and manufacturers or to confiscate their goods. The law forbids the existence of the yellow trade unions and other strike-breaking organizations; but at the same time it enforces, to a large extent, arbitration in the solution of conflicts in military, financial and communal enterprises and also in enterprises of so-called primary necessity (the list of which has not yet been published). This law also prohibits picketing during strikes to some extent.

The dangers of the position are intensified by the international position of the Nationalist government. The struggle against imperialism is now entering on its decisive phase and is becoming exceedingly difficult. The imperialists are doing all in their power to demoralize the Nationalist movement, to find traitors in the camp of the right elements of the Kuomintang. The immediate question before us is in the first place to convert the Kuomintang into a left wing organization, not only on festive occasions such as congresses and conferences, but also in its daily activities, and secondly that the reorganized Kuomintang should acquire stable leadership (not in resolutions, but in deeds) over the Nationalist government, both at the centre and in the provinces. The adoption of a correct line and the formulation of concrete practical proposals on these two questions is the most important task facing the Fifty Congress of the Communist Party of China.

The Communist Party of China will in the first place have to revise its decisions of the June Plenum of its Central Committee in respect to its relations with the Kuomintang.

Incorrect Decisions.

The June Plenum of the C. C. of the Communist Party of China decided on the following concerning the inter-relations between the party and the Kuomintang: (1) To substitute an alliance of the two bodies for the policy of alliance by affiliation; (2) to adopt a definite independent political policy; (3) to endeavor to find a basis for the Kuomintang in the ranks of the urban petty-bourgeois democracy; (4) to suggest that the Kuomintang should not be organized as a centralised party, but that its organizations in the localities should take the form of clubs.

All these decisions must be revised. The first resolution logically pre-supposes the exit of the Communist Party from the Kuomintang, and as such conflicts the decisions of the Seventh Enlarged E. C. of the International which condemned such an action as a gross political error. From this point of view the proposal to organize the left Kuomintang is fractional groups is also wrong. The proposal to organize left Kuomintang fractions is basically a decision to split the Kuomintang and form two Kuomintangs. The possibility of such a split must be foreseen, but we must bear in mind the decisions of the Seventh Plenum of the E. C. C. I. that even if a large section of the capitalist big bourgeoisie is eliminated from the National movement, the driving force in the Chinese revolution will be a bloc of a still more revolutionary character, the bloc of the proletariat, the peasantry and the urban petty-bourgeoisie" and that "some sections of the large bourgeoisie can still for a certain length of time march together with the revolution." Our task, therefore, does not consist in the organization of a new left Kuomintang, but in directing the entire Kuomintang to the left and in guaranteeing it a stable left policy.

Workers and Kuomintang.

This cannot be accomplished if we regard the Kuomintang merely as an organization of the urban petty-bourgeoisie. What about the peasantry and the working class? Only if the workers and peasants gain predominant influence in the Kuomintang will that organization become a consistent, revolutionary political organization. That is precisely how the question concerning the Kuomintang must be regarded. The view that the workers must be kept from joining the Kuomintang on the ground that they have their Communist Party is absolutely wrong. If that were correct, then the members of the Communist Party should have left the Kuomintang long ago. The surest way of securing a determined revolutionary policy for the Kuomintang is that of bringing into it revolutionary workers and peasants. It is of special importance to permeate it with workers, as they are the most revolutionary elements.

The decision of the June Plenum of the C. C. of the Communist Party of China about the transformation of the Kuomintang local organizations into free organizations in the forms of political clubs is also absolutely wrong. At the present stage in the national struggle it would be a big mistake. All right elements who constitute the minority in the Kuomintang will undoubtedly be in favor of eliminating internal discipline in the Kuomintang, etc. The further development of the Chinese revolution demand that the Kuomintang should be reorganized as soon as possible into a party with elected committees in the centre and the localities and with organizational discipline for its members. A determined struggle must be carried on in the Kuomintang against political double-dealing—on the one hand the support of a radical program in words and on the other the conduct of a compromising policy in practice. Particularly is this true in regard to Kuomintang members who constitute the government.

In the political report of the C. C. of the Communist Party of China at the Party Conference of December, 1926, one of the Canton comrades declared: "The Kuomintang died on the 20th of March and has been decomposing since the 15th of May. Why should we hold on to the corpse?" That comrade apparently had in mind the fact that the Nationalist government, particularly in the provinces, was taking definite steps directed against the development of the revolutionary struggle of the workers and peasants. From this some comrades drew the conclusion at the conference that: "We are on the side of the masses as against the Nationalist government, and in the conflicts between the masses and that government we must see a conflict between the Communist Party and the Kuomintang." This is true in the sense that there is a danger of a split between the Kuomintang and the Communist Party. But this danger can be averted if the Kuomintang is not regarded as a corpse. The Kuomintang suffers now from lack of revolutionary worker and peasant blood in its veins. The Communist Party must infuse such blood and thereby radically change the situation.

To Strengthen Nationalism.

To revive the Kuomintang and to drive the Nationalist government to the left, the Communist Party must radically revise its attitude to the Nationalist government. The Communist Party must try to participate in the government and, relying on the worker and peasant masses, compel the government to consider the program of radical government reforms.

It is about time that the Nationalist government should enact the fundamental democratic laws (on workers' organizations, on the eight-hour working day, etc.), it is about time to abolish the hideous remnants of the old regime which oppress the Chinese peasantry (indentured labor contracts, sale into slavery because of inability to pay debts, high rents, etc.) it is about time to abolish the old corrupt fe-actionary administration. Communists must endeavor with the greatest energy to get into the provincial government organs. In the villages, based on the peasant organizations, it is about time to raise the question of the creation of revolutionary peasant committees. The decisions of the Seventh Enlarged Plenum of the E. C. C. I. and the supplementary organizational instructions issued since the Plenum give the Communist Party of China exhaustive instructions along these lines. The congress will have to apply them to the concrete conditions which have arisen at the time. There can be no doubt that the Communist Party of China will map out a path commensurate with the great tasks which confront the party at the present time. The splendid past of the Communist Party of China and of the heroic Chinese proletariat serves here as a guarantee.

Notes of a Deportee

By M. VAJTAUER

Comrade Vajtauer, former editor of the Communist Czecho-Slovak paper, Spravedlnost, came to this country a few years ago to participate in the revolutionary movement here and particularly among the Czecho-Slovak workers. He has a long record of service to the labor movement in his own country. Our rulers who are so hospitable to loyal, slavish immigrants spotted Comrade Vajtauer as an enemy and his deportation is the consequence after a long struggle in his behalf waged by the International Labor Defense.

The first night between Monday and Tuesday. Two women comrades with bouquets of flowers in their arms. Three comrades sitting opposite. They are taking me home for a send-off party.

The flowers, suddenly severed from their roots, will die in the homes of these comrades long before I reach the shores of Europe.

The second Taxi. Morning of the following day. Comrade P., my boarding lady, with her half-year-old baby girl Vera in her arms is seeing me off. This bouquet will remain here also. But its roots are set firmly in this human soil. And some day, perhaps, she will come to meet me—a life in full bloom, a bouquet of laughter, courage and self confidence

These are the two strongest of my last impressions from America. Are they a symbol? Will that which remained, a thing of beauty but without roots, die? Will that which anchored here grow?

A COURT ROOM in the "Old Post-Office," near the City Hall. In these benches, fronting the clerks' banister and the judge's desk, you feel as tho the life outside were closing on you.

Strong knocks on the door.

A bailiff announces the approach of the judge.

All rise.

The judge robed in black, with affected dignity emerges from the rear door and seats himself at his desk.

The clerk calls off the contending parties. Brothers Jones vs. Mr. Smith—Mr. Terkin vs. Mr. Clark.

Emanuel Vajtauer vs. The Commissioner of Ellis Island

The lawyer, an attorney with a brief-case of acts concerning my "case," and I step nearer.

They explain: "The party is to be surrendered to Ellis Island."

The judge nods. The clerk takes notes.

The Ellis Island representative takes me in custody. The heads of all present turn after me.

America's doors slammed on me.

We enter a waiting-room at the Ellis Island ferry. With the watchman at the door-out stands a tall man with the face of a detective.

Where have I seen him before?

We wait for the ferry on a bench behind the bars. Cobwebs hang from a dirty ceiling.

The tall man passes by greeting me.

"Isn't he a reporter from The Daily News?" I ask my companion.

"Yes, it's Mr. Crawford."

I remember. After the decision, shortly after New Years, he came to our editorial office. He asked for a photograph and some information. We gave him the photograph, but in place of "information" I wrote him my opinion of the decision:

"The American capitalists are afraid that I might hurt them. That is why they are deporting me. What a silly idea? As if there was a country on the face of the Earth from where one couldn't fight against the American capitalists."

That was at the time when Washington was exerting its greatest energy to start a war with Mexico.

What I wrote didn't suit Mr. Crawford and so he wrote that I have declared that I don't intend to go to Mexico just then, but that Kellogg was right when he says that the communists have a strong position in Mexico, and that I am a man advocating the extermination of all capitalists.

Such are reporters of American capitalist papers!

If any time you mistake them for detectives, you are not far from truth. They are even lower than detectives. More often than not they are mere agents provocateurs.

Nearly all the keepers recognize me. I inquire about the fate of some of those who remained here after my release two years ago. Some of the "bigger game, they remember. Like that one-eyed Canadian, MacLean, who fought here for almost a year for recognition of his American citizenship. He was set free, but is now in a jail in France for forging his passport. Or the "Prince of Kurdistan," who was visited here by a rich "chicken," caught on a title. He is now "serving" in France, also, for fraud. "And how do you know what happened to all of them?" I ask a tall, fat keeper, who tells me all this.—"I work now with the Department of Justice," he informs me, proudly.—"and they send men after such fellows. Not one of them gets away."

WHILE they were here, they enjoyed all sorts of privileges, of course, only to make it easier to have their cards looked into.

There are several similar traps set here. Immigrants and other unlucky ones, who get stuck here, are offered a flock of lawyers to choose from, who can find nothing better to do than cheat these unfortunates out of their last pennies. The dining room superintendent, surprised to see me here again and learning that I have lost my case, tells me: "It's a shame to waste any money on lawyers. They're as thick as fleas around here. All should do like that Polish woman we have here. She showed a lawyer $150.00 and said: "They will be yours, if you win the case. If you don't, you won't get a cent."

My case was different, of course, but I did not care to talk to him about it. So I nodded approvingly:

"Yes, that's the way to treat them."

Religious organizations have their own little money-traps here. For instance, they sell you a two-cent envelope for three, at the same time looking at you like sisters of mercy bandaging raw wounds.

IN the afternoon the commissioner came to the room. One after the other inquired from him about his fate.

I ask him, how long I'll have to wait here.

He remembers somebody having phoned him about me. "But passport has lapsed!"

I tell him that I have a new one with a German visum a French visum not being required, because a Czechoslovak passport is honored in France.

"And have you an Austrian visum?"

"No, I don't have to go thru Austria. I'll go thru Germany."

Germany won't permit a deportee to pass thru, unless he goes under escort.

I tell him that I intended to pay my way to Europe, and travel like any other ordinary passenger. I didn't tell him, of course, that I'll do this only to be able to stay awhile in France and Germany.

He has no objection, but adds: "Give me this passport and I'll return it to you to-morrow with a French and Austrian visum."

I remind him again that there is no need of a French visum on a Czechoslovak passport.

"This rule doesn't apply to deportees," he says, "they must have a visum."

This, of course, doesn't sound like if I could travel thru Europe, on my own expense, a free passenger. And if I should be sent like "express-goods," then they must stand the charges for this consignment of live-stock.

Sunlight Under a Blanket

By WALT CARMON

There are days in Chicago when a foul breath creeps from the south side. It seeps into the Loop. It saturates the west side and fouls the north. The city air hangs heavy-laden with decay.

There are days when the wind lifts the vile blanket from the city. Then men and labor all weary day in the presence of the monster, bring back his breath on themselves in the street cars that run from the Stockyards.

Rose and I waited until mid-winter to visit Don Jose. In mid-winter one should feel more at ease on the south side. At Thirty-fifth Street the conductor gave the signal to the motorman before we had even stepped off the car. Cars move quickly on the south side.

We regained our balance and foulness gripped us. It holds you in all strength at Thirty-fifth Street. Even in mid-winter. That man can live here is a wonder. That man does live here is a miracle. Hunger drives men to miracles.

"Passen, amigos. . .passen!" boomed Don Jose. ". . .and welcome!"

Dona Maria beamed on us. Conchita took our coats and Pepe ran to advise the others.

"El senor has come. La Senora!"

Others came and smiled and gripped our hands. Made us welcome.

The warmth of Mexico was tossed into this room in the house that stands in the shadow of the Yards.

How fine it was. How welcome we felt.

"We will play a new record for the Senora. . ."

"But no. . .un momentito," Don Jose protested. "Let us just talk for a while. We have never met the Senora before. . ." and Don Jose bowed.

It was all new to Rose. She felt just a bit self-conscious. A little ashamed at such warmth.

Dona Maria spoke no English. "No imports!" It does not matter.

"Tell your Senora how pleased we are to have her honor us."

Don Jose extended a gnarled, worker's hand. "A cigarette senor? These are from our soil!"

Miguel is only three years old. Miguel gives some candy to Rose and she brings the chubby youngster to her lap.

Dona Maria beams on Rose. "If the Senora will allow me I can show her some of my hand-work."

The Senora would be pleased! Dona Maria and Rose and Josefina and three youngsters are grouped around laces. They talk to each other, each in their own language. And they understand!

"Si, it is difficult," Don Jose tells me. "Work is very hard to get. Last week I made twenty dollars—week before last only eighteen. There are ten mouths to feed."

"The work is hard?"

"Ah, senor—we work like the poor burros in our country! And the treatment we get—Ay, dios!—It is even worse."

". . .and conditions of work Don Jose—they are bad?"

"Ah, but you will think I complain like an old woman!"

I protest. "Surely—I understand. I, too, am a worker!"

"Not long ago," Don Jose cites for example, "Pedro Gonzalez fell on a filthy floor. A dog would not have worked there. They sent poor Pedro to the doctor. His hand was cut and became infected. His arm was cut off a month ago. Last week we buried what was left of Pedro."

"It is sad, is it not, senor?" Pepe inquires.

"It is hell!" I tell them. "Surely, you must hate this country?"

"No, . .no. In my country too we starve. Only here no sunshine ever creeps in. It is always cloudy. Always misty. Always cold. Damp. It is always work, work, work. . .from morning 'til night. And the foul air, senor! It is even in the food we eat!"

"Don Jose!" Maria calls out. "Why must you complain to the senor? Play the new record we have.

So we play "Cielito Lindo." It is a gay, innocent little tune. I sing a line or two. It's contagious.

"Ah, the senor sings!"

I protest.

"No. . .no—the senor must sing!"

I sing and they applaud. Dona Maria sings. Josefina soon brings a guitar and we all sing. Pepe brings around a tray of red wine. We sing "Cielito Lindo" again. Rose and I learn a verse of "La Cucaracha." Don Jose sings "Horses" and we join in the laughter.

How warm it is. How friendly. We sing, we play and then Pepe dances "La Jota." Josefina dances with him. They turn and bend and they stamp their feet. Children they are. Graceful children responding to the strumming guitar like reeds to the breeze.

Rose exclaims "It's beautiful!"

"And now if the senor and Senora will honor us at our table?"

"Con much gusto!"

From soup to "Dulces" it is all here. Tortillas, enchiladas, mole de guajolote—peppers aplenty. As warm a meal as the warmth of the welcome. And good!

Restraint is all gone now.

"A glass of wine for la Senora, Pepe. She is not yet accustomed to the peppers."

"Wine—and more 'smoke'!" from Rose.

"Bravo!" Don Jose applauds. "And you senor?"

We eat more and we smoke and we talk of the land of Don Jose.

"Quien sabe!—perhaps we will return some day."

"Yes and your Senora should visit our country, senor. Ah, you would never leave it!"

"But you did Don Jose!" Dona Maria chides him.

"Never again will I be so foolish," confesses Don Jose.

Finally it is time for us to leave. We shake hands with everyone. Tiny Miguel must shake hands too. Dona Maria has pressed a bit of lace on Rose as a parting gift.

"Adios! Adios!. . ."

The warmth of Mexico was tossed into this room that stands in the shadow of the Yards. We plunged back to Thirty-fifth Street thru the stench that enveloped the house. . . . . .

"Step lively!" the conductor urged.

"No sunshine ever creeps in. . ." I think to Don Jose. "It is always cloudy. . .always cold . . . and work. . .work. . ."

As if in knowing haste the street car bounces and rolls away from the Stockyards.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THERE are strong indications that Scotland Yard has presented the tory government with a nifty dilemma as a result of its spectacular raid on the headquarters of the Russian Trade Delegation. The London dispatches hint that Sir William Joynson-Hicks, Home Secretary, did not find the "documents" he promised the public, tho why Mr. Hicks should fail to produce the goods is not clear, since his forging apparatus inherited from war days and supplemented by experts from the exiled Czarists should be able to perform any task assigned to it.

WHETHER It is true that the Foreign Office was in the dark about the raid until after it broke into the press is a matter for skepticism. In all probability Sir Austen Chamberlain was in on the conspiracy. It is fo new dodge in government circles to give the public the impression that there are divided councils in the cabinet so that in case of a mishap a section of the crew of the sinking battleship can be dropped to lighten ballast.

IT looks now as if the raid were a colossal blunder. In view of the general lack of confidence in the character of the Churchill-Hicks-Birkenhead wing of the tory cabinet Mr. Hicks will have to be very careful of his forgeries in order to make them stick. Of course in England as in the United States there are people who are afflicted with "redphobia," whose only cavail is that they don't get their plots often enough and gory enough. But there are hard headed business men in England whose fingers are ready to clutch nervously at the big, juicy contracts that the Soviet trade monopoly is dangling before their eyes.

IF the Arcos raid fizzles out as the news dispatches indicate not only will it mean the end of a few political careers but in all probability the defeat of the tories in a general election which is almost certain to follow an anti-Russian flop. With the workers waiting for an opportunity to avenge the government for its conduct during the general strike and the middle classes being loaded down with taxes to pay for tory imperialist ventures, it is more than probable that the Labor Party will be returned to power.

GENEVA dispatches tell us that the American delegates to the International Economic Conference are developing a warmer attitude towards the Soviet delegates than at first. They have now reached the stage of breaking bread with them. This means business, much to the chagrin of the British who would like nothing worse than to see the United States recognize the government of the Soviet Union. But, business is business and even the Frank Kellogg fulminates against the Soviet government occasionally the Soviet business agents are quite welcoma in our best banks and warehouses.

JOHN SPARGO, the renegade socialist—or one of them—has managed to sink to a new low level of depravity in the current issue of the New York Times book review supplement. This is undoubtedly an accomplishment even for such an accomplished political mole as Spargo. Luigi Sturzo has written a book on "Italy and Fascismo." The author is a political opponent of Mussolini and Fascism to the agony of Spargo who worships the stiletto that has stabbed the Italian labor movement in the back. Had Spargo been on the payroll of the Italian blackshirt cutthroat he would not be more eulogistic. He finds Mussolini a "mystery man," whose soul it is almost impossible to pierce. We venture to say that whenever his soul is pierced the human race will have to wear a stink mask. Here is a typical excerpt from Spargo's review of Sturzo's book or rather Spargo's eulogy of Mussolini: "What Lenin represented in the leadership of the destructive forces that were unleashed in Europe, Mussolini became in the leadership of the conserving and constructive forces. Mussolini's constructiveness was amply demonstrated to the Italian workingclass, last week when under the auspices of the "Charter of Labor" they were forced to accept a ten per cent wage reduction at the point of a dagger. In the Soviet Union the wages of the workers and the living conditions of the peasants are on the upgrade. But what does this mean to the paid stoolpigeon John Spargo?

A NEW prospect of making a little extra change has loomed for out-

ANTI-STRIKE BILL CLOAK TO ATTACK U.S.S.R. - TOMSKY

Scores Labor Party for Half-Way Measures

MOSCOW, May 9 (Delayed). — The British anti-strike bill is a device of the die-hards to crush the workingclass of England and free its hands for its anti-Soviet and anti-Chinese policy, declared M. Tomsky, chairman of the All Union Central Council of Trade Unions in an interview today.

The bill practically means the abolition of strikes, boycotts and picketing and is an abrupt departure from the fundamental traditions of British labor and a transition toward fascism.

Scores Right Wingers.

The general council and the leaders of the Labor Party, Tomsky said, made a fair mistake when they rejected the proposition of a general strike, limiting their struggle entirely to parliamentary methods. This, he said, is a tantonmount renunciation of the struggle. Instead of rallying all forces of the workingclass to fight the bill, the general council, as before, is baiting the Communist and minority movements.

The general council and the Labor Party fails to take into consideration, Tomsky continued, that the passage of the bill will weaken their party and cause their defeat in the pending elections.

The British labor movement must start a struggle against the bill if it is going to survive, Tomsky said.

Heavy Patriot Gets Proof of Blows at Pacifist and Women's Liberal Groups

"Adjutant-General" Captain George L. Darte of the Military Order of the World War is still sleuthing.

He was the chief witness for the prosecution when The DAILY WORKER editors and business manager were brought to court under arrest for printing David Gordon's poem "America." He will no doubt be the state's greatest aid in framing the case against the paper, and also against Gordon who is to appear for a hearing this morning on the charge of producing an "obscene" and "unpatriotic" poem.

Darte is evidently still watching The DAILY WORKER as closely as ever for any technical violations of any sort; the more law suits he can fix up the greater his prestige as "Executive Officer" of his Military Order, and no doubt the greater the Order's weekly—or monthly—pecuniary expression of approval of his services.

The DAILY WORKER is in receipt of a letter from the Adjutant-General Captain, demanding where it gets its information about him; how it knows that he made the foolish statements about the Y. W. C. A. and the W. C. T. U. which were published in The DAILY WORKER of April 30th.

Cites Charges and Verse.

The DAILY WORKER is not disclosing all it knows about this leader of the red-baiting agency, Military Order of the World War, but it is referring the captain to the New York World of February 20, 1925, and to the Philadelphia North American of February 27, 1925. A story in the World says:

"Charges made Tuesday by Captain George A. Darte, Adjutant-General of the Military Order of the World War, that Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt and other women leaders were preaching Communist doctrines among women's organizations are inexcusable,' Mary Garret Hay declared yesterday in a letter to the world.

"The story Captain Darte repeats first appeared in the Dearborn Independent last March . . . and someone investigated at that time the complete falsity of the charges."

The North American story of February 27th says:

"Captain Darte in a speech to the New York Chapter of the American War Mothers . . . charged that there is a group of women indentified with the control of the League of Women Voters dominating this and other women's groups and carrying them along into ideas verging on Communism.

Brands Intelligentsia.

"Leaders of these organizations and their interlocking directorate with identical membership composed of many women who are either radical, pink or of the intelligentsia group dominate the women who are willing to follow.

"Organizations that Darte says are dominated by pacifist-Communist groups are Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. The National Council for the Prevention of War, the National Board of the Y. W. C. A., the National Women's Christian Temperance Union, the American Association of University Women, the National Council of Jewish Women, the General Federated Women's Clubs and the League of Women Voters."

Another member of the Military Order of the World War, Lieutenant-Colonel George F. Ames, commander of the Buffalo chapter, according to a story in the Buffalo Evening News of May 20, 1924, "called the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom aligned with radicals."

In his letter to The DAILY WORKER, Captain Darte also objects to an advertisement in the paper which states that he and Mr. Seitz, the "research worker", of the Keymen of America "are paid agents of business interests" and "will collect many thousands of dollars from employers throughout the country."

Hate Publicity on Fuads.

Why Captain Darte should raise such an objection when he flaunts the letterhead he does, is hard to explain except that "radical-hunters" hate publicity, except about their prospective victims. According to the stationery of the Military Order of the World War, it lists among its officers and general staff men who represent traction interests, railroads, electric light and power companies, the Mellon interests, coal, iron, insurance, as well as the powerful political interests of the country. Certainly he is expecting to get, and does get, money from all these sources.

The list of officers displays an amazing number of colonels, major generals, majors, brigadier generals and what-nots. A large proportion of them are now over sixty, some of whom are died-in-the-wool army men; some of whom never got nearer the army than a swivel chair in Washington during the war. "Major" William J. Hammer, the historian-general, is one of the fascisti who has written to Governor Fuller urging him not to pardon or investigate the case of Sacco and Vanzetti. He

DYNAMITE HOAX FOE'S WORK IN VANZETTI CASE

Defense Comm. Brands Fake Story

BOSTON, May 15.—The dynamite hoax blew up with a loud bank today, embarrassing its perpetrators, but not nullifying the horrendous scarcheads in local newspapers.

The "dynamite" was inclosed in a package directed to Governor Fuller, who is considering a review of the Sacco-Vanezti case. Although no one was ever able to identify the alleged sender, he was described in local newspapers and in press dispatches as a "sympathizer" with the two workers condemned to death on July 10.

But the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, in a statement made public today points out that the "dynamite" has been destroyed, that there is no evidence at all now that it ever existed and asks whether the whole incident is not an attempt to inflame public opinion.

Suspicious Fellow.

Chief Inspector Colvin, who announced the "dynamite find," with a great flourish, sent an open letter to Governor Fuller last month in which with great solicitude, he advised Fuller to take precautions against the "reds" in case he decided against Sacco and Vanzetti.

The defense committee's statement reads:

"The Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee views the act of placing dynamite in Gov. Fuller's mail with profound suspicion. We ask the public to scrutinize this and similar acts most carefully and to contrast them in the past when dynamite threats have been discovered. We earnestly urge the public to consider where the motive for such an act are most likely to lie. We have implicit confidence in Gov. Fuller's high purpose in approaching his decision in the Sacco-Vanzetti case, and would consider it an affront to him and ourselves to address to him a denial of this act which is aimed at the program of friends of Sacco and Vanzetti and justice.

"We are interested in that sentence of the letter of Chief Postal Inspector Park D. Colvin, reporting the dynamite discovery, which says that the dynamite has been 'disposed of.' We are curious why it should be. As of pertinent interest we recall that this is not the first letter Mr. Colvin has written the governor.

"On April 28, the press published a letter from Mr. Colvin to the governor in which Mr. Colvin said, 'In view of the efforts being made by the organization to which Sacco and Vanzetti belong by means of propaganda and intimidation to cause them to escape the consequences of their crime, I feel it is proper for me to express my hope and expectation that you will not be induced to take any action which will further delay the execution imposed upon them by the Massachusetts court.'"

Like Old Days.

Enemies of Sacco and Vanzetti, who may well have planted the dynamite, if there was any, are rejoicing over the vicious publicity given the entire incident. Local yellow newspapers brought back memories of early days of the case by playing the hoax in lurid headlines, openly accusing friends of the workers of trying to kill the governor.

400,000 Filipinos in Armed Revolt; Resent Sale of Govt. Business

MANILA, May 15.—Four hundred thousand armed natives have poured into Iloilo Province in the Island of Panay, and are reported to be in revolt.

Although the cause of the uprising is not definitely known, it is attributed to general dissatisfaction with American rule.

Rumors circulated in Manila describe the rebels as followers of Flor Intrenchergado, the Filipino, who has proclaimed himself as "Emperor of the Philippines."

There is wide-spread dissatisfaction here as a result of the announcement that Governor-General Wood will sell government industries and banks to private capitalists—probably Americans.

SACASA REJECTS STIMSON "PEACE" AND DIAZ RULE

Liberal Troops Resist U. S. Intervention

MANAGUA, May 15.—Dr. Juan Sacasa, president of the Liberal government, has repeated his refusal to accept the "peace terms" which Henry Stimson, personal representative of President Coolidge, is attempting to foist on the liberals, or to recognize the government of Adolfo Diaz, American puppet.

Liberal troops are concentrating at various points with the intention of resisting their disarmament by American marines. Eight hundred armed men, under General Sandino, are concentrating at Jinotepe it is reported.

U. S. Threatens Force.

The defense committee's statement reads:

"The Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee views the act of placing dynamite in Gov. Fuller's mail with profound suspicion. We ask the public to scrutinize this and similar acts most carefully and to contrast them in the past when dynamite threats have been discovered. Request Post Office to Give More Employees Their Half Day of Rest

WASHINGTON, (FP).—Secretary Flaherty of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks and President Gaynor of the National Association of Letter Carriers have asked Postmaster General New to extend the proportion of postal workers who may be granted Saturday half-holidays.

Under the executive order governing these summer half-holidays, the head of any department may require the civil servants under his charge to remain at work. In the Postoffice Department, only about 10 pee cent of the clerks and letter carriers actually get the time off; the postmasters assert that there is not sufficient force to perform the regular work if many are permitted to leave early on Saturday. The union officers argue that the numbee permitted to go away could be greatly increased by right arrangement of schedules.

Nationalists Prevent Disorder Despite Stabbing Of Worker by British Sailor

Open Large Central Peasants' Training School At Wuchang; Enroll 751 Students

(By Nationalist News Agency.)

HANKOW, May 15.—Löyang, formerly the stronghold of Wu Pei-fu has been taken by the troops of Feng Yu-hsiang. General Feng is continuing his rapid advance toward the Kin-Han railroad line to join with the forces of Tang Shen-chi in their joint attack on the Fengtien (Manchurian) troops.

A big battle is expected soon at Chiengchow. Ten Yat-tat, chief of the political department of the Nationalist armies, left here for the Honan front yesterday by airplane. He is joining great numbers of political workers who have left for the north in the last few weeks.

British Bayonet Worker.

HANKOW, May 13 (delayed).—In spite of the provocation of yesterday's incident in which a Chinese laborer on the wharf of the British concession was bayoneted by a British sailor, Labor circles here are taking every measure to preserve calm and to prevent any trouble arising between laborers and British marine forces along the Bund (waterfront).

In Nationalist circles here it is stated that this is an example of the type of provocation which has been repeatedly occuring in China during the past hundred years. Until the recent development of the Nationalist movement, with the growing determination on the part of the Chinese people to wrest justice and fair treatment to the Chinese as individuals from the personal representatives of the powers in China, this type of provocation had been frequently allowed to pass unchallanged. As a result this long history of a never effectively challenged insult by the powers to China, with the arrogance of foreigners in China, has been yearly augmented until recently it has been felt by many foreigners in China that any kind of abuse of or attack upon China or the Chinese was permissible, and any manifestation of resentment, resistance, or retaliation on the part of the Chinese has merely called for further aggressions and insult on the part of foreigners.

Constant Provocation.

Nationalist circles here are convinced that the present incident will be handled satisfactorily by negotiations with the British authorities in Hankow, but they point out that it is this type of incident which is daily adding to the constant provocation of the presence of armed foreign forces in China and rendering the preservation of peace in China daily more difficult.

Borodin Expects Peking Capture.

Michael Borodin expects the Nationalist troops to enter Peking before midsummer, according to Vincent Sheean, Chinese correspondent for the North America Newspaper Alliance.

The Nationalist plans, says Sheean, call for a two-fold drive by General Feng, one straight north toward Peking, the other southeast toward the Peking-Hankow railway.

Short Campaign.

"I don't know whether the campaign will last ten days or three months," Sheean reports Borodin as saying. "The northern troops may collapse entirely as they have often done the past winter as the result of our intensive advance propaganda. If they do collapse we shall get the whole railway but if they intend to fight we will be obliged to outfight them by a series of maneuvers."

BROPHY BURNS UP LEWIS IN REPORT TO DISTRICT TWO

Shows Effect of Rule and Ruin in Union

DUBOIS, Pa., May 15.—In one of the ablest analyses of the miners' situation yet published, Adam Brophy, former President of District 2, has released his text of his report to the membership of his union.

Delivered before the district convention in session here, the report struck panic into the Lewis-Murray-Marks crowd. President Marks appealed to Indianapolis for the big chief himself to rush to Dubois to steam the tide of pro-Brophy sentiment created by his great defense of his activities as district president.

Lewis dispatched Vice President Phil Murray from Pittsburgh, who easily branded Brophy's report as a "lie" in a heated two-hour speech. As soon as Murray had concluded, progressives were on their feet seeking recognition, but Marks adjourned the meeting amid indignant cries of "steamroller."

DESPOTISM OF RIGHT WING IS FUR CZAR'S AIM

A union made up of workers who have no voice and no vote. This seems to be the aim of the reactionary forces in the International Fur Workers' Union, and the A. F. of L.'s reorganization committee.

Fur workers who have been in the union for 25 years; men who struggled to form a union in 1907, who succeeded in 1912, who fought thru the strike of 1926, and were part of the strike of 1926; such men are being denied membership books when they attempt to register with the International's "scab" union. These men are being denied the right to their jobs.

To such workers, the reactionary right wingers are offering "credentials", a form which the association bosses scoff. They are denied union books which would make them part of the organization and entitle them to vote for delegates to the coming, long overdue convention.

If workers who come to register, in accordance with the instructions of the Joint Board, are known to the reactionary officials to be active left wing workers they are put but of the office and refused any sort of credential or book. If Winnick and McGrady have their doubts about a man, he is told to come back at five o'clock—when some of the right wing henchmen are on hand to tell what they know about the applicant.

The International Fur Workers' Union has announced a convention for June 13, and they want to make sure none of these Joint Board "sympathizers" have any voice in it. So they deny them books, or refuse to register them. After excluding such old-time, active members, and expelling the Joint Board, Locals 1, 5, 10, 16, and 25, and all active members of Local 45 of Chicago, the International will hold a nice, quiet, democratic convention—of what? Tame adherents of the reactionary International leaders, and a few friends of the gangster Alex Fried who is a member of the organization committee.

Marine Fireman Bares Tale of Cruelty at Sea

John Hansen, a fireman on the S. S. Steelmaker, of the Isthmian Line, which plies between this port and Yokohama and other oriental ports, was badly beaten at the hands of the first engineer, E. Erwin, a typical bully of the company slave driver type.

The incident took place on the second engineer's watch while Hansen was down in the fire pit cleaning oil burners. He had just cleaned out nine burners and was about to begin on the stokehole floor, which was covered with paint and kerosene, when the second engineer approached him and asked him whether he had cleaned out the bilges. Hansen answered him that as soon as he would be thru on the stokehole floor he would begin on the bilges. He then went away and Hansen returned to the nauseating job of working in paint and kerosene on the steel floor.

After a little time had passed and Hansen was still on the floor, the bullying first engineer came into the stoke compartment and after cynically surveying Hensen's labor he approached him and asked him the same question that the second engineer had asked him e short time before. He answered him in the same manner that he had answered the second engineer.

Beaten Badly.

The first engineer thereupon insulted him and lashed out at him with his fists, knocking him about the face and body. Hensen was badly beaten. When he asked to be taken to the captain, the first engineer emphatically refused to do this, saying that there was no reason to do so.

When Hansen made e broken attempt to climb up the ladder the first engineer knocked him back. The iron rungs inspiring him still further. He continued his brutalities knocking out one of Hensen's teeth and otherwise injuring him. He also threatened to murder him if he reported it and didn't go back to the stokehole.

Consequently Hansen was forced to drag his beaten body back into the stokehole and forced to finish his watch despite the terrible beating which he had received. A Spanish oiler by the name of June was witness to the proceedings but was helpless to interfere.

Finally Hansen was able to see the captain. This availed him little so far as satisfaction for his injuries was concerned. The captain told him to wait till they arrived in Philadelphia and then to see the shipping commissioner.

The shipping commissioner sent him to the seamen's doctor at the port barge office. Here he received a letter to pay him at New York; as he no longer wanted to sail on the SS. Steelmaker.

Forced To Stay On Boat.

The captain, however, tried to force him to remain on the boat until they reached Providence despite his weakened condition after the beating.

When he got back to New York he was told that he would be paid off Friday. He received five dollars from the shipping commissioner for maintenance till the ship returns.

These conditions of brutality and mistreatment of sailors and firemen are not unusual or out of the way and will continue to be so until the men are organized into a strong body able to fight and gain their economic and social demands. If all the seamen were organized in one strong union able to fight for and protect the rights of the men while on the job such conditions would be a nightmare of the distant past.

As it is, they still occur, not always as in the case of Hansen to the extent of a brutal display of physical force on the part of the company officials, but in the removal of the basic rights of the marine workers to the mercenary advantage of the companies employing them.

The obvious solution is in organization. The class consciousness of the seafarer must be raised to the stage where he will naturally respond to the stimulus of organization into a strong union.

Business Men Kid Farmers by Study Of Their Problems

Boys and girls clubs on the farm appear to be the solution of the agricultural problem, in the eyes of the National Industrial Conference Board, which has just made public a report of its Business Men's Commission on Agriculture.

The board is maintained by big employers to bandle their research problems and to mold public opinion thru "factual studies." Under Charles Nagel, it has been studying the farm problem with the idea of letting the farmers see how interested business men are in their wretched lot and how willing they are to lead the agrarians out of the economic desert.

But no legislation of lasting worth will be recommended, the board intimates, inasmuch as agricultural groups were found to be badly split on the question.

Cosden Oil Men Break Word On Curtail Program

Two big oil producers, the Cities Service Co., and the Barnsdall interests, have repudiated their agreement to join in limiting production in the Seminole district of Oklahoma. Big oil interests, meeting here last week, decide to limit drilling of new wells for 15 days in the Seminole field, whose great output has totally disorganized the market so far as profit is concerned.

The independents and the two groups named however refuse to adhere to the program controlling a substantial minority of the field, they can easily disrupt the entire plan and continue the senseless waste of the nation's limited oil resources, due to be exhausted within six years, according to the Federal Oil Conservation Board.

Al's Religion and Booze Worrying His Supporters Stiff

Worried stiff by the religious issue, Al Smith's managers are debating whether to send the leading democratic presidential candidate out into the sticks, or keep him at home in the Tammany cage.

Whether the heavy-drinking, pro-catholic Al will win any votes by exhibiting himself in Columbus, Kokomo and Dearborn to the dry Ku Klux elements is the big question. Although Al goes well along the sidewalks of New York, he might lose some of his slim chances of inhabiting the White House as Cal Coolidge's successor if he is paraded around the country too much.

The democratic politicians find themselves in a tantalizing position with the best vote-catcher in all America apparently barred from heeling Cal because he genuflects before the cardinal and has no aversion to admitting that he drinks'em straight. Workers and Peasants' Revolution.

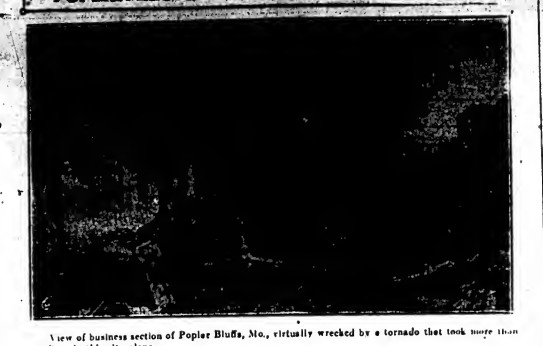
Describing the nature of the Chinese revolution Borodin said, "You must know that a straight republican Nationalist movement is impossible, or at least ineffective in China. While I have never attempted to change the essentials of the Chinese revolution I have always been convinced it would never succeed unless made into an agrarian revolution—a thorn going social economic movement.

"We base our whole revolution on the peasants and workers. Without these no nationalist revolution could take place. Our labor policy is based on these essential concepts of revolutionary technic and it has been eminently successful as the British in Hongkong disclovered."

Open Peasants' School.



HANKOW, April 14 (By Mail).—A Central Peasants' training school has been opened at Wuchang for the purpose of training leaders for directing the peasents' movement.

The school has been organized by Teng Yen-ta, head of the Peasants' Department of the Central Executive Committee of the Kuomintang. The school gives a four months' course, including subjects on Chinese economic conditions and rural conditions and problems. Graduates will be sent to the various provincial Kuomintang organisations to help the peasants' movement.

731 Students.

The school already has an enrollment of 731 students: 151 from Hunan, 206 from Hupeh, 206 from Kiangsi, 36 from Honan, 24 from Anhwei, 13 from Kiangsu, 25 from Szechuen, 1 from Kweichow, 4 from Shensi, 7 from Shansi, 5 from Fengtien, 10 from Chihli, 5 from Fukien, 5 from Chekiang, 30 from Shantung.

BROWNSVILLE MINERS APPEAL TO NON-UNION MEN TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF LOCK-OUT AND ORGANIZE

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., May 15. — The miners of Brownsville have been waking to the effect of the attempts to spread the non-union field in their vicinity. A progressive miners' group here issues the following statement to the non-union miners.

The miners of the union field have been locked out since April 1. The Vesta Coal Co., and Jones and Loughlin are trying to operate their mines here on a non-union basis, and altho they have on their side the aid of the state police, the yellow dogs etc., are meeting with a great deal of resistance. They would not be able to work their mines for any length of time, this way.

The Unorganized.

But near the scene of the struggle, there are a great number of unorganized mines. These miners should stop and think what will happen to them if they help to crush the miners' union.

Of course, their wages were raised for a short time by the Pitt-burch Coal Co., the Rainey Coal Co., the Hillman Coal Co., and other non-union concerns, while the English miners were out on strike, but that raise did not last very long.

Bosses Cut Wages.

Since January 1st, and 16th, there wages were again cut; in some places you will find any men working for as low as $4.85 and $4.25. The working conditions are unbearable. Men do not get paid for slate removed, track laid, or cross bars under ten feet.

If they tell the boss there is too much water in their rooms, what does he say? He swears at them, and shouts, "go ahead and load that coal, out, or take your tools out!" And the workers have to stand for his howling.

Bosses Separate Men.

They are kept separated as much as possible. If the boss comes and finds three or four of them gathered in one working place, talking he tells them to scatter out, as the superintendent doesn't like to have them gather in crowds that way. The bosses and superintendents are afraid the men will begin to organize.

It is only by organization that these men will be able to remedy such conditions, and raise the wages. The time to do it is now, while the union men are out. If the non-union miners help to break the union, they will find it just that much harder to organize themselves, later. Organize now and all win together!

The attempt of J. P. Morgan & Co. to unify the flow of anthracite into New England via the Poughkeepsie bridge gateway has been checked. Morgan's plan to lease the Lehigh & New England railroad to the Reading for 99 years is blocked by the interstate commerce commission. The commission's report reveals how complications due to private operation prevent the routing of traffic on the most economical basis. Where unification is worked out under private control all gains go to the owners.

The fight over this lease appears as one engagement in the widespread struggle between New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio interests and the Pennsylvania interests for dominance east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio river. The New York Central and Baltimore & Ohio each own 25% of the stock of the Reading. The Reading, with E. T. Stotesbury of J. P. Morgan & Co. as chairman of its board, is the leading Morgan factor in the anthracite industry.

The Inside Hold.

The Reading combine informally controls the Lehigh & New England. Here's how the combination works.

This combination controls about a third of the anthracite production in the United States. The commission shows for the years 1920 and 1921 the tonnage of anthracite coal originating on the principal lines as follows:

Anthracite tonnage originating on	1920	1921
Reading	14,138,000	13,096,000
Central of New Jersey	5,550,000	6,424,000
Lehigh & New England	3,284,000	2,808,000
Lehigh Valley	12,412,000	11,946,000
Delaware, Lackawanna & Western	9,986,000	10,521,000
Delaware & Hudson	9,337,000	9,264,000
Erie	5,229,000	4,881,000
Erie	6,504,000	7,069,000
N. Y. Ontario & Western	2,012,000	1,604,000
Total	69,023,000	67,613,000

Morgan interests, probably including the Van Sweringens, also control the Erie.

The Reading contended that the lease would open new through routes from the anthracite fields to New England via the Lehigh & New England. The proposed routing would save 27 to 73 miles in shipments from 15 representative Reading points to 14 points on the Boston & Maine. It would shorten the anthracite route to Boston 200 miles. In the view of the commission the longer routes are at present used to give the Reading a longer haul and more freight revenue.

Would Save Money.

The Reading also contends that the consolidation would save about $500,000 e year in expenses due to consolidation of staffs, etc. But, as the commission points out, "It is proposed to surrender to the owners of the leased property a large proportion of the financial benefit which the consolidation plan contemplates should accrue to the carriers for the benefit of the public through reduced rates and improved service."

The report makes it clear that there are large savings both in length of haul and in expense of operation which would benefit the consumers of anthracite in New England if the entire transportation system were unified under public control.

Doheny Boasts He Gives Quarters to Keep Workers Happy

By L. P. RINDAL
(Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 30.—A breakfast in the county jail the other day. Doheny, oil magnate, handed Sheriff Traeger e $5,000 donation toward the "salvaging of humans" (help to released prisoners). Class war prisoners, however, need not apply. One must be a law-breaker of the Teapot Dome variety, no doubt, in order to qualify.

Doheny's Goats and Sheep

"Every week dozens of men come to my home seeking aid," Doheny said. "They are never turned away. I have instructed the watchman to weed them out and, on his suggestions, Mrs. Doheny and I give them what he thinks they deserve. Sometimes it is a dollar, sometimes it is but a quarter."

So, in the words of Mayor Cryer, Los Angeles is really an "oasis of abundance." Wonderful generosity! But the poor creatures hardly need a big, black satchel to carry such huge sums of money away. A roundtrip ticket to Doheny's home on the trust-owned street car lines costs more than a quarter, anyhow, to say nothing about the repair of shoes, etc., after the long, up-grade walk over the steep hills, owned by parasites of the Hollywood plunderbund.

The watchman weeds out the goats from the sheep. The letter only get the quarters, and "sometimes it is a dollar." How, then, can Doheny, the churchman, "Christian" and city patriot for the sake of dollars, truthfully say that he "never turned away" anyone from his home without a quarter, at least, for carfare—to be spent on the enrichment of labor-baiting corporations. Doheny's place is always guarded to keep the poor as well as dogs, etc., out. But priests, the Galls and the Sinclairs are always welcome to help themselves all around. Doheny, the patriotic protector against an invasion of Hawaii Islands by the Japs, calls such doubtful generosity the "salvaging of humans."

Oh Those "Humanitarians"

Louis B. Meyer, motion picture magnate, and other big business men present at the breakfast table in the $8,000,000 jail building (where prisoners come and go at will, provided they have the——) also expressed themselves as being sympathetic to the sheriff's plan of helping the poor prisoners to get on their feet again after their release from jail. They promised to furnish released prisoners with work—"whenever possible." Meyer, head of the industrial commission, e year or so ago, Mr. Meyer made all kinds of promisee to femole movolo extras, in behalf of the overlords in the motion picture industry, but up till tlie dey nothing come ont of it. It wasn't "possible" to do anything, of course, except to flatter the exploited sepiranls to stardom by changing their title from "extras" to "artists."

Labor Party

Said oil-stained $5,000 check is really e good advertising stunt just now for a near jail-bird. Besides, the gasoline went up six cents e gallon yesterday. So Doheny is ready to "help" labor when he wes at the time he handed over 5,000 bucks to a crook-catcher.

Released prisoners? Well, they will have to get along the best they can.

Gifts in form of quarters, along with false promilsee, concerning betterment of the conditions on the slave market, may look and sound good to the sheep-like element in society; but class-conscious workers demand the full product of their labor. They demand e Labor Party of their own for a start.

Expect Power Lords To Fight Reservoir Flood Safety Plans

WASHINGTON, (FP).—Conservation engineers in and outside government service declare that the failure of the levees to hold the floods along the Mississippi and its tributary streams this year has made it certain that congress will revive next winter the whole controversy as to adequate methods of harnessing the rivers.

Army Misled People.

Influential newspapers in cities along the course of the flood are declaring that the army engineers have misled the country by their claims in past years that levees along the lower course of the river would meet all needs of flood periods. They demand a study of flood control by construction of dams and reservoirs on the upper reaches of the rivers.

Floods on the Nile have been stopped, and irrigation has been greatly enlarged, by the construction of the great Assuan dam. In the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys in California a state commission has constructed reservoirs that stop floods at the source, and that regulate stream flow during the entire year. On the Ohio River a similar project has been worked out. Civil engineering societies are now sending resolutions to Washington, pointing out that reservoir construction is the only sane solution of the Mississippi valley flood problem.

Would Make Cheap Power.

These reservoirs, held back by great dams, would be the means of generating quantities of electric power, which could be distributed to consumers by the government at low rates, and thereby promote development of many regions now in need of power. It is this feature of all reservoir construction which arouses the opposition of the General Electric power lobby. The power trust will back the army engineers in not insisting that more levees be built, and that reservoirs be let to private speculative enterprise. Every time a levee is built higher, the silt in the stream is built higher, the silt in the stream bed of the river rises higher, and the danger of breaks and widespread destruction from flood is increased. But levees do not bring the government into competition with the power trust.

John Brophy Shows Up District Machine

election, watched the convention of the serious predicament confronting the national union, outlined his own program and reiterated his faith in the miners.

Coke Workers Deserted.

He penned his main attack on Lewis' policy in District 2 on the desertion of the 100,000 miners in the coke fields in the 1922 strike. By sacrificing them, union miners in Pennsylvania and West Virginia were left exposed to the operators and gradually union conditions began to crumble.

Lewis himself then stepped in and signed separate contracts with operators, as Nenty-Gio, allowing them to run their mines part union and part scab.

Brophy criticized Lewis' sole attention to obtaining contracts for the union fields while neglecting the organization of the non-union miners.

"Organization of the non-union fields and the securing of contracts for them must be made of equal importance to the securing of contracts of the older fields," Brophy emphasized.

Three Big Issues.

Nationalization, the Labor Party and democracy in the union were also stressed as major union issues.

Replying to Lewis' statement at the indianapolis convention that he had been responsible for the loss of thousands of members in his own district, Brophy offered an analysis of membership figures showing that other districts had suffered even more heavily. District 2 is a buffer district, he pointed out, exposed to greater danger and receiving less international support then other districts.

For example in the last three years District 2 has paid $549,000 to the International treasury and received in return a donetion of $7,000 for the victims of two mine explosions and a loen of $20,000.

Districts Losses.

Membegship losses in various districts were noted as follows:

Central Pennsylvania
Dist. 2	39,000	17,000	22,800
Western Pensylvania
Dist. 5	39,000	18,700	20,200

Commons Argues Lipstick.

LONDON, May 15.—The lipstick is under fire in the House of Commons.

Colonel Day has queried the minister of health as to what steps he will take to prevent women from being poisoned by the use of cheap lipsticks. Another member proposed that lipsticks be entirely forbidden.

The minister of health is not prepared to announce a definite course of action.

STANDARD OIL IN JERSEY PLAYING BOTH OF PARTIES

BAYONNE, N. J., May 15.—In this town, largely dominated by the Standard Oil interests, citizens have just gone through a spirited election contest. There were several sets of candidates, one endorsed by the Hague machine Democrats, one set of opposition Democrats, another Republican set and still another good government slique. The original five endorsed by Hague had to be withdrawn because of the opposition to the silk hat slate and the fact that among them was the assistant superintendent of the Tidewater Oil Co., who is hostile to organized labor in Bergen County. The trade unionists opposed the ticket also.

A new set was endorsed by the Hague machine which included Dr. Daly and others. As a result of the election four Hague men were elected and one oppositionist, Donohue. These men of the machine had the support of the Hudson County Labor Union. The great mass of workers in the Standard Oil and other large plents remain unorganized and any attempts at unionization are prevented by the city police.

They railroaded organizers out of town who try to organise them. Class conscious workers and in a dilemma to understand the great trade unionists in Hudson County can be duped by the capitalist politicians of the democratic party.

Nevertheless the progressive workers through the ranks are carefully watching the trade union bureaucrats. In Passaic they approve republicans, in Hudson County they endorse Hague Democrats. Consider the fact that 22 bills introduced in the last state legislature were killed gy the politicians of both parties, we know what we can expect from these betrayers of labor and supporters of big business. The only remedy is to clean out all the false politicians and to organize a successful Farmer and Labor Party in New Jersey.

Oppose 80 Cent Cut in Hibbing Common Labor Rate

HIBBING, Minn., (FP)—May —The recent cut by the village of Hibbing in the common labor rate from $5 a day to $4.20 for 8 hours is severely condemned by the Hibbing Central Labor Union. The central body points out that the steel trust will cut its own common labor rate still further if the village persists in its wage-shaving policy.

The proposed change from Hibbing's 3-platoon system for city firemen back to 2 platoons is severely denounced by the central body as a backward step toward inefficiency in the department and unjust to the firemen. Local 172 of the Firefighters' Union unanimously opposes the change.

gained his title of "major" as a member of the Army War College where he taught various branches of electrical engineering during the war. He has for years been a representative here and abroad, of the Edison interests.

G. O. P. Fraud Friend.

The judge advocate-general of the Military Order, who is listed as "colonel" Reed is really United States Senator Reed from Pennsylvania, the senator from Pittsburgh who was appointed to office during the great coal strike. It was but ten days after his appointment that the "colonel" became forth with a strong anti-miners' declaration when urged the employers to start mine operations under government protection. It was Governor Sproul of Pennsylvania, who appointed Reed, who sent soldiers to "protect" the mines. Reed defended the infamous boss, Vare, in the U. S. senate from investigation by a senate committee.

The commander-in-chief of the Military Order has been an active mid in carrying out U. S. imperialistic ventures. He has twice served in the Philippines; took part "in the Vera Cruz Expedition" of 1911; served in the world war and was with the Army of Occupation in Germany.

His Hand in the Dough.

One of the honorary commanders in-chief of the order is Major-General George H. Herries, who, besides military activities against the Indians, and in various parts of the U. S. service, has been president of the Metropolitan Railroad Co. of Washington, D. C.; vice-president of the Washington Railway & Electric Co. and of all companies in that combination; president of the American Electric Railway Association, and of the Association of Edison Illuminating Companies. The Edison companies are well represented on this list of officers. Major Hammer is part of them too.

After seeing the list of officers and staff, one does not need to examine the books of the Military Order of the World War to verify that "they will collect many thousands of dollars from employers throughout the country" in gratitude for the frame-up of The DAILY WORKER and all other radical organizations or individuals they decide to attack.

RUSSIAN PARTY ASSAILS SPEECH OF G. ZINOVIEV

Talks Unity for Factional Purposes

MOSCOW, May 15.—Gregory Zinoviev's speech of May 9, before a non-party meeting in celebration of Trade Day and Fifteenth Anniversary of the founding of "Pravda," is now in the hands of the Central Control Commission of the Party.—The Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party severely denounced the disruptive speech of Zinoviev for its attacks on the Central Committee as well as upon the editors of Pravda. The Central Committee considers Zinoviev's speech as unprecedented in Bolshevist ranks and as absolutely inadmissable and disgraceful. The speech was in direct violation of all the Party decisions and of the agreement of the opposition, including Zinoviev, to cease all factional activity.

Denounced By Membership.

Leading committees and functionaries of the Communist Party in both Moscow and Leningrad emphasize in adopting resolutions against latest factional outburst of Zinoviev that his speech is clearly of a disrupting anti-Party nature and that it was intended to sap confidence in Party Central Committee and Pravda editors.

Fake Unity Proposals.

Zinoviev tried to conceal his disruptive speech under a fraudulent plea for unity. Instead of trying honestly to achieve unity in ranks of Party, instead of submitting to the Party decisions and fulfilling his promises to cease factional activity, he talks about unity, but in such a manner as practically to destroy such unity. His speech was a new step toward developing struggle against Party in absolutely inadmissable form.

Furthermore, the fact that this speech was delivered before non-Party meeting is an attempt to mobize non-Party masses against Party, for the purpose of obtaining outside the Party support that the opposition bloc could not obtain within the Party.

The Moscow and Leningrad resolutions declare his speech is a signal for split from Party and demand that he be called to strict account for his actions, considering especially the fact that Zinoviev is not an ordinary member of the Party, but a member of its Central Committee.

The Moscow garrison claims also that Central Committee and Central Control Commission should put an end to disorganizing tactics of the unprincipled and bankrupt leaders of opposition.

Results of the Conference of the Trade Union Committees and Consumers Cooperative Organizations on Price Reduction in USSR

(Bulletin of the Centrosoyuz).

MOSCOW.—Our work during the last three-four years since the termination of the civil war has restored our agriculture and industry to the pre-war level. However, although our industry has been restored, the prices of manufactured goods still exceed by far the pre-war level. Our state industry and the cooperatives are now confronted with the problem of reducing prices and thereby on the one hand increasing the buying capacity of the toilers, and on the other, avoiding the opening up again of the "scissors" representing the diffarence in the price index between agricultural and industrial products.

An agreement has been arrived at between the government, the state industry and the cooperatives, which resulted in the decision of the Council of Labor and Defense (a supreme government organ of the U. S. S. R.) of July 2, 1926. This decision calls for a 10% reduction of retail prices from the indexes that prevailed on May 1, 1926. A certain industrial produce by the 1st of August of the same year.

The price reduction campaign should not as yet be considered as ended. On the contrary, to the extent that the task of reducing retail prices still remains, as before, one of the most important tasks of the economic policy of the Soviet government we must draw the balance of the results obtained from the price reduction campaign, explain it, discover the factors which retarded the reduction of prices, draw up a prospective plan for further reduction and point out the best methods of actually bringing about reduced prices.

Task of the Conference.

All the enumerated tasks were brought up before the conference of representatives from the internal trade committees and the consumers cooperative societies by the trade commissariat and the centrosoyuz.

A number of factors which retarded the process of reducing retail prices was revealed at this conference.

Some of the factors are such as the rise in the wholesale prices of certain manufactured goods and increased expenditures on items which are beyond the control of the trading organizations (increased freight tariffs, higher rates of rent). It was also found at the conference that "one of the causes preventing the reduction of retail prices in many towns is the system of surcharges put into practice by the trade commissariat." This system is not flexible enough and often does not permit the local trading committees to fix a lower level of surcharges commensurate with the peculiarities of the market and the nature of the work of the local trading organizations. The conference devoted a good deal of attention to the circumstances that our trading apparatus is still imperfect and massive, it takes very long before commodities reach the consumer, and that the overhead expenses cause the prices to be very high. It was also pointed out that the working methods of the state trading apparatus and the cooperatives have not been sufficiently rationalized, and that this causes high overhead expenses, making the reduction of prices within a short period impossible.

It was also pointed out that the too simple commercial methods of approach on the part of many cooperatives and state trading organizations has also played not the least role in bringing about the meagre results obtained from the last price reduction campaign. The aspiration to replace the shortage of owned capital by an accelerated rate of accumulation, led to the absolutely impermissible utilization of the favorable market conditions for the extortion of extraordinary high profits.

What The Conference Decided.

In pointing out all factors which prevented the reduction of prices, and estimating them at their true value, the conference acted on the prospects of further price reductions.

The conference recorded that the divergency between industrial and agricultural prices on the one hand and between wholesale and retail prices on the other, menaces the further preservation of healthy relations between the town and the countryside. From here it follows that the reduction of retail prices still remains one of the principal problems of our national economy, to the correct and quick solution of which the efforts and energy of the trading and regulating organizations must be directed.

Insofar as a reduction of wholesale prices of manufactured goods is about to take place in the near future (such reductions are already being effected in some branches at the present time) it behoves the trading organizations to bring the full benefit of these reductions to the consumer quite apart from the reductions which these organizations must make on their part. In dealing with the questions concerning the sources of further reduction of retail prices, the conference directed its attention, in the first place, to the necessity of reducing the overhead expenses and the rate of profit of the trading apparatus. The conference pointed out that the further simplification and cheapening of the commodity conveying network must be accomplished through the elimination of cooperative and state trading organizations which work along parallel lines and through a maximum reduction of state retail trade in those places in which the cooperatives have the financial and organizational possibilities of attending to the requirements of the consumers, preserving thereby the credits and commodity supply to the cooperatives organizations which were formerly supplied to the state trading organizations in the district.

By eliminating parallel organizations in the trading system we will undoubtedly be able to further reduce retail prices, as this would lead the cooperative apparatus to its full capacity, and, consequently, would reduce their overhead expenses.

The conference also recognized the necessity of taking steps towards the reduction of the expenditures which are not under the control of the cooperative organizations. These are: better accountancy in transactions with the industrial organizations, current rate regulation through legislation. The reduction of retail prices must be carried out in each individual case in accordance with the special conditions of the various districts. Attention must be paid to the local conditions and particularly to the existing level of retail prices. Those districts and organizations which have already considerably reduced the retail prices, should reduce less than those which have as yet done very little in this respect.

In order that the retail price reduction campaign should be carried on systematically, the conference "recognizes the necessity of strengthening the regulation and control within the cooperatives and raising the responsibility of the higher cooperative centers for the work done by the lower organizations. Personal responsibility must be laid upon the heads of the trading organizations for the timely and full realization of the decisions concerning the reduction of prices."

This decision recognizes that principle of unity of the cooperative system which makes the entire system responsible for the work of each of its parts and places upon it the task of instituting regulation and control within the system.

The above does not cover all that the conference decided concerning the retail price reduction campaign. The conference recognized that this campaign can bring the desired results only on condition that the population, the social organizations and the press will take part in it. "Insofar as the reduction of prices can be accomplished only with the active participation of the people and the social organizations, we must secure the participation of the trade unions, the auditing and shop commissions and the press in the campaign."

Such, in brief, are the results of the conference.

IN THE CENTROSOYUZ

Results of the Centrosoyuz conference on the grain purchasing campaign.

The figures on the progress of the campaign during the first half of the economic year give us reason to believe that the general plan drawn up by the state for the purchase of 725 million poods will be fully realized by January 1st, 1927, 450 million poods, i. e. 62% of the entire plan, had already been purchased.

The further activities of the consumers' cooperative system must be carried on along the lines of the reduction of the overhead expenses and prices. The method of the general agreements, which has already justified itself, is considered as the best method of contact between the Centrosoyus and its periphery.

Simultaneously with the establishment of the right of the consumers' cooperatives, and the recognition of these rights by the state institutions, to partly participate in the purchasing of the grain, the question arises of securing mills and grain elevators.

The consumers' cooperators are of the opinion that they must extend their own system of mills and production of flour. The Centrosoyuz ground, in 1924-25, 84% of its grain in its own mills; in 1925-26 it ground 72%, in 1926-27, 63%; the respective figures on the grinding in other mills were 15%, 27%, 35%, i. e., the more it purchases the less can it have ground in its own mills. From here the necessity arises of extending its own flour production, as only by doing so would it be possible to reduce the cost and improve the quality of the flour and to consolidate thereby the position of the consumers' cooperatives on the home market.

The question of elevators and store houses is also not less important. The question of elevators is becoming specially important in connection with the development of exports. The consumers' cooperative system has certain obligations to the state in the sphere of exports. The conference therefore considered it necessary to settle also the question of extending the utilization of the existing elevators and the construction of new ones.

In the report of financing the grain purchases it was observed that the extent of financing this year is not sufficient.

On October 1st, 1925 the bank capital amounted to fr. 21 kopecks per pood in the purchases of grain; on October 1926, it amounted to fr. 6 kopecks per pood. On December 1st, 1925, it amounted to fr. 11 kopecks, and on December 1st, 1926, 92 kopecks. On January 1st, 1926, fr. 11 kopecks, and January 1st, 1927, 95 kopecks. The financing of the grain purchases has thus been reduced 16-17 kopecks per pood. And only because the consumers' cooperative finances have become strengthened and stabilized could they invest their own capital in grain and carry on the campaign successfully. However, in the second half of the year, the financing of the consumers' cooperatives must be improved and the question of loans and cheaper credit settled to facilitate the grain purchasing activities.

British Fascisti Are Arming Against the Next General Strike

LONDON, (By Mail).—The fascists are arming for the next general strike!

There can be no doubt that the various factions who describe themselves as "fascisti" have recently received large supplies of arms and rieved large supplies of arms and money from certain groups in Britain.

My informant, writes our special correspondent, is a socialist who has regarded British fascism as a menace from its inception. He is now in a position to secure valuable information regarding the fascist movement.

Huge quantities of arms and ammunition, he says, have been secreted in various parts of the country. Not only small arms, but machine-guns and artillery have been obtained from certain mysterious sources.

Secret Gang.

Standing above the open fascist organizations is a secret "grand council," composed of highly-placed army, navy, and air force officers, and a group of wealthy civilians.

The existence of this council is known only to a trusted few, and only half a dozen persons know the names of its members.

The council believes that labor will meet the Anti-Trade Union Bill with direct action. They believe that there must, sooner or later, be a real general strike, and see in this an opportunity for proving the value of fascist organization to the government.

The open fascist organizations are composed of irresponsible middle-class youths who are taught to regard the senseless slogan, "God, King, and country," as a political program.

But although they apparently lack capacity to think, these youths are receiving military training, and will prove a formidable fighting force.

Whether British labor likes it or not, it will find, as Italy, Germany, Belgium, and other countries have found, that fascism will have to be fought.

SACCO and VANZETTI SHALL NOT DIE!

Blackleg Tory Bill to Shackle Unions Says Cook

LONDON, (By Mail).—"The attack on the trade unions begins in the house of commons on Monday, when the employers' government will move the second reading of their Trade Union bill," said A. J. Cook to The DAILY WORKER.

"The government and the employers have been preparing their forces for this struggle for many months. They are determined to break the industrial power of the workers, and nothing has happened, so far, in the labor movement to show the government that a real fight is going to be staged against them.

"At the special conference of Trade Union Executives," continued Cook, "a free hand, instead of definite instructions, was given to the Labor Party. At this conference, called to discuss ways and means to fight the government's anti-labor bill, the only straight and definite policy put forward was that outlined by our courageous comrade, Alex Gossip, who, on behalf of the Furnishing Trades, submitted the case for definitely instructing the Labor Party to obstruct all business in parliament until the bill was withdrawn, and for the General Council to make all preparations for a General Strike, if necessary. This was swept aside.

"No wonder Gossip smiled when Bevin spoke on the need for organizing a united front to resist the government. There were miners at the conference who had heard similar brave speeches last year, and who had seen the same talkers run away when it became necessary to act in a courageous fashion.

Baldwin Doesn't Fear Talk.

"The Baldwin government—which was described by some at the conference of E. C.'s as the most brutal and cynical one in modern times—cannot be overcome by speeches.

"It will pay attention to nothing less than carefully-planned organized action. Anything less will encourage Baldwin and his colleagues, and the government to go even further than their present plans indicate.

"Some of the delegates, particularly those representing the Civil Servants and Postmen, knew how serious was the menace facing the workers. But the majority are depending upon the labor parliamentarians, and the government does and will not fear opposition from the labor members in parliament. The party intend to fight by means of amendments. The Trade Union bill cannot be amended, it must be rejected. The government by its mechanical majority will beat down the Labor Party opposition, and here we see why it is necessary that a strong line must be taken on the industrial field.

"In a very short time this will reeal itself in a weakened and impotent Labor Party.

"The Labor Party is only as strong as the trade unions; when they are destroyed the foundation of the parliamentary organization disappears. Thus, the blow aimed at the unions is also one that will prevent the rise of a Labor government.

Faced With Opposition.

"There is no escape, therefore, from the fact that if we intend to fight—we must fight now.

"I, and my left wing colleagues, shall go every inch of the way in helping the General Council to carry out its campaign against the bill. We will hope that as the campaign is carried to the masses in the districts they will realize the need for a wider and deeper struggle and demand the calling of a rank and file conference to enforce more militant methods."

Class War Going Strong in India Says Revolutionary Leader

LONDON, (By Mail).—"When I went to India I was accused of introducing the class war into the country," said S. Saklatvala, M. P., when interviewed by a DAILY WORKER representative on his recent visit.

"It is not a question of bringing the class-war into India. It is there already, and nobody can stop it," said Saklatvala.

"On the one hand you have the comfortable Indian gantleman leading a life of traditional Oriental luxury; on the other, millions of destitution more intense than anything imaginable in Great Britain.

"In many industrial districts the death-rate for infants under 12 months of age (excluding plague and other infectious diseases) stands at the appalling figure of 600 out of every 1,000—600 babies in 1,000 die! That this enormous percentage of deaths is due entirely to the half-starved condition of the infants' parents and to the insanitary environment into which these babies are born is shown by the infantile mortality among the richer classes, which is only 80 per 1,000.

of-work detectives, who served their apprenticeship in the art of finking under the tutelage of William J. Flynn, William Burns and A. Mitchell Palmer, is provided by the interest excited by the Sacco-Vanzetti case. Tales of dynamite being sent thru the mails to governor Fuller of Massachusetts are now daily features of the capitalist press. Those of us who remember the hectic days from 1919 until the Michigan Communist raid in 1922 will not even have to give a thot to the possibility that some insane friends of the condemned men might be guilty of such crazy deeds.

All, the explosions, planting of incendiary literature, threats, etc., were the work of agents provocateurs, or stoolpigeons, who make a living committing crimes which they fasten on others. According to testimony given from the witness stand by detectives who turned on their erstwhile employers, men like Burns actually plotted the assassination of individuals in high station in order to put the moneyed classes of this country in the proper frame of mind for a financial appeal. It was reported that William J. Burns threatened one of his agents offered $10,000 to a man for the assassination of Lenin and Trotsky. We already warned our readers that between now and the date set for the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti there will be plenty of "plots" against the lives of governor Fuller and Judge Thayer reported in the capitalist press. But those plots will be of the same character as the plot that brought about the conviction of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Mussolini Likes R. O. T. C. Idea and May Adopt Scheme

Mussolini is combing the world for ideas to bolstar up his blackshirt dictatorship of Italy.

Brigadier-General William Verbeck brought this news back from Italy with him yesterday when he landed from the liner George Washington. Mussolini has ordered a comprehensive study of the organization and methods of the American Army Reserve Officers Training Corps in his ever-widening search for new ideas to safeguard his fascist rule, the brigadier declared.

The American general was decorated as a "commander of the Crown of Italy" last January, and went to Rome to acknowledge his gratitude. A fascist himself in his sympathies, Verbeck was greatly impressed with Mussolini and "extremely enthusiastic" over his work. The supreme blackshirt gave the humble American general 18 minutes for an interview.

Likes R. O. T. C.

"A substantial part of those valuable eighteen minutes," General Verbeck said, "was devoted to a discussion of the training corps school idea and the possibility of its introduction in Italy.

He seemed deeply interested in the idea, and asked me to send him full data on the organization and maintinence of the training camp school. He seemed fully in accord with the idea, and most anxious to introduce it or its counterpart in Italy."

Cotton Man Strings Himself.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., May 15.—Edw. Knowles, 56 broker of cotton mill stuffs, committed suicide by hanging himself to a pipe in his home yesterday. His wife found him and called in a doctor to ascertain the cause of his death.

Knowles was formerly a treasurer in a Bristol mill. Lately he has been rather nervous.

Now the real fun begins. On Friday, the 13th of May, we were haled to the Court of Special Sessions to plead against the infamous frame-up which is being cooked up against us. We were remanded for trial on May 27th. Needless to say, neither Darte of the Military Order of the World War nor Seitz of the Keymen of America were called upon to plead.

But Darte and Seitz and the capitalist system for which they stand will never be brought to justice in a capitalist court. But the workers can and will try them before a court of proletarian justice, in which thousands of workers throughout the country, will act as the judges.

Every dollar you send for the defense of The DAILY WORKER against the attacks of the reactionaries, is at the same time a proletarian indictment of these enemies of the labor movement. Don't fail to plank down your contribution. Put it down with emphasis, to show just where you stand. Rush it along.

Get American Ships Out of Chinese Waters!

Screeching headlines in the reptile press declare that three vessels, flying American flags, two warships and one merchantman, were fired upon by soldiers of Chiang Kai-shek at Nanking. The yarn goes that the firing started from Nanking and was followed by volleys from Pukow, across the Yangtze river, adding that the warships "replied with machine gun and rifle fire until the Chinese were silenced."

Two damning points stand out in this story. Firstly, it is a confession that again American warships have indulged in a massacre of Chinese. How many were murdered is not known, and it is questionable if the number will ever be known.

Secondly, the motive for this new "incident," is plain to anyone who understands the elemental facts of the conflict raging in China. We can say without fear of successful contradiction that if the firing started from the shore it was at the behest of the British agents who are charged with carrying out the policy of the Baldwin-Chamberlain tory government. Deeply chagrined at its forced diplomatic retreat because the United States refused to join in a second note to China, infuriated because its conspiracy for joint intervention to regain its territory on the Yangtze was blocked by the rival power of American imperialism, Britain now tries to achieve intervention by provoking attacks upon both British and American ships on the Yangtze.

The fact that Chiang Kai-shek was unable, even with the backing of the imperialist powers, to consolidate anything resembling a government, doesn't mean that he will not be used by imperialism. If he cannot succeed in establishing a government, he can still be used for some other vile purpose and the unscrupulous agents of British imperialism have found another role for him. He is now playing the part of a provocateur. The fact that Nanking forces fire upon gunboats in the Yangtze proves conclusively that Chiang Kai-shek openly or secretly ordered it. Now it is possible for Austin Chamberlain to state before parliament that the one man whom he hoped would be able to bring "order out of chaos," has failed and that a more aggressive policy must be pursued. The assault also will serve as an excuse for those American agents in China who have been doing the dirty work of British imperialism to appeal for a reversal of the decision against more aggressive joint intervention. It is also quite probable that these identical American agents of the MacMurray calibre shared in the British conspiracy to incite Chiang Kai-shek to fire upon foreign ships in an effort to provoke an open war against China, in place of the hypocritical subterranean war that is now being carried on in an effort to throttle the nationalist revolution.

If there are people so credulous as to doubt that this government or the ruling class of Britain would deliberately hire Chiang Kai-shek, or any other gunman of imperialism, to fire upon their own ships and risk the lives of their own men, they should recall the lessons of history. They should realize that if the United States capitalist government did not scruple, nearly thirty years ago, to send to the bottom of Havana Harbor the battleship, Maine, with its human cargo, and blame it on the Spaniards in order to provoke a war in the interest of the Havemeyer sugar trust and the American tobacco company, the present day imperialists, with still more at stake, are capable of even more infamous crimes.

What do the capitalist governments of the world care about a few hundred or a few thousand men and boys, human cannon fodder, if they can gain advantages over their rivals and make secure the capital they have invested in foreign countries?

So amazingly rapid is the development of conflicting interests in China, so ominously hang the clouds of another world war, that every event, every report from that war-torn territory heralds in letters of fire the day when the last shred of diplomatic intrigue will be swept away by a whiff of powder and the grim and ghastly reality of another world war will demand of the working class the sacrifice of its all in order that the imperialist bandits may, with oceans of blood, again endeavor to tip the scales to decide who shall exploit the world.

Against these monstrous provocations, this prelude to wholesale death, the working class must prepare to hurl its power. We must insistently fight against the war in China. Demand that the United States government get its gunboats, its merchantmen, its soldiers and marines out of China and keep them out.

British Imperialism Acts in Desperation.

"Whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad," is ancient saying which applies with crushing force to the present imperialist government of Great Britain.

No madder enterprise was ever launched by frenzied ruling class than the raid on the offices of the Soviet Union Trade Mission in London under auspices of the British foreign office.

A political act of the most far reaching importance, the raid on "Arcos" has been staged with all the dramatic trappings available in order to create an atmosphere of mystery and hostility. The excuse given is that a document or documents are missing from the foreign office and the enterprising Sir William Joynson-Hicks, whom the Sablin exposure showed to be working closely with czarist refugees, thinks they may be in the offices of the Soviet Union Trade Mission.

This frantic hunt for non-existent documents on which to base charges of "a Communist plot" began with the raid on the Soviet Union embassy in Peking, continued with the siege of the Soviet Union headquarters in Shanghai and now reaches London. It is a desperate move by a desperate tory government confronted with a solid front of the working class at home and in its colonies and spheres of influence.

The first target of the raid of course is the Soviet Union. The second is the British labor movement and the third is the Chinese liberation movement.

The raid has been timed to coincide with the attempt of the tory government to enact the bill for the suppression of the trade unions and is an effort to divert attention from this colossal plot against the British working class. All signs point to the fact that the raid is part of the preparation for a general election which may be forced by the opposition to the unbridled reaction of the present regime.

It seems to us that the tories have chosen a bad time to appear in the guise of international burglars before the British masses. An agreement for a credit of $50,000,000 for the Soviet Union had just been reached with the Midland bank. The carrying out of this agreement would have alleviated unemployment to some extent. In addition to this the peaceful attitude of the Soviet Union in the face of continued imperialist provocations has aroused world wide sympathy and support among the masses.

Great Britain has been exposed jointly with American imperialism as the enemy of the Chinese liberation movement and this, coupled with the drive on the British working class, has tended to isolate the tory government.

Its raid on the Soviet Union Trade Mission brands it as an international outlaw jeopardizing the lives of millions with a threat of war to preserve its tyranny intact.

British imperialist government will not be able to repeat the forged Zinoviev letter incident. Its purposes are by now too well defined before the eyes of the masses in its offensive against them while it spends huge sums to crush the liberation movement in China.

The raid on "Arcos" will cement the bond between the Soviet Union, the British working class and the colonial peoples.

The recklessness of British imperialism makes doubly necessary the united front of the working class in defense of the workers' and peasants' government of the Soviet Union.

The "Dynamite Plot" Against Fuller.

No one with brain-power slightly above that of a gnat will believe that the package of alleged dynamite addressed to the governor of the state of Massachusetts, accompanied by a threat that more of it would be used in case Sacco and Vanzetti are executed, was sent by anyone other than some of the culprits who are trying to prevent an investigation in order to cover up their own crimes in connection with the frame-up against these two victims of class justice.

Such stunts are too crude to be effective. The creatures who are now trying, by concocting new perjury, to avert an investigation into their own acts hope to enrage Fuller by crudely designed threats of dire disaster so that he will refuse to intervene in the case.

No sane revolutionist ever resorts to such methods, despite the fiction to the contrary so carefully manufactured by the hack writers for patriotic societies.

It is not by individual terror, or the stupid propaganda of the deed, that these two workers will be rescued from the shadow of death and restored to the labor movement, but by the mass pressure of the millions of workers who are convinced that the whole case is one of the most monstrous conspiracies against labor in the history of the country, and every revolutionist knows it.

OFFICIAL CALL FOR THE CONVENTION OF WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY, JULY 10

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party, with approval of the Executive Committee of the Communist International, calls a convention of our Party to convene on Monday, July 10, 1927. Details concerning technical arrangements, basis of representation, etc., will shortly be transmitted to the units.

The convention, already overdue, has become especially urgent in view of the unprecedented offensive of American imperialism in Central and South America and China; in view of the growing danger of world war; and in view of the offensive against the trade unions begun thru the attack upon the vanguard of the labor movement as represented by the left wing and the Party.

The problems created by this situation must be properly analyzed by our Party and the entire membership mobilized successfully to meet the tasks that they impose.

The Polcom will prepare theses on the above questions and other tasks before the Party and submit them to the membership for discussion. The Party must not slacken its work during the discussion period but must rather use the discussion period to intensify its work in meeting the task before it and in mobilizing the entire Party.

COOLIDGE-KELLOGG POLICY IN NICARAGUA MAKES SHAMELESS RECORD OF UNPRINCIPLED OUTRAGES

(By A Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The incidents surrounding and leading up to the latest developments in the Coolidge-Kellogg policy in Nicaragua are but one more item in the long list of lies, stupidities and brutalities that has featured the course of their conduct of affairs in that hapless and helpless country.

Destroyed Government.

Time and again the president and his secretary of state have denied or given assurances of a certain course only to have it turn out, within the next few days at the most, to be exactly the opposite. First, they violated every shred of decency by backing Diaz, who was responsible for the overthrow of the legally elected government, and obtaining his election to the presidency. Then they sent down American marines to keep him in office. Finally, they sold him several hundred thousand dollars worth of government arms with which to crush the ever mounting revolt. And even this expedient failing, Coolidge sent down a special emissary, Colonel Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War in Taft's cabinet, to deliver an ultimatum to the rebellious Liberals.

Dumb State Department.

These events run through a period of some seven months—seven months of operations by Coolidge and Kellogg that are staggering in the enormity of the brutalities perpetrated and the almost complete indifference of the general public. The list of literal lies, bunk, blunders and stupidities that Coolidge and Kellogg have gotten away with—absolutely gotten away with—is unbelievable. These men have time and again said one thing and done exactly the opposite. Kellogg for a week denied that there was a censorship of the wires in Nicaragua and then finally admitted it, explaining that he "knew nothing of the matter." Which may have been true; it is unbelievable how little he actually knows of what is going on. This characteristic applies to the entire State Department.

Manufacturers of Lies.

Then both Kellogg and Coolidge dragged out a "Red" scare. Communists were afoot and plotting throughout Central America. When this blew up, weeks were spent in finding "reasons" for their operations. One after another they released such alibis as, "the protection of American lives," "protection of property," "protection of canal rights," "defense of the Panama Canal." All were let loose and all used, severally or singly from time to time.

All the while marines and more marines were being dispatched until there were some twenty-five marines in Nicaragua for every American citizen. Just how much American capital is invested in Nicaragua even the State Department does not know. Stokely Morgan, chief of the Latin-American division of the State Department, an authority who has never been down there, when questioned about American capital in Nicaragua told the senate making the inquiry that he did not know. He added that to the best knowledge of the State Department it was somewhere between $5,000,000 and $50,000,000. It is needless to say that it nearer $5,000,000 than $50,000,000.

What then was the reason for the almost unbelievable stupidities of Kellogg in Nicaragua. Simply, that being uninformed about matters there and depending upon such authorities as Morgan, little better advised and imperialistic in outlook and attitude, Kellogg found himself involved in a mistake and rather than admit it and lay himself and Coolidge open to derision undertook to maintain his position.

Blamed Mexico.

In doing so he was compelled to find someone to lay the blame on. Mexico was convenient and useable. The fact that the present Mexican government under Calles inclines toward the Left was added reason to Kellogg for embroiling it in the controversy. Also, Mexico was very much against Kellogg's choice for president of Nicaragua, rightfully holding that he was illegally chosen and was illegally holding office. Most other Latin-American Republics likewise dissented from Kellogg's choice, but that didn't bother "Nervous Nelly," or if it did he didn't let it swerve him from his course.

Desire More Territory.

To have admitted their mistake was conceived by Coolidge and Kellogg as giving away the whole show. The myth of the "strong silent man" in the White House is tampered with, the whole structure of the Administration will topple. So, just continuing himself in office, there are those who control his political destiny who have such ideas. Kellogg, of course, would merely be a puppet in their hands. He is totally and completely lost in the maze of international affairs and events. Newspapermen who attend his press conference can relate numerous instances where he in answering questions concerning certain international matters displayed the grossest kind of ignorance.

The Stimson Threat.

When the story came out of how Stimson was forcing a cessation of hostilities in Nicaragua, by threatening the Liberals with the use of American marines three incidents took place in Washington which were perfect examples of how Coolidge and Kellogg do things. The first was a denial by the two that a threat had been made; the second was a statement by Coolidge, through his secretary, the White House Spokesman, that if peace was established by Stimson that most of the marines would be withdrawn and the third, a distinctly characteristic Kellogg action, was his confidentially informing the reporters that Stimson had made the threat of using marines because General Moncado, commander of the Liberal forces, had asked him to include such a warning in the terms he made them.

More Rotten Lies.

This was an unequivocal lie. After first denying that any threat had been made, Kellogg in the slinking way that has so marked his public career, tried to get the newspapermen to put out the story that the Liberals were anxious to quit fighting and wanted an appearance of force and coercion before laying their arms. Moncado has been fighting like a marine supported gang of crooks and traitors for fifteen years. For him to give way in so cowardly a manner is unbelievable. As was proved by later developments, when Stimson in reporting on his operations frankly declared that he had demanded of the Liberals that they lay down their arms or the United States would disarm them. And that Mr. Stimson was not talking through his hat, was evidenced by the fact that two days later, Mr. Coolidge, who only the week before has solemnly spoken of withdrawing marines, and Mr. Kellogg who had glibly observed that there was all a piece of posturing, both ordered in 800 more marines to aid in the forcible disarming of the revolutionists.

The fact is that while Coolidge and Kellogg are giving out assurance of not having imperialistic designs in Central America that they are pursuing exactly such an imperialistic policy there and that the Central and Latin-American governments are aware of it. The record of their activities in Nicaragua, regardless of what they may yodel for home consumption, is a record of forcible intervention. So ardent a reactionary journal as the New York Times, in a special dispatch from its pet tri-weekly scribe, Richard V. Oulahan, said just this only a few days ago. This and much more, to the effect that not only is the present United States government using strong-arm methods in Nicaragua but that it is developing a policy toward Central-American countries that will mean an ever increasing and widening scope of interventionist operations down there.

In another three months Nicaragua will be another Haiti. The next thing on record is a wholesale killing of Nicaraguans by brave American marines eager in "disarming" them.

HUGH HUBURT

As the Season Wanes Another Comedy Here

"He Loved the Ladies," a comedy by Harbach and Hubert, has been opened at the Frolic Theatre (atop the New Amsterdam Theatre). The bearing of Trivelpan's title is really taken from every character. It is a sermon disguised as a comedy and reminds one of the efforts to make religion and the church palatable to a sophisticated people.

It warns the women of Babbitry not to indulge in the dangerous pastime of writing love letters, that sin is bound to be found out and it strives to show that the sins of the parent's are visited upon their children. It ever strains to call for that subtle emotion known as pathos, in the portrayal of the antics of Aubrey, the illigitimate daughter brot up in the slums of Chicago, trying to make an impression on the snobs of Pattonville.

The story is that of a wealthy batchelor, Hamilton Wayne, who was the Don Juan of the small town of Waynesburg. He is a pillar of society, respected and admired. After his death it is revealed that all the women of his circle had at some time had a love affair with him. There is the incriminating evidence of love letters written by these women and their lives become one mad pursuit to get those letters before they are read by their husbands. Aubrey, the snubbed outcast of Babbitry, sayes them by burning the letters.

With the exception of Louise Carter, in the role of Margaret Jellicoe, devoted doormat housekeeper to Mr. Wayne and mother of his illigitimate daughter, the cast is very poor.—N. M.

SECTION 2 CHALLENGES OTHER PARTY UNITS

The following letter has just been received from Comrade Leon Litwin, DAILY WORKER Agent of Section 2.

DAILY WORKER, 33 First Street, New York, N. Y.

Dear Comrades:

I am sending you herewith the sum of two hundred dollars for the Defense and Sustaining Fund of The DAILY WORKER. This money was raised through the activity and energy of the comrades in Units 1F and 2F, of Subsection 2B. You may be interested to know how this money was raised. Many comrades are needle workers and are being called upon repeatedly for the greatest sacrifices in connection with their struggle against the reactionary officialdom. The contribution of such a fine sum of money at this critical time must therefore be looked upon as a notable achievement, worthy of imitation by every unit in the party. First of all a few comrades borrowed this money from certain sources and then they pledged themselves to repay it in installments. Meanwhile the money has been placed at the immediate disposal of our paper.

Our comrades feel that at the present time, it would be the most unfortunate thing which could happen to our movement, if the patriotic societies would succeed in their attempt to suppress The DAILY WORKER. That is why they are making this great sacrifice. The comrades have further instructed me to challenge the other units of the party, and especially of our section, to do better. Let us see whether there are other units which can beat this record.

Leo Litwin,
DAILY WORKER Agent,
Section 2.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

After Effects of Gas.

Editor, The DAILY WORKER:

In reading an article in The DAILY WORKER, Friday April 15-27 (Current Events) I note General Fries, U. S. A., in addressing the American Chemical Society says "that war gas is not poisonous, does not contain germs and leaves no lingering after effects." Well if the General told that to the War Vets, I think he would get one tremendous razzing.

How about the "after effects?" Look at our buddies, thousands of them gassed, horrible human wreck, frail shadows of the men they were.

To write this letter is a waste of time as far as soldiers go. No person who has the slightest knowledge of war-gas would believe the general.

The most fierce and bloody destruction is between capitalist armies. Yankee soldiers did not flinch before the battering ram of the most efficient fighting machine the world has ever known (the Imperial German Army).

But they stacked arms and balked at fighting the Russian Red Workers' Army. What soldiers could stand up against the stuff the Bolshevik soldiers handed out? Also look how the North China Armies crumpled before the Southerners.

When German airplanes came over the Allied lines it meant bombs, or that they were the eyes of the enemy's artillery, and that the Allied trenches were to get hell from German guns.

In North Russia when those Red Army planes went up (the first time) the boys expected hell again, but when pieces of paper came sailing down asking, "Why Are You Here?" the officers (who would rather be back in Paris with wine and women) said "how in hell do we know we ain't stuck on this iceberg stuff!"

Well general, when the next war comes I think that after it gets started, if it is between capitalist nations it will be fierce and bloody for a time, then the soldiers will get wise like the Russians did. If it is between capitalist armies on one side and Communist or Red armies on the other I am firmly convinced that no capitalist army can stand up and fight a winning fight. Ask any soldier who has tried it. Only a small per cent of the real fighting force (the front lines at any one time) remain loyal to Nationalism when they are up against International truths.

The Second International Wheat Pool Conference

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 8. (By Mail).—The world power of the wheat growers held their second conference in Kansas City May 5, 6 and 7th, with over 250 delegates present representing United States, Canada, Australia, and Soviet Russia. The Canadian delegation was a dominating factor in the sessions with United States, having the majority of delegates representing nine state pools. The Soviet delegation consists of Saul G. Bryon as Chairman, Mr. Ohsol, Vice President of the Amatorg Trading Corporation and five other representatives.

U. S. Growers Hold One Day Session.

A day before the opening conference delegates from the American wheat pools held a conference hoping to consolidate their forces for better national cooperation and to formulate plans for the sessions the following days. The national committee elected is: Bruce Lampson, Colo; W. B. Bosworth, Minn; C. W. Croes, S. D.; J. Manley, Okla.; Ernest Frisall, Nebr.; E. D. Downie, Kansas; F. B. Benner, Ind; A. J. Scott, N. D.; and Judge L. Gough of Texas.

The wheat growers represent nine pools with 75,000 members and 200 delegates to the conference. The commodity contract plan of marketing the wheat, handling this one product, with members delivering all his market product through the pool for a specified number of years is carried out by the majority of the pools.

The national conference closed its session without announcing if they reached a basis for cooperation between themselves as desired.

Canadian Heads World Conference.

The world conference opened at the Hotel Baltimore with C. H. Burnell, president of the Manitoba Wheat Pool elected chairman. The object of the conference and its activity is cooperative marketing to eliminate speculation and to stabilize prices of wheat. Great strides in cooperative marketing of wheat etc., have already been made in Australia and Canada and in Russia with its vast cooperative movements.

Jardine Offers Federal Aid.

Dr. W. M. Jardine, Secretary of agriculture, arrived in time for the banquet and informed the delegates that the present administration is ready to assist the cooperative enterprise. However details are left to pools. It can be plainly seen that the present administration is making overtures to the farmers in an effort to win back some of the lost confidence the farmers received the last sessions of congress.

Dreams Brings Pools.

The Canadian Wheat Pool has 136,000 members handling 212 million bushels of wheat or 56 per cent. The cooperatives can influence on price as was pointed out by this week's quotations: Minn. 1.33; Winnipeg 1.50.

Cooperation in agriculture, according to Mr. Burnell, is the world's next biggest social development.

Sapiro Praised.

Aron Sapiro of the Sapiro-Ford suit was lauded as the man who made possible the Canadian Wheat Pool success. The great majority of the delegates are staunch supporters of the present system in spite of the speeches of condemnation by a number of speakers of the present system. Economic depression and overproduction (underconsumption) or wheat in post war time has brought to the attention of these farmers the system under which they live. How ever, a broad outlook taking in all the farmers as well as the workers is yet to develop among the majority or a militant section of the poolers.

Soviet Union Experts present.

Six and a half million farmers are represented by the Soviet Union agrarian experts. The Grain Export Corporation of the Union of Socialist Soviet republics has control of all grain for the expense of the farmers. At present the wheat export of the U.S.S.R. is 50 per cent pre-war total and within two years there will be over 100 million bushels. The planting this year will exceed the 1913 average.

The cooperative wheat growers in the U. S. S. R. receive a percentage of marked price when they deliver their export wheat and at the end of the season they are given the remainder. This plan is carried out in Siberia and the developing other cooperatives of the country are doing likewise.

Peasants Have Land.

M. Bron explained, in increasing our wheat production there is this significant thing to bear in mind; the Soviet Union farmers are producing for themselves now instead of for some landlord."

Basis For Pools.

During the war Russia left the field of export—what to other countries and in that time Canada, Australia, Argentine and especially United States increases their acreage. The post war period with financial capitalism unstable as possible, with an under consumption of wheat due to world condition of credits brought a slump in the wheat market that has brought great loss to many of the wheat growers in these countries that increased their production. Purely out of necessity of capitalist conditions, chaotic with speculators reaping the harvest, the individualist farmers of America were forced to follow the agrarian cooperative movement of the world as a salvation for their needs. In spite of their adoption to cooperative methods individualism still dominates the American section.

The composition of the conference from the extreme right to the left, from Jardine, Secretary of Agriculture, representative of Coolidge-Mellon group to the Soviet group representing the interest of the agrarian population in the first workers' republic is significan. The wheat poolers are united on eliminating the speculators and increasing the wheat growers share of production.

The cooperative activity of the Soviet Union springs spontaneously from their system while cooperators, national units within capitalist controlled states, are forced into the field of cooperative marketing as a way out of the anarchy of the capitalist economic order.

The world conference with an object of stabilizing world wheat prices is on the one hand a means of further stabilizing the temporary stabilization of capitalism by one group while on the other hand it is a means of capital, through the export of wheat, by the growing Soviet system as well as a reshifting of world forces toward cooperation as a natural growth of the order in the dawn of the transition period to communism. In spite of its present weakness from a world standpoint its strength is in favor of the society of the future.

A specter haunted the conference. Coolidge's representative sat in the same conference with Russian agrarian experts; necessity drives the hangfiend from the blood stool while representatives of the Soviet cooperatives stalked the floor.

At the close of the conference an international committee was elected consisting of C. H. Burnell, Chairman; G. W. Robertson, Canada, Secretary; E. R. Downie of Kansas; Lew Hutchinson of Canada, John Manley of Okla.; A. J. Scott of N. D. The committee added to the number Saul G. Bron of Russia, C. Judd of Australia and W. A. Leod of Canada.

They have established a World Wheat Bureau where marketing information, statistics and a clearing house for such will relder service to the sections. The next object of most of the delegates is to establish a world pool.

W. H. Settis of Indiana said, regarding Jardine's offer of 25 million from the government, "It is nothing but sop, a compromise." "The 25 million is a drop in the bucket to what is actually needed." Settis is an advocate of the McNary Haugen bill that was vetoed. The American representatives have not come to a common understanding and many are still in the swamp of capitalist economy. Jardine's offer has followers and this will be an issue in the coming sessions of the States pool sessions.—Hugo Oehler.

LABOR BAZAAR GOES OVER BIG AT STAR CASINO

Joint Defense Rallies Greatest Throng

There have been other labor bazaars before the Defense Bazaar a. New Star Casino, 107th St. and Park Ave., which opened on Thursday night, but there has never been such a crowd at an opening night, and there has never been a more spendthrift, enthusiastic crowd at any similar event in this city.

Workers and their wives, and their sweethearts, and their neighbors were there by the hundreds; and those who could not pierce the crowds on Thursday night were there last night to do their spring and summer shopping.

In view of the record attendance at these two first nights of the bazaar, it was decided to run it every afternoon and evening.

The bazaar is the joint undertaking of the International Labor Defense and Workers (Communist) Party, and the proceeds will be used for the defense of class war prisoners.

Among the articles to be put on sale tonight is an original drawing of Ben Gold, made by Hugo Gellert and recently printed in The DAILY WORKER. There is a drawing of Isadore Shapiro too, and some original prints by Glintenkamp, Becker and other DAILY WORKER artists.

If any night-wingers have strayed into this Defense Bazaar they must feel sick at heart. It is a splendid expression of left wing solidarity, and the determination to fight the forces of reaction in the needle trades unions; as well as to care for the families of the men now in jail for their union activities. It is proof that these workers are not forgotten or neglected by their loyal fellow-workers outside. They will be freed.

Lathers Get $13 Day for 3 Years.

DETROIT, (FP).—Union lathers in Detroit will draw $13 a day under the new agreement expiring April 30, 1930.

Cautious Cal Careful On His 1912 Statement Against Third Term

WASHINGTON, May 13.—President Coolidge today refused to comment on reports that in 1912 he signed a petition opposing a third term for any president.

Numerous queries on the subject were submitted to him at the regular White House conference with newspaperman but he ignored all of them, refusing either to deny or confirm the reports.

Chemistry is as attractive a subject to Miss Mary C. Watson, of Paducah, Ky., and Miss Eleanor Franke, of Louisville, Ky., high school students, as cooking and sewing is to most girls. Both won prizes in an essay contest sponsored by the American Chemical Society. Miss Watson wrote on the subject, "The Relation of Chemistry to the Enrichement of Life," while Miss Franke's subject was, "The Relation of Chemistry to Forestry."

Women in Tennessee Miserably Underpaid

By LAURENCE TODD. (Federated Press).

WASHINGTON (FP).—Women employed in representative stores, factories and laundries in 28 cities of Tennessee are paid a wage miserably below any decent living standard. That is the out-standing fact disclosed by a report just made by the Women's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor on the status of the wage-and hour of those women. Some 216 establishments, employing 16,506 women, were the lines for this investigation. They were carefully selected as being typical of the larger groups in all communities.

The bureau's investors found that ers. They are liable to all federal the median weekly wage for these legislation for the protection of women was $11.10, and the year's women in industry. Recently they median earnings $629. That means were lined up for the statistical ranlabor on the basis of the wages

The telegraphist Smirnov entered the room, accompanied by several sailors. They were all armed with revolvers taken from the officers. He took in all the prisoners with a quick glance and said in a commanding tone:

"Calm yourselves, sirs. It is all over. You will not be touched."

In answer came a joyous sigh, full of gratitude.

"You are to allow no outrages on the part of the crew. If this order is disobeyed you will face the revolutionary court martial."

"Aye, aye," boldly answered the watchman.

"The corpses must be removed. Throw the electrician overboard and carry the sailor out on the upper deck."

Smirnov then left the room with his suite.

As I had supposed, he was the leader of the mutiny. This was just as it should be: quick, intelligent and firm in a crisis.

Steward appeared, removed the corpses, then washed up the blood with cloths and mops and brought the mess-room back to order.

To our surprise, the turbulent mood of the crew soon calmed down. Even our guards seemed bewildered. Evidently everyone was wondering what was happening on the other ships. It was not difficult to guess that there the rebellion was delayed. This rejoiced us little for if the sailors even suspected that they were threatened with danger, we could expect little consideration. The twelve watchmen, armed with rifles, would leave us dead men in an instant. Moreover, I, and the other officers who were in my confidence, remembered the admiral's words: the ship taken by mutineers would immediately be sunk by the other ships. From that quarter destruction was all we could expect. Our "Thunderbolt" stood in the middle of the squadron. They could not miss us at that distance and one volley was sufficient to destroy us completely. We had just seen death, horrid and disgusting and it was with a shudder that we waited for the moment when tens of large-calibre guns would spit steel and fire at us from their wide maws. I do not know what my assistants thought of it, but I hoped that the sailors would rather twist off the stupid old head of the admiral. A dark shadow of uncertainty hung over our lives.

The captain of the guard was the gunner, Gasihin. The other men stood but he sat heavily on a chair near the door. His head, covered by a peakless forage cap, was slightly bowed in thought. His face, wide in the temples and tapering toward the chin, was gloomy and immobile as a mask and his grey eyes receded under the bending brows. Occasionally, without turning his head, he flicked us with a side glance. Sailors began to appear in the mess-room. Apparently they came from the upper deck with good news which they communicated in whispers to the watch. Gasihin himself and his men became more cheerful, whispered to each other, smiled. It was not difficult to conclude from this that the other ships had gone over to the revolution.

I addressed our watch:

"May I smoke, comrades ?"

Gasihin turned to me and said kindly:

"If you please. It will not harm the revolution."

I took a silver cigarette case from my pocket, took a cigarette from it, then offered it to the watchmen. They did not refuse.

We puffed away.

I felt more at ease, as though a cold hand which had been clutching my heart had loosed its hold.

Only now I noticed that my former subordinates, the officers, electricians and junior officers, gazed at me with envy like a dog at the master who is consuming a savory meal. I was irritated by this servility. What did they hope for now?

"Why do you not smoke?" I inquired.

The answer was accompanied by a polite bow.

"We will, with pleasure, if you do not object."

"I am a prisoner as well as you," I exploded. "There is no difference between us. Here is where you must address yourselves."

I waved in the direction of the watch. They wilted.

"I think all were given permission to smoke."

There was a clicking of cigarette cases and a scraping of matches. Hope shone in their eyes.

A sailor ran in and whispered something in Gasihin's ear. The latter ordered all the engineers to return with the messenger and sent a couple of two with them. At first we were afraid that they would be shot but our fears were soon dispelled. We had taken several of the engine parts off for the winter and the machinists had now decided to have the engines ready in case of emergency. The stokers too were busy, raising steam in the kettles. I was greatly pleased by this cautiousness, and was anxious to see how the mutineers would proceed further. The ships were standing in ice at the dock. Ice-breakers would have to be used before the ships could be taken out to open sea. What steps would they take in this direction?

My thoughts were interrupted by the appearance of the ship's cook in the doorway. Very tall and stout, he now presented an imposing appearance. He was arrayed in all his finery, a snow-white cap and a spotless white apron. He entered the mess-room pompously as though he were our chef, glanced at the prisoners and spoke slowly in a bass voice, accenting the "o" in his Vladimirski accent:

"It is warm and light here, yet look at these cowers."

He turned to the watch.

"And I, brothers, am cooking a dinner for the crew."

The men looked at him in surprise.

"What possessed you to cook dinner at night?"

"How else could we celebrate our success? What joy it is to have the officers' cook for my assistant. Ah, such soup as I'll have! You haven't tasted the like since you entered the service. Two pounds of meat for each man. Pray the Lord it will continue thus."

"That's fine!" exclaimed one of the watchmen, rubbing his hands delightedly.

The cook went out with his head thrown proudly back, as though inspecting the vessel.

Two hours more of tortuous waiting passed. No new measures were taken against us. Some of the prisoners sat on the chairs and on the divan, others stood around, lounging against the walls. Several were continually blowing their noses.

I grew tired of this and decided to talk to our guards. Crushing down my loneliness and desperation, I assumed a jesting and carefree tone:

"You put it over us well, brothers. You had the ship in a moment, as though according to schedule."

"You can't dawdle in a case like this," one of them muttered.

The gunner Gasihin turned to me with a shrewd smile:

"And you had prepared to resist?"

"To tell the truth, our position was such . . ."

"Oh, we know everything," he interrupted me. "We even know that Lieutenant Brasov wanted to blow up the ship and you forbade him. He couldn't have done it anyway."

This last astonished me. I stared at Gasihin with my mouth open.

"Here is something I did not expect!"

"Of course you did not expect it because you considered us ignorant cattle."

"I never thought that of sailors." I retorted hotly.

But Gasihin continued to stun me with new data.

"That is very noble of you, only I will tell you that we know all your spies."

At his last words, some of the arrested junior officers seemed to shrink and hung their heads lower.

I immediately drew the logical deduction: this is why everything on my ship was so peaceful till the right mmment came. We had not had a single political arrest throughout the war. Our secret agents, being known to the sailors, were perfectly harmless to them and useless to the administration. But then where did the crew get all our secrets? Was one of the officers a traitor to his caste? My muddled head throbbed with ideas, trying to solve this puzzle.

At midnight they served us with dinner. We were waited on by our stewards. The officers were given soup in tin bowls but of me they made an exception—they give me a plate, a silver spoon, and a napkin. The soup was rich and contained a great deal of meat. While the watchmen were consuming their soup with wolfish appetites, smacking their lips and perspiring, there was complete absence of appetite among the officers as there was still a taint of human blood in the air of the messroom. And yet we ate as though forced to do it.

After dinner, according to Smirnov's orders, I was told I might retire to my cabin if I wished to do so, but was strictly forbidden to appear outside the officers' quarters. The boatswain, Soloveikin, was given his freedom. Overjoyed, he exclaimed:

"Humbliest thanks, comrades! I am wholly on your side. I quarreled with the crew only for appearance sake."

"Not so thick, boatswain, not so thick—we'll find you out anyway," Gasihin told him.

The boatswain swore many oths to attest his faithfulness to the revolution.

But when I went to my cabin for cigarettes, he followed me into the officers' corridor and, leaning over my left shoulder, whispered cautiously.

"Sir, I know all the instigators and can give definite proof."

"Go to the devil," I hissed. "What good are your lying tales to me now?"

He slid ahead of me and, stooping, passed quickly into the quarters of the crew.

I was extremely surprised that nothing in my room had been touched; everything was in its accustomed place. This was a good sign. Taking my cigarette, I returned to the mess-room. I wanted to see what was happening on the other ships, so, complaining of a headache, I asked the captain of the guard for permission to mount to the upper deck for a few moments to get some fresh air. I was given polite permission and one of the watch was told to accompany me.

We mounted by the officers' trap. As soon as my head appeared above deck, a gust of wind splashed my face with cold. On reaching the deck, I looked around; at the first glance everything appeared as usual, the squadron was in the same position as during the day, the ice had not been broken and continued to hold the waters of the harbor in its cold fetters. As last night, rigged clouds tore swiftly across the sky and between them, in the dark and distant heights, shivered the golden splashes of stars. There was only one change: on the naked masts of all the ships, large and small, heavy and swift, glowed crimson lights. These told all—the border of the new era, joy and hope for some, tears and despair for others. To be sure, in the distance one glimpsed a mighty fortress, dark and silent; evidently there had been no uprising as yet. Perhaps its heavy artillery was trained on our squadron. But could it stop the unbridled onslaught of revolution?

I glanced at my towers; all were turned so that the muzzles of their guns faced shore, all the cannon were trained on the iron-bound embankments. On the bridge passed the dark forms of sailors, looking through glasses. The ship was preparing for battle. Evidently all the squadron was on its guard.

On the farther side of the fortress, nearer to us, glimmered the occasional lights of the city. Proceeding toward it along the ice was a large party of sailors. They were evidently going on shore to start the rebellion there.

I had a wife and daughter in the city. I had seen them only yesterday. Will I ever see them again? At this thought something seemed to strike to my heart and deep in my soul a cord snapped. I stood with my hands in my pockets, feeling as firmly as if the whole world had betrayed me. Three paces away stood a watchman who would put a bayonet or bullet into me at the slightest suspicious movement on my part.

I turned my head at the sudden sound of screams and curses. A few men were dragging the boatswain, Solovelkin along the deck; he was hanging back and pleading.

"Brothers, what are you doing? Let me go. I will swear by all that is holy that I said nothing. You may ask the captain—"

"Liar, traitor! We heard you ourselves."

"Have mercy, comrades. You'll make two orphans."

"You should have thought of that before," a stern voice answered him.

Near the railing he sank down on his knees and, unable to speak, moaned piteously. The night whistled mockingly through the rigging. For a moment the gloom was torn by a burst of fire. The wind caught up and carried into the darkness the sounds of a revolver shot and a dying scream.

There was an abrupt command, "Heave!"

And the dead body of Solovelkin thumped on the thick ice.

I looked overboard; there, on the glassy surface of the water were the dark spots of corpses—the first mate, Ismaelov, Lieutenant. Brasov, the electrician Golovin and others whom I did not know. Perhaps the same fate would be mine. I felt the blood thicken in my veins.

Night hung heavily over the earth. A cold wind tore through the darkness. From countless masts glowed the rays of swinging red lights.

O Russia! Where are you bound? When we came down again, I was permitted to retire to my own cabin for the night.

The morning after the mutiny the city and fortress were in the hands of the revolutionists. This averted the serious menace threatening our squadron. The revolutionists were now safe.

(The Captain is Tried by His Crew.)

Smirnov, taking advantage of the moment, shouted: "Vote! All those against the captain raise hands."

Not a hand was raised. Even my enemies remained motionless. Everyone looked embarrassed, as though caught in a treachery.

A lusty voice shouted.

"Toss the comrade, toss the captain!"

"Toss him, toss him!" joyously caught up the others.

The crowd of shouting sailors rushed at me as though storming a fort. My guards brushed aside, countless hands tossed me into the air with such gusto that all the buttons flew off my coat. My head rolled, my arms and legs were almost dislocated. When it was over, I was too weak to stand on my feet and staggered awkwardly on the deck. The sailors again caught me up, but gently this time, and carried me to my cabin, howling the Marseillese.

My wife has just returned from market with her purchases and complaints.

"Can you imagine it, Vasili? Neat has gone up five kopeks all of a sudden and they say that soon there will be none at all."

I widen my eyes in feigned surprise and ask,

"How is that?"

"That is because there are only vulgarians left in Russia. You had better stop writing, Vasili, and bring in some wood. I must start the fire."

The matter cannot be put off—I must obey my wife.

A slight breeze from the window rapidly turns the leaves of my old notebook. It too wants to learn of my past.

Yours as ever,
V. A. Vinogradov.

MISSISSIPPI FLOOD COULD BE PREVENTED, SAYS ENGINEER WHO PLANS NILE RIVER CONTROL

By CHARLES P. STEWART.
(Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to the Daily Worker).

WASHINGTON, May 15. Mahmoud Samy Pasha undoubtedly has told more floods who to head in at than any other man in the United States.

SAMY PASHA

M. Samy is Egyptian minister in Washington.

He's an engineer. His engineering specialty, at home, is making the Nile behave.

Regularly every year, since long before the first pharaoh began building pyramids, the Nile has started to go on the rampage, just as the Mississippi did this year.

With equal regularity, the river control folks have taken the venerable stream in charge, adapted all the solid part of it to soil fertilization, utilized all they wanted of its liquid ingredient for irrigation purposes, and emptied the rest out into the Mediterrancan, as casually as you'd drain the water out of your bathtub.

Of course it mustn't be assumed that the Nile control system was as perfect when Moses was still living in Egypt as it is today.

Even then it possibly was better than our present Mississippi River system, but M. Samy doesn't feel that there's boasting much about it. Now, however, he assures us, it's as dependable as a flivver factory.

They simply don't have Nile valley floods, M. Samy says.

They have irrigation, because they need it, but it's regulated to a bee's knee.

M. Samy put all his trust in levees. They have gotes in them to let out such water as the crops require—that much and no more—and that's all they do let out.

They're stronger levees than the Mississippi's, and higher. They have a five-foot safety margin, instead of only two feet, as on the Mississippi. Some are set back from the river half a mile or a mile and some are set, depending on the circumstances. In places there are two sets.

"Oh, yes, the initial expense is high," agrees M. Samy, "but they pay for themselves."

There also are revetments where they're needed, and the river's course is given a certain amount of direction, but in the main the system is one of levees.

As for breaks—

"There's no danger of breaks," says M. Samy, "if leaks are stopped promptly, and that's a mere question of careful watching, and having plenty of men on the job the minute they're needed."

Forestry experts blame destruction of its headwater timber for the Mississippi's unmanageability.

The Nile rises in the Abyssinian mountains. They're thickly wooded, now as always. If their trees were swept away, would the Nile still be controllable?

M. Samy shrugs his shoulders. Never having tried it under circumstances, he doesn't know. Yet he has vast confidence in his well-guarded levees. It's hard to convince him Mississippi floods are inevitable.

SPORT

Those Men of Old.

This year will be famous in sport as the year of the great "comebacks" of the athletic G. A. R. Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker have proven that altho the aged flesh might be weak you can still rock the ball with spirit.

Meanwhile old Grover Alexander, a pre-civil war old-timer who still carries a pack o' chewin' in his hip pocket, contrary to the rules of the new type of college intelligentsia ball player, is pitching in a style that makes us believe the old soup bone that earns his salary will never wear out.

Meanwhile Tilden, who has been tennis champ since Hector was a pup, together with Hunter, has beaten the German Davis cup team and has put the Holland team in dutch. Looks as if his form means a possible Davis cup championship. Youth must be served, but when old Tilden does the serving, youth is in a helluva fix.

Which brings us back to the noble art of cauliflowering ears. Jack Dempsey is reported socking 'em for a row of ash cans in his training camp. Sports writers are reporting enthusiastically that the severe training Dempsey has gone thru has put him into shape that promises trouble for the present champ and marine recruiting agent. Wherever the elixir of youth has been found is a mystery. It must be that the big financial profits of modern professional (so-called) sport has put new vigor into petrifying bones.

Subway Stuff.

"Where the hell do ya get that stuff," I says to him. "Whatta ya mean, a five dollar cut per week?"

"Just like that, Jack!"

"Ya damn right! Whatta ya mean" I says to 'im. "Ain't I worked five years in this dump? Didn't I start for twenty-five and work up to thirty?"

"And he cut ya back to twenty-five?"

"Sure. That's what I told 'im! Here I says, "I puts in five years workin' like hell f'r you and now I'm where I started."

"What'd he say to that?"

"Well, business is slow he says, we have to cut down expenses. Expenses hell, says I. And how about my expenses? I've cut 'em down now as much as I can. I gotta eat don't I? Believe me boy, I told that bird sometin'."

"Good stuff!"

"And that's what I get f'r stickin' when the strike was on. I says, When the other drivers walked out two years ago I stayed. And this is what I get! Believe me that guy had no come-back to that one!"

"Atta boy, Jack, ya don't get anywhere by crawlin'."

"No, sir, I just hatta get it off my chest!"

"Well, whatta ya goin' to do now? Get another job?"

"No-o-o, not yet, I ain't goin' to let 'im run me out like that, boy! I'll stick I says to the boss. I'll stick awright. I'm not a Russian Bolshevik. Believe me boy, I told that guy somethin'. I'm no damfool I told him. Not by half-mighty. Ya don't catch me letlin' those guys get away with it!"

"Hot stuff Jack. They kin pull that stuff on dumb foreigners but not on us guys born here."

"You said it! Jeez, here's my stop. See you at the poolroom tonight, Jim. S'long."

"S'long Jack."

A Soldier With Sex Appeal

When Miss Mildred Wineland, freshman at Wittenberg College, Springfield, O., isn't occupied with her debating activities as a member of the first year team, she finds time to act as sponsor for the Ohio National guardsmen. She is wearing her sponsor's uniform, above.

In these times when the clouds of war are on the horizon, our capitalist militarists are using every means at their disposal to raise the war hysteria among the population. Sex appeal to the young men of fighting age is one of the means as is shown by the illustration. A few weeks ago Soviet property was destroyed in Peking and only the other day the Arcos Ltd., a Soviet Institution was raided in London. The next step will no doubt be the raiding of the Soviet Institutions in the United States. All this is being done in order to provoke the Soviet Republics. Their growing power is felt by the capitalists and every attempt is being made to thwart it. The United States is not innocent of all these maneuvers as we are going ahead full steam making preparations for war. Suffice it to say the growing propaganda and the strength of the Army, Navy, National Guard and the Citizens Military Training Camps. The raid on Soviet property in Peking was done with the consent of the American Minister to China. The Youth of this country must fight all attempts at militarization, protest against the part taken by our government in the murder of Chinese workers and express solidarity with the Chinese Revolution and the Soviet Union.

SIR William Joynson Hicks's Scotland Yard burglars have "discovered" important documents in the premises of Arcos, the headquarters of the Russian Trade Delegation in London, according to the Daily Mail, tory organ and unofficial mouthpiece of Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer and prime mover in the conspiracy to bring about a rupture of diplomatic relations between Great Britain and the Soviet Union. The important official secrets that the detectives were supposed to be looking for have not materialized but the burglars are still drilling away at the Soviet safes and they have not yet given up hope. Perhaps the forgers are a little behind schedule with the job.

AS we predicted a few days ago our best capitalist papers will soon be publishing the captured documents judging from news dispatches that appeared in yesterday's papers. The extreme right wing of the tory government wants an immediate rupture of relations. Winston Churchill hopes to capture the premiership on this issue. He is a typical fascist and admirer of Mussolini. In this period of British imperialist disintegration Churchill may succeed in his schemes. The days of punitive expeditions abroad and peace at home are gone. The cradle land of liberalism is now a seething cauldron of revolutionary elements. Britain is approaching the day when the question of a Workers Government or a fascist dictatorship must be faced in real earnest.

PRESIDENT Doumergue and foreign minister Briand of France are about to pay a visit to Buckingham palace. The visit is represented as a formality but it has political significance. The British King serves more purposes than contributing to the prosperity of sundry distilleries. He serves as a gaudy political figleaf to cover the wrinkles in British diplomacy. It should not be forgotten that president Poincare of France visited the Czar of Russia shortly before the beginning of the late world war. It is almost a certainty that Russia will again be a topic of conversation at the Buckingham Palace talkfest, but this time it will be the Soviet Union, a power that can neither be bribed nor awed by the money or the military forces of imperialism.

THE K.K.K. is dying but the American Legion is its legitimate successor in the business of intolerance. This is the opinion of the Civil Liberties Union included in its summary of a report of violations of the rights of free speech and reactionary violence during 1926. The report states that there were 28 meetings broken up in 1926 against 22 in 1925, 34 lynchings in 1926 against 18 in 1925. Failure of congress to take action against lynching is blamed for the increase. Yes, sir, we are progressing.

THERE is still a headline or two left in the Snyder-Gray murder case. the culprits are on their way to Sing Sing and large sections of the population are counting the days until they can smell the burning tissues of the condemned murderers thru the lurid pictures of the execution that will appear in the capitalist press. The sadist spook-monger Roach Straton will not sleep peacefully until the two unfortunates are wending their spiritual ways to either heaven or hell. Roach says he is hopeful Gray will take an upward flight because he surrendered to Jesus, but he has his doubts about Mrs. Snyder. ARCOS RAIDS DISCREDIT TORY GOVERNMENT

DIST. 2 MINERS PLAN TO JOIN NATION STRIKE

Idleness Is Menace to Central Pennsylvania

DUBOIS, Pa., May 16.—(FP)—Central Pennsylvania miners held their sixteenth convention of District 2, United Mine Workers, in an atmosphere darkened by unemployment and an impending strike against wage reductions.

The twenty thousand members of this field may later be added to the 150,000 on strike in western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. They have a temporary truce with their operators which the employers say may be terminated at any time. But the truce is not booming a depressed industry. Many of the central Pennsylvania pits are idle, while the market eats into the huge piles of coal still in storage.

Prolonged negotiations are expected when the operators meet with the officers of the district as to a new agreement. The scale committee was empowered by the convention "to secure the best agreement possible as to wages and working conditions, based on the basic wage rates recognized by the international policy committee for a period of two years, the scale committee to be given full power to act as in their judgement the circumstances may require to protect the best interests of our membership"—any agreement to be ratified by a referendum.

For Progressive Measures.

But in spite of the uncertain industrial situation the convention passed a series of progressive resolutions in the closing days of the meet. The nationalization of mines resolution written by former district president John Brophy, was adopted, and the delegates went on record for the freedom of Sacco and Vanzetti and the Labor Party movement.

Labor Party talk is not thin air in central Pennsylvania. In Cambria county where more than twenty local unions are constituent units of the Labor Party two assemblymen were in office last year, and a number of Labor Party burgesses and chiefs of police. The defeat of the Labor Party at the polls last Fall is not final. The delegates instructed the union to "lend every aid" to the party where it existed and "to assist actively in the formation of such Labor Party units where they are not already organized."

Brophy Big Figure.

John Brophy was not a delegate but he had the floor several times and his influence was strong. Following the ending of his term April 1 he moved to Pittsburgh and on this ground his credentials from the Expidit local were turned down by a vote of 58 to 53, though the credentials committee supported him. Several candidates in sympathy with him voted with the administration on the assurances of President James Mark that Brophy would be given the floor whenever he might be attacked.

Wall Street Declares War Upon Labor Thru Its Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court of the United States has declared the California criminal syndicalism law constitutional. According to press dispatches the decision is unanimous, Justices Holmes and Brandeis concurring but for different reasons than their associates.

This decision which places the so-called "war measures" in the law of the land follows on the heels of the Bedford Cut-Stone Company ruling outlawing the ordinary defense activities of labor unions.

The Supreme Court has once more proved its right to its title of "bulwark of American capitalism."

The recent decision made in the case of Charlotte Anita Whitney upholds without qualification the police power of the state. The defendant was not charged with commission of any act of violence but was convicted simply on a judicial interpretation of the possible consequences of her utterances and beliefs as a member of the Communist Labor Party—later absorbed in the Communist Party.

The Supreme Court's ruling smashes completely all foolish notions relative to the "emergency character" of the war time legislation embodied in the criminal syndicalism laws of the various states and shows that these exceptional laws simply expressed the development of American government into a more direct and efficient instrument of American capitalism in its new stage—imperialism.

Under the criminal syndicalism laws backed by the Supreme Court's decision the constitutional rights of free speech, press and assemblage no longer have any legal existence—any policeman may abrogate them at will. Neither is it necessary for there to be a declaration of an "emergency" by the constituted authorities—the criminal syndicalism laws have been made unassailable thru court procedure and can be used to disrupt labor unions, working class political parties and imprison their members and officials.

The speed with which American government is setting up its instruments for aggression against the working class in all fields of activity is all the more dangerous in that the official leaders of the American labor movement join hands with government agencies against the most militant sections of the working class as in the Furriers and Cloakmakers Union cases.

To every intelligent worker in the United States the two recent decisions of the Supreme Court, supplementing each other,

BEHA STALLS ON QUIZ OF "BIG FOUR" AS EXPOSE BRINGS ON HUGE SCARE

Insurance Supt. Defied to Make Move In Open Letter By DAILY WORKER Expert

By CHARLES YALE HARRISON

Because of the immense popular interest which is being manifested in The DAILY WORKER insurance exposure it is deemed advisable to correspond with insurance and state officials openly and in full view of all parties interested.

To the Hon. James A. Beha, Insurance Department, New York:

Dear Sir:

It is now more than two weeks since you wrote to the DAILY WORKER asking for detailed information on our expose of the "Big Four." Since that time nothing has happened.

Because the cause we are espousing is one that vitally affects tens of millions of worker-policyholders, and because the charges made in this series of articles are of such a nature as to brand the officials and directors of the "Big Four" as public looters we demand an official reply to our letter to you wherein these charges are enumerated.

We Accuse

We have charged that there are officers in the employ of "Big Four" who were bribed with high positions for whitewashing the industrial insurance companies at the time of the Armstrong Insurance Investigation. We contend that the presence of such men in the employ of these companies proves that a condition still exists which requires illegal covering up.

One Resigns

Since the publication of this series of articles one of these offenders, ex-Senator William J. Tully, under pressure resigned from the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

We have proved that of all weekly payment policy terminations every year more than 75% are total loss lapses and that only one per cent of all terminations are maturities. We would like to know if this condition in itself does not warrant action on your part which will result in more just policy conditions whereby such a murderous lapse rate would be impossible.

We have proved that the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company has an average balance in the Chase National Bank of not less than $30,000,000 at all times. We further adduced facts to prove that the Chase National Bank

JOBLESS MENACE IN FLOOD REGION AS WATER EBBS

To Plant or Not to Plant Is Question

While thousands of flood refugees are crowding concentration camps, and some procrastinating victims are still being rescued from the tops of trees and the roofs of barns in the flood area, and while tons of water are rushing thru Louisiana in a mad dash for the Gulf of Mexico, the United States department of agriculture is at work preparing data telling the farmers what they can grow as soon as the eight or nine feet of water subsides and leaves them their rich, muddy acres once more.

Except for the sugar cane regions, 65 per cent of the flooded lands have regularly been planted with cotton, but according to experts it is not now possible or desirable to plant this area in cotton this year. The department of agriculture will advocate planting a certain amount of acreage in cotton as a "cash crop," and this will probably be done as fast as the water subsides.

The farmers will also be urged to plant part of their fields with a "food crop" to feed their families as soon as possible. In the sugar cane section, it will not, be possible to plant another crop this year and there is some talk of this industry passing away from this part of the country now that the crop has been destroyed by the flood. Because of the com-

SYNDICALIST LAW OF CALIFORNIA UPHELD BY U. S.

Supreme Court Sustains Whitney Conviction

WASHINGTON, May 16.—California's criminal Syndicalism law was held constitutional today by the supreme court, in affirming the conviction of Charlotte Anita Whitney, of Oakland, under that statute.

Miss Whitney, social worker and club woman, was convicted and sentenced to from one to fourteen years in the penitentiary for attending a convention of the Communist Labor Party in Oakland in 1919.

Constitutionality of the law was upheld by lower courts and on an earlier appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States the case was thrown out for lack of jurisdiction.

Miss Whitney held the constitutional right of peaceful assemblage was violated by the California law.

Justice Sanford read the opinion. Justice Holmes and Brandeis concurred, but on different grounds from the majority.

The court Justice Sanford said, considered only one federal question —whether the act violated the due process clause of the constitution. The court held that the clause was not violated. The right of free speech could not be resorted to by Miss Whitney in seeking freedom, the court held, as she was accused of "inciting others" to the crime of overthrowing the government."

Fiske Appeal Won

Harold B. Fiske, a member of the I. W. W., appealing from the Kansas Supreme Court which affirmed his conviction and sentence of one to ten years in prison for violation of the state criminal syndicalism law, won his appeal. The court held that the Kansas Law was applied in an unconstitutional manner.

The evidence in the case, the Admiral Bristol Wants To Cross Soviet Union On Way to China; Can't

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., May 6.—Admiral Bristol, newly appointed Commander of the American forces in China, has asked permission of the U. S. S. R. to cross the country on his way to China because his wife's illness made it impossible for her to stand the ocean trip. Admiral Bristol was refused permission to cross the U. S. S. R. on the grounds that the U. S. Government refused a visa to Comrades Platakoff, Sokolnikoff and Koiontai.

In view, however of Mrs. Bristol's illness, she was permitted to cross the U. S. S. R. on her way to China.

DIE-HARDS FAIL TO FIND "MISSING DOCUMENTS"; FACE LABOR PROTEST

Try to Thwart Loan to Soviet Union; Baldwin Cabinet Faces Defeat

Laborites Leave House As Government Applies Gag Rule to Anti-Strike Bill Debate

BULLETIN

LONDON, May 16.—The entire Labor Party delegation walked out of the House of Commons this afternoon in protest against the Government's proposal to apply "time-table procedure" to hasten the passage of the committee stages of the Trades Union Bill, limiting the powers of the trades unions to call strikes.

The walkout occurred after a rather heated question hour when the Government was criticized by the Labor members for the raids on the headquarters of the Soviet Trade Delegation.

The Government resolution to apply the "time-table procedure" was carried by a vote of 259 to 113.

The House was adjourned at 5:15 this afternoon, following the walkout of the Opposition.

LONDON, May 16.—While the police remained in possession of the Arcos offices, Tory ministers, who faced a barrage of questions from the Labor benches, were forced to admit in the House of Commons that the "missing official documents" which had served as the pretext for the raid had not been found. That the "missing documents" are pure myths created by the die-hard Cabinet is the opinion widely entertained here.

Home Secretary Joynson-Hicks also, revealed that the raids on the Soviet with the full knowledge and assent of Union offices had been authorized Prime Minister Baldwin and Foreign Minister Chamberlain.

The Russian Charge has handed a second note of protest to the Foreign Office. No note has yet been sent to the Baldwin Government by Moscow.

Although the die-hard press, notably the Daily Mail, controlled by the Churchill-Hicks-Birkenhead wing of the Conservative Government, is attempting to circulate rumors about "sinister Soviet documents" found in the Arcos offices, public opinion remains profoundly sceptical. The "Zinoviev letter" is still in the minds of political observers, and Soviet Union officials predicted soon after the raids that "sinister documents" would be "found."

Predict Baldwin Fall

Many rumors of changes in Tory leadership as a result of the raids are in circulation.

Premier Baldwin is said "not to be in the best of health" and he is anxious to give up his duties and his leadership of the Conservative party. The leadership of the party would probably fall to Winston Churchill, Lord Birkenhead or Sir William Joynson-Hicks, all of whom represent the most reactionary faction in the party.

A storm of protest greeted the die-hard ministry in the House of Commons when Sir William Joynson-Hicks made an attempt to explain the raids.

Arthur Henderson, Labor leader, indicated that the opposition would pursue its criticism of the Government for this raid and would ask that it may be set aside to debate the conduct of the Home Minister. This will be arranged through a motion being made to reduce the Home Minister's salary.

That the raids were instigated by the die-hards threw a monkey-wrench in the negotiations for a $50,000,000 to the Soviet Union by the Midland Bank, is the charge levelled by the Daily Herald, official organ of the Labor Party. The Tories have been making every effort to prevent extension of credits to the Soviet Union. Sir Arthur Balfour at the Economic Conference at Geneva is understood to have attempted to balk the negotiations of the Soviet Union delegates for credit.

FENG TAKES NORTHERN STRONGHOLD; EUGENE CHEN WARNS GREAT BRITAIN

Sun Fo Predicts Early Collapse of Chiang Kai-Shek; Protest U. S. Bombardment

HANKOW, May 16.—General Feng Yu-hsiang, who has allied himself with the Hankow nationalists, is rapidly sweeping toward the Peking-Hankow railway in his two-fold drive against Chang Tso-lin. Reports received here state that Feng has captured Honanfu, former stronghold of Wu Pei Fu, central Chinese warlord.

That the Nationalists will take Peking within three months is the prediction of Sun Fo, Sun Yat-sen's son, who declared in an interview with the Nationalist News Agency correspondent, that Chang Tso-lin's Mukden troops will be crushed by forces advancing from Hankow and Feng's troops moving south from the Shensi-Honan border.

Blow To Chiang.

The defeat of the Mukden troops, Sun said, will also be a blow to Chiang Kai-shek because it will deprive him of the possibility of support from the northern militarists.

Sun Fo declared that Chiang Kai-shek's position is hopeless. In an effort to win the sympathy of the northern war lords, Chiang Kai-shek has been shooting down workers. Such methods Sun declared, will keep Chiang in power a very short time. Only two or three divisions are still loya lto Chiang, Sun said.

Chen Warns Britain.

HANKOW, May 16.—In an interview with a Reuter's correspondent, Eugene Chen, Nationalist foreign minister, warned Great Britain against flirting with the Chiang Kai-shek "government" at Hankow.

"Before three months have passed we shall conquer our way to Peking, where in the name of Nationalist China and of the Kuomintang, I will speak language Chamberlain will be unable to ignore."

Referring to Chamberlain's recent attack on the Hankow Nationalist Government in an address before the House of Commons, Chen said, "His reference to my government was ludicrous and deeply tragic in its ignorance."

Roy Addresses Communists

At the Congress of the Chinese Communist Party held here, M. N. Roy, on behalf of the Communist International pointed out that the Chinese working class would have to ally itself with the peasantry and the urban petty bourgeoisie to successfully carry out its historical task. Representatives of the French, American and British parties were greeted with tremendous ovations.

Story of K.K.K. TERRORISM

Patrioteers Do Work of Hooded Order Now

The American Legion has replaced the Ku Klux Klan as "the most active agency in intolerance on record" in the United States, according to a report issued today by the American Civil Liberties Union, with headquarters in New York City.

This statement is based on reports from 44 states, in 37 of which extensive tactics by the Legion are cited and also on the fact that "many of the attacks on freedom of speech during the year have been traced to propaganda emanating from the war department the American Legion and other patrioteering societies," according to the report.

K. K. K. Kreaks.

The Ku Klux Klan is losing its influence in practically every section, and in general the civil liberty situation throughout the country continues to improve, the report states. Lynchings, and interference with public meetings are the exceptions to the general condition, acts of mob violence, and prosecutions involving civil liberties unless conditions attendant on industrial conflicts are considered, have vastly decreased. The report quotes a comparative table of these four fundamental violations of civil rights as follows: Of prosecutions involving civil liberty issues, there were 24 in 1926, compared with 352 in 1925; instances of mob violence are recorded as 21 for 1926, compared with 40 for 1925; there were 34 lynchings in 1926, compared with 18 in 1925; and 28 meetings were stopped in 1926, compared with 22 in 1925.

Congress Protests Lynching.

The increase in lynchings is attributed by the report to the failure of congress to take action on anti-lynching legislation. The number of prosecutions noted in 1926 does not include those arising from the many industrial disputes, which were included in the 1925 figures.

The Legion and the patrioteering societies came in for another rap when the report discusses the educational situation. "These groups," it states, "together with the bible crusaders and other fundamentalist organizations are held responsible also for the inroads on freedom of teaching. Suppression of student publications, dismissals of teachers and students for expression of opinion, enforced military drill, compulsory bible reading laws and "salute-the-flag" regulations, and one new anti-evolution law, are Mimeographed as mark the course of their campaign of repression and intolerance in 1926."

Pennsylvania First.

Civil liberties issues most prominent in industrial conflict in the Passaic textile strike, the Indiana Coal strike, the Rhode Island textile strike and the New York City fur and garment strikes. Prosecution of workers under state criminal syndicalism and sedition laws however has practically ceased. Pennsylvania has taken the lead over California, according to the report, in the number of prosecutions for opinion and expression.

The most important free-speech fight of the year, as recorded in the report was the New York City school board's ban against the American Civil Liberties Union, which revealed the existence of a "blacklist" against individuals whose opinions do not conform to those of board members.

Unemployment Threat In Flooded Region

petition of Cuban sugar, which is produced very cheaply because of the exploitation of labor, prices for Louisiana have been low for the past five years. The return from this sugar cane has also been low because of plant disease.

Fear Unemployment.

One of the most serious problems of this gigantic flood will be the unemployment to follow in its wake, and as usual those victims will have to shift for themselves as soon as the Red Cross withdraws its emergency relief work. Certain officials are quoted as stating that "it is expected that unemployment will, in large measure be offset by the need for labor in reconstruction of levees and in building construction." But building construction is destined to be mighty slow in communities where agriculture is the chief source of revenue, and this revenue has been cut off for months to come by the destructive waters of the Red, the Old, the Atchafalaya and the Mississippi Rivers.

According to the latest reports yesterday, there are 50,000 refugees already being cared for, and fully 50,000 more who will be made homeless in a few days.

and the Metropolitan, by names of an interlocking directorate, are ones.

We also stated that the "mutual" policyholders of the Metropolitan do not benefit by this arrangement in any way. We showed that Charles M. Schwab, Henry Ollesheimer, Frederick H. Ecker and Albert H. Wiggin, directors of the Chase National, are also directors of the so-called mutual Metropolitan. Apparently this does not seem to you to be a violation of good insurance practice. Your silence proves your tacit consent.

Your Silence Evidence

We also brought evidence to show that this condition of bank directors interlocking with insurance directorates is common with the Prudential, John Hancock and the Colonial Life Insurance Companies. Your silence is an avidence of guilt.

We charged that Frederick H. Ecker, vice president of the Metropolitan, is also a director of ten railroads in which tens of millions of Metropolitan "mutual" funds are invested. We charged that Ecker benefits by this arrangemeant to the detriment of the 26 million Metropolitan policyholders. And still you are silent. Are these men your masters?

No Refunds

We have shown that weekly payment policyholders pay for ten, five and nine years and then, when due to economic necessity, they require a return of their deposits, the "Big Four" refuse to make such refunds. Under the law the money is irretrievably lost. We charged that in this respect alone the "Big Four" make upwards of fifty millions dollars every year. What do you think your duty is in this matter—we mean your duty to the policyholders?

We have shown that on the directorate of the largest of the "Big Four" sits Frank P. Noyes, president of the Associated Press, an organization which feeds high finance propaganda to over 1200 newspapers in the United States and Canada.

Misleading Table

We have proved that the American Table of Mortality which these companies legally employ is more than 40% inaccurate. And still you have made not public statement relative to an investigation of the scope warranted by these facts.

We have stated that these companies assume a 3½% return on their investments whereas the actual return is nearer 6%. Why the silence, Mr. Behn?

We have claimed that the directors of these "mutual" companies are elected by fraud and fixing and that not one of the elected gentry represent the class interests of the policyholders.

We claimed these and many other things, all of which have resulted in a condition in insurance circles which may be adequately described as panic.

Capitalist Papers Silent.

At the agency meetings of the "Big Four" managers have been instructed to boast to their agents that the capitalistic newspapers will ignore the DAILY WORKER attack and that it will come to naught. No mention was made of the truth of our charges, which they know, and you know are true.

Since the publication of this series you have been attending luncheons and dinners paid for by insurance companies praising the "great institution of life insurance." Do you think that truly great institutions stoop to petty larceny as do the "Big Four"? Do you think that your policy of silence lends prestige to the fraud of swindling American workers?

In a series of articles which are to commence next Monday we propose to show that the agents of these four companies are underpaid, swindled, fined and exploited just as thoughunfortunate policyholder is; will you be silent when we prove these charges?

Last year your salary increased from ten to twelve thousand dollars a year. Are you being grateful?

We hold that obligations or no obligation you come out into the open and either refute our charges or else see that the intolerable conditions which now exist in the industrial insurance business be wiped out completely.

When may we hope for action, Mr. Behn?

court found, did not show that the I. W. W. advocated the overthrow of the government by revolution.

The Supreme Court upheld the law a second time in affirming lower Federal Courts' decision in the conviction of William Burns, a delegate of the Industrial Workers of the World.

Civil Liberties Comment.

"One of the most far-reaching decisions affecting civil liberties ever handed down" commented Forrest Bailey, director of the American Civil Liberties Union yesterday when informed by the DAILY WORKER of the California criminal syndicalism ruling.

Attorneys for the Civil Liberties Union argued the Anita Whitney case involving the law, before the supreme court on March 1, 1926. They were Walter Pollack and Walter Nelles of New York and John Moylan and Thomas Lennon of San Francisco. The Burns and Fiske cases were also handed by the Liberties Union.

Prisoners Still In.

Added significance is given the supreme court's decision by the existence of criminal syndicalism actionsly abridging free speech and assemblage in nearly two score states. The California decision practically sets the seal of highest governmental approval of these invasions of rights "guaranteed" by the American constitution.

Nearly a score of political prisoners are still held in California jails under the criminal syndicalism law.

An application for a pardon will be made to Governor Young of California, Bailey indicated yesterday.

BROWNSVILLE, Pa.—May 16.—At the annual convention of the Croatian Beneficial and Educational Society, the right wing aimed a blow at the left wing, and failed to land.

The rights wanted to bar Jews from the society, and had also a motion made by John Kolar, acting chairman of the convention, that anybody who "doesn't obey the laws of the State of Pennsylvania and the constitution of the United States, shall be expelled.

Kolar is a follower of the extreme reactionary, Geo. Ferega. His motion was defeated by a large majority.

Supreme Court Upholds Tax on Bootleggers

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Bootleggers can be compelled to file income tax returns, the supreme court ruled today in reversing a circuit court decision in the case of Manly S. Sullivan.

A sentence of six months in jail originally imposed on Sullivan in the South Carolina federal court stands with the decision.

The government appealed to the high court, after the circuit court of appeals reversing the district court held that the secrecy attached to income tax returns did not equal the constitutional immunity which privileges that no person may be compelled to give incriminating evidence against himself.

Firemen found evidence that gasoline or kerosine had been spilled in the hallway of the first floor.

Will Unearth Herculaneum.

NAPLES, May 16.—King Victor Emanuel today went by destroyer to Resina, where he will inaugurate the excavation of the ancient city of Herculaneum, one of the most difficult attempts in the history of archaeology.

Herculaneum, once the resort of wealthy Romans, has been buried for nearly twenty centuries beneath a bed of lava flow, having been devastated by an eruption from Mount Vesuvius.

Baseball Fans Leave Hospitals.

PHILADELPHIA, May 16. — An autopsy was to be held today for Fred Haas, 58, who was killed when a section of the stand at Baker Bowl, home of the Philadelphia national league team, collapsed. Fifty persons were injured, but all have been released from hospitals.

Say Associates Killed Ensign.

LOS ANGELES, May 16.—Formation of a second naval board of inquiry into the unsolved riddle of the death of Ensign Julian J. Meahane of Maryland, awaited today arrival in port of the dreadnaught Tennessee. Meahane was attached to the Tennessee. The dreadnaught is due here tomorrow.

An earlier official investigation decided that the dashing naval officer committed his body was found floating in San Pedro harbor three days after a merry yachting party at which he was last seen alive. Agents acting on behalf of the ensign's family, however, adduced evidence tending to prove McShane died a violent death. In consequence the navy department ordered the second investigation.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., May 16.—Poplar Bluff today was engaged in the task of burying its scores of dead.

The toll taken in Monday's tornado was placed at 102 lives today and the injured at about 250, of which 100 or more are in a serious condition.

Decameron Books Released.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—A complete investigation of the importation of risque literature into the United States was ordered today by General L. C. Andrews, assistant secretary of treasury.

After a conference with importers, Andrews ordered the customs authorities at New York to release for importation a number of sets of the "Arabian Nights" and Boccaccio's "Decameron," which were held up.

Importers were advised that they will not be permitted to order further copies of these books from abroad until the department has had time to make a ruling.

"Inferiority Complex," Shoots Self.

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., May 16. —Explaining in a note that he had an "inferiority complex," which made it impossible for him to "jump from dreamland to earth," George Armory, 20-year old artist who said he was the scion of a wealthy Middleport, Conn., family, attempted to end his life here today by shooting himself through the chest. Physicians said he would recover.

To Swim Channel Again.

PLYMOUTH, England, May 16.—Mrs. Gade Corson, American woman who conquered the English Channel last summer, arrived here today to train for an attempt to swim from Dover to Calais in July.

Lamont Morgan's Partner Praises U. S. Imperialism

WASHINGTON, May 16.—(FP)—Thomas W. Lamont, member of Morgan & Co., speaking on "America's Foreign Investments" before the National Chamber of Commerce dinner in Washington, coincident with the meetings of the Pan-American Commercial Conference and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, lauded the Coolidge administration's action in Mexico, Nicaragua, Haiti and elsewhere in Latin-America. At the same time he warned American bankers that their chances for safe and profitable loans in Europe were rapidly declining.

— The Land Tax.

Mexico's governmental and railway debt, Lamont said, was about $725,000,000, with interest payments since 1921 of $30,000,000 paid. This interest payment was only one-fourth of the sum due on the principal, but it did represent "an earnest desire on the part of the Mexican state to fulfill its obligations to its foreign creditors." However, its handling of the land and oil questions "has had the effect of discouraging most of the British and American oil companies operating in Mexico, and their oil production has fallen off heavily." Lamont said he did predict that until a settlement on the oil and land questions is arrived at with foreign investors, Mexico will probably "not invite foreign capital to seek outlet there on any large scale."

Lamont's whitewash of American military occupation of Haiti, Nicaragua and Santo Domingo was in the familiar tone of "We do these things solely for their good."

A Permanent Slavery.

After reviewing the financial recovery of many European countries, and cautioning American investors against reckless subscription to further loans there, Lamont touched upon the favorite topic of international bankers—the trend toward lowering tariff walls so that payments may be made. He said that "Certain statesmen on the other side, men of sobriety and judgment, experienced and schooled in the world of politics, declare that Locarno means the permanent appeasement of Europe, a new era; that while there may be occasional embroilments, even sporadic armed conflicts, there will never again be any great catalysm on the continent of Europe; that within the lifetime of our youth war will have become as outworn as witchcraft, slavery and duelling. It is true that Europe is happily becoming more unified. The movement to break down the high tariff barriers, built up by the growth of nationalism in almost every European country after the war is already under way. It is not inconceivable that Europe may some day become a great region of free trade as the United States is with its forty-eight states."

"Such a development may take a long time in coming; on the other hand it may move much more swiftly than we imagine. If it does we shall be able within the span of a few years to witness a Europe restored, industrious, stable, peaceful, far stronger in every way than it has been in the past; with armaments vastly reduced, with swords beaten into plowshares, and with a future bright with promise.

"It would be well for the American man of affairs to look forward to prepare himself to do business with a Europe of this sort."

Cooperative Youth Hold First Dance

The recently organized Cooperative Youth consisting of young people living at the Cooperative Apartment House, 2700 Bronx Park, East, will hold their first dance, Saturday, May 21st in the house. All workers are urged to attend.

The Cooperative Youth Club is a social and athletic organization that will accept into its ranks all young workers, whether they reside at the Cooperative House, or not. It devoted a great deal of its time to playing baseball, tennis, rowing, hikes and other outdoor sports. It also has lectures and discussions.

Snyder, Gray Lodged In Sing Sing Prison

Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder and Henry Judd Gray, condemned slayers of Albert Snyder the woman's husband, arrived at Sing Sing Prison shortly before noon yesterday.

Accompanied by an escort of motorcycle police, the two automobiles containing the doomed pair swept through the main street of this village and into the gates of the prison. The shades of the cars were tightly drawn and the crowds thathad assembled on the sidewalks had no opportunity to glimpse the pair.

Without stopping at the Warden's office which is the general rule the line of cars swept straight into the prison grounds. The doors clanged quickly shut, and Gray and Mrs. Snyder had entered their final place of living until the hand of the law calls them to death in the electric chair.

Soviet Trench Before Chinese Peking

British, American, and White Russian officers have helped the bandit gangs of Chang Tso-lin to adapt all the recent discoveries in the science of war to Chinese conditions. Chang expects a powerful drive by the Kuomintang, and this trench, full of spikes, is intended to be used like the barbed wire of the Great War, in an attempt to stop them. Experience has shown that determined and courageous troops can not be stopped by mere mechanical devices, however.

Feng Takes Northern Stronghold; Advances

The Nonking government is decomposing. It is in serious financial difficulties. Tradesmen refuse to accept the new paper money issued by Chiang Kai-shek. The discipline in the army is declining. The soldiers, who have received no pay since March, are plundering. The policy of the Nanking government has caused serious differences to arise, particularly amongst the military leaders. The Canton dictator, Li Tin-sing, who intends to make himself independent of Chiang Kai-shek, is pursuing his own policy under the slogan: "Kwangtung for the Kwangtungers!"

The arrests, searches and executions have become so common in Shanghai that the Chinese press reports them on the back page in small print. The police of the International and the French Settlements render the military authorities every assistance in carrying out the arrests and searches.

The entire Committee of the Indian Nationalists with its chairman at the head, has been arrested. The files and correspondence of the Committee have been confiscated by the police. According to the law arrested persons must be immediately handed over to the courts, this however has not been done up to the present.

Students Want Military Training

HANKOW, April 10, (By Mail).—The Provincial Students' Union has addressed a letter to the Educational Department in the Commission in charge of Political Affairs in Hupeh, asking that an order be issued for the introduction of military training in the Provincial Schools.

The letter says that military force is an important weapon in the work of national revolution and every revolutionary worker must be equipped with military training. For this reason the Union requests that the schools should put in their curriculum a course in military training and that efficient officers be engaged to teach the students war tactics so that the students might be useful in the actual battle against the anti-revolutionaries.

Protest U. S. Bombardment

LONDON, May 16.—General Chiang Kai-shek has made a protest to the senior naval officers of the British, American and Japanese naval forces at Nanking, charging that warships of the powers have fired on the nese troops in Kiangyin without provocation, according to an Admiralty communique.

Chicago Labor Warns Against Tax Slashes To Aid Big Business

CHICAGO, (FP) May 16.—Fighting against proposed federal income tax legislation, The Federation News, organ of the Chicago Federation of Labor, says:

"In actuality but 18 per cent of the people are paying income taxes today and therefore 82 per cent would derive no benefit from this proposed tax cut. Both democrats and republicans are furthering reduced income tax legislation. Both parties are convinced that such legislation will appeal immediately to the people, only a small percentage realizing that it would be of material benefit to not more than 18 per cent of the nation. They are simply taking advantage of the foolish apathy of the masses and their lack of inclination to become familiar with issues of far reaching importance tha: are vital to them."

Steiner Charges Oil Agt Pensions Beaten by Grundy

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 16.—Six hundred united in a "deliberate distortion of facts" to defeat the old age pension bill in the recent legislature, President James H. Maurer charged yesterday before the convention of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, in session here.

The Manufacturers' Association, under the leadership of the unspeakable Grundy and the State Chamber of Commerce gave orders to their henchmen in the legislature to kill the measure, he declared in his presidential address.

The convention will be in session several days.

Paris Automobile Workers Strike Against Employers

PARIS, (By Mail).—Declaring that Citroen would never see the success of his project to exploit his workers in chain-gangs, 15,000 workers of the Citroen automobile shops, the Ford of Europe, yesterday went on strike. Within twenty-four hours they were joined by thousands of workers from the Granelle, Epinettes, Levallois and Saint-Ouen shops. At Saint-Ouen, Epinettes, and Levallois, Citroen was forced to close down his factories. In the 15th Paris District, the center of the Citroen Paris shops, and the scene of the first strike action and lockout, work has slowed up to such a point that the bosses have suppressed all passes in order to prevent workers from leaving the shops and to cut off communications with the outer world. Despite these precautions workers are gradually leaving the shops in District 15 and joining their comrades on the sidewalks and at the organization meetings.

Issued Strike Appeal.

The Strike Committee of the Metallurgists Union issued the following-appeal to all workers of the Citroen plants:

"In locking out 10,000 workers at Javel and Clichy, the directors of the Citroen Automobile Corporation have planned to break all opposition to their vast scheme for wage reductions. Let no one enter the shops this morning. Go to the gates at the usual time and obey the decisions of your Union and of the Lookout Committee.

"For three days you have been thrown out on the sidewalks. To go back to work today means defeat, means accepting all the present wage reductions and all those to come, means sacrificing 4,000 of your comrades.

Refuse to Work.

"At the Saint-Ouen, Clichy, and Levallois shops you will enter to urge all your comrades to strike, but you will refuse to work in order to show your solidarity with the workers of District 15.

"The hour for action has struck! Long live the Citroen workers! Solidarity of all Citroen workers in the struggle!"

The Citroen workers are striking against wage cuts and are demanding a minimum wage of 4.50 francs an hour for both sexes, suppression of fines for forgetting to work, and lengthening of the noon hour now thirty minutes, payable at regular rates, and workers' control of production.

Organized Farmers of Oklahoma Rap Military Training in Colleges

OKLAHOMA CITY (FP) May 16.—Military training in the Oklahoma Agricultural & Mechanical College at Stillwater should be optional and not compulsory, says Prof. John Simpson of the Farmers Union of Oklahoma in a protest to the state board of agriculture.

The college will not endanger its federal appropriation by making the present 2-year compulsory drill optional, Simpson points out, on the strength of official federal information. He says farmers regard it unjust to compel their sons who want to acquire agricultural training at the college to waste 2 years marching with a gun under a retired army sergeant.

Arrest Worker For Distribution Of Shop Paper in Mill

WARREN, O., May 16.—Charged with "trespassing," S. Merton was arrested here for distributing shop papers among the workers in the Trumbull Steel Co. The issue called attention to the abominable working conditions in the mill and called upon the men to organize.

After being held in jail for two days Merton was brought before a local judge who fined him $5.

Manifesto of the Fifth Congress of the Communist Party of Mexico

Proletarian Workers of The Republic! Comrades:

The recent events which have occurred in the Republic, the uprising of the Gallegos in Guanajuato; the rebellious outbreak in the region of Los Altos, Jalisco; the assault on a railway train in the North, the recent conflicts in Chihuahua; the slaughter of Federal soldiers in Tuxpan and finally the massacre of unarmed workers in Yurecuaro, mark the beginning of a new civil war; they are the first signals of the conflict which threatened the country.

It could be pointed out that since 1910 the situation in Mexico is characterized by a series of fundamental contradictions which penetrate the entire economic and political life of the country. We need to mention: (1) the antagonism between the governing petty bourgeoisie, and the remains of the feudalistic State; (2) the antagonism between the nationalistic petty bourgeoisie and the economic hegemony of foreign capital; (3) the antagonism between national and foreign on one side, and the workers and peasants on the other; (4) and the antagonism between the Federal Government and a number of the State Governments.

All attempts to solve these contradictions, only lead to their accentuation, and give origin to inflammable situations which stir the country into a state of constant agitation and restlessness.

The 1927 Constitution.

The political power of the small bourgeoisie against the dictatorship of the feudal state and the unlimited power of foreign capital, found its expression in the constitution of 1917.

The Constitution of 1917, expresses the effort of the young Mexican bourgeoisie, and other advanced elements of this epoch, to harmonize the interests of the landlords with those of the masses of peasants, and the interests of national and foreign capital with those of the industrial proletariat.

The very development of the Revolution, the struggle of the peasant masses for the land, the struggle of the working class for betterment in working and living conditions, and the very necessity of the petty bourgeoisie to defend its position against the continuous attacks of reaction and foreign capital, have obligated the promulgation of the rather radical laws, such as Article 27, 123, and 130 of the Constitution, which favor the creation of a national economy, and the improvement of conditions among the exploited masses.

The Petty Bourgeoisie in Power

Since 1917 reaction has on many occasions attempted to reconquer its lost ground. Sustained by foreign capital it organized counter revolutionary insurrections, incited bandit groups and pilfigged the peasantry, and set on foot a campaign against the Government under the cloak of the catholic church. But the revolutionary governments instead of crushing with a steel arm the reactionary forces, have followed out a policy of compromises, delaying the repartition of the land, and restraining the struggle of the industrial proletariat against the foreign exploiters.

Lacking a solid economic base, and being politically disjointed by regionalism, the power of the petty bourgeoisie does not rest on its own strength, but rather on the weakness of the reactionary forces on the one part, and on the lack of development and the dispersion of the working and peasant class.

The crisis confronting the petty bourgeoisie manifests itself clearly in the economic situation. To realize its program of national reconstruction the petty bourgeoisie not only desires to harmonize the interests of essentially opposed classes, but has sought also to conciliate irreconcilable economic forms. It has tried to oppose and put into competition to large scale rural ownership, a system of small ownership, and to the power of large capitalist enterprise small industry of town and country. A network of producers and consumers' cooperatives, and the creation of agricultural credit banks and labor banks, was to be destined to substitute the financial and organic base of this national economy, a medly of capitalist and socialist production.

To seek to realize such a program in a country whose exploited wealth in two thirds in the hands of foreign capital, where reaction makes alliances with the imperialist interest without first breaking the economic forms of capitalist society, is to deceive once self and to deceive the masses of workers and peasants.

To solve in part the economic problem, and to satisfy the requirements of the external debt, which burdens the Mexican people, the Government has had to reduce to the minimum its expenditure budget, readjusting to this reduction the personnel in the Public Administration and of their salaries. The greater number of the State Governments owe wages of many months to their employees, including pay to their armed forces, creating with this general discontent, which is favorable to the success of subversive propaganda.

Today, foreign capital, the only organized economic force in the country, refuses to extend aid to the Government. Capitalism cannot tolerate restriction in its field of activities, and the steadfast ever increasing tendency of industrial enterprise, toward centralization, is essentially opposed to every effort to sustain small production, the existence of isolated cooperatives and craft conditions. The capitalist system demands for its development an absolute freedom, freedom for unlimited exploitation, freedom for extermination in its roller of the peasant, of the middle classes, converting it into a slave proletariat, or into an outcast which has to exist on the crumbs thrown to it by the capitalist society. Reaction and Imperialism has declared war on the Government of the Petty Bourgeoisie, whose politics are opposed to the frank and open dictatorship of capitalist power.

Two Roads.

Today the power of the petty bourgeoisis finds itself threatened. Reaction organises its forces to a point of centralization so that it may land a powerful blow to the Government of General Calles. The aim of the Reaction is to implant a military dictatorship, tear up the constitution of 1917, and put an end to the revolutionary movement of the workers and the peasants.

One must not for a moment doubt that behind the guns of the rebellion, behind the assassin's dagger of the catholic church, rises the gloomy shadow of Yankee Imperialism, the claws of the American Oil kings, eager to extirpate the soil of Mexico of its "black gold," the motivating force of present day imperialist domination.

The cancellation of the treaty of Juarez, opening a lane to the free introduction of arms into Mexican territory, can be considered as nothing else but the open aid of the United States to the enemies of the Calles government.

Before the petty bourgeoisie and before its administration two roads are left open. The road toward the left, toward the unification of all workers and peasant forces toward an implacable struggle against reaction and the road toward the right, toward compromise, toward political indecision, which will sooner or later fatally lead to a union with the landlords and with the foreign capitalists.

Only by means of the complete expropriation of the land and of the means for its cultivation, from the great land owners, and its repartition among the masses of poor landlord peasants; only by the nationalisation of the great industrial and agricultural enterprises as well as the means of communication and transportation; only by the union of the petty bourgeoisie with the proletariat, and the formation of a real "workers' and peasants' government, and the alliance of Mexico with the masses of the other Latin-American countries, exploited by American and British Imperialism, will be realized a national reconstruction benefiting not only the small bourgeois minority, but as well the large majority of toilers in the land and in the town.

We and the Government of General Calles.

The aims of the Communist Party are workers' and peasants'. The Communist Party of Mexico (Mexican Section of the Communist Intecnationl) struggles for the complete destruction of capitalist exploitation, for the economic and social liberation of the masses of workers and peasants, for the independence of all colonial and semi-colonial peoples and for the formation of the World Union of Soviet Republics.

But the Communist Party would not be the party of the vanguard, would not be a party really revolutionary, if it were not to defend at all times the immediate interests of the workers and peasants.

Today that is the first interest, exists in the broadest alliance with the petty bourgeoisie for the defence of the existing Calles Government, against the reactionaries and against the menace of American intervention.

Owing to the vacillating politics of this same government, to the stupid and brutal tactics of Morones against the autonomous unions, and owing to the economic situation which is getting more difficult each day, there exists the danger that sections of workers and peasants will incline toward these elements which are preparing for the destruction of the present government.

The Communist Party calls upon all and every one of its members, upon all organizations independent and opposed to the CROM, to all those affiliated to the national peasants' league and to the Agrarian Party, upon all workers and peasants organized within the CROM and in the Labor Party and to all workers at large, for the formation of a united front, for a workers and peasants' bloc—building around the Calles government a wall of defence against the reaction.

The Presidential Elections.

The agitation for a renewal of the executive powar is one of the most important factors utilized by the reaction to organize its forces against the Calles administration. The Communist Party declares that the rebellion headed by the most conservative elements in the country prepares for the forceful imposition of a reactionary candidate who will serve the intereats of landlordism and foreign capitalism. The Communist Party declares that the realization of this plan not only would signify the extermination of the organized workers and peasants' movement, but also the destruction of the Constitution of 1917, and with it the destruction of all democratic rights and liquidation of all gains of the proletariat.

Therefore, the Communist Party warns the entire working class and peasants that it spurns at the present moment all propaganda for elections, under the existing conditions, organize instead in every factory, in every union, in each city and town, in agrarian communities and in general in all workers' organizations, committees for workers and peasants defence against the reaction and for a united front foe a workers' and peasants' bloc!

Only the defeat of the existing counter revolutionary movement, only the immediate purging of the Army and the Public Administration by sifting out reactionary elements and the formation of a real "workers' and peasants' government, and the alliance of Mexico with the masses of the other Latin-American countries, exploited by American and British Imperialism, will be realized a national reconstruction benefiting not only the small bourgeois minority, but as well the large majority of toilers in the land and in the town.

THE INTERESTS OF OUR CLASS, the working and peasant class, represent the real interests of our country drenched as it is with workers' blood. Our interests are the interests of the majority of the Mexican people, our heroic people, vanguard of the revolutionary movement in Latin America.

People of Mexico!

A new world war is approaching. The Russian Revolution, the uprising of the Chinese people, the constant growth of the workers' and peasants' movement in all countries, and the stubborn struggle of the revolutionary elements against the bloody ferocity of the fascist and clerical dictatorships in many of the countries of Europe and in Latin America, have taught the leaders of the bourgeoisie that the day is not very far distant when the oppressed proletariat, tired of sowing grain, only to die of hunger, of building palaces only to live in pig stalls, of filling the trenches with its corpses to overstock the coffers of the banking houses, united in a gigantic and invincible force, will rise to vanquish its oppressors.

Imperialism—enemy of Soviet Rusia, enemy of the Chinese people, enemy of the world proletariat—is also the enemy of Mexico! The Reaction is no more than the sister to Imperialism, united to it in order to strangle and crush freedom and human progress.

Comrades, forward! Unite to make powerful the forces of our country! Fight for the defence of your lives and your honor!

5th Congress of the COMMUNIST PARTY OF MEXICO—Translated from El Machete No. 63—by J.N.S.

Anti-Union Bill Like Blacklegs' Charter of 1800

London, May 18.—A striking parallel to the present British Anti-Union Bill is found in the "Blacklegs' Charter" of 1799 and 1800 which carried the official name of the Combination Laws.

The first Act was rushed through Parliament with lightening speed; the second Act, passed in consequence of the protests that the first Act had provoked, modified some of its worst features, though it left the trade unions at the mercy of the employers.

Boss Also Judge.

Under the first act any workman who combined with any other workman for the purpose of obtaining an increase of wages could be brought before a single magistrate, and on viction, he could be sent to jail. The magistrate might be his own employer.

To attempt to raise wages was in itself a crime, and a man who tried to persuade somebody else to leave his work, or to attend a meeting, or to collect money for the purpose of gaining wages or resisting reductions, did himself open to prosecution.

In fact so "boundless" were the "crimes" created by the law that it was dangerous for workmen to converse with one another or with their own families.

FOREIGN TRADE OF U.S.S.R.

According to the returns of the People's Commissariat of Trade of U. S. S. R., the total volume of Soviet foreign trade over the European frontier reached 619 million roubles in the first half of the economic year 1926-27 (October-March), as against 666 million roubles in the first half of 1925-26.

1st quarter of 1926-27 (Octobec, November, Decem	Exports	Imports	Total	Favorable Balance
	(in million roubles)
ber)	208.3	131.9	340.4	76.6
Jan. 1927..	55.2	33.5	93.7	16.7
Feb. "	49.1	37.9	87.0	11.2
March "	57.4	40.5	97.9	16.9
Total six months 1926-27 ..	370.2	248.8	619.0	121.4

Thus the active balance in the first half of the year 1926-27 amounted to 121.4 million roubles, as compared with an adverse balance of 66 million roubles in the first half of 1925-26.

As compared with March, 1926, the exports in March, current year, were at the same level (the exports in March, 1926, also being 57.4 million roubles), while imports decreased by 28.9 per cent (57 million roubles in March, 1926). The total turnover in March, 1927, decreased 14.4 per cent against March of last year (114.4 million roubles in March, 1926), however, the trade in March, current year, yielded an active balance of 16.9 million roubles, against an active balance of 0.4 million roubles in March, 1926.

Big Oil Man In Jail.

LONG BEACH, Cal., May 16.—Fred W. Braddock, oil well drilling contractor, was under police guard at a hospital here today, suspected as the slayer of Mrs. Allie Brake, apartment house owner, who died under mysterious conditions. Authorities said they would seek a murder complaint against Braddock following the disclosures of a drinking orgy in the oil man's home.

SOVIET UNION AND CHINA ADD TO UNION POWER TWO MILLION MEMBERS; OTHER COUNTRIES LOSE

The Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and China are revealed as the only countries in which trade unionism is actively on the upgrade, in the annual review of trade union membership throughout the world issued by the Canadian deportment of labor. The department shows the workers of these two great countries almost solely responsible for the increase of 1,904,067 in the strength of the world trade union army in 1926.

The aggregate of organized workers at the close of 1926 in 46 countries covered by the report was 38,388,956. At the close of 1925 there were 36,448,067 organized workers.

The U. S. S. R. leads the world both in number of trade unionists and in gains compared with 1925. Unions at the end of 1926 are shown with 7,846,789 members compared with 4,604,684 at the close of 1925. Here is a gain of 1,242,105 members or nearly 30% in a single year.

The rapid growth of Chinese trade unionism, the most important force in the nationalist movement, renders figures out of date almost as soon as they are published. The report shows 1,240,000 organized Chinese workers compared with 300,000 at the close of 1925, a gain of 940,000 or more than 300%.

Trade union figures for the 16 countries as shown in the report are:

Australia	739,166
Austria	1,044,098
Belgium	726,126
China	1,240,000
Czecho-Slovakia	1,379,779
France	1,069,046
Germany	6,900,000
Great Britain	5,531,000
Holland	517,914
Italy	2,234,000
Mexico	886,000
Poland	539,089
Russia	7,846,789
Spain	453,578
Sweden	431,000
United States	3,969,222

In addition to the big gains in the Soviet Union and China there were small gains in Canada, Greece, Japan, Palestine and the United States. Decreases in trade union membership compared with 1925 were reported.

Other figures.

Latest figures from the Central Council of Trade Unions in the U. S. S. R. place the total trade union membership in that country at 9,539,200. Similarly the All-China Labor Federation, in its appeal to the trade unions of the world, now claims 2,200,000 workers while the secretary of the Chinese seaman's union speaking in Berlin estimated that 3,000,000 Chinese workers would be represented at this year's trade union convention.

These later figures swell the membership of the world trade union army to well over 41,000,000, with the U. S. S. R. and China accounting for about 12,000,000 of the total.

SLAVE LABOR IS ETHIOPIAN BAIT FOR U. S. CAPITAL

Rich Resources Entice Yankee Exploiters

American capitalism now has its eyes turned towards Ethiopia, formerly known as Abyssinia. An unlimited amount of rubber, coffee, potash and other resources with plenty of slave labor makes Ethiopia unusually attractive to this country.

The correspondent of the Chicago Daily News has described the situation in detail. Under the pretense of "freeing" the slaves of that country, foreign capital has been invited to purchase the slaves from their owners.

All Facilities.

The American correspondent reports that

"Seriously intentioned and responsible parties will be granted all the facilities and favors necessary to insure the financial success of their enterprise. The Abyssinian government is ready and eager to favor foreign capital which can develop the country and aid in the actual liberation of slavery by employing the slaves as workmen in their development projects."

The terms which the slaves are to be "liberated" is described in the official annoncement as follows:

"Foreign capital will be invited to lease tracts of land for the cultivation of coffee, cubber, fruit and other products and for the raising of cattle, sheep and horses. Such enterprises will be furnished slave labor and will be obligated to remit one-half of the laborer's wage to his owner, the other half to be held by the government until such time as his accumulated earnings will suffice to purchase his freedom, which, according to estimates so far obtainable, will be approximately five years."

Ready Response.

This proposal has found a ready response among American capitalists who are always looking for new fields to conquer.

The American consul at Aden, Arabia, in a report published by the Department of Commerce, headed, "Ethiopia, a Land of Vast Latent Wealth, writes:

"Ethiopia, or Abyssinia as the country was formerly known, is one of the few productive regions of Africa in which no modern development has taken place in recent years. The latent wealth of Ethiopia is undoubtedly enormous. Its soil is suitable for grain cultivation on a large scale and it has rich resources of rubber, iron, copper, silver, iron, gold, potash and mica. Wild coffee grows in abundance and only awaits scientific cultivation to make it an important factor in the world's coffee supply.

"American cotton textiles used to dominate the Ethiopian market, but of late years they have given way to the cheaper Japanese goods. About a quarter of the Ethiopian textile imports come from Manchester, England. . . . It is probable that there are fifty million silver dollars in the country at present, most of which is hidden in the ground."

"FATHER cures paralyzed boy" reads a headline. Reading the text we learn that a dry goods merchant sacrificed a money-making business career to study physiotherapology so that he could gain for his son the use of his limbs which were paralyzed by an attack of Infantile paralysis when he was a few months old. The boy now walks with the aid of crutches. It may be a news story and then again it may be an ad for a new health fad. Anyhow we are glad the boy is able to walk even with crutches tho we would have more regard for the veracity of the story if he walked without them.

BENITO MUSSOLINI is trying hard to make his photographs look like those of Napoleon. Evidently the "great man" has passed the word around that he will be pleased to be regarded as the political heir of the "little Corsican." Caesar is another historical figure that Mussolini apes. But the important difference between Napoleon and Musolini, is that the former helped to stabilize the rising bourgeoisie system while Mussolini is vainly trying to stabilize a dying order.

THE process of smoking out Calvin Coolidge on a third term is progressing apace. Coolidge is saying nothing. Whether he is thinking or not is problematical. Why should he think? Thinking is dangerous business. He might think himself out of a job. If the president of a gigantic plunderbund like this had any imagination he would sneak out of the White House at dead of night and wend his way to the nearest slave market. Many persons would rather repair railway tracks than hold down his job.

THE novel "Revelry" by Samuel Hopkins Adams is a story of the Harding administration with Harding under the fictitious name of Willis Markhorn as plain as a nose wart. The president killed time by playing poker with his gang and keeping constantly pickled. He had nothing against the system and seemed to enjoy what O'Henry would characterize "legitimate graft." Sometimes it was not even that, but it helped to break the monotony of life in the white house. The wages of sin is death so Markham died and his gang got scattered. If Calvin Coolidge, we believe, could survive a third term in the White House.

WORKERS! STOP THE MURDER OF SACCO AND VANZETTI

Fighting The Swivel-Chair Patriots

The attack upon The DAILY WORKER by the Military Order of the World War and other patriotic organizations, reveals with startling clearness whom these organizations propose to fight. These gentlemen, as a rule, are not seen on the front line trenches, when our boys are called upon to make the world safe for Morgan's millions. But when it comes to an attack upon labor, they are first on the job. They reveal themselves as nothing more or less than a Military Order for a War Upon Labor.

It is because The DAILY WORKER is carrying on a militant struggle against the recent attempts to drag the United States into a new World War, that the present attack is made. It is because The DAILY WORKER exposes the machinations of such powerful combinations as the Insurance Trust, that it has incurred their enmity and fear. It is because The DAILY WORKER stands firmly behind the workers in the present offensive of the bosses that they seek to suppress it.

The workers will show these refined and bespatted bourgeoisie what it means to make war upon a labor organ. From thousands of mines, mills, factories and farms will come a torrent of whole-hearted support for The DAILY WORKER in this fight. The swivel-chair patriots have declared war. Let them have it—straight from the shoulder. Every dollar contributed and collected for the Defense Fund is a telling blow against the American Fascisti and the intolerable system for which they stand. Do your bit now!

Nicaragua Cannot Achieve Freedom by Submitting to United States

Encouraging reports are coming out of Nicaragua to the effect that many thousands of the forces successfully struggling against the government of the Wall Street puppet, Diaz, have refused to lay down their arms and will continue fighting. Some of them even declare that they will lay down their lives rather than submit to a government imposed upon them by the power of foreign bayonets.

Reports of wholesale disarmament appearing in the kept press are probably considerably exaggerated, but there is undoubtedly a large number that has disarmed under the threat of the Coolidge emissary, Stimson, to wage war against them with all the forces at his command—which means sufficient to crush the liberal government and maintain the usurper, Diaz, in power, in spite of the fact that he is despised by the overwhelming majority of the people of Nicaragua who know that he is merely the bribed tool of imperialism.

Dr. Juan Sacasa, the liberal president, whom the United States is trying to destroy because he would not yield to the blandishments of Wall Street, announces that the liberals will have nothing to do with the Diaz government. However, he does yield to the threat of Stimson and explains that his army "can only sacrifice itself or submit to the strength of a foreign power which, instead of being a bulwark of justice and right, has nullified the popular will of the Nicaraguan people as expressed in the free election of 1924 and ratified on the battlefield for the past six months."

Sacasa goes on to express his admiration for the United States and is an ardent advocate of "real Pan-Americanism," in spite of the terror practiced against and the deception practiced upon his people. These are not sentiments of a determined fighter, but of a puerile liberal.

Sacasa, to justify his leadership of the Nicaraguan masses in their struggle against American imperialism, should emphasize the fact that the Pan-Americanism we hear so much about is only an imperialist snare in which to enmesh the southern republics. It is a Pan-Americanism with the United States playing the part of overlord, just as Pan-Slavism so energetically promulgated by Czarist Russia was a slogan of vicious reaction that aimed to achieve czarist domination of all Slavic countries, with the final ambitious goal the domination of all Europe.

To justify himself as a leader of the Nicaraguan rebels against Wall Street's government at Washington, Sacasa should not only refuse to sanction disarmament by the American marines, but he should utilize his present position to discredit the Pan-Americanism of the banking houses and try to rouse all the neighboring republics against the frightfulness of the imperialists who continuously make bandit raids upon the nations of Latin-America.

Furthermore, instead of giving up their arms, the liberal forces should keep them. If the invading hordes of the United States are too overwhelming they should resort to deception and conceal their arms they now have and get as many more as they can obtain to hold in readiness when Nicaragua and other nations suffering under the blight of Wall Street can rise and drive the invaders from their shores.

Tammany Defends Right to Steal Elections

Tammany Hall is in an uproar. Judge Olvany, office boy for Governor Al. Smith, Wall Street's and pope's candidate for the democratic party nomination for president, and the Tammany district leaders held a secret meeting the other night at which they endeavored to devise plans to defeat the introduction of voting machines and a reduction of the number of election districts. Such an innovation would throw out some hundreds of Tammany election officials and disrupt the present machinery built up for the purpose of election steals.

No one should labor under the illusion that the introduction of voting machines and the reduction of the districts 25 per cent would guarantee correct returns on election day. Tammany objects to the introduction of the new system because it will force it to reorganize its machinery for stealing elections, not because it believes it will guarantee an honest count of the votes. It will devise a means of fixing the machines so that they will be equally as effective as the approved Tammany stunt of stuffing ballot boxes.

"Ten years hence the level of life in Russia will be far higher than it was before the war, and in the rest of Europe it will be lower than it was before the war," reluctantly asserts John Maynard Keynes, the bourgeois economist of England. Mr. Keynes, of course, is banking on the hope that the rest of Europe will then be capitalistic, otherwise he would have to qualify his statement.

Al Smith's articles of faith and patriotism which were calculated to aid him in his campaign to secure the democratic nomination for president of the United States fall rather flat in the light of the exposure of the fine Italian hand of the agents of the Pope in Mexico who staged the sanguinery train massacre a few days ago.

Spargo's Journey from Socialism to Facism

By H. M. WICKS

AGAIN (the distinctive, warped, scandalous flunkey of imperialism and former ornament of the Socialist party, John Spargo, has come out over the pages of the reptile press, leaving behind a trail of venom against the working class, the class that he once claimed he was to orient and guide, his exasperated ego by strutting as a leader.

This time Spargo appears as the defender of that other apostate, Mussolini. In a laudatory article appearing in the Sunday book review section of the New York Times, this mountebank, in search of revenue for a book titled, "Italy and Facismo," by Igino Sturzo, formerly a supporter but now an exile from the wrath of fascism, indulges in the most debasing praise of the blood-streaked monster, Mussolini, that has yet appeared in print in any language.

IN praising Mussolini, Spargo endeavors to traduce Lenin. He says: "What Lenin represented in the leadership of the destructive forces that were unleashed in Europe, Mussolini became in the leadership of the conserving and constructive forces."

Thus the bloody despot who turned Italy into a shambles, with the sewers overflowing with the blood of the flower of the working class and who maintains his power by means of whole provocation and organized assassination against every element in society except the powerful capitalists whom he serves and the blackguard mercenaries who make up his armed forces, is eulogized by Spargo as a constructive force. This butcher who boasts that he has trampled underfoot what few liberties the Italian people once enjoyed, this despot whose system of organized terror rests like a pall upon all Italy and who indulges in ludicrous bombast about the glory of the Caesars is said by Spargo to have "attained such eminence that none can be said to rival him."

As opposed to his picture of Mussolini, Spargo, places Lenin, who, as the leader of the Bolshevist Party, rescued the workers and peasants of Russia from their age-long thralldom and brought hundreds of thousands, nay millions, of them into active audible political life and inaugurated a system of government that is a thousand times more democratic than the most democratic capitalist government on the face of the earth. This man, the greatest insurrectionist who ever wrote his name on history's pages, the most far-seeing and daring liberator that many centuries or very name is the symbol of the epoch of the shattering of the last slave system humanity will ever know, and who, with definite plans and clear understanding of the problem confronting him began to build socialism out of the ruin left in Russia by the war and the counter-revolution, is traduced by the miserable scribbler, Spargo.

But to be reviled by a defender of and apologist for Mussolini is something by to be honored. Lenin's name is written so large in the history of mankind that no Spargo can ever detract from it or add to it. Regardless of the oceans of ink that may be spilled in publishing the diatribes of Spargo and his ilk history will record the fact that Lenin was the leader of the forces that first broke through the rotten and decaying capitalist structure and unleashed the forces that will enable society to rise to new and immeasurable heights, while Mussolini will be recalled only as a lackey of capitalism, of reaction, who tried to stem the tide of history and make slavery for humanity eternal.

FROM socialism to fascism, is the road traveled by Spargo. A road that has no retreat, the logical, inevitable goal of those who, like Spargo, started on the inclined plane of apostacy by first defaming the revolutionary elements of the working class and rapidly sank to the lowest depths of which human depravity can descend. Of all the renegades produced by the Socialist party only one other has plumbed the depths with Spargo—that worthy is Frank Bohn, onetime leading figure in the revolutionary movement who is also a contributor to the columns of the New York Times.

But many other assailants of the militant working class are rapidly travelling that road. Sigman, Oneal, Hillquit, former associates of Spargo, to mention only a few, will soon join him. Still denouncing fascism in Italy, they practice it in action against the workers of the United States. Their theory will soon conform to their action.

TO the Marxists of the United States, the defection of Spargo came as no surprise. Long before the first blast of the trumpets of the war that signallised his desertion to the camp of the imperialists this man displayed his dishonesty and his vicious ignorance. His crimes against the working class while he was still one of the outstanding leaders and "theoreticians" for the socialist party evoked the opposition of the Marxian elements. Then, as now, this ex-preacher and ego-maniac was a voluminous writer and everything he touched he perverted. If the Socialist party in the United States had been a Marxian party, instead of a miserable parody of the worst elements of German social-democratic opportunism, Spargo would long ago have been thrown out of the party as a notorious agent provocateur fit only to sell himself to the people who now pay him for his services that he donated to them gratis while at the helm of the socialist party.

His first outstanding crime was to write a book wherein, by a series of crude inventions, distortions and downright forgeries, he tried to prove the compatibility of socialism and religion. For this he was severely condemned by the Marxists of that day, including the present writer. But the official Hillquit, Berger, J. Stitt Wilson, Walter Thomas Mills, executive of the socialist party, defended Spargo and accused us of conspiracy to disrupt the party. To distort Marx in the most shameful manner was a virtue, to defend Marxism a crime against the party.

However, we in the United States were not alone in our denunciation of Spargo. It was not long before he wrote what purported to be a life of Marx. So low, so vile, so utterly unprincipled and fraudulent was this work that when it was translated into German the social-democratic party prohibited its circulation and Franz Mehring stalwart Marxist and brilliant revolutionist branded, the thing as a disgrace to the international (the pre-war second international) and an insult to the memory of Marx. His only rival in Marx distortion was James Oneal whose ability to twist the works of the theoretical founder of the revolutionary movement is only equalled by his mastery in perverting American history.

But the exposure of Spargo by Mehring did not prevent the socialist party circulating his disgraceful work and he still remained one of its bright and shining lights.

What was a Mehring in Germany compared to the ex-pulpit-pounder, Spargo, in the United States?

Had the socialist party been a Marxian party there would have been no Spargo of yesterday and therefore no Spargo of today. He and Frank Bohn constitute the rottenest offshoot of socialist opportunism, but others are on the road to keep them company and sooner than many expect old socialist acquaintances will be renewed and old alliances resurrected under the bloody banner of fascism.

Just as Spargo's career in the socialist party indicated the road he would eventually take, so the present activities of his former associates prove that they are headed in the same direction.

WORKERS SCHOOL DIRECTOR ANALYSES CHANGING AMERICAN WORKING CLASS; ROLE OF RIGHTS

The Workers School Open Forum closed the 1926-27 Sunday evening with a lecture by its director, Bertram D. Wolfe on "The Changing American Working Class." It was held at the school's headquarters, 108 East 14th Street.

Wolfe pointed out that the American working class is changing with American imperialism, taking over the privileged position held by Great Britain up to the time of the world war.

A majority of the world's telephones and automobiles are manufactured here and that more than one half of the gold in the vaults of the world are in American banks.

Most Productive.

"The American working man," continued Wolfe, "is the most productive in the world. He produces as much as 2 to 7 workers of other countries."

"United States capitalism invests in other countries $1,000,000,000 a year. 1927 will see that marked passed. America also gets higher rates of profits than other countries using many methods including monopolies and exploitation of colonial countries in Central America and South America, wherever U. S. marines use their bayonets to drive them to work long hours for low wages.

Pay Tribute.

"The capitalist of the other countries are paying tribute to the United States who is able therefore to throw out crumbs to its own workers. It can bribe large sections of the American working class. In fact, if it wanted to, it could give concessions to the entire working class of this country. But it does not do so; it only give bribes to the strategically placed sections of the working class.

Upward Trend Continues.

"How long will the privileges continue and are they going up or down? What is the trend? It is still upward, American capitalism having not yet reached it zenith, the peak of its power."

Wolfe then pointed to the development of trusts as the recent merger among bakerys, ice cream and florist corporations. He said that no industry in running to capacity of its plants.

"What effect will this upward trend have on the American working class?" he asked. "This tactic of corrupting parts of the working class will continue and will drive parts of the working class of this country to the right. This situation will continue as long as American capitalism is on the upgrade and continues its briberies."

For Upper Strata.

Referring to Matthew Woll, Wolfe pointed out that Woll wants the trade unions for the upper strata of the workers being opposed to using them as organs of working class struggle. Therefore he is opposed to strikes and any sharp form for the working class struggle.

For Class Peace.

"The drive against the left in the labor movement is a drive against the left wing and the Communist is a move for class peace. Woll and those who support him find it necessary to drive out the left wing so they can fulfill their promise. In 1919 the red raids were made directly by the government under the command of A. Mitchell Palmer that expose the state power of the government. In 1927 a more clever method is used, that of the trade union officials leading the raids.

"In 1919 it was the Communist Party that bore the brunt of the attack and today again it is the organization that is being fought. Why? Because as a result of the reorganization of the party it is able to penetrate into the basic unions especially into the United Mine Workers. Also it has been leading successful strikes at a time when the A. F. of L.'s policy is to abandon strikes. When the official labor leaders want to limit unions to the skilled workers only, the Communists organize the unorganized workers."

Wolfe also referred to the divisions in the executive council of the A. F. of L., proving that Woll, Green and Norman, represent three tendencies—a right wing, center and left wing.

Wall Street Declares War Upon Labor

are a signal that the workingclass must take decisive action in two directions—also supplementing each other:

1. In all strikes, lockouts and boycotts the decision in the Bedford Cut Stone Company case must be disregarded—there must be organized mass resistance to this new form of slavery.

2. Intensive agitation and organization work for a labor party must be started in all sections of the working class movement.

That a new drive on labor has been prepared and has been launched already against the coal miners, certain sections of the building trades, the garment trades, etc., there cannot be any doubt.

The two reactionary decisions of the Supreme Court coincide with the beginning of this new offensive. The decisions also coincide with the new developments in the imperialist policy of aggression in Nicaragua, Mexico, the Philippines, China and elsewhere.

Externally Wall Street government is pursuing a policy of forcible and underhanded conquest of colonial and semi-colonial peoples.

Internally, the policy of Wall Street government is aggression against the working class and its organizations.

The policies and methods which secured gains for the workers during the pre-imperialist epoch are obsolete and ineffective now.

The identity of interest of workers and employers—the theory upon which the unions have based their policy and tactics—is obviously a dangerous delusion.

The Supreme Court decisions are class decisions—decisions in favor of the capitalist class.

The "nonpartisan" political policy—"punishing enemies and rewarding friends" in the ranks of the two Wall Street parties—is bankrupt. Wall Street welcomes this sham struggle and its supreme court welds the shackles tighter on the limbs of labor.

The time has come to fight.

If the present leadership of the American labor movement evades the struggle and its implications then a new leadership must be built.

Whoever, in the face of the declaration of war upon the American working class made by the two decisions of the Supreme Court, advocates a continuation of the old methods, whoever is against disregard of these decisions and against the organization of a mass party of labor, is an enemy of the working class and an apostle of surrender.

American workers must organise and fight!

DRAMA

ANNIE LAURIE

The producers of "Annie Laurie" have done it again. Under the wealth of scenic beauty they have covered the poverty of the picture.

The days of old Scotland when the clans fought each other to keep their cattle and property are pictured here. Justice emerges triumphant in the end. Of course it is not as simple as all that. There are many thrilling moments; there are rivers of blood, colorful battles, vigor, strength and just oodles of patriotic high fervor. Brotherly love and peace are eventual victors in the struggle of the Campbells and the McDonalds.

The poor but honest mountaineer McDonalds finally defeat the clan Campbell, who represent wealth and corruption and have misused the order of the King. All is finally lovely for King, Country and Justice.

In a play of such sentimentality Lilliam Gish, naive and sweet to distraction, is well cast.—A. Gus.

4 Days' Bazaar Raises Fund To Free Workers; Great Success

The Defense Bazaar, which closed at New Star Casino Sunday night, was undoubtedly the greatest event of its kind ever held in this city. At a late hour, workers were still bringing in contributions, and the success of the four-day sale has astonished those who are experienced in managing such affairs.

No figures can yet be given out by the treasurer, but the profits will undoubtedly be far greater than was originally anticipated. A full report will be made in a few days by the Joint Defense Committee, whose headquarters are at 41 Union Square.

De Silva, Soft Voiced, Aid to British Tyrant, Praises Yankee 'Soul'

The limit of optimism was reached yesterday when the distinguished Buddhist, Dr. W. A. de Silva, member of the Legislative Committee of Ceylon, arrived here to talk on non-resistance, and referred in his first interview to the Americans as a "spiritual people."

De Silva praised the American policy of restricting immigration. "It will give you time, he said, to build up national idealism. You are living a program of life for material purposes," said De Silva, "but you are unconsciously building up a spiritual life."

Mrs. Alice McKay Kelly, trustee of the League of Neighbors, which is bringing De Silva here, said he was the most trusted advisor of Sir Hugh Clifford, British governor of Ceylon. Clifford enjoys the reputation of being one of the most "hard boiled" of English colonial rulers.

Building Trades Job Situation Not Bad in Cleveland

By FRED HARRIS.

CLEVELAND, May 16.—One can't be in this city longer than two hours before he will be told by someone, kids or grown-ups, that the carpenters have signed an agreement with the bosses and that they have gotten a wage increase of $1.00 a day.

It is the news of the hour, and everybody seems to rejoice over it with the exception possibly of a couple of real estate dealers, whose conversation I overheard on a street car. Those worthies seemed to be quite enraged about the unscrupulousness of union labor. It was with satisfaction and anticipation that one of them murmured to his partner in crime: "If I'd have my way I'd hang all these labor leaders."

Doing Well.

Otherwise, Cleveland is doing quite well, thank you. It has its Euclid Ave and Statler Hotel, a new library (which everybody admires, but few make use of) its public square, surrounded by large banking houses, among which is the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers Co-Operative National Bank. On this same public square is now being erected the Cleveland Union Terminal (badly needed) which will put Cleveland in the same class with New York, Chicago, Detroit or any of them.

The problem of unemployment has also stabilized itself. It so happens in the painting trade, that during last year's six month strike, which by the way, did not end satisfactorily, large numbers of men left the city. Thus, with the surplus labor gone, there exists today in Cleveland a favorable balance of supply and demand.

Of course the workers will still shout a far more enthusiastic "goodbye" to a departing fellow worker than a "hello" to a new arrival, but on the whole the labor situation is fair.

Patrolman Peter Pfeiffer was chasing men whom he suspected of burglary at Ninth Ave. and 29th St., according to police reports Sunday. Pfeiffer says they hauled out pistols before he fired, but in any event Mrs. Annie Coombs, 48, of 539 Ninth Ave., and not the burglars received the hail of lead.

John Mavajosky, 152 E. 20th St., joined the cop and got three bullets for his trouble.

U. S. Governor Ends Cricket in Samoa

APIA, Samoa, May 16.—The American governor of Samoa has issued arbitrary orders to the native population to curtail its attendance at cricket games. It is alleged by the government that the work in the fields is hindered by the Samoans desire to occasionally take a week off and attend inter country matches. Cricket was introduced to the islanders thirty years ago, and is well liked. But the new American rulers are efficient business man and want production.

UNSKILLED AND SKILLED TOOK WORK AT FIFTY CENTS AN HOUR IN UNORGANIZED AUTO PLANTS

By LAURENCE TODD.

WASHINGTON, May 16. — Low wages for exhausting toil are the outstanding features of industrial conditions in the automobile factories at Detroit and lesser centers of production, shown by a survey made by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor. This study is understood to be a preliminary to the organizing campaign which will be launched next month—according to present plans—in some of the largest units of the industry.

Common labor, employed outside, at Detroit factories received from 45 to 50 cents an hour in July, 1926. Common labor inside was paid 50 cents an hour, on the average. Pig iron loaders received 50 cents, cupola chargers from 55 to 70 cents, sand mixers 50 to 54 cents, machine molders from 60 cents to $1, assemblers in automobile plants from 70 to 90 cents, assemblers outside from 55 to 80 cents, electricians from 70 to 75 cents, machinists from 70 to 80 cents, shop carpenters from 60 to 80 cents, hand truckers from 45 to 50 cents, and electric truckers from 55 to 65 cents.

The only maximum wage rates that were above $1 an hour were $1.15 maximum for cranemen and $1.35 for wood pattermakers. Minimum wages of $1 an hour were possible to contemakers, machine molders, hand floor molders on heavy work, machine operators on production, and acetylene welders.

Ford Grinds Out Cars.

Production statistics for the automobile industry in Detroit for 1926 showed that the Ford factories, with a number of employes reported at 1,085,168 cars; that General Motors plants, with 86,378 employes, produced 900,169 cars; that General Motors plants, 32,000 workers made 279,586 cars; that the Chrysler plant, with 13,000 workers, produced 183,367 cars, and that the Hudson, with 10,000 employes, produced 100,401 cars of the Hudson type, while with a labor force not specified it produced 154,586 Essex cars. The entire production at Detroit was slightly under 3,000,000 cars.

Skilled Get 85 Cents.

Some of the classes of workers in Detroit factories who start at 50 cents an hour, the A. F. of L. discovered, are time clerks, oilers, stock chasers, millwright helpers, steamfitters helpers, electrician helpers, blacksmith helpers, firemen, truck drivers, crane operators, and several classes of machine operators. In certain factories a rate of 40 or 45 cents is paid to beginners in some of these classes and to workers in various other grades.

Skill at many of the jobs in the automobile plants is soon acquired. From one to five weeks is enough time, in most cases, to bring a new worker to the point of efficiency. The survey does not indicate how long the average new hand must work before receiving the maximum rate of pay for this immediate skill.

What the labor organizers will attempt, when they begin operations in Detroit, will be to educate the lower-paid workers to the possibility that they can win a reasonable wage level if they will join hands to demand it and maintain it.

HEAVY PATRIOTS ANXIOUS TO BURN SACCO AND VANZETTI

BOSTON, May 16.—A choice collection of professional patriots and defenders of the Constitution joined yesterday in appealing to Governor Fuller to allow Massachusetts to electrocute Sacco and Vanzetti on July 10 for a crime they never committed.

Francis Ralston Welsh, investment broker of Philadelphia, led the list with a personal attack on John Nicholas Beffel, New York newspaperman, who covered the Dedham trial for Federated Press, and recently submitted an affidavit to the governor alleging bias on Judge Theyer's part.

Welsh denounced the Federated Press as "Communistic" and in colorful words pointed its correspondents as liars.

Then he took up the Federal Council of Churches.

"What the Greater Boston Federation of Churches is like, I do not know," he said, "but the Federated Council of the Churches of Christ in America has come largely under red influence and its statements have been inaccurate accordingly. The effort of the Federated Council is the sort of thing that has repeatedly been done for the sole purpose of influencing the graft game and misleading the public."

Key Men There.

The famous Key Men of America, intently interested in the attempted suppression of The DAILY WORKER and the imprisonment of its editors, through its director, Fred R. Marvin, announced its helpfulness in these words:

"I have received letters from a number of prominent citizens of your state asking if we could not be of some service to you in presenting evidence that might aid you in exposing the forces new engaged in attempting to sway you in the matter of the Sacco-Vanzetti case," he writes.

Society Ladies.

On the opposite side of the letter is listed the advisory council. Following are the names of Boston residents listed as members of the council:

Mrs. Randolph Frothingham, Mrs. James Cunningham Gray, C. F. Luitwieler, treasurer, American Stay Company, Anna M. Manion, American Legion Auxiliary, and Margaret C. Robinson, president, Massachusetts Public Interest League.

Elihu D. Stone, assistant U. S. district attorney, was almost too pained for words when he found out that Massachusetts has an unsavory reputation abroad. He reported:

"I was depressed by the nature of the agitation in regard to the case in both France and Italy. One hears it discussed as streets, in hotels and in public places. It is evident to me that professional agitators are using the case as a means of propaganda in those countries. The people there seem to think that Sacco and Vanzetti are being tortured for the high principles they entertain.

"The French and Italian people seem to lack a proper conception of the people of Massachusetts and think they are in conspiracy against these men. To me, a citizen and resident of this state, it was a really painful experience to hear such views expressed."

Judge Ponders Boss Bakers' Injunction

The temporary injunction issued against the Bakers' Union in Brooklyn prohibiting picketing of the Pechter Bakeries, was argued last week in the supreme court with decision reserved by the presiding judge on the question of whether it should become permanent.

According to Hyman Bushel, attorney for the union, more than 75 pickets have been arrested since the beginning of the strike. Most of them have been released on payment of fines. Two have been sentenced to two days in jail.

Picketing is continuing in front of all of the Pechter and Messing Bakeries.

Bishop Brown Speaks in Pittsburgh L. Lyceum This Saturday at 8 P.M.

PITTSBURGH, May 16.—Bishop William Montgomery Brown, deposed after a trial on a charge of "heresy" will speak at the Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller St., next Saturday at 8 o'clock.

A similar meeting held last year brought several thousand to the North Side Carnegie Music Hall. On this occasion permission to use the auditorium was refused in spite of the fact that it is a city institution. An appeal against the decision was made and the city council is now "investigating" the action of the manager.

More Work, Less Pay, Company Union Gain

PERTH AMBOY, N. J. (FP).—How the company at the Raritan Copper Works, on Anaconda concern—won more work for the same pay is told by members of Local 121, Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

The management graciously allowed the company union to gain a demand for raincoats, rubber hats and boots for the yard gang. And now when it rains the yard gang has to continue working in the wet instead of coming inside.

The company union was started last fall some time after a strike had compelled the concern to grant a 5 cent an hour increase. No increases have come through the company union.

German Owners Of Passaic Lost Much On Strike

The Passaic strike of last year was felt in Berlin. The big German firm that controls the Nelsney Consolidated Mills lost heavily on its American operations last year. A dispatch to textile trade papers from Berlin says:

"While declaring a 6 per cent dividend today Stoehr Worsted Co. comments on the unsatisfactory development through the company's American participations, which suffered losses through a prolonged strike."

At the Botany offices in Passaic, the last known for last year is listed at $4,483,455. The Stoehr company's 6 per cent is due to the successful operation of its many European factories.

The Stoehr firm is a powerful international combine. It controls the Kammgarnspinnerei and Elberfelder Textilspinnerie, A. G., large weaving plant at Elberfeld, Germany. They have controlling interest in 20 other factories of varying importance in Germany, Czecho-Slovakia, Hungry, Holland, Italy and Latvia, manufacturing woolens, worsteds and other textiles.

Paterson and Passaic Have a Labor Paper

PATERSON, N. J. (FP). — The Passaic County Labor Advocate, is a new labor paper, bearing the endorsement of the Paterson Trades and Labor Council. The opening number carries an article by Irving Freeman of the Federated Press on the 5,000 unemployed textile workers in the Passaic district. The paper is published by John Richardson and John W. White from Room 5, Labor Institute, 359 Van Houten Street, Paterson, N. J.

Pennsy Biggest Foe of Mine Pay Scale

HARRISBURG, Pa. (FP). — The Pennsylvania R. R. has been the greatest agency in "beating down" the Jacksonville wage contract, said Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, in speaking before the annual convention of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor.

The Federation endorsed the National Council for the Protection of Foreign Born. Nina Sawaredin, secretary of the Council, addressed the convention.

Union Will Fight Any Two Machine Per Man Hose Knitting Program

PHILADELPHIA, (FP). — Speed-up systems mean high costs in his industry, says Gustave Geiges, vice-president of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers. The union secretary points out how the hosiery suffers when a knitter is compelled to operate two machines instead of one.

Injures Machine.

One knitting machine is all the worker can efficiently handle, Geiges shows. The full fashioned hosiery machine costs from $6,000 to $10,000 and is a highly delicate mechanical contrivance. When a worker attempts to run two of these at once the machinery cannot receive proper attention and deteriorates. Imperfect goods are turned out. There is wastage of expensive materials. The majority of manufacturers who have tried both systems agree that best results are obtained with the one-man-at-one-machine plan.

Union to Oppose.

Geiges' statement is in reply to an argument for the multiple machine—or two-to-a-knitter plan—advocated by a manufacturer in the columns of an employers' paper. The union will resist any such proposal, he says, not only for the sake of the workers but for the welfare of the industry.

The American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers is the most successful branch of the United Textile Workers.

Buffalo Meeting

BUFFALO, May 16.—A Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration will be held this Saturday, meet in McKinley Monument. The speakers will include Rev. H. J. Hahn of the Salem Brotherhood Church; Herbert Benjamin, Workers (Communist) Party; F. P. Brill, one time socialist candidate for mayor of this city; Judge Campbell, secretary, Moulders union; C. Sperling, I. W. W.; Irving Green, Young Workers League; L. Bash, proletarian party; Wm. Shenick of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and Pearle Reynold, local attorney.

HARDY PRICE IS IN COLLABORATION OF CLASSES TALK

Insurance Shark Thinks Unions Will Cringe.

By LAURENCE TODD.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Careful avoidance of the words "trade union" marked discussion of labor matters and industrial relations before the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, in 15th annual convention in Washington.

H. H. Rice, assistant to the president of General Motors, sounded the keynote at the luncheon of the manufacturing section of the chamber when he said that "wages cannot be higher without a corresponding increase in production, from which only can wages get their return."

Rice asserted that the motor industry has so reduced cost by increasing production, that "today the motor dollar is worth $1.18 as compared with the dollar of 1914, although the comparable figure for all industry is but 60 cents."

Drive Them Ever Harder.

"In the motor industry," he said, "the co-operation between the workmen and the manufacturer in the use of mechanical equipment, together with unusual opportunity which has come through great demand, has more than doubled the production per man. This has spelled prosperity for all, but this can continue only so long as there is no letup in the increase of production, whether that is brought about by new processes or inventions.

"There can be no quarrel with the shorter day or shorter work week per se, without reduction in the wage, providing the unit cost does not increase, but the difficulty with the latter, which seemingly always accompanies such suggestions; namely, that the shorter hours or shorter week must be accompanied with no reduction in real wages.

Hate To Pay.

"The recent increase of wages to railroad employes must be paid for by the contribution in some amount from every one of the rest of us, unless the raising of their standard of living proves to have a beneficial effect upon their producing power and brings a reduction in the unit cost.

"There has been an unenquiring acceptance of this idea of production as the only source of prosperity by those who have not in the past been disposed to emphasize this matter, and while selfish human nature tends to make us all magnify our own contribution to wealth, it is one of the signs of progress that greater emphasis than formerly is now being placed on prosperity as well as employers on the necessity for high production."

Class Collaboration.

Hayley Fiske remarked that since workingmen have "become capitalists" by purchasing small shares of stock in the companies employing them, they are becoming more reasonable toward capital.

"Trade unions," he said, "are recognising that peace and prosperity can be promoted by understanding, by cooperation, by recognition of a common interest in industry."

He advised business men to recognize "this new attitude of labor," and lend a sympathetic hand to its development." He did not explain what degree, if any, of union recognition he would favor.

Christ. Not Unions.

Arthur T. Morey of the Commonwealth Steel Co., St. Louis, explained the welfare enterprises maintained by his company, and said that workers ought to be paid a good wage—"in living saving, cultural wage." But he kept off the subject of trade unionism while talking freely on the christian duty of employers to their employes.

"The unrest of the world is among the peasants and workers," said Morey. "If in America we have a contented and constructive wage earning class—that fact will sell America to the world quicker than any other."

Mutual Aid League Appeals For Funds For Charles Cline

In order "to help Charles Cline over the period during which he will have to make his readjustment with the world," after his 15 years in a Texas prison, the League for Mutual Aid is making an appeal for funds.

Cline, was given a life sentence, in 1913, following his conviction in connection with the murder of a Texas sheriff. Cline was at the time on his way to Mexico to help in a revolutionary movement against the Diaz government, and altho innocent, he was doubtless arrested and convicted because of his radicalism. It took 13 years before his friends succeeded in getting him pardoned by Governor "Ma" Ferguson.

Now Cline needs a lift over his period of readjustment after this long absence behind prison bars. If you want to help, send what you can spare to Charles Cline, care of the League for Mutual Aid, 70 Fifth Avenue, New York.

SACCO and VANZETTI SHALL NOT DIE!

STREET CAR HEAD IN OPEN NOT TO HELP SITUATION

Shadow Play by Servants of Wall Street

By ROBERT MITCHELL.

What has thus far been conducted evidently in secret will now be conducted unambiguously in the open. For the past week or more the New York State transit commission, through its special counsel, Samuel Untermyer, has gone through the hide and seek manoeuvers of a so called hearing of the traction situation.

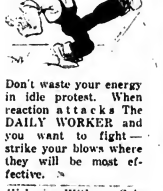
At the conclusion of the fruitless conflab, Untermyer announced the inability of the transit commission to bring the hard boiled traction barons to a common ground of further discussion. At the same time Untermyer stated that he had been without hope of any agreement from the very beginning. This appears to be all Greek to the uninitiated.

Now it is announced that open, public hearings will begin Monday, May 23rd. Untermyer does not state, definitely that he expects certain results from the public hearings. The question naturally arises as to the reason for the secret hearings in the first place. Again if anything real is intended by the maneuver of the open hearings why were these not instituted in the first place.

Hide Dirty Mess.

Close students of the traction situation remarked that nothing is clearer than the fact that transit is a public problem. The hearings held in secret, they said could not but raise the question of the intention to hide the true state of affairs.

In reply to some criticism of his statements on the part of Dahl, chairman of the board of B. M. T. directors, Untermyer stated that the line had come for a show down on traction stock manipulation. How sincere this threat really is will become clear when the investigations begin next Monday.



That the investigation now being conducted is not what it is cracked up to be, however, becomes clear when it is remembered that the present New York state transit commission is a body completely under the domination of Governor Al. Smith, now the favorite son of the traction interests and of Wall Street.

Untermyer's Connections.

Samuel Untermyer is himself a millionaire attorney whose connections with the Morgan owned traction companies has often been noted.

AUTOMATIC PLOW INVENTED

An "automatic plow" has been invented by F. L. Zybach, railroad motor car inspector and farmer, living near Grand Island, Neb. By attaching a timed automatic steering device to a tractor, Zybach is able to do his work on the railroad while his tractor plows his fields. He is shown pointing to the device. Inset shows how the plow works from the rear of the tractor.

Chair Workers of Gardner, Mass. in Organization Drive

GARDNER, Mass., May 16.—Continuing the work of organizing a union of chairworkers in Gardner begun so successfully on the 20th of March, the workers now have regular union meetings every week and have applied for a charter in the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners. They are hopeful that their request for affiliation will be soon granted that they may take their place in the ranks of the strongest unit in the American Federation of Labor.

At a meeting held on the 11th of May in the Franco-American Hall Gardner's very hopeful report was given by the financial secretary. "During the past week" ran the report despite the brow beating tactics of the bosses, and in spite of the fact that our organizer can only devote one day a week to the work in this city, we have trebled our membership during the last five days. The superintendent of the Heywood Plant has been calling all the workers whom he suspects of being in favor of a union into the office and threatening them with the loss of their jobs. . . . But the workers have been well warned and they can lie to the boss as well as any boss can lie to them.

Fool The Boss.

The workers have formed a committee composed of delegates from each of the twenty factories in the city, and this committee is proving its value as the real weapon for organizing in the machine industries. Every week the committee meets with the executive and reports on the work done in the factories during the week, and every week they turn in more and more application cards for membership in the union. Because of the fact that only two persons have access to the lists of membership and that the strength of the organization is not made public nt the membership meetings, the bosses are crazy to know just what parts the workers really have. They have sent in two stoolpigeons to find out what is going on but they have had to go away no wiser than they ware at the beginning.

The workers who have joined the union so far are almost all American born workers, and it is due to the efforts of these hard working exploited factory workers that the union has begun to grow as it has. The workers of Gardner have proven the theory that the working class can and does throw up its own leadership in time of struggle provided that the leaders of the working class can give them work to do. The workers of Gardner are confuting by their activities the theory that the American working masses have been bought off by high wages, self-owned cottages, and automobiles. The workers of Gardner, as do all wage-workers in large scale industry, replied to the pessimists, by getting down to work and forming a union. . . . They say that it may be true that they are bought off but that an average wage of $18 a week does not look like that to them. . . . The workers of Gardner know their own business best and are pushing on to the formation of a powerful union in the chair city to protect their interests.

Some Efficiency Expert.

At the union meeting held in Gardner on Wednesday 11th of May a talk was given by Organiser Murdoch on the methods of Banking Capital in Industry, as illustrated in the case of the Heywood Wakefield Co. since that firm has passed into the control of Henry Hornblower, influential Boston banker. In the discussion that followed one old worker who has been employed in the Heywood concern for eight years gave the following story.

"I have worked for eight years in the stock-room of the Heywood factory," he said, "and up till the time the factory was reorganized I used to work a full week and at 45 cents an hour. My pay was enough to maintain me and my family.

"But when Henry Hornblower sent in his efficiency men they cut down the number employed in my department by half and so arranged the work that those of us who were left had to do more work in three days than we did before in a week. Then came the wage-cut and they cut my wages 5 cents an hour which gave me only $12.82 one week and $17.10 the next . . . how could any man with a family live on this . . . I did not pay my mortgage on the house and after I was five months behind on my monthly payments and I got a notice from Hornboware and Weeks of Congress Street Boston to leave my house if I did not pay up . . . I got out.

"My boss held the mortgage on my house and he did not kid me into believing it was my home . . . I guess I was not bribed."

Picketing with the Dressmakers

By A. SOKOLOV

In Memory of The Great Strike.

It was a cold windy morning when I decided to visit the trenches of class struggle and participate in the dressmakers' picket line. At 7:45 a. m. I reached the Automat on 36th street and 7th avenue and stopped in for my breakfast.

The restaurant was packed to its capacity with dressmakers who were sitting or standing and quickly consuming their breakfasts. They all seemed very busy and, enting only as a matter of necessity, they rushed out of the hole.

The turnover of people was so great that the stream of men and women was continuously marching out. It seemed as if the Automat served the dressmakers as a recruiting station for the start of the picket line. I followed the crowd and soon found myself on the picket line.

Hundreds of men and women in rows of two or four, like a well disciplined army, were marching up and down along 36th street. Their faces expressed seriousness, sincerity and determination to fight. There could be no doubt that those men were conscious of the struggle, that they were out to achieve their aim.

Along the walls of the factories were stationed tens of policemen, detectives and thugs who watched closely every step of the pickets. It was suspiciously quiet. One could feel the approaching storm.

"They are coming"—the word passed swiftly down the rows of pickets. The eyes of the hundreds of men turned toward a group who approached the factories surrounded by thugs and gangsters.

"Scabs! Scabs! Scabs!" shouted a few. It was immediately picked up by the rest. For several minutes the thunder-like outcry of "Scabs" filled the garment district.

Among the scabs were prominent leaders of the right wing.

Like wild beasts the police, thugs and gangsters threw themselves upon the pickets, clubbing them mercilessly and carelessly. But even then the dressmakers retreated in perfect order, trying to avoid too many arrests. In fact only a few were arrested that morning, and only those who were pointed out to the police by the right wing leaders.

"Professional Patriots"

The Keymen of America and the Military Order of the World War are the patriotic organizations which are leading the war against the DAILY WORKER.

The labor-smashing activities of these hysterically patriotic organizations are described in Professional Patriots, edited by Norman Hapgood and published by Albert and Charles Boni.

The Keymen, led by Fred R. Marvin, who does a lucrative business "exposing the menace of Communism," claimed credit in 1924 of rendering "this nation a remarkable service in defeating socialism and communism which was manifasted through the third ticket headed by LaFollette and Wheeler."

The Advisory Council of the Keymen includes officials of the Associated Employers of Indianapolis, the National Founders Association, the National Clay Products Industries Association, the Citizens Alliance of St. Paul, the Employers Association of Jackson, Michigan and the Builders' Exchange of San Francisco. In addition representatives from practically all the patriotic associations are on the council as well as the leading lights of the Chemical Warfare Reserve and the Military Intelligence Association.

According to "Professional Patriots"

The organization announces that among other duties its members should be prepared to help stop the growth of Communism and Socialism, work for industrial freedom, keep informed through the Information Bureau of all subversive and radical movements, keep the Information Bureau posted on local activities of radical movements, and assist local newspapers to secure and print information that will aid in this character of work. The membership fee in the organization is $12 per year which includes the daily information service of the organization appearing on the editorial page of the Commercial.

One of Mr. Marvin's latest feats is reflected in an editorial in the New York World (May 8, 1926) under the title, Another Red Conspiracy Yarn:

The Army and Navy Journal engages in a very curious enterprise when it prints an article under the headline "Oil 'Scandals' Engineered by Radicals," by Fred R. Marvin. Mr. Marvin is introduced as editor in chief of the New York Commercial, who is "accepted as the best-posted man in the United States on the origin, nature, purpose, methods and systems of the various radical and subversive organizations now infesting the United States and engaged in seeking to overthrow this government."

In effect, Mr. Marvin undertakes to make it appear, somehow, that the naval "oil scandals," as he calls them, were part of a Bolshevist or Communist plot. How, he does not show. He does assert that after the Senate investigating committee set to work, "the publicity work which followed was guided largely by the Socialist and Communist movements in this country." Any such statement can hardly be charged to a faulty memory. But, as Mr. Marvin tells the story, when the cases went into the federal Courts the truth came out: "There was no scandal. No one sought to roh the Government." Judge Kennedy, in the Teapot Dome case, he cites as holding everything was all right. But the Russian conspiracy resulted in preventing "fuel-oil tanks at strategic points," and so on, from being used for the benefit of the navy.

Then in Mr. Marvin's text, under the heading "Schemers Win Their Desires," comes this: "But the incident, played up as it was because it came with the magic name 'scandal,' accomplished what the original projectors of the scheme expected it would accomplish. . . . The 'strategic' play of Zinovieff was a success."

What is the conceivable purpose of publishing such fluff?

In connection with Mr. Marvin's articles the Army and Navy Journal ran an essay contest, the essays dealing with the "most effective remedy against pacifist propaganda." The announcement of this essay contest contained the statement that "Army and Navy Journal will furnish information upon which the essays may be based." Mr. Marvin signed the announcement.

In the City of Mills

By MARY B. TRASK.

From the start Pinchak had been one of the leaders among the rank and file. An old man at the beginning of the strike, he had added ten years in as many months—one year for each skirmish with the officers of law and order. There had been a time when Pinchak lay ill in his dingy home, when the union doctor spoke gravely as he examined the bruises and cut which, it seemed, would never heal. They did heal, finally, and in a few weeks Pinchak was back on the picket line, as undaunted as ever. But not quite as well.

It was in the thirteenth month of the strike that he came into the office. I had not seen him for some time; only when he spoke did I realize that this bent shaking old man was Pinchak of the ready smile, "best of the bunch."

He lowered himself slowly into a chair—closed his eyes as if exhausted by the effort.

"Well, Fellow-Worker, what can we do for you?"

"It is not me—it is the doctor who has said." His English was a little more of an effort than formerly. I have the weakness and the doctor say it is that I must have more of the food and more of coal for the house."

No Money.

We could do nothing. Relief money was almost nonexistent. For the first time since the beginning of the strike we had been unable to pay gas bills—a month ago we had been forced to cut the relief almost in half. This, Pinchak knew. It was not to ask the impossible that he had come.

"I can not work—I have too much the weakness. But my boy is strong, and he wishes to go to the mill."

Beaten Back.

Pinchak's son turned scab! Mike had been among the youngsters on what his father had been on the picket line. He had thrown himself into the strike with all the enthusiasm of his fourteen years. But, if he did not work, how could his father live?

"All right, fellow-worker. Let the boy go back."

It was not the first time I had heard such strange advice given. What else was there to do?

But Pinchak was trying to make himself understood. "It is that from the union I want a paper to say he should work. The paper that he is not a scab."

Not much to ask of the union for which he had fought so long, surely not much—only a little paper. But it was a thing the union could not give. Knowing this, we argued without hope against each other. It could not be done.

No Scabbing.

"But, Pinchak, if he goes to work, everyone will know he has good reason. No one will blame him or you. Let him go to the mill."

Slowly, carefully, Pinchak got up. He reached his shaking hand to the man who had told him the decision.

"The union can not give me the paper—it is of no matter. Thank you the same, fellow-workers."

He started toward the door—it seemed hardly possible that he could walk alone.

"You will let the boy go to work, Pinchak?"

He turned to us an expressionless face. "With no paper? No. My boy will be no scab."

There was no use in further pleading. We stood silent as he left.

From Frigidaire to Furnace Room

By DONALD McKILLOP.
(Worker Correspondent)

I had no adventure on Saturday night, only an experience. The experience upset me more than the adventure of the previous Saturday because I am no longer a good Christian. It is impossible for me to believe at once in the christian tenet of loving my neighbor as myself. So, when it became evident that my mate and I would have to work until eleven o'clock at night in order to finish the job, the love of self made me curse inwardly at the state of affairs which pinned me down. The galling part of it was that the job could have been done in half the time had it not been for a stupid woman who follows blindly the dictates of her husband.

It would have required the miracle-working power of a Jesus Christ to convince that woman that the motor, which drives the compressor of the "Frigidaire," would work silently in the bottom of the cabinet, and give no annoyance, whatsoever. She insisted it had to go in the cellar where her better half wished. This meant we had to cut through the stone wall of the cellar, the supporting beams and the floor above in order to lead the lines to the cabinet in the kitchen.

Late Work Needless.

When the husband arrived, we found him amenable to reason, but too late to save us from the unnecessary work of cutting. It was poor consolation to my outraged feelings to have the husband admit, when the motor was running, that he didn't think it could be so quiet.

It is bad enough in all conscience, overtime on any other day, but working late on Saturday is anathema to me because where I come from Saturday afternoon is inviolable to bourgeois and Bolshevik alike. In fact, those who get drunk only on Saturday afternoon say that Saturday is the day that God made. Sunday being a holy day in Scotland, we are able to recuperate from the dencing or drinking of the previous day.

BOOKS

AN 19TH CENTURY ECONOMIST.

Laissez Faire and Communism, by John Maynard Keynes. New Republic, Inc., $1.

Do not waste your money or your time on this volume. The essays that are printed between the two covers are more or less unrelated. One series deals, in a general way, with economic matters. The second series considers Russia. Keynes' impressions of Russia in 1925. The work contains no central theme and is not a unit in any sense.

Keynes' essays on Russia, which were printed serially in the New Republic, suffer from two causes. Incidentally, Mr. Keynes was not in Russia long enough to grasp the meaning of the Soviet experiment. Fundamentally, however, he is so unaware of the meaning of economic processes and sequences that he might have spent a decade in the Soviet Union and still have had no idea what it was all about.

Keynes, like so many liberals, sees economics in three dimensions—height, breadth and depth. In his economic world there is little room for either motion or for growth (evolution).

This limitation is well expressed in his essay on "Individualism." "Laissez Faire," he writes, "drew its sustenance from many different revulsts of thought and feeling." Its principles were formulated by "the political economists who sprang into prominence just at the right moment." These economists, who happened along, "told us that for certain deep reasons unfettered private enterprise would promote the greatest good of the whole. What could suit the business man better?"

Keynes makes the whole process accidental. He does not once suggest, in the whole essay, any possible connection between what the business men wanted (profits) and what the economists wrote.

The same point of view is expressed in a later essay. Keynes pays his respects to Marxian socialism; "how a doctrine so illogical and so dull can have exercised so powerful and enduring an influence over the minds of men, and thru them, the events of history." Agrain he assumes the dullness or brilliancy of an iden is the determining factor in its historic influence.

It seems strange that a man so intimately conversant with current economic facts and events should be unable to see any pattern connecting or relating them. Yet Mr. Keynes can write these essays on the economic plans of eighteenth and nineteenth century life without recognizing either the part played by economic forces in the determining of laissez-faire and other schools of thought and without finding any connection between economic events.

For him ideas happen along and economies occur as wantonly as snowflakes float out of a winter sky.

Mr. Keynes has a world-wide reputation as an economist. There is not a page in this work that would justify the assumption that he understands either economic forces or economic processes.

—SCOTT NEARING.

A SENTIMENTAL REFORMER.

The Revolt of Modern Youth, by Judge Ben B. Lindsey and Wainwright Evans, Boni and Liveright. $2.50.

One can see the moment he has completed the first chapter of this book, that Judge Lindsey likes to talk a lot, and does. The volume is worthless in all aspects save one—and that is, in its delineation of the conservative-liberal's attitude toward sex matters among the younger generation. The approach to the subject is thoroughly unscientific. The writing is perhaps the most sentimental balderdash that the last few years have produced. Very poorly connected and replete with repetitions and incidents that prove nothing except the obvious, "The Revolt of Modern Youth" has nevertheless been greeted by critics as "a human document" and "an enlightening bit of frankness." That, I can say right here, is all nonsense.

Lindsey deplores the wide breach now existing between parents and children but offers no solution.

"I am not attempting to offer solutions, I have no panacea," he says.

He recognises the fact that parents are wrong in misunderstanding their children to the point where it becomes harmful both to the children and to them, but he forgives this because tradition dictates such a state of affairs. And it seems that to Judge Ben Lindsey tradition is sacred. Everything is justified on that ground. But to create new customs, new social institutions—never!

The whole views of churchmen on juvenile delinquency but adds that he does "not cite these cases as attacks on the clergy or the church." The social causes that underly these conditions and that have produced this false sex modesty between people are never touched upon.

The greatest fault in Lindsey shows itself too. A great portion of the book is devoted to a defense of himself and his methods against the methods of people "who have tried to blacken my name with trumped up stories in the past and who would welcome the flimsiest pretext to do it again."

His suggestions are always for individual remedies in the present social state. Beyond that he cannot see.

One suggestion in ending is that in the event of the book's running into several editions, the name should be changed to "A Judge's Lament" to be in perfect harmony with his treatment.

FROM BARBARISM THRU CIVILIZATION.

Where Is Civilization Going? by Scott Nearing. New York, Vanguard Press. Fifty cents.

Scott Nearing has scored again! This time with a smashing attack upon the prophets of confusion and despair, the Menckens and the Spenglers. "They see capitalism toppling"; he writes. "They feel the foundation of civilization crumbling under their feet, and they have neither the knowledge nor the understanding to realize that the labor movement is already building a new social structure upon the ruins of civilization." (p. 78.)

The book traces the progress of human society from the days of savagery through barbarism into civilization. The class struggles of the period of "civilization" are treated in some detail. Slavery was gradually replaced by the system of serfdom and the triumph of the feudal lords. Thru a series of bourgeois revolutions, such as the English Revolution of 1687, the bourgeoisie overthrew feudalism upon a world scale and capitalism entered upon its historical role.

Capitalism has now entered upon its final stage—imperialism. "Accumulating enormous surpluses, after the middle of the nineteenth century, pushes the whole capitalist system into the imperial world stage." (p. 27) In this period the class struggle is pressing the working classes into working class organization upon the industrial, political and co-operative sectors of the battle line. "In the course of these struggles the form of society is modified." (p. 32.)

"Each economic order builds a political structure adequate to provide for its needs." The immediate task before the world proletariat is the overthrow of the bourgeois state representing organized business, and the establishment, in its place, of a workers' state representing organized labor.

In this struggle the War of 1914 was a landmark and a turning point. It "was a danger signal that indicated the growing weakness of capitalist imperialism. The system had reached a point where it was eating itself up in the course of gigantic competitive struggles. If the masses adhered to the system they would be crushed by it." (p. 71) The turning point was the Russian Revolution of November, 1917.

How did the forces of the organized world proletariat meet the challenging situation created by the war? "War experience led the members of the Second International to accept ministerial posts and other appointments from the business class states. The Third International, on the other hand, has insisted upon emphasizing the class struggle. Furthermore, and unlike the Second International, the Communist International has mandatory power over its sections. In this sense, it is the first real international. . . . Political internationalism is today represented by the "Third" or Communist International, with sections in more than fifty countries. The Communist International directs the revolutionary political movement in all parts of the world." (p. 68.)

These are samples of the general tone of this volume, which it is hoped will whet the appetite and send the reader scurrying after the book itself. While it contains nothing profound, or even new, to the Marxian student, it is the best concise and brief statement linking up the class struggles of antiquity and tracing the course of historical forces from the days when man lived off berries and fruit and dwelt in caves up to the class struggles of our own day.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE Scotland Yard burglars who broke into the headquarters of the Russian Trade Delegation did not find the important official documents they were looking for according to a statement made by the Home Secretary, Sir William Joynson-Hicks, in the house of commons last Monday. Unless this failure to supply by forgery what could not be produced legitimately—if such a term can be used in connection with the raid—results in the immediate retirement of Hicks from public life, then the British Labor Party is even more toothless than we suspected and the tory government has lost its pride in the art of forgery.

BUT we must not assume that because Hicks made an open confession of his failure to produce a particular document that the matter rests there. Indeed there is reason to believe that the object of this suspiciously candid confession is to prepare the public for the publication of propaganda material alleged to be discovered in the raid. The discredited tory burglars are trying to rebuild a battered reputation so that the masses may say: those documents must be genuine since the government was honest enough to admit that they did not find the document they were looking for.

OF course the government was not looking for any particular document. That was simply an excuse for the raid. Every government in the world is spying on the other, in peace as well as in war. When a French spy is caught by the British in peace time or a British spy caught by the French, both governments officially disavow the victims but indirectly pull wires for a comparatively light punishment. There are no raids conducted on the embassies or consulates of the respective nations. The aim of the Arcos raid was to prepare the ground for a rupture of diplomatic relations.

• • •

THE officials of the Soviet Government are oftentimes accused of scaremongering when they insist that the capitalist powers are continually conspiring against the peace of the Soviet Union. But even the politically blind must admit that they are right. The visit of the French president and foreign minister to London bodes ill for the peace of Europe and coming immediately after the raids on the Soviet embassy in Peking, on the headquarters of the Communist party of France and on Arcos, there is reasonable justification for the suspicion that the two governments are trying to patch up their differences with a view to making a united front against Russia. Time will tell.

THE most farsighted of the capitalist statesmen are not extracting too much consolation from the split in the Koumintang Party of China. Better a split than fake unity. The foreign editor of a French daily who has passed thru here on his return from China declares that unless the powers take common action against the Chinese revolution that the best disciplined and most ideologiently homogenous group will ultimately get the masses and conquer power. He stated emphatically that the Hankow government, a combination of the Communists and the Lefts will win out unless drastic action is taken by the imperialists.

IT is not wise to predict what is liable to happen in China in the immediate future, but it appears that the most versatile of the capitalist reporters have failed to make Chiang-Kai-Shek stand up to our satisfaction. So far he has been unable to form a cabinet. He is in the same boat with the northern militarists having swapped the confidence of the masses for the dollars, pounds and yen of the imperialists.

• • •

MUDDLE-headed people are prone to assume that the Chinese will never be able to achieve national unity, being too much addicted to wrangling and domestic head-chopping. Those people are in the habit of saying: "Let's get together and forget our differences." Might as well say to a sick man: "Forget you're ill. Come on out and have a hot dog with me and a mug of hard cider." The sick man must have it out with the disease that has him on his back before he can forget or ignore it. The same applies to a nation or to a party.

HOW often have the Communists been accused of quarreling among themselves over what phoney critics consider trivialities! Lenin was branded as a hairsplitter by opponents who were so strong for unity that they lined up with the capitalists. Unity is a golden word but the lamb who would lie down with the lion has no kick coming if he wakes

ADMIRAL CRIES FOR DEFENSE IN BRITISH ATTACK

U. S. Is Helpless Before England, He Says

Although elaborately protected from Japan by the defenses on Guam and Hawaii, the American ruling class has insufficient fortifications against the British navy on the Atlantic coast, declares Admiral Sims in an interview. Sims, who wants the American navy the "biggest in the world," aims his remarks directly at England as the only power capable of attacking America on the east coast.

NEWPORT, R. I., May 17.—Admiral William S. Sims, commander-in-chief of the American naval forces in Europe during the war, declared today that the army-navy maneuvers now in progress in this region emphasize the strategic importance of Narragansett Bay for the establishment of a real naval base that would protect the eastern coast of the United States in the event of a war.

"The American public says, 'Hold Hawaii, it protects San Francisco,'" said Admiral Sims. "But it never seems to realize that we have no Honolulu in the Atlantic to protect New York City and the great industrial East from a possible foreign invasion."

Island Key to Defense

"The Narragansett Bay is big enough to handle the entire American fleet," he said. "And Block Island, 20 miles out to sea, is ideally situated to make this bay almost impregnable from a defensive standpoint."

"Block Island could be utilized to keep off any enemy force, enabling us to re-condition and re-fuel a fleet of any size in the bay."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Another Airman Falls

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 17.—Major Harold Geiger, commander of Philips air field, Aberdeen, Md., was killed at the Middletown air port near here at noon today, when his plane crashed to the ground and took fire, according to a report received here.

The motor of the plane stopped while the machine was about 75 feet from the ground, witnesses said, and the plane suddenly plunged to earth.

American Counteas Weds Again

BUENOS AIRES, May 17.—Arturo Peralta Ramos, who is reported to have won the hand of Millicent Rogers Salm in Paris, is a member of one of the oldest and most aristocratic families of Argentina, and is extremely wealthy. Arturo's grandfather founded Mar Del Plata, the Atlantic City of Argentina.

Closing House of David

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., May 17.—The State of Michigan today won the first preliminary legal battle in its suit to dissolve the House of David, a religious colony, as a fraud, a public nuisance and an immoral institution.

The State scored when Judge Louis H. Fead refused to grant the House of David's pleas to dismiss the suit on eight different grounds.

FLOOD WIPES OUT TOWN; MANY MAY BE KILLED IN IT

Coolidge and Hoover Both Satisfied

BATON ROUGE, La., May 17.—Great loss of life was feared today when the levee at Melville, 45 miles north of here, crumbled while most of the town was asleep, sending a wall of water 60 feet high and 500 feet wide rushing in upon more than 600 people.

John A. Parker, relief director for Louisiana, said that while most of the women and children had left the town, there were at least 600 still there and that it was unlikely that all of these had escaped the sudden rush of the peut-up waters.

Houses were overturned and ripped from their foundations by the force of the current which raged thru the town within a few minutes after the levee broke.

Driven Into Trees.

NEW ORLEANS, La., May 17.—Three hundred men and women, some with children in arms, are being rescued today from limbs of trees and roof tops to which they were driven when the flood waters from the Bayou Des Glaises swept over their refuge on Reeds Hill.

Pierre Gestrand, an alligator hunter, brought word to Opelousas that the plight of the refugees at Reeds Hill was desperate, and a fleet of 40 surf boats set out at once for the spot.

Reeds Hill is a highland behind Morrow, in St. Landry Parish, and for generations has been the refuge for descendants of the Acadians who settled this country.

No Help From Coolidge.

WASHINGTON, May 17. — The administration is well satisfied with the way the flood situation is being handled. Secretary of Commerce Hoover today made an optimistic report to the president, saying that everything is working smoothly in the flood region, and Coolidge again reiterated, publicly, his decision not to call an extra session of congress.

De Pinedo, Fascist Ace, Lost on Trip Between Chicago and Montreal

DETROIT, May 17.—Local fascists are feeling great anxiety over the safety of Francesco De Pinedo, Italian aviator, who was reported forced down between Ann Harbor and Chelsea today on his flight from Chicago to Montreal.

A number of Ford planes sent to meet and escort De Pinedo reported that they had failed to locate him.

The message received at the airport telling of the aviator being forced down did not say whether his plane crashed.

New Broadcasting List Will Aid Patrioteers

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Announcement of the new broadcasting allocations, effective June 1, will be made by the Federal Radio Commission next Monday, Commissioner H. A. Bellows said today.

The revised list will include 601 broadcasting stations. Approximately 650 stations will find their present wave lengths or power changed.

Most of the changes are for the purpose of strengthening the stations controlled by the conservative propaganda agencies which engage in broadcasting.

WORLD LEADERS GUARD ASHES OF C. E. RUTHENBERG

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R. (By Mail).—Three volleys in rapid succession from the rifles of Red Army infantry stationed atop the Kremlin Wall roared and echoed thru the Red Square.

Then a Red Army Band broke into "The Internationale" and tens of thousands of workers stood with bared heads, and regiments of Red Army soldiers stood at salute as Nikolai Buekharin placed the urn containing the ashes of our fallen leader, C. E. Ruthenberg, in the niche that had been prepared for it in the Red Wall of the Kremlin, before which are the graves of many of the dead in the triumphant Bolshevik Revolution of November 7, 1917.

Police of Canton, Ohio Implicated in Murder of Editor, State Says

CANTON, O., May 17.—Winding up arguments for the state today, in the trial of Floyd Streitenberger, alleged participant in the murder of Don Mgilett, Canton publisher, last July, special prosecutor C. B. McClintock placed the blame for the crime, "upon the Canton police department, who made the opponents of the assassination feel they would receive no punishment."

"Streitenberger must have given such assurance to Louis Mazer," state's star witness, jointly indicted for the murder), McClintock told the jury. "Streitenberger was the brains and backbone of the whole plot."

Streitenberger was a member of the detective bureau of the city police department until quite recently. The editor was killed because he was printing the story of the underworld graft in Canton, Ohio.

"NEW YORK WORLD" NOW PROTECTS INSURANCE GRAFT IT ONCE FOUGHT

PREVIOUS EVENTS OF INSURANCE EXPOSE.

The DAILY WORKER herewith continues its expose of the fraudulent methods employed by the "Big Four," who are the Metropolitan, Prudential, John Hancock and the Colonial Life Insurance Companies.

In this series it is charged that these companies who monopolize the weekly payment life insurance business are guilty of fraud, misuse of "mutual" funds, manipulation of policyholders' money and subornation, to perjury.

On April 27th Governor Smith ordered Superintendent of Insurance James A. Beha to make inquiries into the charges contained in the Harrison articles.

So far the official apologist for the insurance companies has not submitted his report. The expose has caused something resembling panic in insurance circles. It affects upwards of 40,000,000 American policyholders.

By CHARLES YALE HARRISON.

The DAILY WORKER is not alone in its condemnation of corrupt insurance practices. The great New York World, which cannot be charged with the "taint" of radicalism, has also had something to say on the question of the swindling methods of great insurance combines.

"For years these insurance companies have been giving to the public what are now admitted to be false statements. (N. Y. World editorial).

"Every incident of this kind enforces The World's voicing of the public demand for a full and thorough investigation of insurance corruption. Every detail of every transaction should be exposed. The sunlight of publicity is in itself an effective purifying agent." (N. Y. World).

"Metropolitan Life's Millions in One-Man Control" (headline N. Y. World).

Made Money In Slums.

"The Metropolitan's specialty is industrial insurance. Most of its policyholders are poor people who carry small policies largely for the purpose of defraying funeral expenses in the event of death. Its magnificent building running from Madison to Fourth Avenue on Twenty-third Street was practically erected from money taken from tenement-house dwellers." (N. Y. World).

". . . the mutualization of great life insurance companies is a farce. The elections are conducted by clerks voting proxies and a sufficient reserve supply of proxies is kept on hand to outvote any policyholder who appears in person." (N. Y. World).

HANKOW, May 17.—Having taken Honan-fu, former stronghold of Wu Pei-fu, central Chinese war lord, General Feng's troops, who are fighting under the flag of the Hankow Nationalists, are sweeping on toward Kaifeng-fu.

The rapid advance of Feng's troops means the virtual encirclement of the Fengtien troops in southern Honan. While Feng is moving southeast from the Shensi-Honan border, other Hankow troops are pushing north along the Peking-Hankow railway.

Nationalist leaders here predict the capture of Peking within three months.

MARINES KILL 25 NICARAGUANS FOR REJECTION OF DIAZ

Sacasa Proves Stimson Lies About Agreement

PUERTA CABEZAS, May 17.—Seventeen American marines and 25 Liberals are reported to have been killed in a clash when the marines attempted to forcibly "disarm" a Liberal detachment at La Paz, between Leon and Managua. Liberal troops are resisting the attempts of Henry Stimson, representative of President Coolidge, to foist upon Nicaragua the presidency of Diaz.

The Liberals are reported to have withdrawn into the mountains after the clash.

Henry Stimson seems to have been sent to Nicaragua for the express purpose of lowering down the throats of the Nicaraguana the presidency of Diaz, Dr. Juan Sacasa, head of the Liberal Government, declared today.

Blames Americans

Any bloodshed spilled in clashes between Nicaraguans and American marines would "only be caused by the attitude of the American Government," Dr. Sacasa explained.

"The interference of foreign troops in violation of the rights of a country which has neither offended nor menaced them in any way is so exasperating that, despite the enormous disparity between the two countries, it seems likely and I fear that my army will object to forcible disarmament."

Denies Fake Peace

Dr. Sacasa vigorously denied that either he or any other representative of the Liberal Government accepted Stimson's "peace terms" which would force upon Nicaragua the rule of the United States thru its puppet, Adolfo Diaz.

Confirms Shooting

WASHINGTON, May 17.—A dispatch to the navy today from Rear Admiral Julian L. Latimer confirmed the killing of the U. S. marines and the wounding of two others in a clash with Nicaraguan guerillas at La Paz Centro.

The dead are Capt. Richard Buchanan of Washington, and Pte. Morgan Jackson of Jacksonville, Fla.; the wounded: Pte. Wm. F. Simon and Corp. A. J. Rausch.

Two hundred Liberals attacked the marine encampment, the dispatch said, and a dozen of the attackers were killed when the marines returned the fire.

Florida Legislature Hinders Teaching of Evolution "As a Fact"

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 17. —By a vote of 67 to 24, the Florida House of Representatives today passed an anti-evolution bill after appending to it an amendment prohibiting the teaching of evolution or kindred theories "as fact."

Persian Cabinet Defies Imperialists; Puts End To Extra-territoriality

TEHERAN, Apr. 6 (By Mail).—The Shah of Persia has issued an order abolishing the capitulations. Up to the very last the foreign powers refused to meet the new Persian Cabinet of Mustapha in any conciliatory spirit as cabinet declared after entering office in February, that it would abolish the capitulations. The first blow was delivered at the system of capituiations by the treaty between Persia and the Soviet Union, when the latter voluntarily abandoned all capitulations and all privileges connected with them. Turkey followed this example and concluded an agreement with Persia in which all capitulations were mutually abandoned.

ITALY SEETHING WITH REVOLT AS PAY IS SLASHED

Armed Revolt in North; Fascists Wounded

VENTIMIGLIA, Italy, May 17.—Armed revolts are breaking out thruout Italy as the result of the ten per cent wage slash announced by Mussolini. While rents and prices are soaring, the wages of industrial and agricultural workers, already reduced to a starvation level, are being slashed.

An armed revolt has broken out at Inveruno, near Milan. Several Fascists were wounded in a clash with the rebelling peasants.

Burn Landlord's Effigies.

Effigies of Fascist landlords, who have boosted rents, were publicly burnt by workers in the streets of Florence, while spontaneous strikes against the application of the wage slash are reported to be breaking out in many parts of Italy.

Although the Fascisti are employing every terrorist device to smash the growing discontent, secret organizations thruout Italy, led by Communists, are planning to organize resistance to the application of the labor-smashing Charter of labor and the wage cuts. Some observers believe that there is the possibility that the strikes and sporadic revolts are the nuclei of a revolution that will overthrow the Fascist regime.

Attack Wall Street.

Leaflets attacking the Mussolini regime are flooding the country, despite the efforts of the Fascisti to stamp out the organizations that are issuing them.

Many of them contain attacks on reactionary American and British administrations which have bolstered up Fascism. Calvin Coolidge and Austin Chamberlain, British Foreign Minister, are branded as oppressors of Italian labor in the leaflets. By granting enormous loans to Italy, American and British bankers have not only reaped handsome profits but have bolstered the Fascist dictatorship, the leaflets say.

New York's Water Front

News and Views of the Biggest World Port

Of Passaic Workers

PASSAIC, N. J., May 17.—Declaring that the courts of New Jersey were still functioning as class servants of the textile barons, the Passaic Defense Committee today issued a call to "all the forces that originally supported the Passaic strike" to rally in their long and hard struggle to again come to the aid of these workers with money for the legal defense of the strike leaders and active workers, who today stand in imminent danger of being railroaded to jail for their activities during the big strike.

"That the mill-dominated courts intend to give these workers the limit is demonstrated by the fact that already nine active strikers have received savage sentences in the bombing frame-ups. One of them, Wisnefsky, was sentenced to from five to twenty years in jail. The others were given one to five years. This was the bosses' vengeance on those workers who had dared to be active on the picket lines and in the strike meetings. Five to twenty years in jail!

Getting Revenge

Three weeks ago, another vengeance was exacted. Jack Rubenstein, a fearless and resourceful strike leader, was sentenced in Judge Seufert's court in Hackensack to pay $500 and spend six months in jail. A few weeks before that some eighteen men and women were sentenced to pay fines varying from $25 to $50. The union had no money to pay these fines but their fellow workers got busy and the fines were paid in pennies and dimes, collected after tireless tramping of the streets for a whole day and night.

"The Passaic Defense Committee makes an urgent appeal to all workers and sympathizers with the cause of organized labor to come to the rescue of these victims of New Jersey 'justice' and mill owners' revenge by sending in money for legal defense and appeal of the sentences against Jack Rubenstein and others. Money should be addressed to Passaic Defense Committee, Room 4, 743 Main Avenue, Passaic, N. J.

"The Defense Committee is endorsed by the District Textile Council of Passaic and Vicinity, United Textile Workers of America."

Women Workers Urge Unions for Unorganized Free Sacco, Vanzetti

BOSTON, May 17.—Resolutions demanding the immediate and unconditional release of Sacco and Vanzetti and a message of fraternal greeting to the women of China were voted at the recent conference of New England Working Class Women that has just closed here.

Over 70 delegates were present who represented 48 organizations of trade unions, workers' fraternal societies, Mothers' Leagues, and unorganized women. The organization of all unorganized women workers was declared by the conference to be the major task to be achieved. The limitation of working hours for women; work in the direction of developing the political consciousness among working women, and the repeal of legislation forbidding birth control instruction was urged by the conference.

Marine Workers Get Wage Cuts as Union Weakened by Bosses

Hundreds of barges that are usually engaged in the transport of coal are laid up along the New York water front due to the existing slump in the purchasing of domestic coal. This situation is throwing the men who man these barges out of jobs, and depriving them of the home that is usually provided for them on these floating directects.

In addition, the Barge and Boat Owners and Contractors of Greater New York seem to have united on a common tyrranical policy in the expulsion of the union men wherever possible. A general wage cut of Union men and their replacement by non-union workers is taking place.

Import Scabs.

Sailors and seamen as well as general marine and transport workers are being recruited to take the place of the union workers at far lower rates and under inferior working conditions. The union scale is $90 per dollars a month and overtime. These new recruits are being paid an average of eighty dollers a month for harder labor.

In this way the contractors and barge owners are trying to break the spirit of the workers. They are playing seamen against bargemen in their greed and rush for greater and greater profits at the expense of the water-front worker.

This condition is due to the existing unemployment in the marine industry. Consequently a sailor or a fireman who has been on the beach for a few months and has reached the end of his endurance is willing to scab on his fellow workers in the marine industry. Of course this state of affairs would never be in existence if their were a strong organization to look after the rights of the men.

But as it is the great majority of the men are unorganized and are not class conscious enough to see the necessity of a strong organization. The task of raising the class consciousness of this vast mass of sailors and harbors workers to the stage where they will unite in one strong union that will look after their economic demands is yet to be accomplished.

The Church As a Strike-Breaker.

Another interesting phase is the fact that most of the new recruits that are taking the place of the union workers are procured thru the mendium of the Seamen's Church Institute. This organization which is presumably in existence for the benefit of seamen receives support from some of the biggest shipping interests and corporations in the United States.

Cops in Bloody Battle

Detective Morris Borkin is dead today from a bullet thru his heart, another detective is probably fatally wounded, and a third man is dying in the hospital following a running revolver battle between a suspected burglar and police. An entertainer in a Forsyth restaurant raided by the bandits was wounded in the hand.

IMPERIALISTS PLANT MILLIONS OF DOLLARS OVERSEAS

By LELAND OLDS (Federated Press).

The growth of the American investment empire continues at an ever increasing pace, according to department of commerce figures on foreign securities offered in the United States the first quarter of 1927. The department shows e total of $337,472,700 of foreign securities sold by American bankers in the 3-month period, an increase nearly 50% over the offerings of the first quarter of 1926.

This year $16,757,700 of the total covered the refunding (renewal) of old obligations so that the new capital intrested abroad in the first quarter of 1927 amounted to $360,715,000. In the same period a year ago the net investment of new capital in foreign countries was $209,762,152.

The foreign investment of the United States, as measured by these figures, has been steadily rising since 1920 when $591,245,837 of foreign securities were floated in the American market. In 1921 it was $675,112,963; in 1922, $838,149,234; in 1923 there was e slump to $395,900,000 but in 1924 it jumped to $1,200,000,000. There followed $1,274,967,000 in 1925 and $1,318,584,850 invested abroad in 1926

Six and a Half Billion

The total par value of foreign securities floated in the United States since 1920 is $6,489,156,182. Of this amount $1,017,429,283 went for refunding, leaving $5,502,711,859 of new capital placed in foreign countries in a little over 7 years.

The feature of the first quarter of 1927, compared with last year, is the shift from Germany to Italy. Only one German loan was floated, $6,750,000 for the Rhein-Westfalia Prussia Landowners' Assn. Italian loans totaled $70,400,000.

The table shows how American foreign investment in the first quarter of 1927 was distributed:

Foreign Capital Issues	Par
In U. S. Jan.-Mar. 1927	Value
Govt. and municipal—
Europe	$ 43,100,000
Canada	25,658,250
Latin America	121,237,800
Far East	48,140,000

Total	$138,336,650

More than half of all the money invested outside of the country in this quarter went to increase the sway of American capital in its own private sphere of influence. This included $47,883,250 invested in Canada; $141,682,800 in Latin America and $13,786,650 in the territorial possessions, a total of $203,102,700 out of $337,472,700. The American hemisphere's lead was due to increase in government and municipal issues. In attracting American money into corporate issues Europe outranked Canada, Latin America and the territories combined.

Power, Paper, Oil

The $36,400,000 to Italian corporations went entirely for the development of electrical power. Investment of $25,025,000 in the securities of Canadian corporations went mainly into paper and aluminum. In Latin America $20,445,000 was placed chiefly in oil and railways. The $24,350,000 invested in the Batavian Petroleum Co. of the Dutch East Indies also went to extend the American oil empire.

Feng Away Sweeps On To Crush Militarists

People's Tribune, organ of the Nationalist party, under Hankow rule, the memorial edition reaching the east on the second year since the death of Sun Yat Sen. The paper protested tell the story of China's industrial workers by picturing actual conditions in definite mills and plants, so that its reading public may check the truth of what it says.

"In two words," it says, "the situation of the working man in China may be viewed. We can look at it from the viewpoint of the man in the workshop, from a good night's sleep and fast having finished a comfortable breakfast, or we can look at it from the viewpoint of the shabby, dirty wretch between the shafts, half-fed, shivering in his rags in the winter time, with no warm shelter at night, always miserable, always just half-alive.

Inhuman Conditions

"We want to show the lives of the working men of China. Those lives, we believe, are the best explanation of the so-called labor unrest. It is true that unrest there does not be strangled, but it is also true that most of the industries of China could be reorganized in such a way that tots of saving and eight would not work long, 12 hours a day in dark factories for a few paltry cents, and that tired, worn women would not sit all day over steaming tables in silk factories while their babies cry from discomfort and hunger, or mercifully sleep, in baskets of rags, under the machines.

"If to ask for a reorganization which would eliminate these evils is to be dangerous, subversive to the interests of investors in China, then this paper, and the Nationalist movement as a whole, are dangerous agents. But by the foreigners, if not by the Chinese employees of labor, we feel that such a condemnation cannot be made without some sense of guilt, for every foreigner in China knows that such conditions as exist in the mills of China are unthinkable in his home land."

Then follows a matter-of-fact description of a trip through four mills in Hankow, with photographs of groups of little child-workers employed 12 hours daily in an unhealthy atmosphere, at hard tasks.

British Representative Recalled

SHANGHAI, May 17.—Basil Newton, British diplomatic representative at Hankow, is reported to have been recalled. This is regarded by observers here as a gesture of British diehard disapproval of the Hankow Government.

Sir Miles Lampson, British Minister to China, left Peking with his entourage for Shanghai yesterday. It is rumored that the British Minister has left for the purpose of negotiating with Chieng Kai-shek's "Government" at Nanking.

Germany Comes In

By pursuing a peaceful policy, Germany is rapidly increasing her trade with China, according to a cable received by the Nationalist News Agency. The cable follows:

* * *

(By Nationalist News Agency)

SHANGHAI, May 15.—Shanghai Times, e British paper, in an editorial news article today regarding trade conditions in China, says:

"Among the interesting features is the fact that the Germans remaining in China are not evacuated anywhere and that Germany will reap the golden harvest from the rich Yangtse Valley. German property has apparently been untouched, the Germans not being molested. In Hankow there are 250 more who are remaining without any such privileges and protection there than these offered by the Chinese.

No Gunboats

"They have no gunboats and no soldiers anywhere in China, but they remain and declare their intentions not to evacuate, women and children remaining as well as men and so far without disaster." These facts are looked upon as signals of "danger" to British and American trade in China."

In Nationalist circles it is pointed out that these admissions by a British-owned paper are emphatic proof that the nationals of those countries not using the gunboat policy and are without special privileges in China are reaping benefits impossible to those seeking the same with the aid of armed forces. The presence of gunboats, marines and soldiers of the powers, they assert, is a constant provocation to the Chinese who show resentment not partially against the individuals themselves, but against the policies of their governments. Since the Germans surrendered extra-territorial privileges their position has become better than that of the other foreigners still holding such privileges.

Fascist Spies Are Found Among Passaic Pickets

HOLLY, Penn., May 17.—Fascist spies of the Union of Italian Workers and officers had hastily mobilized in this section to combat strikers and sympathizers who, they declared, had actually carried out the dynamite rentals charged by large landowners under American protection.

"Respect Tribe"

The official organ of the Fascisti from Manila that the province is in a state of disorder because of the "insane Japanese Nationalists" and cover up the disturbances caused by the rich worker leaders under the charge that they are followers of Kuomintang. The latter disavows them, as much as they do him, but that does not matter to the government.

Charges of murder, because somebody struck back when the constabulary were beating up a group of agrarians and killed an officer, have been placed against the agrarians arrested in Hollo.

Raid Another Province

A sudden raid into the province of Occidental among people whom he himself declares he has never influenced in any way, has resulted in the arrest of 467 agrarians, all charged with being "followers of the insane emperor"—a charge which is likely to develop formally into treason when the trial date approaches.

up on his way down the lion's throat. There is no more ideal condition than unity on basis of principal but where there are strong differences of opinion, those differences must and faster will result. Had the revolutionary core of the Kommintang Party in China surrendered to Chieg-Kai-Shek and his right wing backers for the sake of a false unity the problem of imperialism in China would be settled for many years to come.

HERE is the United States, little socialist sects like the S. P., the S. L. P. and the P. P. have tickled themselves into anaemic laughter over political discussions in the Workers (Communist) Party. Those decaying organisms have not a quarrel left in them. Those only flog themselves into a semblance of activity when there is a chance to win an approving nod from the reactionaries by lambasting the revolutionists. But the Communists, it should be noted, manage to achieve unshakeable unity in fighting the bosses, even tho at the same time they insist on discussing with varying degrees of vigor the tactical problems that always confront an organization.

THE S. L. P. did not have e difference of opinion as to the best method of conducting the class struggle for several years, for the very good reason that they have retired to Will Durant's metaphysical tower and are fine themselves to making wise cracks at the expense of the passing show. Furthermore it is an organization of supermanned people who have reached that stage in life when the follies of youth can be enjoyed in retrospect and a mellowed skepticism of the possibility of the human race even amounting to anything cultivated to serve the purpose of psychological cruth. With only another clean shirt, alias another national election, between it and limbo, the S. L. P. can be excused for not venturing into a heated internal fight over whether the shirt should be hard bolled or soft.

* * *

THE Socialist Party was never keen on struggles over questions of policy. It was a hospitable drug store where anybody who had the price could get any kind of medicine he wanted. Those who did not use some of the cures carried out from the most into some one of the capitalist parties. It was a nice quiet place to rest and enjoy a game of pinochle. The only time some sort of political museum is when a hardy wight like Nathan Fine suggests that it liquidated itself and join his organization. That political intelligence and eclectic varieties of sense are supposed to be located between the ears and people whose heads are not supporting hats think that the process will continue to struggle for what they believe is the best way of doing things and while they may have as many different notions as they have pockets of view, the fact remains that human progress, in so far as it is determined by individuals, can be attributed to this human desire to feed the ego. So let us have bigger and better fights in China but according to Hoyle.

New York World Stops Exposing "Big Four"

office contains hundreds of complaints from policyholders which have been stifled by the State Insurance Department (N. Y. World).

"Money is taken from old policyholders to pay the cost of obtaining new policies. That is larceny." (N. Y. World).

Those who say that the present is not the time to indict the insurance thieves are in error. It is just the time. Today is better than tomorrow and tomorrow is better than next week or next year. There should be no delay. A pickpocket is indicted promptly. A sneak thief's arrest comes at once on his detection. A forger upon a small scale finds himself in the station house as soon as possible. The Penal Code is plain." (N. Y. World).

Mean Robber.

Referring to insurance officials and directors, The World said, "They robbed the policyholder because of the policyholder's thrift and family affection. They have perverted the most sacred impulses of human nature to their own money-lust. The punishment which they owe should be promptly meted out to them." (N. Y. World).

The above quotations are from editorials which appeared in the crusading New York World during the Armstrong Insurance Investigation that was conducted by Charles Evens Hughes.

How effective the Armstrong Investigation was may be guaged by the fact that after the investigation Hughes was appointed general counsel for the Equitable Life Insurance Company.

Still Corrupt.

The corrupt conditions which characterized life insurance prior to the Armstrong investigation are still rampant with this difference however, that while the insurance business in 1905 was measured in terms of its 3 billion dollar assets today its assets are over 12 billions.

Evaded Probe.

The "Big Four", i. e. the Metropolitan, Prudential, John Hancock and the Colonial Life Insurance Companies evaded investigation in 1905. After the investigation most of the members were taken care of by being given official positions with the offending companies. Notably in this respect one calls to mind ex-Assemblyman Robert Lynn Cox who is now a vice president with the Metropolitan and ex-Senator William J. Tully.

Since they have been in existence the "Big Four" have not been compelled to alter their criminal looting methods. High rates, interlocking directorates, connivance with banks and trust companies goes on today as it has always gone on.

Less Scrupulous.

The New York World knows this as well as does the writer. As a matter of fact some of the "low down" which is incorporated in this series of articles was generously supplied by men high in New York journalistic circles.

Today The World is deathly silent on the expose of the "Big Four". Old Joe Pulitzer is dead. Younger men with less scruples and a more avid lust for power dominate the World politics.

When the writer approached Herbert B. Swope, executive editor of the World, and asked if that the wide circulation of that paper be used to publicize the corrupt practices of the "Big Four," Swope said, "the conditions you complain of are unfortunate and unfair, but . . ."

Times have changed and today we see the old enemy of Tammany hobnobbing with the boys who, although they never wear top hats, still talk out of the corners of their mouths—and know e blackjack when they see one.

Gentlemen's Agreement To Curtail Oil Output Causes More Production

TULSA, Okla., May 17.—Watch Seminole!

With this admonition uppermost in the minds of oil producers and everybody everywhere in the oil world, developments in mid-continent's largest pool today continued to show heavy production despite a gentlemen's agreement entered into Saturday by fifteen large operators to restrict output for two weeks.

For the past twenty-four hours Greater Seminole production totaled 348,350 barrels of crude oil.

Uncover The General Offensive

The general offensive against labor has begun with an attempt to snipe off labor's most militant forces, the Communists. In the needle trades the unholy combination of the labor bureaucracy makes common cause with the Bomb Squad and the courts. In Washington the United States Supreme Court has handed down a decision, declaring the criminal syndicalist law constitutional, which provides a sword of Damocles over the heads of those active in the revolutionary movement. Experience has shown time and again that these acts against the Communists are the usual preliminaries to an assault on the entire labor movement.

For this attack, the capitalist class needs the smoke screen of silence. It wants to do its dirty work under cover. For this reason the existence of a fearless Communist newspaper, which exposes mercilessly the aims and purposes of the ruling class, is a menace to the smooth running of the capitalist machine. The American capitalist class is therefore looking for an opportunity to suppress our paper. This is a vital part of the general offensive.

Notice how effectively the enemies of labor mobilize all their resources—the patriotic societies, the courts, the labor bureaucrats, and the entire machinery of the capitalist class. Labor, too, must mobilize all its forces in defense of its rights. Contributions to the Defense Fund must come in immediately to build up a solid wall of defense around our paper.

World Leaders of Revolution Pay Final Tribute to Ruthenberg

THE START FROM RED HALL

Removing the urn containing the ashes of Comrade Ruthenberg from its temporary resting place in the Red Hall of the Communist International Building where the remains lay in state for three days under honor guard. Comrade Belensky of the All-Union Communist Party is lifting the urn to hand to Comrade Bukharin (in center of picture) who then carried it to the chassis on which it was borne to the Red Square.

MASSES SWARM RED SQUARE FOR RUTHENBERG FUNERAL IN MOSCOW

high officers of the Red Army, and scores of Communists exiled from America, who now live in Moscow, stood by as two workers screwed a plate into the wall and then sealed with mortar Ruthenberg's last resting place.

The wife of one of the workmen, an interested spectator, carefully wiped away with a cloth the last bit of moisture, the last bit of stray mortar, from the face of the plate so that its polished surface blazoned brightly the name "Charles Emil Ruthenberg," in both the English and the Russian languages, giving also the dates of his birth and his untimely death.

Aids Unity of Workers

Then we all returned to the steps of Lenin's Mausoleum and the throngs dispersed after the Red Army detachments, followed by the workers marching according to the factories or shops in which they worked, passed in review. Thus the workers of America, in scores of memorial gatherings, the workers of Germany at Bremerhaven, Bremen, Hamburg and Berlin, and lastly the workers of Moscow had joined in paying a final tribute to the memory of Ruthenberg. No question that the unity of the workers of these countries had been knit more closely together as a result.

Thru Sunday afternoon and night, thru all day Monday and Monday night, thru the morning of Tuesday, the Guard of Honor of the Red Army had stood its continuous watch in the magnificent Red Hall of the beautiful Comintern (Communist International) Building. Then shortly after noon, on Tuesday, April 26th, the Guard of Honor was doubled. In addition to the four Red Army soldiers, the Guard of Honor contained four more, comrades selected from the workers in the shops and the factories, from the workers in the Comintern Building, from leaders in the trade unions and from the members of the Praesidium of the Communist International, of which Ruthenberg had been a member, and from the Profintern and the Young Communist International.

World Leaders Guard

The watch changed every five minutes. Bukharin stood watch with Smeral, of the Czecho-Slovak Party, Treint of the French Party, and Edward Duncan. I took my turn with Kolarow, the Bulgarian revolutionary, former secretary of the Communist International; with Kuusinen, the present secretary of the Comintern, and Piatnitsky, head of the Organization Department of the Comintern. J. W. Murphy, representative of the British Communist Party in the Comintern, stood guard with Petrovsky of the Agitprop Department of the Comintern, Boris Reinstein, formerly of the United States, and Charles Scott. To give the full list would be to call the roll of the leadership in the Communist movement, in the world, in the Soviet Union, in Moscow. Many came and eagerly asked to be permitted to join in this final tribute to a courageous soldier of the social revolution.

Huge palms flanked the dais on which stood the urn. Before a huge red banner on the wall a beautiful marble bust of Lenin surmounted a pedestal. The banner blazoned the slogan that appears on the covers of the official publications of the Communist International, showing a worker with a huge hammer striking the chains of capitalism off the earth.

Workers Come from Shops

Since noon the Red Army detachments had begun to assemble and maneuver before the Comintern Building. Later came the workers direct from their shops and factories, direct from their work places, carrying the banners of their organizations. Sharply at 4 o'clock the last watch came to an end in the Red Hall. With Red Army Soldiers in the lead, immediately followed by Bukharin, carrying the Urn decorated with the streamer of the German Communist Party, the procession made its way out of the building. There, at the entrance, the Urn was placed amid flowers and carried thru the streets to the Red Square, among the pall bearers being Bukharin, Manuilsky, Kolarow, Treint, Smeral, Murphy, Engdahl, Piatnitsky, Duncan, Kuusinen. The procession halted when it came to the foot of the Lenin Mausoleum, the speakers immediately mounting the Tribune on the Mausoleum, equipped with a broadcasting apparatus, so that the addresses could be heard, not only thruout the Square very clearly, but over all Moscow and environs where amplifiers may be found in all the public squares.

Bukharin spoke, interpreting the meaning of the occasion.

Smeral acted as chairman. Kolarow spoke for the Executive Committee of the Communist International. Kuhjak was the representative of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and of Moscow. Harry Young, representative of The British Young Communist League, spoke for the Young Communist International. Then I responded for the Workers (Communist) Party of America. A representative of the Negro workers of America also spoke.

Nells Slanders of Enemy

Even while the speaking was proceeding new throngs of workers, in organized groups, continued to arrive from their shops. Because they came in this manner, instead of singly, the capitalist press, especially in the United States, spreads the propaganda that the workers are conscripted to attend demonstrations arranged by the Communist Party in the Soviet Union. These sheets declare that this is especially true in Moscow. There is, of course, just another fable spread by the subsidized press to malign the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union.

Internationally, capitalist labor in the Soviet Union to deep interest. The arrival of the Ashes of Ruthenberg from the United States was looked upon as an event of international significance, and the thousands who gathered in the Red Square to listen to the addresses and to take part in the burial of the ashes of Ruthenberg in the Kremlin Wall were deeply moved by the event. This I learned thru careful inquiry. The slanders of the evening press have no basis in fact, but are born of the basest lies.

The speaking finished, the march from the Lenin Mausoleum to the place in the Kremlin Wall set aside for Ruthenberg only a short distance away, began. But this was also the end.

Let's Fight On! Join The Workers Party!

Address of Comrade N. Bukharin

At the Funeral of Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg in Moscow, Apr. 26, 1927

Comrades, we are lowering into the grave today the ashes of Comrade Ruthenberg, the leader of the comparatively small but energetic Communist Party of the United States of North America.

In the entire world, comrades, there exist two opposite poles of a struggle, two fundamental, powerful historical forces, around which secondary and weaker forces group themselves and unite; these two poles are on one side the United States of America—the forces of the old, the forces of capitalist counter-revolution, the forces of imperialism; on the other side the Union of Socialist Republics—new forces, the forces of the Communist Revolt, the forces for the construction of Socialism. And while our country which only ten years ago was the stronghold of the most barbarian, the most despotic tsarist reaction, has been transformed into the great land of the Dictatorship of the Proletariat, at the other pole of the earth, in the United States of America, there still reigns, still flourishes, still rules the most powerfully armed, the most highly developed imperialistic capitalism. The bourgeoisie of the United States at the present time represents the hegemony, the leadership of all the plundering, reactionary, counter revolutionary forces of the entire world, of everything tending to support the old order. And in the great events of the Chinese Revolution we see the United States of America in league with Great Britain pursue their "peaceful" policy of robbing and torturing the Chinese people.

A great symbol is hidden in the present occasion. The fact that the ashes of comrade Ruthenberg are now here, that comrade Ruthenberg, the leader of our American Communist Party, which carries on the struggle under the most difficult conditions, filled before his death to be buried in Moscow; that his ashes were brought here under our red banners; that his remains will rest side by side with the remains of our best fighters, side by side with Lenin, side by side with scores of other great proletarians, who raised the banner of revolt in the days of October and who sacrificed their lives on the barricades, fighters whose bones paved the road for the growth of our great future—in all that there is a great symbol hidden.

* * *

Our leader died in a country which at present is the main support of international capitalism. He willed that his ashes be transfered to the country of the Proletarian Dictatorship, a country which is incomparably weaker than his native country, which is a so-called "civilized" country, a country of refined executioners of the working class. In this there is a great symbol. Here is hidden the profoundest historical idea of unity of the working class; the symbol of solidarity of the working class, the symbol of the Proletarian Dictatorship. The proletariat, the symbol of solidarity against the class enemies of the working class, is the embryo of the great brotherhood of all toilers, and it is easily understood that the workers of all lands, all nations, all languages, of all races see in the Communist International their banner, see in Moscow the capitol of that great country which will finally become the mother-country of the entire world. In the graves of the great fighters of the revolution, at the Kremlin wall, they see the cemeteries of the dead martyrs, who sacrificed their lives for the brotherhood of the working class.

Comrades, we are particularly grieved over the loss of our comrade Ruthenberg. American capitalism is still poyerful. Bourgeois ideology is still penetrating the American working class. Our American Party is still small, her leaders are few in number, the Communist Movement is just beginning to develop in America. There is a great future before them, but, before they will reach that future, the fighters for American Communism will be compelled to pass many difficult roads and overcome many obstacles. Communism in America is just being born, and the Communist Party is passing through its period of childhood. The Party is growing day by day, but it is still small, while its enemy is the most powerful on earth. That is the reason for our great grief over the loss of the leader of the American Party. But we also know that our grief is not the grief of the people who are ready to shed tears. When we mourn the death of our leader, when we today mourn the death of Comrade Ruthenberg; when we assembled here today and bent our mourning draped banners over a new fresh grave,—this gathering, this funeral, this meeting ought to serve as a signal for a more energetic fight for our ideas, for our aims, and slogans, under whose banners comrade Ruthenberg carried the fight.

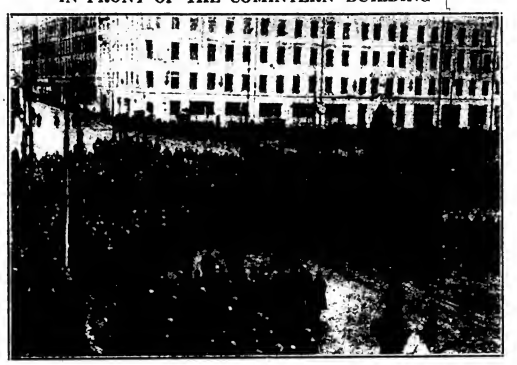
Comrades, again the world is entering a difficult stage in its development. Again we hear the march to battle, again are ripening powerful historical events. And now together with the growing Chinese Revolution, with the conspiracy of the imperialists against U.S.S.R., together with the threatening danger of war, we hear the growing widening call of the communists, a call to carry on a systematic stubborn fight, a call to organize our forces, a call to raise the bolshevik vigilance, so that the working class of all countries, the oppressed peoples of all lands, the toiling peasants of the entire world, will meet the terrible hour in a different manner than the one in 1914 when the working class was fooled and stupefied by the bourgeoisie and deceived and betrayed by the social democrats. This preparatory work of mobilizing our forces can be done as it should be done by Communist parties only, and only the Communist International, as the great international brotherhood of the working class, which is marching towards emancipation. Not for a moment, not for a second shall our energy become exhausted. On the contrary, again and again we say to ourselves; with the death of Comrade Ruthenberg we lost one of the most active workers of the Communist International. But we will answer this loss with still greater efforts on our part. We will answer this loss with still stronger mobilization of our forces. We will answer this loss with a more energetic organization of our great struggle, the struggle for the overthrow of the capitalist yoke, the struggle for the emancipation of the entire oppressed humanity, a life and death struggle against the forces of imperialism, a life and death struggle for a Communist Society, for the emancipation of all humanity. And at this time we say to ourselves:



Comrades, workers, proletarians of all countries!

Courageously and fearlessly carry on the great struggle.

Long live our victory.

Long live the International Revolution.

IN FRONT OF THE COMINTERN BUILDING

A part of the funeral procession beginning to form as the ashes of Ruthenberg are brought out of the Communist Internaitional Building (second group at the left) carried by Bukharin and escorted by members of the Presidium of the Communist International.

Address of Comrade J. Louis Engdahl

Member of Central Executive Committee of Workers (Communist) Party of America, Delivered from the Tribune of the Lenin Mausoleum at the Funeral of Comrade Ruthenberg in Moscow, U. S. S. R., April 26, 1927

TO you, My Comrades, the workers of Moscow and to the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union, upholders of the first victorious proletarian dictatorship;

To you, My Comrades, of the Communist International, the standard bearers of the World Social Revolution;

To you, My Comrades, of the Young Communist International, the leaders of the revolutionary youth of the world;

To you, My Comrades, who have been selected to hold positions of responsibility in the Rule of the Soviets;

To you, I bring from far America the ashes of my Comrade Ruthenberg, the fallen leader of our Communist Party, the American section of the Communist International, to bring these ashes to you as a symbol of the unity of the oppressed workers of imperialist America with the freed workers of the Soviet Union. They are a symbol of the solidarity of the workers of the world for we struggle everywhere, over all the earth, for the common goal—the overthrow of capitalism and the emancipation of the working class in all lands.

As we mourn, My Comrades, nevertheless, there is joy in the knowledge that we in America, through the great accomplishments that our Comrade Ruthenberg has achieved during the 20 years that he has been an active and energetic worker in the revolutionary movement of America; through his work we may say today, that, in spite of the fact that our leader has fallen, nevertheless, we are able to lift higher and more threatening than ever to capitalist rule in America the Red Banner of the World Social Revolution.

* * *

Comrade Ruthenberg, of proletarian origin, entered the ranks of the revolutionary army in America while still a young man. From the beginning he showed a keen knowledge of the needs of the American revolutionary movement. He started early in his work in the Socialist Party of America to build the very necessary unity in America of the ranks of the industry and the farmers upon the land. He sought to build that essential working class solidarity that we strive for in America, a land of many nationalities, a land to which workers from all parts of the earth, of all races, religions, nationalities and colors, have come seeking freedom, only to learn through bitter disappointment that they must bend to the yoke of what has now become the greatest capitalist tyranny upon the face of the earth. Ruthenberg was an agitator, organizer, educator among the workers. Ruthenberg was always a party man, always keeping clear the vital need of building the vanguard party of labor, the Communist Party.

Comrade Ruthenberg was our Karl Liebknecht in America. When American imperialism entered the world war, Ruthenberg stood before the masses in the open places of his native city of Cleveland, Ohio, and declared: "Not a penny to pay for the Wall Street War. Not a man shall the working class spare to fight the capitalist war. Down with the capitalist war." He raised the slogan of "war against war" and American capitalism sent our Comrade Ruthenberg to prison because he dared speak, brave and courageous, for the working class of America.

And again, when you, my comrades of Moscow and of the Soviet Union had achieved your victory, the Bolshevik triumph of 1917, Ruthenberg, as Our Leader, faced new persecutions. In response to the call of the Communist International, we, organized our Communist Party in the United States. It found its expression first in the Left Wing within the American Socialist Party, a manifestation of a new revolutionary development that again frightened the American ruling class. New proceedings were started in the capitelist courts against Ruthenberg and other Comrades and some of them were sent to prison to serve for many years in the bastilles of American capitalism.

Yes, they thought thus to destroy the American Communist Party by driving it into illegality. But our movement grew, our Party became powerful and the capitalist rulers of America continued to become ever more terrified at our success in winning workers to our standards in the coal mines, on the railroads and generally throughout capitalist industry.

The capitalist department of justice in 1922 launched its raid on the Bridgeman, Michigan convention of the American Communist Party, and Ruthenberg, with many others, were arrested and jailed. He was the first to be convicted. As a result of his renewed persecution, Comrade Ruthenberg when he died, was under sentence of ten years' imprisonment for carrying aloft the standards of the Communist International in the United States of America.

Yes, My Comrades, we in America are today faced with greater struggles than ever before in all the history of our movement.

American imperialism today makes war on Nicaragua, the small Central American Republic. But it attacks not only Nicaragua. This attack is only a part of its attack against all Latin-America, against all the oppressed peoples of South America, of Central America, of the Caribbean.

American imperialism seeks new excuses to launch an armed intervention against Mexico, to destroy if possible the struggle of the workers and farmers in Mexico to free themselves from capitalist slavery through winning all power.

But more important still, American imperialism becomes a leader in the war against the revolution of the Chinese workers and peasants. It becomes a leader in the new imperialist attack that is being planned against the Soviet Union.

We would find, if Comrade Ruthenberg were alive today, if his mute ashes could speak, he would call to the sailors of American imperialism not to move a single battleship against the Chinese revalution, not a single inch forward of Wall Street's battleships against the Soviet Union.

He would call upon the soldiers of America not to lift a single rifle, nor fire a single cannon in the imperialistic robber effort to destroy the Chinese revolution and the Soviet Union.

He would call upon the workers, the shops and mills and factories not to produce a single round of ammunition to be used to combat the Chinese revolution and the Soviet Union.

He would call upon the soldiers, sailors and workers to go over to the side of the social revolution and join in the struggle to destroy capitalism the world over.

* * *

Ruthenberg was a Marxist. Ruthenberg was a Leninist. Being a Marxist and a Leninist he helped our Party to develop a Bolshevik struggle against imperialism.

Ruthenberg is dead. But the spirit of Ruthenberg still lives in the growing East Fighting Front of the American working class; his spirit still lives in the developing world social revolution.

Here, from the Tribune of Lenin's Mausoleum, I pledge our Communist Party to renewed and greater struggle along the path of Leninism that leads in America to the abolition of the capitalism that flies the flag of Dollar Imperialism.

In this hour as we mourn, in this hour as we bring the ashes of Ruthenberg to the Red Kremlin Wall in Moscow, American Communists lift their flats to the face of the giant capitalist foe and declare:

Down with American Imperialism!

Long Live the American Soviet Republic!

Hail the civil war of the American working class against the bandit war of American Imperialism!

Long Live the Soviet Union!

Long Live the Communist International!

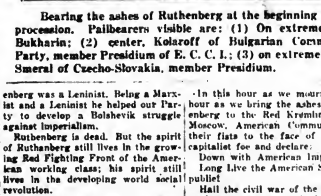
Hail Communism, the emancipator of all mankind!

Representative of Y.C.I. Eulogizes Ruthenberg's Work in United States

Comrade Harry Young, of Great Britain, speaking for the Young Communist International said:

"Comrades, today we, together with the whole Communist International and our brother Workers (Communist) Party of America, mourn a bitter and frightful loss. A terrible calamity has befallen our brother Workers Party because the Workers Party of America has lost the leader, who stood at the head of the Party in its most dangerous and difficult moments, and who was providing that leadership for our American Party which would ultimately bring into being, also in the United States of America, a mighty powerful mass Communist Party.

"The Executive Committee of the Young Communist International and the Young Workers League of America mourns today the loss of one of its dearest, truest and truest friends and comrades. We have lost one who always, and at all times, devoted his best energies to our assistance in our struggles and battles.



Comrades, on this day, when the ashes of Comrade Ruthenberg will be laid to rest, we shake our fists in the face of today's powerful American bourgeoisie, confident in the knowledge that that work which Ruthenberg accomplished, that on those foundations which he year after year so painstakingly laid, shall yet be built the mighty edifice of a Communist Party in America which will be capable of vanquishing the new powerful American bourgeoisie and instead of the world's most bloody and despotic imperialism, there shall stand a Soviet Republic led by a mass Workers' Communist Party.

Comrades, in this sense we all of us today must take unto ourselves a firm resolve that we shall unceasingly and untiringly continue the work commenced by Comrade Ruthenberg, secure in the knowledge that his tasks and his work can be finished by our hands and, that in America too, the Communist International will not mourn Ruthenberg in vain but will lead the Workers Party of America to ultimate victory.

SACCO and VANZETTI SHALL NOT DIE!

A Bankrupt Leader Comes and Goes.

Ramsay MacDonald, coming to the United States to give new impetus to the drive against the Communists and the left wing, has left for his native land—after praising prohibition.

The ex-Labor Party premier, now repudiated by his former followers, the Independent Labor Party, arrived in this country at a time when the attempt to murder Sacco and Vanzetti by legal means was arousing mass protest and when American imperialist aggression in China and Latin-America was precipitating a struggle in which the clash of big capital with other sections of the population was the outstanding feature.

The menace of a new world war was very real and remains so. MacDonald could find time to deal with none of these burning questions but true to his ministerial past he can find time to cater to fanatics who have furnished American capitalism with a red herring to drag across the path of every phase of the class struggle.

MacDonald could not make any public statement in favor of Sacco and Vanzetti, whom his own party defends, but could find time to dine with Governor Fuller of Massachusetts. Neither did he feel moved to make any denunciation of the murder of hundreds of Chinese trade unionists by Chiang Kai-shek while British, Japanese and American imperialists looked on approvingly.

This is the type of individual, an imperialist to the backbone, but clothing his enmity to the masses in democratic phrases, whom the Forward and the socialist party officialdom lauds as a liberator.

He came here to aid his political kinsmen in their alliance with the most reactionary section of the labor movement, the capitalists and their press, but his reputation by the conference of the Independent Labor Party rather cramped his style.

His accomplishments while here can be expressed by a zero and even his illness can be taken to be a political manifestation of the weakness of his position.

During his absence the British working class has fought the bill for the suppression of the trade unions in a manner which has completely exposed the British imperialist government and demonstrated to all the world that no mistake was made by declaring his office as leader vacant.

The rank and file of American labor extends its congratulations to the British labor movement on its ability to expose bankrupt leaders and take the necessary steps to supplant them.

MacDonald has shown to American workers that the Second International for which he speaks can not and will not fight the imperialist attack on the masses either at home or in other countries.

His visit was worth while.

Tammany as Rotten as Ever.

Now that the chief of the foul and polluted Tammany Hall political machine, Governor Al Smith, is one of Wall Street's favorites for the democratic nomination for president of the United States, the editors of the kept press are trying to create the illusion that the old Tammany is no more and that present-day Tammany is a model of political virtue and honesty. Many times in the past efforts have been made to change the stripes of the tiger and make it appear pure as the driven snow, but no such concerted effort to achieve this purpose ever persisted for so long a time.

But in spite of the efforts to whitewash Tammany in order that its favorite son, Al Smith, may have a chance to serve Wall Street in a more exalted position than that of governor, the lid frequently flies off the mass of filth and corruption and Tammany is then seen to be just as rotten as it ever was.

Two events have confirmed this. A few days ago Park Commissioner Gallatin, one of the staunch Tammanyites, was forced to get out of office by the Tammanyite mayor, the male Broadway butterfly, Jimmy Walker, in order to cover up the graft and inefficiency in that department. While this mess was being covered up by the removal of the park commissioner, another was brewing that was much worse inasmuch as it affected the unfortunate sufferers who need medical and surgical treatment. The next goat to get kicked out of office is to be that old, tried and true Tammanyite, red-baiter, eminent Roman catholic laymen, militia of christ-er, former city comptroller and one-time Tammany's candidate for governor, none other than the delectable Mr. B. S. Coler, who bitterly fought against workers in New York collecting famine relief funds for the starving children of Soviet Russia and who refused even permits for tag days for that worthy cause.

Briefly stated this specimen was indulging in the customary Tammany graft, but bungled the job a bit. He was unfortunate enough to be found out. He had charge of the expenditure of millions of dollars as commissioner of public welfare. Like a good Tammanyite he proceeded to distribute it among the faithful. Instead of using it to remedy the ghastly conditions existing in the Kings county hospital, which is known to the neighborhood as a slaughter house because of the high death rate of patients, Coler diverted it to building a seven-story medical laboratory for the Long Island college, a private concern. The game was too raw. Exposure followed and so Mayor Walker publicly assailed Coler as the culprit and Coler's resignation will be forthcoming.

Gallatin and Coler are gone, but Tammany and its system of levying and dispensing tribute still remains.

Every person who comes in contact with either city or state officials knows the system reeks with graft. To obtain a license for anything from operating a shoe-string peddler's cart to obtaining one to operate a motor car requires graft under the Tammany of Al Smith. Eliminating the graft from Tammany would mean to give the "bum's rush" to the whole machine that has been built upon spoils and nothing else.

Coler and all of his stripe might go, but the basic Tammany organization would still remain, with graft being widely distributed to all loyal Tammanyites from the miserable stool pigeons who levy tribute upon bootleggers, to such creatures as Peter J. Brady, now head of the Federation Bank, James P. Holland, former head of the State Federation of Labor, Joseph P. Ryan of the Central Trades and all the other leeches upon the labor movement who fight against independent political action on the part of labor and urge the workers to "reward their friends" of the Jimmy Walker and Al Smith stripe.

Whats What in Washington

COOLIDGE RIDICULED BY WASHINGTON NEWSPAPER MEN FOR CLUMSY DODGING OF THIRD TERM QUIZ

WASHINGTON, May 17 (FP)—Calvin Coolidge, awaiting a third term in presidency of the United States, has drawn upon himself the contempt and private ridicule of scores of press correspondents in Washington. When on Friday, the 13th day of May, more than 25 written questions were put to him, at the regular press conference at the White House, as to how he stood in 1912 and how he now stands on the third term issue, he stood silent.

These questions were given excuse by the statement of Michael J. O'Shea of Worcester, Mass., that he has the signature of Coolidge on a petition circulated in 1912, in favor of making anyone ineligible to be elected as president or vice-president who has served two terms, or any parts of two terms, in the White House.

O'Shea was a republican politician of the old Murray Crane machine, to which Coolidge belonged. Crane was fighting against the renomination of Roosevelt in 1912, and made a loud protest against the third term ambition of T. R.

When these questions, worded in many forms, and all designed to draw a denial or admission of the O'Shea claim, or a definite declaration of Coolidge's present views on the third term issue, appeared face down on the president's table in the press conference room, the correspondents realized that Coolidge was in a hole. If he had not signed the petition in 1912 he could have made a bit by saying so. His silence could be construed only as an admission that he did sign.

The petition, which was submitted to congress in 1912, called for a constitutional amendment which should make permanent the "unwritten law which prohibits any person to hold that office (the presidency) a third term." Standing silent as to whether he joined in that petition, and whether he has since changed his mind, and as to where he now stands on the issue of limiting to 8 years the tenure of the White House by any man, Coolidge became a defendant before the bar of press opinion.

From now on, there will be more discussion in the press of this country as to the danger of a trend toward monarchy through the third-term ambitions of presidents. Coolidge may run away from it, but it pursues him.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

A Suggestion.

Dear Comrade:

I wish to suggest that you could get interesting articles from comrades and readers by announcing in the paper that you wish articles from workers in the trades and professions on the fraudulent ways that their employers deceive and swindle the public in their business transactions, and by the manufacture of faked goods.

For instance in the tobacco industry, I have been told that certain well-known blends of smoking tobacco use a large percentage of paper and hay. What we would want then, is an explanation by one who knows, just how the thing is done. Probably great care would have to be taken in exposing trade secrets and tricks to prevent libel suits.—N. Critchley.

English Class Sends Money.

Peobody English Class, Peobody, Mass., May 13.

Enclosed you will find a money order for six and one-half ($6.50) dollars.

All the students of the Peobody English Class of Mass. are all subscribers and readers of the only workers' paper, The DAILY WORKER.

The $6.50 is a donation to the Ruthenberg Sustaining Fund from the Peabody English Class.

Long live The DAILY WORKER.

Comradely yours, B. Clayman, Instructor, 5 Esmond St., Dor., Mass.

Easton Raises $37.75.

Dear Comrade: Please publish in your list of contributors to the Ruthenberg Sustaining Fund the name of the Easton branch, W. P., who have raised the sum of $37.75 for this fund. We will include this amount in our regular report to you.

Yours fraternally, Leo P. Lemley, DAILY WORKER agent of Philadelphia.

Sends $100 to The DAILY WORKER.

At a meeting held last week in Stamford, Conn., the comrades in that city raised $100 toward The DAILY WORKER defense fund. This money was raised under the able initiative and leadership of comrades Wolfsie and Sokol. A machinery has been established in Stamford which will actively continue to help The DAILY WORKER raise money for its fight.

Dear Editor:

Let every worker outside of the Red Star A. C. know that our club is a place where young American workers spend a Sunday of sport.

Sunday May 8th the first and second team of the Red Star, A. C., gave a wonderful display on soccer. It is worth to say that our club as a whole is a young one, and its membership, which consists of only young workers, who spend a weak of hard labor for their support and nights for various studies.—I. Saperstein.

Armenian Bureau to Help The DAILY WORKER.

Professional Patriots, The Right Comedy, in The DAILY WORKER Monday.

"Professional Patriots," a book exposing the machinations of exploiting capitalist interests in the United States, will appear serially in The DAILY WORKER next Monday, the 23rd.

Made public only a few days ago the book is full of amazing evidence showing how the business, conservative labor leaders, and the government secret service work in harmony through the functioning of the National Civic Federation and similar organizations has already created intense interest.

"Professional Patriots" is edited by Norman Hapgood from material assembled by Sidney Howard and John Hearley. Albert and Charles Boni are the publishers.

Unity Camp Being Put in Order For Opening, May 27th

Preparations are now going on in the New "Unity Cooperative Camp" to have it ready spic and span for the opening, which will take place Friday, May 27th.

The "Unity Cooperative Camp" has been fortunate to locate and purchase a wonderful spot in the White Rock Mountains section on the shores of Lake Ellis.

Everything is being done to make this a model place of rest for workers vacationists. The "Unity Cooperative Camp" will, no doubt, win fame as an institution that the workers will rightfully be proud of.

Registration opens Tuesday, May 17th. For information apply to Freiheit, 30 Union Square. Unity House, 135 Lexington Avenue. Harlem Cooperative House, 1766 Lexington Avenue.

Labor Unions Strong For Young Pioneers Camp in the Country

Among the organizations that had delegates to the Young Pioneer Camp Conference Monday evening at the Labor Temple, 14th Street and Second Avenue, called for the purpose of supporting a camp for workers children: Harlem Local 913; Jewelers Local 17; International Ladies Garment Workers Local 22; Joint Board of the Furriers Union; Furriers Local 1; Bakers Local 1; Upholsterers Local 76; Hematitchers Union; Moulders and Sculptors Union, Millinery Workers Union, Iron and Bronze Workers Union and the Shoe Workers Protective Union.

Send Greetings.

Greetings were read from the Japanese Workers Association and the Chinese Workers Alliance, both of New York. Delegates were also present from 14 branches of the Fraternal Circles and other working class organizations.

The camp will be located at Pawling, New York, where for a small fee, workers' children will be able to spend three weeks in the country in a working class atmosphere.

A drive to raise $15,000 in bonds to pay for the initial expenses of the camp is now on, under the direction of Martin Gottfried, director and David Lyons, secretary of the camp. The main office is located at 106 University place. A branch office has been opened at 108 East 14th Street.

Brownsville Youth Plan Spring Festival

A dance and spring festival will be given by the Youth Center of Brownsville, Saturday, May 28, for the benefit of the International Seaman's Club.

The International Seaman's Club is an organization that stimulates the organization of the workers in the marine industry.

All the workers are urged to buy tickets as the club is in urgent need of funds to carry on its activity.

Tickets for sale at Jimmie Higgins' Book Store, 106 University Place.

Workers of Philadelphia Publish First Issue of 'The Living Newspaper'

(By a Worker Correspondent)

PHILADELPHIA, May 17.—The first issue of "The Living Newspaper" was read before a large audience at the headquarters of the Workers' (Communist) Party.

The paper, written by workers in various industries and activities, contained significant news items, poems, short stories and editorials. Some of the features of the issue were "A Communist Campaign in Passaic," by Albert Walsbord; "A Modern Factory," by Bertha Kantor and "Go to Sleep, Charlie," written by A. B. Magil, and read by Albert Sobel of the Workers' Theater Alliance.

DRAMA

"Mr. Pim Passes By"—Punch Editor's Greatest

KAY JOHNSON

In "Orime," the Shipman-Hymer melodrama at the Times Square Theatre.

"Mr. Pim Passes By" was the first play by A. A. Milne to be produced in America. It was produced by the Theatre Guild, and for many years it played in the small theatre on 14th street. Later it found its way into the popular price department of the Theatre Guild, the Sam Harris Theatre on Broadway, and finally it was moved to the Garrick theatre, its whimsical comedy captivated the directors and it was voted that "Mr. Pim Passes By" be produced by the Theatre Guild.

With the advent of this Milne comedy, several others followed in rapid succession. "The Truth About Blayds," "The Dover Road," "Arlandes," "The Lucky One" and others were produced, but "Mr. Pim Passes By" showed the greatest success and ran the greatest number of performances.

Under the Theatre Guild's scheme of alternating plays weekly it was found that the actors in the various Guild companies were the same people who played the leads in the early Milne comedy. Laura Hope Crews was playing alternate weeks in "The Silver Cord," Dudley Digges was in "Ned McCobb's Daughter," Helen Westley in "Pygmalion," etc. And Erskine Sanford the original Carraway Pim was unoccupied. The Guild decided to present "Right You Are If You Think You Are" and "Mr. Pim Passes By" at alternate weeks at the Garrick Theatre.

This splendid production is now being given for The DAILY WORKER at the Garrick theatre all this week. Tickets at very special prices to our readers are now on sale at the local office, 108 East 14th Street. Don't miss it.

Broadway Briefs

Charles Rann Kennedy's "The Servant in the House," will be revived and sent on tour by the Hones-Allis Productions. The cast will include Charles Allis, Betty Boice, Jane Carr, and Edward Fulcomer. The tour will be for ten weeks and will begin in Pennsylvania and go as far west as Iowa.

"Yes, Yes, Yvette," the new H. H. Frazee musical show is scheduled for a summer run in Philadelphia, and coming here on Labor Day. The production, which is now playing in Boston, is based on the James Montgomery farce "Nothing But the Truth," with the libretto by Mr. Montgomery and the lyrics and music by Irving Caesar and Phil Charig.

Francis Edwards Faragoh, author of "Pinwheel," is the author of another Frazee production, "The Naughty Duchess," which is due here next season. Eugene L. Berton and Edward Eliscu are responsible for the music and lyrics. Grace La Rue will head the cast.

"Sinners" will close at the Klaw May 28th, to make way for "Merry-Go-Round" the new Herndon Revue due at the theatre May 31st.

Four Badly Hurt In Building Fall

Three investigations were in progress yesterday into the collapse of the framework for the concrete work on a 12-story building in Brooklyn. Nine men were injured, five seriously, when the structure at Joy St. between High and Sands Sts., tottered.

Police, the district attorney's office and the building inspection department began investigations, but no results were announced. The badly injured workers are:

Jensen, Severn, 35 years old, of 854 Fifty-eighth street, Brooklyn, carpenter: fracture of bones of the foot.

Ohland, Theodore, 25, of 376 East Ninth street, Brooklyn, carpenter; internal injuries.

Elenuist, Frederirk, 38, of 818 Fourth street, Brooklyn, carpentet; internal injuries.

Warren Strike Weekly, Last Employes in Mill On Fifty-one Hang-out

Hotel Bristol, 315-319 W. 59th St.

The employes in the kitchen were not paid, and were not made public, but the unfortunate workers were thrown into jail and released only after posting $500 bail each. They were booked as "common gamblers."

"Victims of circumstances" was Warren's explanation for the unfavorable showing in shielding the scores of wealthy men and women, many of whose names appear in the social register, from appearing in public victim. In said press representatives who queried on the department's policy in broadcasting to the world the names of the alleged "common gamblers" while shielding the socially prominent.

The gambling paraphernalia included three fine and costly roulette wheels. Thirteen quarts of liquor and $3,100 in cash on the gaming tables were also seized.

The apartment was furnished in lavish style at a cost estimated by police at $100,000. The roulette wheels alone were valued at $25,000.

The alleged common gamblers were held today for the grand jury.

UNION FOR GIRLS MAIN DEMAND OF MEN ON STRIKE

700 Women Walk Out to Build Organization

The new day in barbering has brought 700 beauty parlor and manicure girls out on strike side by side with 1,200 barbers in the Bronx. With 700 shops and parlors affected, picketing was being actively organized and plans laid for a decisive struggle with the master barbers for the right of the women to organize and get better conditions along with the wielders of razor and shears.

The main demand is to compel employers to allow their women workers to join Barbers Local 560 and enjoy the protection of that union. The action followed a spirited meeting of the members of the union and the girls at McKinley Sq. Gardens, McKinley Sq. and Boston Road on Sunday. By a nearly unanimous vote, the members decided to close every union shop in the Bronx.

Eight barbers were arrested on the picket line Monday as police continued their determined drive against strikes of all kinds. Hardly had the pickets appeared before police swooped down on them, as in the laundry drivers' strike against the North American Laundry in Harlem. The standard bail, $500, was demanded of each striker.

Picket Line Efficient.

The Palace Beauty Shop on 163rd St. and the Tiemus Beauty Shop at 730 E. 178th St. were among the few shops which tried to maintain the pretense of business as usual yesterday. In other shops, the losses totaled considerable customers who were not aware of the strike.

On the other hand the union was organizing the picket lines so rapidly that few shops in the Bronx were not advertised as non-union. Strikers, in seven passenger automobiles loaned by members of the union, toured the city stopping and keeping account of the "scorp" shops. Of these a few were deserters from the union. They have had $25 fines assessed on them already.

President Poinenti of the Master Barbers' Association of the Bronx and leader of the losses, is keeping his headquarters open at 176th St. and Southern Blvd.

President Harry Quinto addressed the unionists at the strike meeting, renewing efforts to negotiate with the bosses and emphasizing the boycott. He said that until they are willing to allow their women workers to organize there will be no truce in the present struggle.

[illegible] Bill [illegible] for the [illegible] Legislature [illegible] Young [illegible] Say [illegible] for [illegible] are [illegible] Rep. Hamley, vice president of the New York State Federation of Labor, appealed to the girls to stand firm and take their work out of the "tip" class and make it a self-supporting and self-respecting occupation.

The union demands that all workers be hired through the union hall and that barbers working only Friday and Saturday to take care of the week-end rush be given $22 instead of $20, while Saturday workers get $14 instead of $12. A ten-hour day is also asked.

Leading points in the proposed contract are:

A working day of 8 A. M. to 8 P. M. save on Saturdays, when they will work until 9.

Agreement that the master barber is not to open the shop himself before 8 A. M.

A working day of 8 A. M. to 1 P. M. on legal holidays, with a compensating half day off for the barbers in [illegible] the week.

Extra men who work Fridays and Saturdays only, to receive $22 for the two days instead of $20, the present rate.

The unionists want union recognition and a [illegible] for a fixed salary of $35 a week and 50 per cent. of all profits over their work, excluding $20 [illegible] week.

In the [illegible] parlor, the beauticians want a [illegible] $35 a week plus [illegible] of all profits in excess of $65 a week.

The hair dyer and permanent wavers, who no other work as well, want a flat 25 per cent. on all hair dyeing and permanent waving, a flat weekly salary of $45, and 50 per cent. additional of all profits over $65 a week.

The strikers also demand that women and girls shall work not longer than nine hours a day, including one hour for luncheon, and that none shall go to work before 8 A. M., or work later than 9 P. M.

Liberals Protest to Polish Envoy On Persecution

A stirring appeal to the Polish government from a group of influential Americans, forwarding a wholesale disregard of political, religious and personal rights in that country and begging for their restoration was received Monday by Jan Ciechanowski, Polish minister to the United States. The memorial was presented to the minister at the Hotel Ambassador, New York City, and is being studied by him prior to being forwarded to Warsaw.

The revelations are made by a group of Americans including Dr. John Haynes Holmes, Clarence Darrow, Sherwood Eddy, Felix Frankfuter, Norman Hapgood, David Starr Jordan, William Allen White, Paul U. Kellogg, and thirty-eight others.

Thousands Jailed.

Six thousand individuals, according to this committee, are imprisoned in Poland today for political reasons, and wholesale brutality and torture are visited upon them by the authorities. Many detailed cases are cited.

Civil liberties, the committee finds, after prolonged search at first hand and among official Polish documents, have been virtually wiped out under the Polish republic. As evidence it is stated that 237 out of 287 Eastern Orthodox churches in one province have been suppressed; and that 80 per cent of the issues of some anti-administration newspapers have been suppressed. The forceful abolition of minority parties, labor unions, and political clubs is also found to be of common occurrence.

Raise $38,000 for Joint Defense by Successful Bazaar

The Joint Defense Committee of the Furriers, and Cloak and Dressmakers estimates that over $38,000 was taken in during the four-day bazaar which closed at New Star Casino on Sunday night—or early Monday morning to be accurate.

It was pronounced the most successful bazaar in the history of labor in this city, and everyone is still discussing the wonderful bargains they found and the good time they had.

It was decided because of the rush of business which lasted up to the time of closing, that the Chevrolet automobile which was touring around the hall all day Sunday should not be exposed until Friday, May 27, when the bazaar opens again for a matinee and dance at New Star Casino to celebrate all the hard work that have done for the past few weeks.

Those who buy auto tickets from members of the Defense Committee during the next two weeks will receive an Honor Roll Certificate. All holders of auto tickets will be admitted to the affair on May 27th for 50c. instead of the regular price, 75c.

Booths Sold Out

The hall was swept nearly clean of articles for sale by midnight on Sunday, and it was hard for the latecomers to find anything on which to spend their money. There was not one of the beautiful dresses, or women's coats, no groceries, no leather goods. Booth after booth was swept clean, and everyone was going home loaded with packages.

The boys had yelled themselves hoarse shouting the virtues of bargains in lamps, and china, and silver, and jewelry, phonographs, radios, furniture, and books. And to the very last, there was high spirits and energy, poking and laughing; no wonder the few right wingers who slipped in to see how the workers had obeyed the commands of President Green and the Forward (not to contribute) went home with sour faces.

It was a record-breaking event; and it shows the mettle of the workers who are fighting reaction in the needle trades and in the bureaucracy of the A. F. of L. They are bound to succeed.

Perth Amboy Company Union Wins Hard Work

PERTH AMBOY N. J. (FP)—How the company union at the Raritan Copper Works—an Anaconda concern—won more work for the same pay is told by members of Local 121, Mine, Mills and Smelter Workers.

The management graciously allowed the company union to gain a demand for raincoats, rubber hats and boots for the yard gang. And now when it rains the yard gang has to continue working in the wet instead of coming inside.

The company union was started last fall some time after a strike had compelled the concern to grant a 5 cent an hour increase. No increases have come through the company union.

Battle Is Fought— Peace Is Declared; Deadlock Unended

Despite the promise in New York of the amity international executive board of the "Protected" Union, the strife-wide lockout and the Brooklyn strike were apparently no nearer settlement last night than at any time in the past three weeks.

With the lockout in force two weeks, building is beginning to feel the effects of arrested construction work. While there have been no extensive layoffs, scores of jobs are affected and the prolongation of the lockout another week will definitely cripple the entire industry.

Brooklyn Plumbers Local 1 met Monday, but no announcement was forthcoming as this edition went to press of predictions that the members might consent to return to work pending arbitration of their demands for a $2 increase and the five-day week. The Building Trades Employers' Association, which through C. G. Norman has superintended the lockout, refuses flatly to discuss arbitration while the Brooklyn workers are out, but the union is equally belligerent.

The relative strength of the coarts and the bosses was to be tested today when Bronx plumbers seek their jobs back on the strength of a court order given yesterday directing the employers to call off the lockout. Similar scraps of paper have been worthless to the union so far, but international officers are placing reliance on them in forcing the Bronx employers to back down.

School Janitors Ask Increase in Wage

PASSAIC, May 17.—The Passaic Janitors' Benevolent Association is asking for a raise in wages on a par with the neighboring city of Clifton.

They demand a maximum wage of $2,000 a year with $1,000 as a minimum. At the present time the maximum wage is $1,920 with an annual increase of $50 a year. The workers demand a yearly increase of $150.

The policy of the local authorities has been to pass the buck from the board of education to the building and supplies committee and then back again to the board. In the meanwhile the workers are continuing at the low wages.

N. Y. FUR LOCALS SEND DELEGATES TO CONVENTION

Altho the sub-committee of the International Fur Workers' Union has failed to notify the New York Joint Board of the convention announced for June 13, the Joint Board and its affiliated unions, 1, 5, 10, and 15, will, as usual, elect and send delegates to Washington so it was announced yesterday by Ben Gold, manager of the Board.

These delegates will go prepared to make charges against both the officials of the International, and of the American Federation of Labor, for their activities during the 1926 strike, where they carried on secret negotiations with the bosses and attempted to "break" the Joint Board.

"The Joint Board is pleased to note that the officers of the International have at last yielded to its persistent demand for a convention?" said Gold in making public the plans of the progressive group.

Violate Constitution.

"However, it is the first time in the history of the International Fur Workers' Union that the constitution of the International is so flagrantly violated. The last preceding convention set the first week in May as the date for the 1927 convention. The International officials arbitrarily disregarded this decision of the highest International authority without resorting to any of the legal processes provided by the constitution. They thus offer additional evidence of their utter contempt for constitutional and democratic practices. Such is evidently the influence of the special A. F. of L. committee.

"In ignoring democratic rule, in disregarding the wishes of the membership, in considering the constitution as a mere scrap of paper, the special committee of the A. F. of L. is, in the opinion of the Joint Board acting in a manner absolutely contrary to the fundamental principles of the American trade union movement. This sort of procedure will unquestionably have its detrimental effect on thousands of workers."

The Joint Board, altho by decree of the International is suspended, reconsiders this whole procedure absolutely unconstitutional, since the International did not hold any trial, as is provided by the laws of the union.

In discussing the coming convention, which rumor says is to be housed in the American Federation of Labor building in Washington Gold says:

"The Joint Board hopes that the delegates to the coming convention will be interested in practical union problems rather than in political intrigues of the A. F. of L., which has done very little to build the International Fur Workers' Union, but very much to destroy its power.

"The Joint Board delegates will go to the convention with charges against the International officials and some of the officials of the A. F. of L. for seeking to break the 1926 strike of the fur workers, betraying the strikers by concluding a secret understanding with the manufacturers, for framing up the Joint Board representatives, for violating the International constitution, and, finally, for seeking to break the Joint Board and its Locals 1, 5, 10 and 15, and concluding a secret agreement with the manufacturers, which deprives the fur workers of their gains as a result of the 1926 strike.

"The Joint Board attaches special importance to the fact that the convention is going to be held in the Federation Building in Washington. We undoubtedly appreciate the generosity of the A. F. of L. for granting its premises to our convention. We hope, however, that the A. F. of L. officials will not take advantage of this and seek to dictate terms and policies to their invited guests."

Reorganize Newark

Meanwhile, in their efforts to prepare a convention that will do its bidding without question, the A. F. of L. Reorganization Committee is beginning activities in Newark, and has started "reorganizing" the Rabbit Workers' Local there.

The International is following the same old routine of opening new headquarters and inviting the workers to come and register. They have put in charge of this work Pietro Lucci, a vice-president of the International, who is so hated by the Local 25 membership that when he tried to speak at one of their meetings, at which all the other right wing officials were present to argue their cases, Lucci was not allowed in the hall, by request of the members. He has for a long time wanted the job of manager of this local, he has been promised it by the International, but the members have persistently refused to accept him, and have demanded a manager of their own choice. Now he is to be given his desire—at least so far as the International is concerned.

New York and Texas, Leaders in Exports, Report Big Losses

For the second successive year New York in 1926 was the country's principal exporting state outranking Texas by over $100,000,000.

New York products and goods for export last year valued at $761,948,789, a fall of $40,000,000 as compared with 1925, while Texas exports amounted to $348,991,000, a loss of $110,000,000.

Combined New York and Texas did approximately one third of, the country's entire export business of $4,713,000,000 for the year. National exports fall off $106,000,000 from 1926, as the result of raw material price falls. The decline was principally attributable to cotton prices.

Despite the national loss twenty-one states exceeded their 1925 business. Losses were sustained by 31 states and possessions. New York and New Jersey were hard hit.

Exports from New York were chiefly manufactured goods, consisting of cotton cloth, machinery, cooper goods, vehicles, flour and oil products.

Emergency Programers Of the I.W.W. Start a Journal in Los Angeles

(By a Worker Correspondent)

LOS ANGELES, Calif., May 17.—On May 7, 1927, the first issue of the New Unionist, a fortnightly was published in Los Angeles, Calif. It claims to be "the official organ of the I. W. W. reorganization movement."

The New Unionist "seeks no alliances" and, therefore is hostile to united front movements. It has "no quarrel with any section of labor" except with another group of the I. W. W.

Family Row.

The editor, Mortimer Downing, explains the I.W.W. quarrel as follows:

"... All went well until a few self-chosen leaders, by trick, deceit and persuasion, . . . entered all the power of the I. W. W. in Chicago. From the day Chicago became the home of the general secretary, the Pope and the G. E. B., the college of cardinals, the I. W. W. grew weaker and weaker. . . ."

"Do What You Please."

". . . In the reorganized I. W. W. no punk cowardly committee bosses you. Permission to strike, to agitate, to publish literature is not needed. Everywhere you are free to show your own strength."

In the eyes of the greater part of the workers this program looks like separation, not cooperation; individualism, not collectivism.

The "Emergency Program" group split off from the parent body of the I. W. W. in the fall of 1924, shortly thru the leadership of James Rowan, M. Raddock and John Grady, all since dropped out of sight. It declared the rest of the I. W. W. to be "too Communistic" for it, secured an injunction against it from one of the labor hating judges of Chicago, and caused its headquarters to be locked up for some time.

Much Division.

The emergency program was a plan of organization worked out by the leaders in the splitting faction, and was based on extreme decentralization. Mortimer Downing, the present spokesmn for the "E. P. S." was editor of the Industrial Worker of Seattle, official organ of the Northwest Branches of the regular I.W.W. He remained on the paper, working in the interests of the "E. P." for some time, and finally came over to them openly. The "New Unionist" is the second venture into journalism of the "E. P." group, their first organ, "The Industrial Unionist" of Portland, having failed in 1926.

Union City Out 5,000 Strong for Sacco, Vanzetti

Union City, N. J., never saw a demonstration comparable to the great outpouring Sunday of workers to demand the freedom of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti. Five thousand workers jammed the public square, nearly as many as attended the recent Union Square demonstration in New York.

Louis Quintiliano of Il Martello, Vincenzo Vacirca of Il Nuovo Mondo and at Devine of the International Labor Defense reviewed the celebrated case before a meeting where scores of bright hued standards and placards in English and Italian carried Sacco-Vanzetti slogans.

Twenty-three organizations, many of them Italian, joined in the meeting.

Cotton Manufacturers Declare Their Right to Organize; Deny Labors'

Organized labor looks with skeptical interest upon the resolution adopted by the cotton mill owners at a banquet in Atlantic City, that cotton manufacturers should "have the right to organize to regulate production

This resolution was adopted by the representatives of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers (North) and the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association (South) in joint meeting after separate conventions. It demands for capital the very thing which the mill owners refuse to labor. American Federation of Labor officials, who believe the anti-trust laws must be repealed because they are used to injure trade unions, point out that this plea for nationwide combination of the cotton mills comes from the men who fought most stubbornly the enactment of federal laws limiting child labor in their mills. They also fight viciously against any organization of labor in their mills.

Foreign Trade of Centrosoyuz

[illegible] of The Russian Trade Delegation in London, which has been entrusted with the foreign trade operations of the Centrosoyuz, through its representative abroad.

The only exception was to be in previous years, the export of grain, which has been carried on through the Exportkhleb.

The entire turnover of the Centrosoyuz abroad in 1925-26 amounted to £5,539,166. To compare, the turnover of this year with that of the previous years we shall present here some figures: in 1924-25 the turnover amounted to £6,356,866, and in 1923-24 £5,064,742.

The turnover of 1925-26 consisted of imports to the value of £3,189,328 (1924-25 the figure was £2,882,206) and exports to the value of £2,330,843 (in 1924-25 £3,776,593). As may be seen from these figures, the comparison of 1925-6 with 0924-25 shows a reduction in the exports and an increase in the imports.

The increase in imports may be explained by the classification of imports on the part of the Centrosoyuz into the so-called "ordinary" and "extraordinary" commodities of consumption; the decrease in exports may be explained by the change in the prices of exported goods both within the U. S. S. R. and abroad.

The Centrosoyuz purchased, in 1925-26, the following commodities:

Textiles to the value of		£918,600
Tea	"	648,717
Household goods	"	350,116
Rice	"	413,410
Haberdashery	"	157,913
Dried fruits	"	149,626
Leather	"	112,482
Live stocks (bulls and sheep)	"	88,680
Office supplies	"	46,906
Fishing nets	"
Yarn	"	50,753
Miscellaneous	"	292,027

During the same year the Centrosoyuz exported and sold aboard the following:

Furs to the value of		£1,110,265
Flax	"	393,855
Eggs	"	231,508
Caviare and fish	"	93,932
Rags	"	38,161
Butter	"	32,779
Cocoons	"	30,934
Miscellaneous	"	159,609

The principle item of export, as the figures show, was that of fur. Primarily, Siberian, Ural and Far Eastern furs are being exported and sold on three different markets. They are: New York (the United States in general insofar as the United States is the principal buyer of furs in general (due to better economic conditions existing there than in Europe) and the common quality of Russian furs—squirrel in particular.

The second market for furs is London, which buys partly for home consumption and partly for re-exports; most of the sales there are effected through the London fur auction sales.

The third market—which has recently revealed a tendency of increasing its strength—is the Leipzig fair in Germany, which lost its significance as a result of the general economic decline of the country, and is now regaining it. Fur sales on other foreign markets are insignificant.

45% of the exported furs were disposed of on the New York market, 47% on the London market and 7.5% in Leipsig.

Flax is the second large export item of the Centrosoyuz.

The principal markets for flax are Belgium (Ghent), Great Britain, France, Germany and the United States—the countries in which the West European and American flax industry is concentrated.

Apart from that, small parties of flax were sold in Latvia and Esthonia, not for their own industries, but for re-export to the Belgium and German markets.

The specific gravity of the various flax markets is: London, 35 per cent, Paris 30 per cent, New York, 21 per cent and Berlin 11 per cent of the Centrosoyuz exports.

Eggs were sold primarily in Great Britain and Germany. The eggs that were sold in Riga were actually delivered to Germany and Great Britain (the purchaser shipped at once to those markets) as the Baltic countries do not consume any imported eggs.

Furs to the value of £1,110,265 were exported and sold aboard the following:

Eggs were sold primarily in Great Britain and Germany. The eggs that were sold in Riga were actually delivered to Germany and Great Britain (the purchaser shipped at once to those markets) as the Baltic countries do not consume any imported eggs.

Most of them, the wrote, were purchased by the Centrosoyuz on the spot, but it must be pointed out that the Centrosoyuz exported, through the Exportkhleb, grain to the value of £2,000,000. From this it follows that the export of the Centrosoyuz amounted to £4,687,921 (£2,330,843 plus £2,000,-778) and the imports amounted to £3,189,328. As the figures show, the Centrosoyuz has a favorable balance in which the exports exceed the imports by £1,548,593.

We shall now briefly give an outline of the strength of the Centrosoyuz on the markets of the various countries.

The London branch of the Centrosoyuz undoubtedly occupies first place—39 per cent of all foreign trade goes through that office. During the last year the London offices sold exported goods to the value of £104,-996 (45.7 per cent of the entire export) and bought to the value of £554,743 of import goods (17.6 per cent of the entire imports).

The Berlin office occupies second place. It sold exported goods to the value of £205,217 (9 per cent) and bought imported goods to the value of £967,247 (31 per cent of the entire imports). On the whole 21 per cent of the foreign trade of the Centrosoyuz passed through the Berlin office. Summing up the figures of both offices, it may be stated that 50 per cent of the entire foreign turnover of the Centrosoyuz passed through the London and Berlin offices.

The Shanghai office of the Centrosoyuz was organized for the sole purpose of purchasing tea, as has been stated above; 95 per cent of the tea purchased last year was bought in Shanghai (Hankow). Besides tea (to the value of £627,022), furs were purchased in Shanghai to the value of £12,919 to meet the requirement of the Centrosoyuz on the Shanghai of the Centrosoyuz on the Shanghai market equals 11.7 per cent of its foreign trade.

The Riga, Reval and Harbin offices have been organized chiefly as transit stations—Reval and Riga shipped the exported goods of the Centrosoyuz to Western Europe (and the imported goods from Western Europe to the U.S.S.R.); Harbin ships the Siberian and Far Eastern furs to America, where our furs are being sold on the New York Market. The Harbin office, apart from shipping furs and buying live stock as meat for the Far East, of which we spoke before, is also supplying the Mongolian co-operatives with commodities from the Chinese market.

The strength of all these offices in the general trade turnover is insignificant (their strength lies primarily in their transit and storing operations): it amounts to: in Riga, 3.1 per cent, Reval 0.1 per cent and Harbin 1.8 per cent of the entire foreign trade.

The New York Office occupies third place in the foreign trade of the Centrosoyuz. Exported goods sold through the New York office amounted to £987,867 (furs and flax primarily), and purchased import goods to the value of £90,557.

The entire turnover of the New York office comprises 14.1 per cent of the general foreign turnover of the Centrosoyuz.

The Paris office sold export goods to the value of £226,658 and purchased import goods to the value of £261,-952 (textiles, haberdashery), it's strength being 8.9 per cent of the entire foreign trade.

Finally, there is the office in Persia. It purchases rice and dried fruits on the Persian market. On the whole the purchases on the Persian market amounted to £504,122; the sales of export goods consisted of sugar and textiles (£55,789). The turnover of the Persian office amounted to 10.2 per cent of the general turnover of the Centrosoyuz on the foreign markets.

In this survey of the export and import activities of the Centrosoyuz, the business relations of the latter with the foreign co-operatives have not been pointed out. In the next issue of this Bulletin, a survay will be given of the relations of the Centrosoyuz with the co-operatives abroad.

NICARAGUA

The Nicaraguan Liberals were fightin' for their land
Against a damn Conservative and cut-throat pirate band
When Uncle Sam decided he had better have a hand
Decidin' who would serve his interests well.

He sent a fleet of warships and an admiral or two
To see that things came out as Sammy thought they ought to do,
And to the damn Conservatives he sold a mighty slew
Of guns and ammunition to raise hell.

He helped the damn Conservatives to win the bloody fight,
And his marines were sent from every station day and night
To overawe the Liberals afightin' for the right—
And Coolidge said we weren't makin' war.

Then Sammy told the Liberals that if they didn't mend
Their ways and stop afightin' he would very quickly send Marines enough to bring their little army to an end—
And that, you know, is what marines are for.

Three thousand bold marines were sent ashore to act as "cop".
The Liberals' brave leader told his soldiers then to stop—
And so the war was ended with your Uncle Sam on top!

CAPITALIST GOVERNMENT IN THE U. S. A.

—Drawn by Wm. Gropper.

In the city of mills, when workers struck for a little more than a starvation wage, they found arrayed against them the local press, the churches and police department.

Analysis of the Passaic Election

IN order to properly gauge the results and the effects of the election in the city of Passaic we must get a good picture of its inhabitants, the various races that live there and the different strata of the population that play a part in the city life. The great textile strike of last year brought Passaic to the forefront as a town where the movement to start a campaign to organize the unorganized would originate from. Since the end of the strike and the textile workers have taken upon themselves to the job of building up the union, an election campaign has come and gone. Once again the searchlights of publicity and public interest thruout the nation have been centered on Passaic. Why is Passaic so important to the Labor Movement and why is it of great value for the Communist Party to get a correct picture of the background of Passaic and its influence in organizing the textile workers and in the election campaign that just ended?

Passaic has a population of approximately 70,000 people. The dominant industry is textiles. Sprinkled with it are the rubber plants, print shops, needle trades, building trades and other isolated trades. Out of the entire population of the city over 18,000 registered to cast their ballot on May 10th. And almost 15,500 voted on election day. This is truly a remarkable record for any city in the U. S. One out of every four people in the city used their franchise as citizens. When we consider the fact that one out of every four textile workers is permitted to vote because the others are not citizens and are foreign born workers, then the vote cast is all the more remarkable. If we analyze the strata of the population we find that it is composed of many nationalities including the Hungarians, Italians, Russians, Poles, Slavs, Lithuanians, Jews, Negroes, etc. The Germans and the American born also represent a big pogion of the population. The great mass of the textile workers are disfranchised. The workers represented in the building trades and the native born population that live in North Passaic and above Main Ave. by far outnumber the vote of the workers on the Eastside. At one time the vote was divided equally between the population of the Eastside and the American population above Main Ave.

In the May 10th election every radical, religious, labor and fraternal organization was drawn into the election. The Communists were a very dominant factor in the election thru the slate of Bambach, Smelkinson and Weisbord. As a matter of fact if their vote was swung to any individual opposition candidate it would have elected that candidate. The Labor Ticket conducted an out and out campaign against Preiskel, McGuire and Co. of the administration. The Passaic Trades and Labor Council organized a Good Government Ass'n to work for the election of Judge Cabell and Captain Turner of the detective bureau. The churches entered the campaign thru the Ministers' Ass'n, who organized an investigation against the gambling houses and the saloons of the city for the purpose of blackliting and making political propaganda against Abram Preiskel, the czar of the Police Department. The Slovak Society entered the race thru the candidacy of Vasacek and Rubecky who received the endorsement of many Polish and Slovak societies in Passaic. The Jewish section of the city were drawn into the campaign thru Preiskel's henchmen who brought in the racial issues. The textile strike and industry were brought into the campaign by the running of Bambach and Weisbord for commissioner. So we can readily see that bosses and their henchmen or tools did not leave a stone unturned to get out the vote and elect their candidates. As a matter of record the Botany Mills had a candidate, Lyons; plus all the others of the old administration.

* * *

What is interesting to the progressives and Communists is the fact that the entrance of Albert Weisbord into the campaign was taken seriously. The local political machines and organizations interested in beating Preiskel, the labor hater, manuevered many times during the campaign for Weisbord's support. They sent messengers to ask him to appear at their rallies. Of course due to hostility of the local politicians and bureaucrats of the Passaic Trades and Labor Council who were working for Cabell and Turner, Weisbord was prevented from getting the endorsement of himself and his running mates. They also prevented him from speaking to the Good Government Association they organized. However, due to the pressure of the U. T. W. officials, the local textile workers could not endorse and work for the election of the Labor Candidates. In spite of all this sabotage and boycott of the Labor Candidates because they were compelled to run and conduct their campaign as a straight Communist Campaign, they drew the largest crowds and enthusiasm. Wherever they spoke at other rallies of candidates they were received well. Whether the meetings were held in North Passaic or the Eastside it made no difference. The Daily News carried an editorial on the front page about the Walsh Act, and also took the pains to inform its readers that if they approve of Communism and the doctrines that the Labor Candidates stood for they should vote for them. Thus we can see that due to the fact that the labor candidates were a factor in the election and also because they conducted an active campaign, and the politicians, hundred per centers, churches and clergymen, and newspapers took the pains to inform their clientele that Weisbord etc. were Communists and too dangerous to be put in office, when even a child who went to a labor rally could have seen and understood what the Communists wanted. The issue was plain: either a Workers' Government or a Bosses' Government representing gas bombs, clubbings and strike breaking.

Weisbord polled over a 1,000 votes. His running mates Bambach and Smelkinson around 400. Under the circumstances this was a very creditable showing. While the campaign committee expected a little higher vote they were not disappointed. When taken into consideration that all of the population excluding Preiskel's lickspittles and suckers who worked for his election were out to beat Preiskel then we can understand why the vote of the Labor Candidates was so small in comparison. The Communist candidates also had to contend with the psychology that the average voter likes to pick a winner. This fact, coupled with the intensity to beat Preiskel, helped many people in deciding to vote for the opposition candidates against the machine of Preiskel and Co. When we also consider that all the institutions of the city were lined up against the Labor Candidates and using their power against their getting a small vote and electing reliable (?) business men into office we can visualize the situation from a better angle. With all these handicaps plus inexperience, lack of forces to conduct the campaign on the part of the Communists, the results were creditable and effective. Thousands of pieces of literature were distributed. DAILY WORKERS were delivered to every voter. The entire working class of the city came out to hear and register their approval of the Labor Candidates despite systematic sabotage by the police and city authorities, hall keepers and labor traitors. They came to listen to the message of the Labor Party. They came to register their approval of the labor campaign.

In conclusion the workers learned the necessity of participating in the elections, of becoming citizens, of preparing for the trickery of the politicians (stealing of votes), of building up a powerful political organization for the Labor Party and the necessity of building up their unions and organizations. It is not beyond prediction to state that from Passaic and the textile workers will come the material to build a powerful Labor Party in New Jersey and from the same source will come the missionaries who will undertake the job of organizing the labor party and the unorganized workers thruout the state. The young workers who were steeled in the great textile strike of 1926 and schooled in the campaign of 1927 bear promise of accomplishing great deeds for the labor movement of state and nation. Time will carve its achievements on the pages of history in New Jersey and in the city of Passaic. Keep your eyes on this small but remarkable textile city.

SOLVING THE HOUSING PROBLEM.—The housing problem evidently has been greatly exaggerated. A reader of The DAILY WORKER calls attention to the real estate advertising sections, which carry ample proof that experts are not hard to get. Here, for example, is a list of available flats with all modern improvements at a pretty good address on Park Avenue, as advertised by Pease & Elkinson, Inc.:

9 ROOM DUPLEX	$35,000 to $40,000
10 ROOM DUPLEX	37,000 to 55,000
11 ROOM DUPLEX	45,000 to 70,000
12 ROOM DUPLEX	60,000 to 90,000
12 TO 16 ROOM ROOF GARDEN TRIPLEX	75,000 to 115,000
5 TO 9 ROOM MAISONETTES	20,000 to 36,000

The Logic of Liberals.—On the editorial page of the New York Times for August 29, 1925, there appeared a two-column article under the caption "Bolshevism in This Country." It was the kind of squib that would—and did—please Easley of the Civic Federation. Easley couldn't do much better himself, except that he might have made more effective use of his favorite cuss words. The article gave the inside and the low-down on the damn Communists, see? Typical "expose" dope, recounting episodes in the underground period of Communist activities, citing the amounts of gold allegedly received from Moscow, revealing the identity of Communists using pseudonyms, etc.

None of that was surprising. It was exactly the kind of dope the Times would buy. The author, being an old hand at free-lance writing, knows his customers. His name is Benjamin Stolberg.

If any doubt remained that Stolberg does know his customers it has just been dispelled. Despite his notorious dislike of Communists—despite the rancor which he has borne against them for the things they said about his indefensible stunt in the Times—he managed to "sell himself" to The Nation as an "impartial" authority on the needle trades conflict. The result, naturally, is an extremely one-sided, highly biased, partisan series continuing the "revelations" started in the Times.

Stolberg, we understand, considers the Times performance a "mistake." We prophesy that two years from now he will be ready to consider the Nation performance a "mistake" and busily engaged making a similar one.

Success Pointers.—Alexander Kerensky is writing a series of articles for the New York "Times." Nobody believes in Kerensky any longer, it seems, except the "Times" and the American socialists. The articles though should be useful reading for ambitious men. They reveal the secret of true leadership. All you need do to get famous, it appears from this account, is to station yourself where things are happening, close your eyes, open your mouth, and wait. . . . That's about all he did, and presto! he was head of Russia before he was aware of it. Folks came running to get his autograph before he knew that it was worth anything. In sober fact, he was surprised, astonished. He signed and gave orders with a bewildered smile. Not until later did he realize that he had been the Lord's anointed all these years: a man of destiny. But come to think of it, what's the good of a destiny which leads but to Abe Cahan and Matthew Woll? What price glory, if it leads but to a banquet under auspices of the right-wing cutters' local?

DUMB BELLES-LETTRES.

Dear Lester:

Well, honey-boy, here I am again writing to you and awful sorry to delay so long. Fact is I haven't been feeling so extra and didn't get much chance to read the papers for you, and am now trying to catch up. But as I think you must be perfectly starved for news I'll do what I can to let you know.

So first of all there is a lot in the papers about a fellow Sacco-Vanzetti who got arrested for being an anarchist but when they searched him they found he committed a couple of murders and ran away to Mexico to dodge the draft. Now everybody's raising a howl about it, though I can't see why anarchists shouldn't burn. Fact the only one that won't protest is Ramsay Macdonald, which reminds me that the English Parliament is trying to pass a law making general strikes illegal, but my brother Percy who's an awful kidder says that one good general strike would make Parliament illegal, which would be turning the tables, don't you think.

Also you will be glad to know that Hoover is trying to stop the floods in the South, and he has already taken some awful nice pictures of himself in all kinds of postures. What with floods and tornadoes and aviators that get lost there's going to be a big drop in population soon. Another thing is that peace has been declared in Nicaragua and a few shiploads more marines were sent over to celebrate the fact, and anyhow there's still a lot of fighting in Mexico and China. In the latter of which there seems to be more reds than yellows, like in Russia.

I don't recall if I told you last time that Uncle Thomas at last got his divorce from Sally, which reminds me that Mrs. Snyder got found guilty with her paramour and they will both burn. All the papers say disappointed-like that they bungled that murder anyhow. Another fellow in New Jersey by the name of Van Sickle also got found guilty for killing a lady's husband with her assistance. Another by the name of Kelly is being tried for similar crime in Hollywood. As Percy says, romance aint dead yet. But a lot of husbands is, says I. But he isn't serious of course. It seems a pity though what ladies will do nowadays and how men don't hesitate any more to find them guilty, not that they don't deserve it. Which all goes to show, doesn't it?

Another thing is that there seems to be a mine strike though nobody hears about it much, on account of the leaders keeping it a secret. Also a lot of oil men held a mass meeting in New York to decide what to do with the extra oil which it seems there is too much of. Though if there's too much I don't see why they kick so much because they think Mexico will take some oil mines away, do you? One piece in the papers said that the British are trying to capture a lot of oil lands in Persia and Turkey and such places. So why not give them some of the surplus here, only maybe the big boys at the mass meeting didn't see that piece.

So long honeyboy, and don't be mad at me for not writing sooner. I really wasn't feeling extra and besides somehow couldn't get myself to write. Percy says that with my diction and everything I should take up reporting or literachoor for a living or something but I don't think it's a ladylike profession. Tell me what you think of the idea. So long and be good. Lovingly yrs, MYRTLE.

From Rome comes the news that the Mussolini regime has ORDERED a VOLUNTARY wage reduction for all workers.

It may tax your credulity, but happens to be true: we have just run into a man who had not yet heard about Mrs. Snyder, and he has been leading a normal working life in New York.

* * *

The London police have raided the Arcos House, headquarters of the Soviet Union Trade Delegation. Before long we may hear the startling news that the delegation has been in communication with Moscow. It may even have received some Moscow gold.

* * *

The New Leader gives first place in its current issue to a review of Norman Hapgood's "Professional Patriots." In a previous issue the same subject is touched upon by Norman Thomas in his own column. In both cases the portions of Hapgood's book dealing with the National Civic Federation are studiously avoided or slurred over. We wonder why. Maybe the fact that St. Matthew Woll is acting chairman of the outfit of super-patriots has something to do with it.

GIGANTIC GRAFT IN MISSISSIPPI FLOOD CONTROL

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE foreign editor of the Paris Matin has written for the New York Times a special article in which he declares his admiration for the United States tho there are a few trifling deficiencies that detract from the comfort of those accustomed to being waited on by less favored individuals engaged in the business of contributing to the physical and mental comfort of their betters. For instance, we are informed by the distinguished journalist that he was quite inconvenienced while staying in a New York hotel because instead of being able to press a button for male or female servants according to his particular needs he was obliged to telephone and go to the trouble of describing his requirements in detail instead of leaving such trifling matters to flunkeys trained in the art of reading the minds of guests.

NO doubt when American capitalism grows a little older and blooms into a finer flower of civilization those little inconveniences will disappear. What we are chiefly concerned with is this editor's comment on our prosperity. A country that can give a mason $14 a day and a miner only a little less is a country worth fighting for. And when the American worker dallies thru his day's pleasurable toil —if toil it may be called—he dolls up and with his wife and family spins out into the country in a smart automobile. That is what the Frenchman saw. He also noticed that "nothing prevents him" (the American) from aspiring to riches and an important position." We agree but—

WHILE it is true that in this rich country some of the skilled union workers in the building trades earn $14 a day and an automobile is no novelty to them, our visitor did not tell us how many months out of the working year those $14-a-day building trades workers are unemployed. But when the Times correspondent tells us that the mine worker gets almost as much, he is talking thru his nose. The Jacksonville agreement called for a union wage scale of $7.50 a day for the highest category of mine help and it is safe to assume that the mine owners did not pay above the scale. The fact is that many of them threw the agreement in their waste baskets and paid below the scale.

THAT a section of the American workingclass shares in the prosperity of American imperialism is undeniable. But this section is small compared to the total workingclass population of the country. The workers in a few favored trades—(favored for the time being. They will get their medicine later on) are petted because their employers find it pays better to be generous since they can afford it, than to risk greater losses thru protracted strikes. But it is becoming evident now that there will soon be a tightening up and that the bosses are getting ready to wreck the last bulwarks of A. F. of L. craft unionism in the United States. Then the budding "aristocrats of labor" may have to draw in the belt, unless the unorganized workers are organized and the present reactionary leadership of the trades union is supplanted by a progressive leadership.

ON a recent visit to Boston I saw enough to convince me that the prosperity of the workingclass at this time is greatly overestimated. It is true that the labor leaders in Massachusetts are almost as prosperous as they are in Chicago or New York and if one does not see beyond the labor leaders or even beyond skilled building trades workers and printers, it is not strange that such a short sighted person should be awed by the appearance of prosperity which our capitalist editors insist is universal in the United States. If our workingclass population—those actually engaged in the industrial and commercial apparatus of the country—was organized industrially and politically, then it would be possible for them to secure a greater share of their product made at the same time building up their machinery with a view to taking over industry and operating it for the benefit of all the socially useful and our main job is to do that very thing.

ONE cannot possibly know how the workers live, simply by reading the capitalist press. One cannot know with any degree of accuracy how the workers feel about things by reading the speeches of the labor bankers and

USSR PROTESTS ARCOS RAIDS IN NOTE TO BRITAIN

Britain Violated Trade Agreement—Litvinoff

MOSCOW, May 18.—Branding the raids on the Arcos offices as "a most serious and hostile act" and as a violation of the Anglo-Soviet trade agreement, the Soviet Union sent the British dis-hard Government a note of protest last night.

On the heels of the note came the announcement from the Council of People's Commissariats that foreign trade will be conducted by Soviet Union representatives and organizations only in those countries with which the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics has formal diplomatic relations. Exceptions to this rule will only be made when necessitated by the peculiar nature of some special transactions, the Commissariat of Trade said.

Violated Immunity

The immunity of the Soviet Union Trade Delegation, embodied in the trade agreement with Great Britain, "has been violated by the British authorities in the grossest and most insulting manner," said Maxim Litvinoff, Acting Foreign Minister, in his note.

The action of the British Government, the note says, contradicts the much-advertised pleas of the British Government for peace and economic stability, the note declares, and shows the world "where are to be found the really destructive forces working for economic chaos and anarchy in Europe."

British Balk Trade

"The Soviet Government," continues the note, "has observed with satisfaction the interest in the Soviet market evidenced by London, and the Soviet economic organization has been more and more trusted by the London banks, in proof of which an agreement was signed a few days ago between the Soviets and one of these banks for £10,000,000.

"But a campaign of unheard-of hostility, which reached its culmination in the raid on the Soviet Trade Delegation, induces the Soviet Government, with all the seriousness and frankness which the grave situation demands, to lay down before the British Government the question: Is it willing further to maintain and develop Anglo-Soviet relations or is it its intention to oppose this in the future?"

Pointing out the violation of the Anglo-Soviet trade agreement, the note says:

"The raid could only have been actuated by a motive causing detriment

A. F. L. IN MILD NOTE TO FULLER ON FAMOUS CASE

"Expresses No Opinion on Innocence"

BOSTON, May 18.—Official Boston, as represented at the State House, was rubbing its eyes today as it read over a letter from the executive council of the American Federation of Labor on the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

The letter, signed by President William Green, asks Governor Fuller to review the case, but declares that it does not express any opinion on the "innocence or guilt" of the victims of Massachusetts justice.

Attaches at the governor's office regarded the letter as of little help to the case, as it had been generally regarded that the A. F. of L. executive council would reiterate the demand of a recent convention for liberation of the Italian workers as victims of "an outrageous miscarriage of justice." The official A. F. of L. request, they pointed out, is miles behind the approach sent by its law schools of the most prominent universities condemning the whole Dedham trial as a farce.

Fee Confers With Fuller.

Dudley P. Ramsey, assistant district attorney of Norfolk County and one of the most determined foes of Sacco and Vanzetti, was closeted with the governor yesterday, going over evidence with him.

SOVIET UNION INDIGNANT OVER RAID

Above, right, M. Khintchuk, head of the All Russian Co-operative Society's English business, and of the Anglo-Russian Trade Delegation, which under the trade agreement, has the status and diplomatic immunities of an embassy. Despite this, the British home secretary, Sir Wm. Joynson-Hicks ordered a raid on "Arcos" house, the offices of the trade delegation and of Arcos, Limited, representing the All Russian co-operatives. Lord Birkenhead and Winston Churchill are members of the British cabinet who are thought to have abetted Joynson-Hicks in the crimes of burglary, arson and breach of treaty, involved in the raid. Workers of the Soviet Union have held great meetings of protest.

Swap "Taffy" At London Visit Of French Statesmen

LONDON, May 18. — Vast oral bonquets are being exchanged between English and French politicians during the visit of President Doumergue of France, accompanied by Aristide Briand, the French foreign minister.

Yesterday both French were given honorary degrees at Oxford where Viscount Cave, the chancelior of the university and other luminaries talked about the "services rendered by the visitors in the cause of peace."

The King and Queen attended a dinner last night given by President Doumergue at the French embassy, instuded among the guests was Honghton, the American ambassador.

The French press is filled with inflated accounts of the "enthusiasm" resulting from the present visit, and insist that "the little family bickerings in these eight years have sometimes beclouded the deeper meaning of Anglo-French friendship."

France and England are considered today the two most conservative governments in Europe and are coming closer toward a political alliance against the Soviet Union.

How Patriots Get Cash To Be Told in DAILY WORKER Series Monday

How the National Security League, the American Defense Society, the National Civic Federation and a large number of lesser organizations finance their anti-labor activities is revealed in "Professional Patriots," which will appear serially in The DAILY WORKER beginning next Monday.

By far the most interesting facts lead with the manner in which the National Civic Federation, organized in 1900 to "reconcile capital and labor" took on its patriotic and suppressionist anti-radical activities immediately after the war.

"Professional Patriots" is edited by Norman Hapgood from material assembled by Sidney Howard and John Hearley.

Coal Operators In Session Discussing Ousting of Workers

CINCINNATI, May 18.—Boasting of the constantly increasing use of mining machinery, which replaces men with metal, and exulting over the fact that killings underground are now "only" 3.79 deaths per millions tons per year, the American Mining Congress got under way today. It is an association of coal mine operators, and stands for complete trustification of the industry.

Hates Anti-Trust Law.

In a preliminary statement, J. G. Gallbreath, Washington Secretary of the congress, assailed any attempt on the part of other business men to regulate the coal industry thru government action.

"Let the government take its hands off the coal industry and keep them off," said Gallbreath, and continued:

Let Government Get Out.

"While the Government is approving, even forcing the merger of railroads into big systems, its stands ready with sheriffs and jailers to imprison members of the coal industry who would try to get together and work out the salvation of this sorely-tried industry.

"Today the coal industry, with too many mines and too many miners, is suffering heavy losses and the nation is losing 40 per cent of the coal that is mined—and wasted.

"All we ask is that the Government permit us to regulate our own affairs."

The hotels are already crowded with delegates to the convention.

"We expect to have more than 3,000 delegates—the biggest in the history of the coal mining industry," Callbreath said.

The American Mining Congress session takes place in the midst of "woman's-land" in the coal lockout. The Ohio operators have been trying to follow the example of West Virginia and certain Pennsylvania companies and go non-union.

They have not as yet had much success—it is presumed by unionists here that the so-called mining congress will devote a good deal of its attention to inventing methods for stiffening the Ohio operators' resistance, if that be possible. At least the operators and their superintendents present will informally discuss the matter.

Politicians at Washington Gamble With Human Life in Levee Frauds

Senate Decides to Sit As Audience On Naval Experts Grand Pow-wow

WASHINGTON, May 18.—A note from Italy, requesting that she be permitted to send several naval experts as observers to the Geneva Naval Conference, was received by the state department last night.

The note contained no definite outline of how fully Italy may participate in the conference, if at all.

Millions of Dollars Spent While Inhabitants Perish in Raging Torrents

Coolidge, Fearing Exposure, Refuses to Call Special Session of Congress

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Two hundred million dollars have been squandered in earthen breastworks built for flood control in the Mississippi River Valley, and although these levees have been built and rebuilt time and again for 47 years, yet never once have they withstood the onslaughts of the mighty stream, when it raged in flood.

It may seem unbelievable when the assertion is made, that the records show that despite the fact that the "levees only" system has failed to prevent widespread inundation every time the Mississippi flooded, that nevertheless, the federal government and local organizations have continued to dump tens of millions of dollars annually in such earthen walls. Yet that is the absolute truth, written in black and white on the statute books of the land. Even now, the Mississippi River Commission, a federal agency that has been promoting this "contractors' paradise" system, has a federal grant of $10,000,000 with which to carry on its operations beginning the new fiscal year, July 1, 1927.

Millions For Graft.

Politics, crooked, nefarious, honeycombed with patronage and graft, is responsible. The millions that have been shoveled into these clay walls that never hold, mean millions in fat contracts. Fat, luscious contracts, mean graft, mean political manipulations and deals. For every dollar the federal government puts into the kitty, local levee politicians raise one or two more by local taxation, so that the vast system has been evolved which up until the present has prevented every effort made not only to put an end to the stupendous waste in the projects, but even to have an independent investigation made of the problem.

Death Aided Gang.

When in 1917 the "levees only" gang was under severe pressure in its effort to obtain the annual $10,000,000 federal handout, it gave ground to the extent of accepting

SHANGHAI, May 18.—That Great Britain may support Chiang Kai-shek in its effort to balk the Nationalist movement appeared likely today with the arrival of Chiang and the departure of Sir Miles Lampson, British Minister, from Peking for this city.

The note dispatched yesterday recalling Basil Newton, British representative at Hankow, is understood to have stated in no undecided terms that in the future Great Britain will confine its negotiations to Chiang Kai-shek and the Peking "Government."

Newton has left Hankow for Shanghai where he will confer with the British Minister.

Confab with Chiang

That Sir Miles Lampson has left for this city for the purpose of conferring with Chiang Kai-shek is not unlikely in view of yesterday's note. The note to the Hankow Government stated that "it is useless and undesirable to deal with a regime so totally incapable of the duties of civilized government.

Great Britain, having been forced to abandon for the time being her plans for open war against Nationalist China, will support Chiang Kai-shek in an effort to retard the Nationalist movement, observers say.

Japanese Shell City

SHANGHAI, May 18.—The Japanese destroyer Isuzu which was conveying Japanese Consul General Yada to Hankow, vigorously shelled a northern Chinese troop position at Chinkiang last night when hit by stray bullets, according to advices received here today.

The warcraft opened fire, throwing eight shells against the Chinese position. About a thousand rounds were fired from machine guns and small arms.

Chinese papers are full of protests against the American bombardment of Kiang-Yen. Many lives and much property were lost as a result of the shelling.

British Mistreat Russian Delegates

HANKOW, May 18.—After having been submitted to a rude examination at Kiukiang by an English officer accompanied by a Russian White guardist, most of the delegates of the Central Council of Trade Unions of Soviet Union have arrived here to attend the Pan-Pacific Labor Conference.

Even the notebooks of the delegates were examined.

MAD EMPEROR OF PHILIPPINES ON WOOD'S OWN SHIP

Kept Silent As Peasant Revolt Blamed on Him

MANILA, May 18.—The so-called "mad emperor," Flor Intrenchenadero is at present travelling about on the official yacht of Governor General Leonard Wood.

The Philippine government has been making this man the key-note in their stories of the uprising of the harrassed peasantry of Ilollo and the provinces of Occidental Negros and Vosayan provinces.

It is alleged by General Wood's publicity experts that the bitter resentment of the agriculturists in these provinces is merely religions or superstitious fanaticism, caused by the "mad emperor."

Yesterday it was reported that several hundred agrarian leaders had been arrested and charged with being followers of Intrenchenadero.

The "mad emperor" himself is something of a mystery, but he appears from his own statements before being held incommunicado on the government yacht to have had nothing or little to do with the peasant uprising.

Austrian Labor to Meet Cordial Reception This Summer in Soviet Union

MOSCOW, May 18.—Replying to the letter of the Austrian Unity Committee in regard to the wish of Austrian workers to send a second labor delegation to the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, the All Union Central Council of Trade Unions has expressed full willingness to see Austrian labor delegates in the U. S. S. R. this summer. The Central Council also sent invitations to the Unity Committee of Czecho-Slovakia.

LOUISIANA MADE INTO GREAT LAKE BY FLOOD SPREAD

Hoover Watches Keenly Chance to Lend Money

BATON ROUGE, May 18.—The sprawling flood waters of the Mississippi joined today with the Atchafalaya backwater pushing northward from the Grand Lake to complete the formation of a great inland sea blanketing 7,000 square miles of Central Louisiana from the Arkansas border to the Gulf of Mexico.

Hoover Looks It Over

As the last exiles from the Bayou region were carried away today, Secretary of Commerce Hoover, his headquarters temporarily established on the flagship of the coast guard fleet in the Old River, directed the shifting of the rescue base from that region to Baton Rouge.

Secretary Hoover has been extremely active since the certainty that the flood would result in widespread damage to crops and farm property in the South, organizing the local bankers and business men into "relief associations" which will obtain money from the United States government and the states to lend on mortgages to the ruined farmers. Arden appeals from the farmers for direct remuneration for damage done thru what is, after all, the failure of the government to properly care for the Mississippi and prevent floods, has been soft pedaled by Hoover and his associates on President Coolidge's cabinet.

Coolidge frequently repeats his announcement to the public that there will not be any special session of Congress to consider flood relief. There is constant agitation for a special session from Southern congressmen

McFadden Act Bringing Millions Profit

Bankers, reaping a rich harvest of millions in the financial jugglery attending mergers and consolidations, celebrated the McFadden banking law yesterday with announcements of two mergers and one extension.

The Central Mercantile and the Chelsea Exchange are to be consolidated in a $75,000,000 bank. The Interstate Trust, of which former Governor Silzer of New Jersey is the sponsor, gobbles up the Franklin National. The Manufacturers Trust has taken over the First National Bank of Hempstead, L. I.

Bank stocks soared gaily on the merger wave with first National stock selling at $3,000 a share. Stocks of several banks have swelled in value from 50 to 100 per cent in the last 30 days.

The provisions of the new McFadden act, permitting mergers, increased earnings and enlarged operations are held responsible. The McFadden act was pushed through the last congress by Vice President Dawes and other agents of the banking ring as a companion measure to the famous Mc-Nary-Haugen farm "relief" bill.

Farmers Lose On Deal.

The congressmen from the farm districts saved their constituents with the excuse that they could not have passed the farm relief bill without approving a trade with the bank bill supporters. President Coolidge the famous McNary-Haugen farm bill and signed the bank act.

As a result holders of bank stocks, including the very core of America's imperialists, have seen their fortunes inflated from 10 to 100 per cent in the short space of three months.

...ON EXPOSURE OF INSURANCE GRAFT

PREVIOUS EVENTS OF INSURANCE EXPOSE.

The DAILY WORKER forwards complete documents of the fraudulent methods employed by the "Big Four" who are the Metropolitan, Prudential, John Hancock and the Colonial Life Insurance Companies.

In this series it is charged that these companies who monopolize the entire industrial life insurance business are guilty of fraud, misuse of "workers'" funds, misappropriation by policyholders' money and subornation, to perjury.

On April 27th Governor Smith ordered Superintendent of Insurance James A. Beha to make inquiries into the charges contained in the Harrison articles.

So far the official apologist for the insurance companies has not submitted his report. The expose has caused something resembling panic in insurance circles, it affects upwards of 40,000,000 American policyholders.

By CHARLES YALE HARRISON.

GOVERNOR ALFRED E. SMITH,
Executive Chambers, Albany, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

It is now nearly three weeks since you have instructed Superintendent of Insurance James A. Beha to make inquiries into the charges embodied in The DAILY WORKER industrial insurance exposure.

During this time Daniel F. Gordon, Beha's assistant has written to the Worker pointing out that one of its charges are correct but was due to an "error" in printing. Mr. Beha himself has not deemed it worthy of his attention to reply to the serious charges of fraud and misuse of "mutual" funds on the part of the so-called "Big Four."

What About Misrepresentation"

As you are aware, among the many charges adduced in this series of articles, is one that the directorates of this enormous combine do not represent the interests of the 40 million policyholders who are members of the companies involved.

We refer especially to the fact that Frederick H. Ecker, vice president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance of his association with the the Chase National Bank in which over 20 million dollars of Metropolitan funds are always on deposit.

Law Broken.

Mr. Ecker is also the director of a chain of railroads in whose securities tens of millions of Metropolitan funds are invested. This is in violation of the Insurance Laws of 1909.

We therefore ask that you instruct Superintendent of Insurance James A. Beha to remove Ecker forthwith from his position with the Metropolitan and to make such inquiries as will result in further removals among other officials as the facts may warrant.

We ask that you order Beha to remove Charles M. Schwab from the directorate of the Metropolitan because of this association with the Chase National Bank which is also in violation of the Insurance Laws

Here's Another.

We ask you to order your appointee Beha to instruct the officers of the Metropolitan Life that the presence of Henry Ollesheimer, president of the Chase National Bank, on the Metropolitan directorate, is illegal and contrary to the intrests of the 26 million Metropolitan policyholders, and that he should therefore be removed immediately.

We have charged that the whole institution of weekly payment life insurance is alive with overcharging, evnical rulings, harsh policy conditions and fraudulent elections of directors. We have adduced evidence to support our charges. We have quoted Beha's document to substantiate our charges.

The five thousand industrial agents in the city of New York will testify that there are tens of thousands of policyholders of the "Big Four" who are clamoring for a legislative investigation into the evils of this gigantic swindle.

Agent's Wage Slavery.

Due to the merciless system of wages undar which these agents work this expose has caused them loss of remuneration. They are anxious to have you look into their working conditions and render their lot less unendurable.

We have submitted facts and figures to Mr. Beha, quoting his report to the New York Sate Legislature, proving that more than 75% of all weekly payment life insurance policies lapse before they have accumulated a cash vadlue. Under the present law the "Big Four" (with the exception of the John Hancock) are permitted to forfeit all deposits on policies until they have been paid on for ten full years.

Insured For Three Years.

In view of the fact that the average life of a weekly payment life insurance policy is less than three years the "Big Four" makes tens of millions of dollars annually in this respect. We ask that you instruct Mr. Beha to submit statistical data showing why the John Hancock a Massachusetts company can allow a five year surrender clause while the New York and New Jersey companies insist on a ten year clause.

In spite of the widespread interest which this series of articles has provoked and in spite of the popular demand for a legislative investigation your superintendent has remained silent.

In the interim between your letter to him and this day he has made no serious effort to call the officers and directors of the "Big Four" to task. By this silence he stands self-convicted of being partial to and under the influence of the companies under attack.

Appoint A Committee.

We urge you, in the face of the seriousness of the expose to order the creation of a legislative investigating committee into the charges made in The DAILY WORKER. We ask that such a committee conduct its investigation through public sessions where policyholders may be heard and the publication of its findings at the earliest possible moment.

We are sure that the findings of such a committee will substantiate the charges made in this series and will result in much needed corrective legislation.

The "Big Four" in the face of this attack have remained silent. Thousands of their policyholders have refused to have further dealings with them and have withdrawn their membership. These companies calculate that it will be much to their advantage to sulk in silence until the wave of public indignation blows over.

We urge that you drive the "Big Four" out into the open.

Explanation of "Big Four" Agents to Be Exposed in New Series May 23

A series of ten articles exposing the swindling of industrial insurance agents by the "Big Four" will commence in the DAILY WORKER, Monday May 23rd and daily thereafter.

The series will be by Charles Yale Harrison and will deal with the exploitation of agents. The articles are being published at the request of thousands of agents who have written to the DAILY WORKER asking that the paper espouse their cause also.

Be sure and see that your own insurance agent gets the first article!

172 Families Periled By Collapse of Wall

The lower end of the High Bridge section of the Bronx was thrown into a panic yesterday by a roar, taken as the approach of an earthquake, when a retaining wall 150 feet wide and 150 feet high collapsed in the rear of a five-story apartment house, which runs from 1038 to 1052 on Anderson avenue.

The 172 families residing in the apartment house awoke to find the walls of their rooms cracked, doors warped, and in many cases the floor sunken a few inches dna to the sudden slipping away of the retaining wall.

Polish Reactionaries Plot Bomb Outrages on Each Other; Jail Many

LONDON, May 18.—Numerous arrests have been made today following the disclosure of a plot to depose, and possibly assassinate, President Pilsudski, according to a Central News dispatch from Warsaw.

Premises of the very conservative "National Democratic Organization" of Poland were raided by police, the dispatch states. Laboratories for the manufacture of bombs were discovered.

Police accuse General Haller and other leaders of being implicated, it is stated.

DEEP BENEATH THE WATERS LIES THIS ONCE HAPPY TOWN

Whole towns have all but disappeared beneath the unprecedented flood tide of the Mississippi river and its lower tibutaries in what has been termed "America's greatest disaster." Here is an airplane view of Rolling Fork, Miss., the river here having become a virtual sea, with nothing but tree tops and house tops and an occasional hill to indicate where once was dry land. A strip of dry levee also remains.

an amendment to its appropriation bill a measure sponsored by Senator Francis G. Newlands, of Nevada, providing $250,000 for an investigation of the issue of flood control methods by an independent commission. A year later he died and the gang promptly put an end to the investigation by repealing the provision in their new handout bill.

Since that time there have been two great floods, one greater than the previous, and still the stolid army engineers under the careful management and guidance of crooked politicians, big and little, have gone on building higher and highar levees, only to see them overtopped, undermined at each succeeding flood; or where they did hold to have been compelled to blow them up so as to provide outlets for the raging waters.

Hoover Backs Gang.

When the subject is gone into, the investigator doubts his own observations. The facts seem so palpably impossible. And yet, not only are they actually realities, but the Holy Bull of Business, Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, alleged engineering authority, has issued a ukase hauling the "levees only" idea unto the skies and chiding and denouncing as "visionary" all other plans, including the independent commission investigation proposal.

The reason, politics. And this time, national politics. Mr. Hoover knows better, but the political fate of his good friend and chief, Mr. Coolidge may be involved and the Republican politicians are taking no chances on further scandals—they have had enough.

The first federal appropriation for levees in the Mississippi River Valley came in 1789 following the then record-breaking flood. Since that time the United States government has laid out $86,000,000, local communities $15,000,000 in cash and right of ways, and states and counties along the river over $100,000,000. All this money has gone into building a long line of levees from Cairo, Illinois to the Gulf of Mexico. And every few years or so, the mighty Mississippi, gorged by spring rains and snows from its hundreds of tributaries, has risen and crumbled these walls. In places where they held, the implacable river has gone over them. For, as a matter of fact, the higher the levees go the higher the bed of the stream rises.

The Mississippi is an alluvial river. Its water carries billions of tons of sediment. It is a sluggish stream. It takes weeks for the rest of a flood to reach a given point. So that if the stream is confined within two walls, then these walls have to be raised continually. The stream does not bore a channel, it drops its load of mud and rises on it.

Don't Want to Learn

And yet this simple, obvious fact seems to have been totally disregarded by the all-wise engineers and the mighty Mr. Hoover who have advocated the "levees only" system and are now so excitedly defending it. The "levees only" or as it is designated by engineers, the "confinement" system as a matter of fact seems to fly in the face of all reason. It calls for a damning up all auxillary mouths of the river, confining it to a long line of levees, all on the theory that the stream will enlargen and deepen its channel sufficiently to carry the burden of a flood. The fact that as long as man knows it has not done so, and that despite the most scientific levee building in the past 47 years and the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars the river has not been persuaded to do so, has had no effect on Mr. Hoover or his hirelings, the army engineers.

More Graft in Sight.

They propose, if they can get away with it, to reanme levee building, only this time on a vaster and more ambitious scale. Of course its going to cost tens of millions, but then as Mr. Hoover says this is a national calamity and the great generous American public stands ready to be mulcted for more "pork." He has already announced, and President Coolidge has echoed with enthusiasm, that a flood control program will be prepared for the next Congress calling for greater and nobler levees. To call a session of Congress now, to deal with the problem while it is before the nation, when the need is vast, is a program Mr. Coolidge will not lend himself to.

Refuses Special Session.

"It's politics," he declares. Not that he objects to politics, but it is not the kind he approves of and so he proposes waiting until he can have things somewhat under his control. He does not, at this time, face the damning facts of wholesale graft in the levee building program while thousands are made destitute and hundreds perish before the onlosh of the raging torrents of the Mississippi.

General charging that on April 22, a British soldier forcibly entered a Chinese residence in Shanghai and raped a maid-servant. The protest states the name of the woman, the name of her employer, and the address of the house. It also asserts: "A foreign constable was called but he deliberately let the soldier go."

The protest further states that the police subsequently caused the woman to be given medical treatment at a hospital where they were informed by the hospital staff that the woman had been raped and otherwise injured. The note demands that the soldier be court-martialed, with a representative from the office of the Commissaion or of Foreign Affairs present as an observer.

to the Soviet interests connected with the activities of Arcos by compromising the latter and creating around it an atmosphere of want of confidence and hostility. From this viewpoint the Soviet Government feels it has the right to protest against the raid.

"If the British can sustain their formal rights with regard to Arcos, there cannot exist the least doubt that the violent irruption of police into the premises of the Trade Delegation and the acts they committed there were a flagrant violation of the 1921 agreement.

"According to the fifth article of that agreement the Soviet Republic is granted the right to use cipher correspondence. It follows that such correspondence, as well as the ciphers themselves, may by no means be examined by the agents of other States, or any outside persons without the special consent of the chief of the Trade Delegation.

Jeopardize Relations

"If the same article grants an official agent the right to receive, on the strength of diplomatic immunity, through special couriers, sealed packets, it is self-evident that the contents of these packets are immune.

"Two officials, M. Miller and M. Iludiakoff, who protested against the illegal demands of the police, were subjected to violence, even beaten, while the wife of the interim Charge d'Affaires of the U. S. S. R., who was on the premises and has a diplomatic passport, was violently detained and searched.

Raid Unrelied-For

"The absolutely uncalled-for raid on a Government institution of another State, apart from the question of treaty rights belonging to it, is a most serious and hostile act, without doubt jeopardizing the further preservation of relations between the interested States, with all the ensuing consequences.

"The fact that the Trade Delegation by its activity gave no justification for such a raid can be proved by the circumstance that the British Government has not made a single representation or complaint about this activity."

Laborites Demand Explanation

LONDON, May 18.—There were several tense scenes in the House of Commons this afternoon, owing to the insistance of Laborites in demanding to know why Sir Austen Chamberlain, Foreign Minister, had refused to receive the Soviet Charge, M. Rosengoltz, on the night the police raided the Soviet Trade Delegation.

The speaker finally restored order, asking the Laborites to save their questions until Sir William Johnson-Hicks, Home Minister, makes his statement tomorrow on the raid.

Building Wages Level

WASHINGTON, (FP).—Wages in the building industry remain virtually at the level of the past three years, while prices of building materials also tend to stability, according to the chart issued by the Associated General Contractors of America from their Washington headquarters. There was no perceptible change in building wages in February, March or April, on the average of reports from all regions of the country. This three-month level is slightly higher than the average of building wages in any month in the past three years except in May, 1926.

Foil the Bloodhounds of Capitalism

A ruling class in danger of extinction is compelled to employ its trained bloodhounds to ferret out and destroy the chief sources of discontent and rebellion against oppression. In some cases this service is done by police agents. In the case of The DAILY WORKER, the initiative has been taken by certain professional patriots.

The prize is a big one. The DAILY WORKER has already made itself felt as a sharp thorn in the side of the American capitalist class. Its frank exposures of the loathsome conditions under which capitalism exploits its slaves has won for The DAILY WORKER the undying hatred of the capitalist class and the ceaseless espionage of its ruthless bloodhounds. The DAILY WORKER has lifted the veil upon capitalist corruption. It is mobilizing the workers, it is helping to organize them, to abolish the present hateful system. If the capitalist class succeeds in destroying this powerful weapon of the working class, The DAILY WORKER, it will be a momentous victory for them and a costly defeat for the workers.

There is only one way to fight this attack. That is through the solidified support of the workers throughout the country. Wolves and similar beasts of prey are loath to attack large groups. The bloodhounds of capitalism cringe in fear before the might of the masses. Now is the time to demonstrate our mass power in defense of our paper. Every contribution means another recruit to the great army defending The DAILY WORKER. You must join the ranks. You must do it now.

Palestine Workers Barred From Polls By Great Britain

JAFFA, Palestine, (By Mail).—For the first time since the British conquered Palestine in 1917-1918, Municipal Elections are to be held in that country. Hitherto municipalities in Palestine have been appointed and not elected, but in October the Government in Palestine did publish a Municipal Electoral Law. This law, however, is far from being democratic. No women have the vote which is reserved for males over the age of 25, who pay rates or taxes of not less than £1 a year. Candidates at Municipal Elections must be 30 years of age and pay rates or taxes to the value of not less than £2 a year.

The effect of these provisions in a poor country like Palestine is to restrict suffrage to the aristocracy, big merchants and landlords, while the workers and laborers do not enjoy the right to vote, with the result that in towns like Acre, Tiberias and Nazareth only about 15 per cent of the population have the franchise, while in Jerusalem, Jaffa and Haifa the percentage is lower still.

Requests which have been made to the Government of Palestine to place the franchise upon a broader basis have been refused. In Tel-Aviv the right has been secured for every inhabitant of the town who is 21 years of age and pays two shilling rates or taxes a year to vote at Municipal Elections. The working-class in other towns in Palestine demand that similar suffrage rights should be granted in all the towns of Palestine.

An appeal is accordingly addressed to the British working-class by more than 1,000 members of the Mamad Hapoalim (Workers' Class Club) for support in securing a wider democratic suffrage for the inhabitants of Palestine.

Over 100 Miners of Britain Still in Jail Under E.P.A.

LONDON, April 12. (By Mail).—More than 100 British miners are still in jail charged with violations of the "Emergency Powers Act." This in spite of the fact that the miners' lockout ended in November and the E. P. A. was lifted in December.

The majority of the convictions, many of them resulting in severe sentences, were obtained on the "trite charge of "disturbance" and "riotous assembly." In a large number of cases the only evidence submitted in court was given by local policemen.

Women Jailed

In South Wales 80 miners were sent to jail by the Glamorgan Assizes. Among them were included five women. One of them, a mother of six children, all of them under eight years, was given a 3-months' sentence.

According to a statement made in the House of Commons by Commander Hicks, a total of 7316 persons have been charged under the F. P. A. and over 1,000 have been imprisoned.

WHAT THE NATIONALIST GOVERNMENT OF CHINA HAS DONE FOR LAW REFORM

(From Hankow Peoples Tribune.)

In the past six months, since the establishment of the Nationalist government in Wuhang, unprecedented changes have been carried out to reorganize the Chinese courts and reform judicial practice in territory under Nationalist control.

In an interview with a representative of the "Tribune" recently, the work already accomplished by the ministry and the plan of reforms were explained.

The plan includes the establishment of the highest court of the Nationalist government in Wuchang, with a monthly allowance of not less than $10,000. The former supreme court in Canton is abolished and made a branch of the highest court which will be located at the former Wesley College, Wuchang.

The Canton branch of the highest court will have jurisdiction over Kwantung, Kweichow, Fuklen and Yunnan provinces.

Courts of Appeal have just been established in Hupeh, Hunan and Kwantung provinces, while organization commissions are making arrangements to form the Fukien, Kwangsi and Kiangsi Provincial Courts of Appeal. Proclamation has also been made to cease trying mixed cases in Chinese magistrates' offices. They will be handled by the Municipal Courts, unaccompanied by foreign assessors.

Aid Poor.

Although nominally all Chinese citizens have the right of using the courts, yet the heavy pressure of suitfiling and litigation fees often deprive the poor of their power of exercising their judicial privileges. In view of this unfair phenomenon, the ministry of justice has decided a 50 per cent decrease in litigation fees and a 60 per cent decrease in suit-filing, fees. In addition, a system of progressive rates governing civil cases is formulated to restrict unreasonable practices of the capitalists and to increase the revenue of the ministry.

Inheritance Law Changed.

As the old custom end law of inheritance in China was largely a relic of the feudal system and a constant cause of family and tribal controversy, the Ministry of Justice has enacted a new law limiting inheritance to the deceased person's own heirs. In case the deceased is heirless or leaves no will, his property shall be turned over to the government for educational purposes.

Penal Code.

In view of the necessity of strictly suppressing all counter-revolutionary activities when the Revolution is still going on, the Ministry of Justice has compiled and promulgated a penal code governing counter-revolutionary offenses. The code contains 17 articles.

Lawyer's Charges.

With regard to lawyer's fees, the Ministry of justice has issued an order forbidding any legal practitioner to obtain by extortion or other names remuneration other than what is granted in his contract with the client. Parties who make contracts with the intention to secure illegitimate consideration will be severely punished.

In accordance with Article 5 of the Judiciary Reform Act which was passed last November, the practice of assessors who will have the right of participation as to matters of law and fact shall be introduced in the civil cases. A code of 82 articles has been compiled by the Nationalist government to govern the practice of assessors.

All these changes are a part of a thorough plan of reform and reorganization. When the new codes and courts are in operation, China will have a judicial system that will compare favorably with any country of the West.

This work is being carried out under the direction of the Ministry of Justice, Mr. George Hsu Chien.

Rumanian Minister Spurns Complaints Of Jewish Torture

BALTIMORE, May 18 (FPP).—That the Rumanian minister at Washington had refused to receive a petition and protest against the atrocities committed against Jews in Rumania, was announced at a meeting of the Associated Rumanian Jews of Maryland, called in aid of their oppressed co-religionists in the home land. The envoy, it was stated, had replied to the petitioners that they were misled by Soviet propaganda.

Herman Speyer, executive secretary of the Rumanian Jews of America, charged that the present Bucharest government is directly responsible for "atrocities as terrible as those of Torquemada." Rabbi Rosenau of Baltimore said that Rumania alone, of the three countries which persecuted Jews before the world war, has not ceased these horrors. He declared that her actions violate not only the laws of humanity but the written terms of the Versailles treaty.

"We fought to make the world safe for democracy," was his bitter comment; "we seemingly have made it safe chiefly for demagogues."

Harder Times In Britain.

WASHINGTON.—(F P.)—Reports from its agent in London to the Department of Commerce show that there has been more short time working recently than usual, especially in coal mining; that the supply of coal is beyond demand; that the registered unemployed were 1,044,000 on April 25 as compared with 1,084,000 a year ago.

The War on the Chinese Liberation Movement Continues!

The Hankow government, the genuine expression of the Chinese liberation movement, is growing stronger each day by rallying to its support the masses of workers and peasants and the honest elements of the middle class.

This is now definitely established in spite of the daily predictions of the fall of Hankow made by the imperialist press correspondents.

Chiang Kai-shek has not been able to organize a complete cabinet and with the exception of the son of Wu Ting-fang, who has no following outside of the wealthier Chinese and their hangers-on, he has no outstanding supporters.

Wu's appeals so far have been to the imperialists and not to the masses. Chiang, by his wholesale murders of workers in Shanghai and other industrial centers (it is estimated that more than 2000 trade unionists were slain in Shanghai alone) has alienated all support of the labor unions. The peasant organizations, against which he has adopted the same murderous methods in behalf of his landlord following, are also united behind the Hankow government.

It is of the greatest significance that one of the reasons for General Feng's recent victories in the northwest was the support given him by the Red Armies—revolutionary peasant organizations.

The imperialists are trying to hold the Hankow government in check while Chiang consolidates his forces. But there has crept into even the inspired British dispatches in the last week or so a despairing note. Chiang's negotiations with imperialism are known to all of China and the attempt to force upon the Chinese liberation movement a choice between compromise with imperialism and closer relations with the labor unions and peasantry, has resulted in the isolation of the right wing from the masses.

Beginning with the intention of expelling and crushing the Communists and the left wing of the Kuomintang, Chiang has succeeded only in leading the capitalist and upper middle class elements out of the national liberation movement and leaving it in control of revolutionary leadership.

The policy of Chiang is a policy which the imperialists, with some reservations, can endorse. He and his followers ask for recognition of a nationalist government which will continue the horrible robbery of the Chinese masses with the Chinese capitalist and comprador class more firmly in the saddle.

It can be said that the traitorous slaughter by Chiang Kai-shek marks a new phase in the development of the Chinese revolution. The struggle which went on between classes in the labor unions now is in the open and the enemies of the Chinese masses who were able to cover up their treason to some extent while inside [illegible] are now clearly revealed as the foes of the masses.

Without the support of the masses Chiang Kai-shek would be overwhelmed quickly by the armies of the Hankow government. The battle ships and troops of America, Great Britain and Japan give him what strength he has. Defeated, he has been defeated and is now in the same position as the northern militarists with whom he is carrying on negotiations.

Withdrawal of all troops and battleships from China must be forced by the workers of Great Britain, America and Japan. Open warfare on the Chinese liberation movement has ceased temporarily only because the imperialists believe they have in Chiang Kai-shek a new counter-revolutionary hero who will do their fighting for them.

The moment this ultimate defeat becomes a certainty to the foreign offices there will be another onslaught against the Hankow government.

War is still being made against the Chinese liberation movement and we must see to [illegible] between two offensives.

Stop the war on China!

Withdraw all troops and battleships!

The Responsibility for the Flood.

One disaster follows another as the Mississippi waters burst at new points their graft-constructed levees and sweep before the rushing torrents thousands upon thousands of unfortunate human beings. This sort of thing is hardly unlooked for, and the blame rests entirely upon the shoulders of the United States government that has neglected in the most colossal manner the constructing of safe-guards for just such contingencies as the present holocaust.

Even in the face of wholesale devastation Calvin Coolidge refuses to call into session the seventy-th congress so that adequate appropriations may be made in order to [illegible] what atone to the flood sufferers, who are the victims of an organized cynical policy of graft and pilfering of government funds extending over a long period of years. He knows that a special session would dramatically place before the world the black record of American states men who enriched themselves through false levee construction at the sacrifice of the lives and near bankruptcy of the dwellers in the Mississippi bottoms.

Boasting its superiority over other nations we now have a condition in the mid-southern section of the United States that has no parallel anywhere on earth.

For century after century the annual rise in the waters of the Yangtze river in China has been controlled by a system of spillways that divert the waters from the main channel and let them travel through other courses to the sea. The Egyptians in the great Nile valley inaugurated a similar system that is still in vogue to this very day. In other parts of the United States the spillway system is in operation. But the inauguration of such a system here would not furnish such splendid advantages for perpetual graft as does the idiotic and unscientific attempt to confine the Mississippi to one channel. Once established, the maintenance of such a spillway system would require but a fraction of the money spent yearly to maintain the treacherous levees.

The forlorn victims of recurring Mississippi floods, if aware of the real cause of their distress, and of the criminals responsible for it would retire from office all those senators and representatives from their states who share in the [illegible] graft connected with appropriations for the [illegible] Corps of Engineers. The culprits are aided by the widespread prevalence in the South of the benighted doctrine of fundamentalism, which enables the ignorant preachers and priests solemnly to assure them that the recurrent floods are a visitation from heaven in order to test their faith in the all-highest. The dirty sermonising of the religionists supplements and justifies the plundering of the politicians.

Again we must emphasize the fact that the official bureaucracy of the labor movement in this country shares in the responsibility for this state of affairs, by persistently, in their role of lieutenants of the capitalist class, sabotaging every attempt on the part of the workers and farmers to create a class party of labor that would make issues of just such situations and force the government to take steps to remedy the appalling and totally preventable suffering on the part of the impoverished cotton growers of the lands bordering the river.

The Peasant Uprising in the Philippines.

The tremendous discontent among the Filipino peasantry, the result of continued exploitation, has expressed itself in a mass uprising for which the American imperialist press gives only a religious background.

It is well known to Marxists that agrarian revolts, both in Europe and colonial countries, and including even the earlier upsurges among the American farming population, have always had a strong religious tinge but that their causes can not be found in this fact.

There is a sad lack of data on the economic and social status of the millions of Filipino plantation workers and the sponsors of the movement for Filipino independence, almost exclusively middle class in origin and outlook, have contributed little to enlightenment on this important subject.

The revolt of some 400,000 Filipino peasants therefore appears as a thing apart from the independence movement. Actually it's a powerful proof that there exists a mass basis for the independence movement which its middle class leaders have neglected entirely—preferring to make their appeal on abstract grounds of justice, humanity, American tradition, etc.

Nor can the influence of the Chinese liberation movement be discounted in estimating the social forces involved in the Filipino uprising. The fact that, according to dispatches, the utterances of Senator Wheeler, now on a visit to the Philippines, relative to independence and freedom were connected immediately with their struggle by the masses is further evidence that this is not simply a movement of religious fanatics but that it has its roots deep in the suppressed status of these agricultural workers, who have heard of the slogans of the Chinese revolution.

For our party and the American working class the striking developments in the Philippines are a signal that there exists in this colony of American imperialism the same forces which have challenged imperialism in China and Indonesia—an army of workers and peasants which must be made the real base of the Filipino independence movement, which will give it a tremendous driving power and link it up with the colonial liberation movements of the world.

What's What in Washington

ATTEMPT POWER GRAB AT NATION'S CAPITAL

By LAURENCE TODD.

WASHINGTON, (FP). — Power trust arrogance has outdone itself, in the opinion of public-ownership advocates, in the application by the Bylleses, by branch of the power combine for a preliminary permit to harness the Great Falls of the Potomac, at the very door of the national capital.

Three times the senate has adopted the Norris bill providing for construction of a great power dam at this site by the federal government. The republican machine in the house has killed it, under the guidance from the power trust lobbyists. Now the case itself goes before the federal power commission, while congress is in recess, and demands the site.

Cost Not Excessive.

Under the Norris plan, based on repeated and careful studies by government engineers, a power dam costing from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 could be constructed at the Great Falls, and from it could be developed sufficient power to light the city and operate all machinery now in use in the District of Columbia.

This electric current could be sold at the plant for half a cent per kilowatt hour. It could be delivered to consumers in private homes at less than 3 cents. The rates charged by the local company for many years were 10 cents to the householder, until a public utilities commission reduced them to 7 1-2 cents. This electricity is produced in steam plants.

General Electric In It.

The Bylleshy application is made under the name of the Potomac River Corporation, in which H. M. Bylleshy & Co. of Chicago—one of the important "independents" actually controlled by the General Electric group—has a one-half interest. Robert Bulkley of Cleveland is president of the Potomac River Corporation, which talks of a $55,000,000 development, involving a possible 300,000 horsepower. Its application was submitted by Col Charles Keller, a former army engineer and district commissioner, who is now a Bylleshy agent.

Citizens Object.

The incident adds to the long list of reasons for bringing congress back to Washington in special session.

Citizens' associations in the capital, however, are taking action to persuade the federal power commission that no preliminary permit to the applicant should be considered. They look upon this move as a threat, if not the actual deathknell, to all future reductions in rates for electricity in this region. They favor government ownership and government distribution of electricity because they expect to get the rate down, by that means, to 3 cents or less.

Pennsylvania Labor Party Plans Strong Fight in Campaigns

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 18.—The state labor party, at a conference here following the adjournment of the State Federation of Labor convention, laid plans for a continuous campaign of political education among the Pennsylvania workers.

Charles Kutz of Altoona, was elected chairman, Charles Oyler of this city secretary and James Kelley of Lykens, treasurer.

The 20,000 miners of District 2, U.M.W.A., in Central Pennsylvania, reaffirmed their support of the party at their recent convention. Local unions were instructed to organize labor party units where none existed.

The Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, through its president, James Maurer, has also been very friendly to the labor party.

Opening of Fifth Summer Season of Camp Nitgedaiget

At its opening for the fifth summer season which will take place on Decoration Day week-end, May 28th, 29th and 30th, Camp Nitgedaiget will have such new and attractive improvements as: a new auditorium that has a capacity of a thousand seats, new swimming pool that is six times as large as the old one; a new comfort house with hot and cold showers close to the tents, a new athletic field for all sport activities as tennis, football, base ball and other kind of gymnastics.

The preparations for educational work for the summer season are in full progress. This work, because of its experiences, will excel all the previous activities.

Registration for Decoration Day week-end will be open for members of the United Workers Co-operative Ass'n on Thursday, May 19th, till Monday, May 23rd.

Registration for those who are not members of the Co-operative will start on May 23rd.

The camp will not accommodate those who are not registered.

A very elaborate program is being prepared for Decoration Day week-end. The opening will be celebrated with a ball, concert, and representatives of the Co-operative as well as of the Progressive Labor movement will be the speakers. The members of the United Workers Co-operative Ass'n should not miss this celebration and therefore should register as early as possible. Officially the Camp is open already for the summer season and more than a hundred campers are there weekly.

Letters From Our Readers

To the Editor, The Daily Worker:

I believe that hundreds of the readers of our paper should accept the invitation of The DAILY WORKER to express their opinions on various current subjects, especially in view of the fact that it is the only medium which we have that aids the workers' struggles from day to day.

I was pleased to notice that the DAILY WORKER will soon publish a series of articles on "The Negro in American Life." You are to be congratulated on your effort in this direction. We must prove to these racially and economically persecuted workers that we are their only friends. And this we must do by our own loyalty and honesty to their interests.

Comradely yours, Charles W. Fulp, Primrose, Washington County, Pa.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

Editor, The Daily Worker:

As an American born citizen, 37 years of age, I desire to add my protest against the execution of two innocent men,—Sacco and Vanzetti. I am convinced that they are the victims of a frame-up, and in the name of decency and justice should be freed.

I used to feel rather proud of our institutions, when I could see justice meted out to each and everyone alike, but of recent years I am forced to confess that there has been a large number of decisions handed down (and this is one of them) that has given cause for much dissension and the result of which has to a very large degree, produced all kinds of agitation and unrest.

The pages of all history are besmirched with innocent blood, and this condition must not continue. I earnestly hope that the state of Massachusetts will not permit itself to use the blood of these innocent men to write another page in its history.—F. G. Van Gosen, Port Lauderdale, Florida.

Broadway Briefs

Brady and Wiman in association with John Tuerk will produce next season Herman Bernstein's translation of "The Conquered Sex Love" by Rudolph Lothar and Fritz Gottwald. Another play listed for early showing is "Women Go On Forever" by Daniel N. Rubin (which Brady and Wiman will present in association with John Cromwell.

Etienne Girardot, the original "Charley's Aunt," will play in "Merry-Go-Round," the revue which will open at the Klaw theatre, May 31st. Francis Gershwin, a sister of George will also be in the new Herndon production.

"Padlocks of 1927," the Texas Guinan revue, is slated for the Shubert theatre beginning June 6th. In addition to Miss Guinan, the cast will include Helen Shipman, Bobby Watson, Connie Almy, Jana and Whelan and Bert Hanlon.

"Fog," the mystery play by John Willard, author of "The Cat and the Canary," which was last at the National theatre will come to the Bronx Opera House on Monday.

The Grove Street theatre is housing two biblical dramas this week, sponsored by A. Winfield Hoeny. The plays are "David and Bath-Sheba," and "The Death of Judas" both by Sally Bruce Kinsolving.

The final production of the Neighborhood Playhouse, "The Grand Street Follies of 1927," will open tonight at their intimate theatre on Grand Street. This marks the closing of the long and often brilliant career of this interesting group—for they end their work on the East Side in two weeks.

The Central Park Association, which is interested in the restoration of Central Park, will receive the entire receipts of the 6th year performance of "Abie's Irish Rose" at the Republic Theatre, next Tuesday night.

Clare Eames will direct a play for the Civic Repertory Company next season, "Invitation au Voyage," by Jean Jacques Bernard. She will not act in it however.

First National will star Colleen Moore "In Lilac Time," adapted from Jane Cowl's vehicle, written by Miss Cowl and Jane Murfin.

John Gilbert will be starred in "Twelve Miles Out," adapted from the melodrama seen here last season. Jean Crawford, Ernest Torrence and Betty Compson will be in the support cast.

The Moscow Theatre Habima will make its farewell American appearance, at the Century Theatre tomorrow evening with a program of single acts from its repertory. The organization has been trouping in the big cities.

VIVIENNE SEGAL

100 FUR WORKERS SCORE FASCISM OF UNION CZARS

Demand Reinstatement of New York Locals

A set of eight demands has been formulated by a "Committee of One Hundred" for Workers Control and Registration," and leaflets embodying it are issued yesterday to all members of the furriers' union.

Those workers who were forced to register, "stripped a "telegram protest against the fascist methods employed by the repudiated officials of the International Fur Workers' Union," and state that they are still loyal and devoted to the Joint Board.

The registered fur workers demand:

1.—That the New York Joint Board and its Locals 1, 5, 10 and 15 should immediately be reinstated into the International Fur Workers' Union.

2.—That the scab union on 27th street should at once be closed.

3.—The immediate reinstatement of the Newark Local 25, and the expelled active fur workers in Chicago.

4.—That the policy of expelling members on account of political convictions and affiliations be abandoned.

5.—An aggressive struggle against the manufacturers in order to defend and maintain our union conditions.

6.—Increases in our wages.

7.—Democratic elections of delegates to the coming convention under the supervision of the Civil Liberties Union.

8.—Unity in the International.

"In the event that the above demands are not granted by the International, we call upon the Joint Board to organize and mobilize all forces of the union, and to declare an open struggle against the enemies of our union."

Union Autocrats.

The registered workers point out the fact that the present International officials are actually "self-imposed dictators," because they were elected to serve only until May 1927; yet they have failed to call a convention and continue themselves in office without authorization.

Yet the A. F. of L. makes no protest about this illegal action, just as it made no protest against all the corruption of the Kaufman regime, says the statement of the registered workers. "It is only against the Joint Board that the "arch-traitors and betrayers" have moved—"now after we have liberated ourselves from the regime of gangsterism and graft; now that we have built up a clean and strong organization and have fought for and won the 40-hour week, and have generally raised our standards of living."

"We demand our rights and our freedom! Stop breaking our union!"

MASS PICKETING OF BARBERS HAS BOSSES SCARED

The Master Barbers' Association of the Bronx is weakening as a result of two days of mass picketing on the part of Barbers' Union, Local 560, that called a strike of all the barbers and beauty parlor workers of the Bronx on Monday morning.

A motion that separate agreements be signed with individual bosses was shouted down by a crowded meeting of strikers held Tuesday afternoon at McKinley Square Gardens, 1323 Boston Road. The opinion of the assembled workers was to continue on strike together and return to work as one. The proposal was that the returning workers donate two days' pay a week as long as the strike lasted.

Among the few barbers' shops that is attempting to continue in defiance of the strike is Tamoulin, 170 Jerome Ave. The DAILY WORKER has received an unconfirmed report of picksts being attacked at an Italian barber shop in the Bronx when they asked the workers to join the strike.

According to an arrangement with the union, when a barber shop has two bosses they can divide the work among them, one working in the morning and the other in the afternoon. Since the strike started, the union has been informed of many cases where both bosses are working at the same time. Arrangements are being made to picket these shops.

There were six arrests Tuesday on the picket line, four men and two girls being taken to court and released on bail. Strike leaders reported that more than 50 girls joined Local 560 during the day, and many more recruits are expected as interest and enthusiasm grows.

Postpone Kushner Case to Thursday

Matthew Kushner may know Thursday what the United States and the courts intend to do with him. On the other hand, he may not. For two weeks his case has been dragging through the courts here although his crime consisted in handing out "Hands Off China" leaflets preceding the great protest demonstration held recently in Union Square.

Young Kushner, a member of the Young Workers' League, appeared before Judge Vitelli in district court on 57th St. Tuesday and told the story of his arrest. He declared a policeman ordered him to move on while he was distributing the leaflets.

But he continued giving out the leaflets, to the enragement of the cop, who pushed him roughly and finally placed him under arrest.

Sent to Tombs

Judge Vitalli questioned Kushner closely regarding his entry into the United States six years ago and his use of the surname adopted by his brother. Later he decided to postpone judgment until Thursday "to look into the records" while Kushner was sent to the Tombs.

Bail of $1000, put up by the International Labor Defense, was not returned.

Joseph Brodsky represented Kushner.

Convention of Mexican Women to be Held Soon; Rouses Great Interest

MEXICO CITY, May 18.—Feminist organizations of Mexico are arranging for the coming convention when groups of women thruout the Republic will gather to discuss their problems and woman's position in the social life of the community. The Congress is awakening wide interest and proving a valuable incentive in furthering the woman's movement in Mexico.

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL COUNCIL MEETS TO PLOT AGAINST LABOR

Sounding the battle cry of "industrial freedom of employers" against trade unions, the National Industrial Council is meeting in 19th semi-annual convention at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

The political arm of the National Association of Manufacturers, the Council runs the gamut of open shop activities from operating lobbies to "educating wage-earners" in the correct economics. Tuesday it heard A. C. Ross of Salt Lake, secretary of the Utah Associated Industries, tell about the "Open Shop in the West."

Ross is chairman of the American Plan Open Shop Conference, a national organization strong among bosses' organizations in the South and West. The Conference has been holding semi-annual conventions since 1922, the last one being in Dallas last November.

The National Industrial Council itself dates from before the war and was formerly known as the National Council for Industrial Defense. Its purposes are to maintain lobbies in the State and national legislatures to fight trade unionism, to maintain information services for employers on labor questions and to agitate against "class legislation" such as workmen's compensation.

Between 3000 and 400 employers' and manufacturers' associations and chambers of commerce support the Council in its anti-labor work, according to Robert W. Dunn, whose studies in company unionism, labor espionage and employers' associations have led him across the Council's trails in many of labor's political and industrial struggles.

Rees, according to Dunn, specializes in the "protection of the schools from trade union influences." "Subversive influences" such as the Teachers' and Janitors' Unions he fights vigorously, keeping an eye all the while on textbooks to see that liberal professors do not introduce references which might aid labor's cause.

Hits Social Legislation

James A. Emery, counsel to the National Association of Manufacturers, pleaded for a reduction of governmental taxation as the most direct method of defeating moves toward social legislation.

He sounded the tocsin of alarm against labor efforts to legalize strike and picket activities. Referring to the recent Supreme Court decision crippling the Stone Cutters in their fight on scab stone, he declared that the employers had won a smashing victory which nothing less than an amendment to the constitution would nullify.

The decision of the court, Emery told his fellow-open shoppers, is a body blow at trade unions and efforts to maintain the open closed shop.

Only 750,000

Noel Sargent, manager of the industrial relations department of the N. A. M., declared there were "only" 750,000 child labor slaves in the country instead of 2,000,000. Other speakers were William H. Thompson, former officer of the reactionary national grange, Henry Herbert Lewis, executive director of Better Understanding Between Agriculture and Industry, an open shop effort to fight the farmer-labor alliance; George F. Kull, secretary of the Western Manufacturers' Association, and Benjamin F. Gleaves, executive secretary of the Associated Industries of Maine.

Judge Resalsky to Sentence Worker in Mystery Case

For reasons known only to Judge Otto Resalsky, who has sent so many cleanbreasts to prison, Max Greenstein, who is now on probation, was called to court Tuesday, and told that he would be sentenced on June 27th.

He has no idea for what he is to be sentenced. He has not in any way violated his parole, and he was not charged with any new crime.

June 27th was also set for the sentencing of Louis Antonofsky, now under bail of $15,000, on a framed-up charge of assault. He, too, was on parole until he was arrested several months ago in connection with the case fixed up by the right wing scab, Morris Katz, on which he was acquitted by a jury in the Bronx County Court three weeks ago. Judge Resalsky, when he heard of this unproved charge against Antonofsky, summoned him to court and accused him of violating his parole. He was released on bail to await the outcome of the Bronx trial. It was understood that if Antonofsky was acquitted—as he has been—the bail would be removed and he would return to his parole status.

Any Old Excuse

Now Judge Resalsky claims he has to investigate the outcome of this trial, which was a public matter, and was settled long ago.

In Jefferson Market Court yesterday, Magistrate Silverman dismissed H. Turck and M. Sundberg, arrested while picketing the Fishelberg shop from which Turck was discharged for refusing to register with the Sigman clique of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union. The judge once again emphasized the fact that peaceful picketing is perfectly lawful, and is no cause for arrest or interference by the police.

10-Year Jail Term for Theft of 5 Cents; Oil Men Steal Big, Go Free

LOS ANGELES, May 18.—Norman Cooper, a circus "barker," snatched a purse which contained only 5 cents from Mrs. Jennie Northrup. He now faces a ten-year term in San Quentin, reports stated recently.

Edward L. Doheny "snatched" illegal oil leases and contracts from the United States government in 1923. A jury of patriots found him not guilty, however, a couple of months or so ago.

On Tuesday, May 10, Federal Judge F. J. McCormick ordered the oil king to return to his beloved country the sum of $13,009,507 and 80 cents for good measure.

"Justice" will now permit Cooper to escape the rail-hole of San Quentin by returning to Mrs. Northrup her five cents—the price of "coffee and" in a Jap soup-joint.

Wages Low

Wages of circus workers in "prosperous" California are said to be as low as $8 a week, so they are forced to steal in one form or the other, according to Carl E. Hummel and others of this city, in order to live. Cooper was undoubtedly hungry at the time of the theft.

LAUNDRY CHIEF ATTACKS DRIVER HELPING UNION

Attacked by the president of the Laundry Owners' Association, Max Freeman, a union driver for the Ready Laundry Service planned yesterday to swear out a warrant for assault.

Freeman declares he was attacked by Adolph Lewes, the association's head and several pluguglies while on his route. His offense evidently was in loyalty to the Laundry Drivers' Union, which is involved in a hot strike against the North American Laundry in Harlem. Freeman had asked housewives to patronize union laundries only, arousing Lowe's ho tility.

That the North American strike is a test of strength between the union and the bosses was the belief expressed yesterday by Max Brodie, business agent of Laundry Drivers' Local 810. Although the agreement did not expire until June 11, the boss began firing union men without consent to the machinery provided in the contract.

When it became apparent that the North American was intent on destroying the union, a strike was declared. The Negro laundry workers walked out with the white drivers. Twenty-one drivers and 23 women are involved. Other contracts expire in the near future and the laundry drivers are preparing for possible strikes on a city wide scale. Freeman will appear in magistrate's court today on a picketing charge while several other union members face trial in special sessions.

The bosses are making use of labor strike-breaking agencies, Brodie charges. Before the strike, several known strike-breakers tried to get employment at the union, in preparation evidently for the walkout. Refused admission, they were rushed into service as soon as the regular drivers struck.

Effort to Deport Italian Worker in U. S. 3 Years

The rights of seamen, as well as the integrity of United States laws, are not at stake in the case of Mauro La Russo, who is being threatened with deportation because he is an anti-fascist.

La Russo who entered as a seaman, has been in this country more than three years, and the law says no alien who has been here more than three years can be deported for unlawful entry. Technically he cannot be deported for being opposed to Mussolini, but that is really what the authorities are trying to do.

When his case came to court, the judge ordered that the writ be sustained releasing him. However, the United States government has taken an appeal, and the case will be argued some time this month in a further effort to send him back to Italy.

Test Case

Isaac Shorr is defending La Russo, and he points out that if the government should succeed in this deportation case no seaman who has remained in this country would be safe, in spite of the law. Various attempts to legalize this power to deport aliens many years after they have entered this country, have been made in the anti-alien bills introduced into congress during the past five years. It is the sort of legislation being fought by the National Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers. In the case of La Russo, the government is not even waiting for passage of a law to justify them in their action.

Tammany Hospital Czar Too Crude in Methods on Poor

Stung by criticism of wretched conditions in Bellevue and Kings County hospitals, Bird S. Coler commissioner of public welfare, has handed in his resignation to Mayor Walker.

Complaints of the callous treatment of charity patients in the city hospitals have been numerous under the administration of Coler, a democratic politican appointed by Hylan but prominent for 20 years in the Tammany organization.

Sick and injured workers have died in the city hospitals because of wretched disregard by the authorities there, according to relatives. Crowded wards, over-worked hospital attendants, negligence and the unwillingness of supervising physicians to fight for the lives of patients suffering from complicated or prolonged illness are among the charges.

Miller Hired to Defend B.-M. T. in Transit Hearings

Gory verbal warfare with no injuries is predicted when former Governor Miller meets Samuel Untermeyer in the transit hearings next Monday. Miller, cashing in on his political prestige, has been retained by the B.-M. T. to defend its vested property rights.

The B.-M. T. is particularly keen not to have its books examined. Such an examination would disclose B.-M. T. control over the Interborough and give official confirmation to the contention that the company's actual investment is less than 50 per cent. of the claimed valuation.

The B.-M. T. wants to be valued at cost of reproduction in 1927 prices, although the system was built when costs were lower. An effort will be made to value the property on the actual cash investment, although the Supreme Court may halt such an attempt.

NO COMMISSION FULLER DECIDES IN SACCO CASE

Advises With Experts on Gun Testimony

BOSTON, May 18.—The announcement, carried exclusively in The DAILY WORKER two weeks ago, that there would be no commission to review the Sacco-Vanzetti case, is confirmed from semi-official sources.

Governor Fuller will handle the case himself, assuming full responsibility for the fate of the two Italian anarchists doomed to die in the electric chair. Aided by personal friends, including Frank A. Roberts, chairman of the State Parole Board, and Attorney General Reading, he is now engrossed in a study of evidence, particularly the salient point of the Sacco gun.

When Nicola Sacco was arrested, police seized his gun. Later it was declared in the Dedham trial that the mortal bullets which killed Alessandro Berardelli, guard for Paymaster Parmenter, were fired from the Sacco gun.

Experts, including firearms specialists and microphotographers, are conferring with Fuller. The Sacco gun, with other weapons presented in testimony, are at the Governor's home, where he has been confined for several days.

Lincoln Wadsworth, of the Iver Johnson Sporting Goods Co., was among the experts. He conferred with the Governor for several hours, going over the Sacco, Vanzetti and Madeiros guns. He is not unfriendly to the defense.

Seven thousand Chicagoans sent a 350-word telegram to Governor Fuller today asking a review of the case. The Marylebone branch of the British Independent Labor Party and the Scottish Independent Labor Party sent cablegrams today to the same effect.

Sailor Victimized After Refusal to Work Foreign Ship

Many of the passengers on board were on the dock shedding tears and waving goodbyes; the band played, and the whole scene was gayness. Once on the ship, the gayness disappeared; the ship was in darkness, and the passengers filed along to the music on the pier.

A ship of the United States lines is leaving for a port in Europe with a cargo of rich, pleasure-bent passengers and freight. The same performance seems to pervade the atmosphere on the departure of a ship of these lines. Ships like the Leviathan; George Washington, the President Harding, President Roosevelt and other liners assume a sort of holiday air on their departure. The passengers disporting themselves on deck and in their cabins listen to the music blaring noises of departure and they are entranced.

It's a great world after all, God's in his heaven, all's still right with the world.

No Romance For Seamen.

Little are they concerned with the misery and suffering of the men that make their pleasure trips possible. They watch the seamen pull in the lines, and they also are imbued with the false air of romance that the capitalist machinery of transportation takes on.

These sailors are workers like other workers when it comes to realistic slavery at a few dollars a month. They have furthermore to be really skilled in their trade, before the autocratic ship owners will hire them. They must show at least six good discharges from former voyages to prove that they are efficient and able seamen.

Also they must produce a lifebout ticket. Then there is absolutely no question as to their ability as first class seamen. Just before the ship sails, they are forced to buy uniforms from the ship's slop chest at 150 per cent profit to the United States Lines. Of course the passengers think that the company furnishes the men's uniforms free of charge.

$62.50 A Month.

The wages of a sailor are $62.50 a month, and the he knows that the conditions on these vessels are pretty rotten, he is forced to ship on them. The is always an unemployment situation on the waterfront, so he hasn't any choice of jobs and is pretty lucky to get any job at all.

My experiences on a voyage on the President Harding are typical of the environment thru which the sailor passes aboard these vessels, with the exception that I am more class conscious than the average seaman that I meet, and can consequently understand the conditions and their cause a little better—it is the same experience.

Eastbound we worked two nineteen hour days on mail baggage and freight. No overtime pay and no time back for this hard work was given. This is long steady work and we were continually being called out at all hours of the night thruout the voyage.

Four days in port in Bremanhaven, and on the morning of departure, there was a council muster on deck. All men who did not appear were fined four days' pay. We cleared before a gale of wind, we were obliged to wash oil from the fore part of the ship. This oil had leaked out of the fuel tanks of the ship.

No Clothes for Sale

I applied for sea-boots and oil skins which are supposed to be purchasable at the ship's slop chest, but there weren't any in stock. This, despite the fact, that maritime law requires that every ship carry these articles for the seaman's use in heavy weather. Consequently, I had to weather the gale without any.

At the port of Queenstown, we took the tender alongside, with mail baggage, passengers and freight. This tender flys the free State flag, and her crew are organized. Nevertheless the crew of the President Harding was asked to go aboard and handle baggage. I refused to concede to this demand, as my contract called for work on an American ship, and not a foreign one. How was I to know, if there might be a strike on, and I might be scabbing on my fellow workers in their own country.

Thrown in Brig.

For refusing to do this work I was placed in a wet brig behind iron bars, and I had to sleep on an iron floor. Here I was for 36 hours. They brought me white bread and water for sustenance. I was pretty angry and refused the food on the basis that white bread did not contain the necessary minerals to keep life and activity in the body. So right thru the long hours of the night I tossed about on the hard cold floor of the brig in misery and in the morning I was taken to the ship's doctor. He pronounced me well and fit. From there I was taken to Captain Van Beak and Chief mate Stedman.

Captain Van Beak asked me why I had refused to work on the Free State tender. He asked me whether I knew that refusing to obey an order was punishable by a fine of four days pay, and imprisonment. I told the Captain that I had never refused to work on the ship that I had signed on, but that it was against my principles to work on foreign vessels.

I told him that the order to work on the Free State tender was an illegal one, and that I considered myself as being unjustly persecuted by being thrust into the brig without trial. If it had been in the case of a repair, or a salvage or emergency, I would have gone, but since these were the circumstances and it was a foreign ship, I would refuse to work. He thereupon asked me if I was one of these I.W.W. agitators. I answered him that I was not, but that I was class conscious and held radical views.

"Oh," he said, "that is a case of out of the frying pan and into the fire." "Every trip these ships make, the crew is sent into the foreign tender."

"Well," I answered, "then every time that happens, the American crew is scabbing on the foreign organized labor." He told me that my trouble was that I was influenced by reds and bolsheviks.

On His Career.

The Captain cited the instance of himself, he told me that 44 years ago, he was a hard working obedient young man, he had started to save his money, and studied navigation. "You and your shipmates have the same chance that I had" he said.

"Well Captain," I told him, "if I couldn't make big money like you, without putting the crew to scabbing, and then logging them from their hard earned wages, why then I don't want to be a captain of a United States Liner."

Work On Sunday.

The Captain impatiently asked the mate if he had any work for me to do. The mate said, "yes there was work." The Captain then turned to me and said: "if you work seven hours today, (which was Sunday) I will fine you four days pay and will not put you back in the brig. I replied, "Captain today is Sunday and I have been twenty-two hours in the brig and consequently am unable to work, and even if I were able to work, I would not work on a day of rest, while the rest of the crew are off duty." He said, "I will fine you eight days pay and you will have to turn to in the morning."

The following morning I was very sick. I had a sore throat, cold and stiff sore limbs. The cold had gotten me while I was working in the gale without oil skins and on top of that the wet brig had finished things.

I was told to turn to, which I refused to do on the ground that I was sick and unable to work. The doctor examined me and gave me powders and oils he told me that my pulse was normal, and that I could go back to work. I said that I couldn't and I was thrown back into the damp brig for another ten hours. Then I was taken to the mate, who said that the doctor had pronounced me as well and able to work, and that there was no reason for my being sick. I told him that I had caught the cold due to the lack of oil skins.

In a few days we arrived in Hoboken. Here I went to the Barge office and complained my fine to the shipping commissioner. A ship mate was with me and he bore out my testimony. There chief mate was there and he said that I had continuously refused duty, and that I had admitted that I was a radical.

The commissioner decided in favor of the company. How careful the capitalist instruments are of anything that even savors of organization and betterment of the working and living conditions of their slaves at their expense.

Washington and New York society, surprised over the suit for divorce instituted in Paris, France, by Bainbridge Colby, New York lawyer and former secretary of state, say the rift between Mr. and Mrs. Colby might have developed when Mrs. Colby wrote a book on life in Washington. Friends said one of the characters resembled Mrs. Colby, but Mrs. Colby denied that she had tried to picture her husband. Mrs. Colby, whose picture is above, was Nathalie Sedgewick before her marriage in 1895. Inset is of Mr. Colby.

Criminal Syndicalism Law in California Upheld

CHARLOTTE ANITA WHITNEY

—Drawing by Lydia Gibson.

By LAURENCE TODD (Federated Press).

In two decisions the federal supreme court upheld, on May 16, both the political and the industrial wads of the California criminal syndicalism law. Miss Charlotte Anita Whitney, wealthy and educated woman from the East, who was convicted in Oakland on charges that she belonged to the Communist Labor Party which was born of the schism in the Socialist Party in 1919, lost her appeal. She is now liable to serve a sentence of from one to 14 years in prison. William Burns, laborer, convicted of membership in the Industrial Workers of the World, and as an organizer in that militant body of laborers, was held to serve a similar term.

Decisions Contradict.

A curious illustration of the quirks of the law is found in the fact that on this same day the same supreme court held that Harold B. Fiske, convicted of violation of the Kansas criminal syndicalism law, had not been fairly convicted. The justices declared in their unanimous opinion that the I. W. W. preamble, nased as evidence against Fiske, does not suggest "that the industrial organization of workers as a class for the purpose of getting possession of the machinery of production and abolishing the wage system, was to be accomplished by other than lawful methods." Hence, the court decided that the I. W. W. preamble was not an "inflammatory document or teaching, and that Fiske as an I. W. W. organizer could not be convicted, on this evidence, of enlisting members in an organization, society or group, Violence or other unlawful acts or methods as a means of effecting industrial or political changes or revolution.

Yet Burns, the court—with Justice Brandeis dissenting—held, was rightly convicted of the organized members for "an organization of persons organized and assembled to advocate, teach and abet criminal syndicalism, to wit, the Industrial Workers of the World." The court found that the I. W. W. "advocated, taught and aided various acts of sabotage that are plainly within the meaning of that word "as used in the California law. It recited some of these destructive acts, such as the driving of nails into growing trees to kill them, the planting of weed seeds in fields, and the scattering of combustibles to start fires in grain and to destroy farmers' property. This the I. W. W. was found guilty in the Burns case, under the California law, and Burns was held for prison because of his membership and activity in the I. W. W.

Urged Revolution.

Anita Whitney's conviction was defended by the majority opinion, read by Justice Sanford, on the ground that the California law had been directly violated by the national platform of the Communist Labor Party, and that the defendant failed immediately to leave the Oakland branch of the party when, against her urgent advice, it adorsed the national platform which called for revolution.

That society has nothing to fear from reactionary violence is the belief expressed by the majority in dismissing the argument that this law discriminated against the radical workers.

"There is no substantial basis for the contention that the legislature has arbitrarily or unreasonably limited its application to those advocating the use of violent and unlawful methods to effect changes in industrial and political conditions," It declares; "there being nothing indicating any purpose to apprehend that those desiring to maintain existing industrial and political conditions did or would advocate such methods."

Brandeis, Holmes Agree.

Justice Brandeis and Holmes, agreeing that Miss Whitney was rightly convicted, in view of her encouragement of the I. W. W. in California, through membership in the Communist Labor Party, disagreed with the majority opinion that the California law was justified in limiting freedom of speech and assembly.

"Fear of serious injury," they said, cannot alone justify suppression of free speech and assembly. Even imminent danger cannot justify resort to prohibition of these functions essential to effective democracy, unless the evil apprehended is relatively serious." The proposed proletarian revolution, they pointed out, must be very long delayed and hence could not be looked upon as a serious immediate danger to be so drastically guarded against.

trade union officials who find conditions as they are very much to their liking. But when a person mixes with the workers who have to go to their daily grind when they are lucky enough to be blessed with a job, one gets a different impression. The foreign editor of the Paris Matin ignored the poverty of the millions of American workers. And for a purpose. Instead of looking towards the Soviet Union as the workers' paradise the European workers must be taught to look towards America. But this sham will not work and we will help in our own humble way to puncture the balloon.

OUR old friend general Feng Yu-siang is on the move and things do not look as bright for Chang-Tso-Lin, our bandit ally, as they did a few years ago. Of course Feng has been mouching along for quite a while but the capitalist reporters hoped he would get an attack of the hives and spend the rest of the year scratching himself. Our friend Feng went and captured a city and his soldiers are now busy chasing Wu-Pei-fu over the landscape.

NOT having much left in the way of consolation the correspondents are now hoping that Feng will make an alliance with Chiang-Kai-Shek. But he is more likely to connect his axe with Chiang's neck when he gets within beheading distance of him. This would serve Chiang right. The most contemptible of mortals is the renegade who betrays a glorious cause and turns on his former comrades. This is what Chiang did at the suggestion and in consideration of the money of the imperialists, particularly Great Britain. Watch the news from China during the next few days.

THE Soviet note of protest against the illegal raid on its trade delegation headquarters in London, is firm but restrained. It reads like the warning of a strong but peaceful man to a swaggering bully. Great Britain is asked whether she wants to maintain trade relations or conduct herself toward the Soviet government in a manner befitting a civilized power or whether she will continue those relations in the approved manner of the hurglar. It is almost certain that Great Britain is disposed to break off diplomatic relations with Russia. The visit of the French president and the French foreign minister has a direct bearing on this matter.

SIR AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN will not have anything more to do with Eugene Chen, foreign minister of the Nationalist Government of China with headquarters at Hankow. A few days ago Chen talked the Chinese language to Chamberlain in a tone different to what the proud Britons have been used to from former Chinese officials. He told Chamberlain that he would be delivering anseches for international consumption from Peking in a short time and that the British foreign office would understand his lingo. It now seems that Chen will be in Peking shortly with the aid of Feng Yu-siang.

WITH THE Young WORKER

Youth Day in Hamburg

By ALEX MASSER.
(Delegate British Young Communist League)

The Hamburg young workers celebrated their Youth Days on Easter Saturday and Sunday, following the National Congress of the Young Communist League held on the three previous days.

"Youth Day. Hamburg, Easter Saturday and Sunday, 1927."

"Young Workers, Demonstrate on Youth Days.

"Against the Rascist Terror.

"Against the Monarchist Government.

"Against Imperialist War on China.

"For the Victory of the Chinese Revolution.

"For world Workers Unity."

So read the call—and the response! Tremendous! Magnificent! Inspiring! For the young workers of Hamburg are for the Proletarian Revolution, they have taken their stand at the barricades of Revolution twice already; they have suffered in the fire of capitalist aggression, of reformist treachery. They know that for the workers the only solution to capitalist oppression, to Imperialist War to the dread "rationalisation" of industry is not the reformism of the Noskes and Eberts, brothers of the British Hodges and MacDonalds, who have let them down so foully and so often, but in the dictatorship of the proletariat.

Everywhere this 1927 Easter-tide on Hamburg, is breathed the spirit of revolt; everywhere are to be seen the uniforms of the Young Front Fighters; and every other person is wearing the special Youth Day Badge or other Communist symbol. From Berlin arrives a contigent of over 2,000 Young Communists — how smartly they marched to the strains of the "Red Army March"! Every few minutes, it seems, comes a group swaying along, banners waving, singing their songs of revolt lustily, menacingly, in challenging tone. And ever and anon comes the salute that is both challenge and greeting, with clenched fist raised shoulder high "Rote Front"!

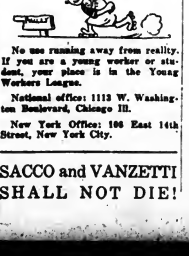
Comes the time for the Demonstration in the Hamburg Circus to commence. Inside are over 6,000 young workers, singing to the Music of the Red Front Bands. Outside are more than as many again. They do not push, jostle and crowd; they "fall in" unfnri their banners and march off to demonstrate in the streets surrounding the circus.

Inside the circus is amazing, tier upon tier the seats are crowded. The Reds Bands crash out their music, the limelights play on the standard bearers forming a crimson background to the huge stage, surmounting all is a huge Red Star suspended from the roof. Suddenly comes silence—complete. The President calls on the first speaker. In quick succession the others follow, with short, crisp telling speeches arousing tremendous enthusiasm — German, British, Russian—and provoking greatest applause of all—a chinese comrade. Tremendous cheers greeted the report of the anti-militarist work of the British League. Speeches finished, the Berlin comrades present a revue, a real gem of workers' art in which Chamberlain and MacDonald are done to gently dealt with.

But Sunday—Day of Days!

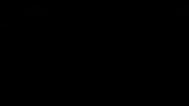
Young Communists, Pioneers, Communist Party, Red Front Fighters, Young Front Fighters, Red Marines —thirty thousand strong they assemble at the Central Meeting place. The uniformed Red Front Fighters have the huge crowd well in hand, there is no confusion, but a military orderliness. They start off on the saven miles march to the Stadt Park, the streets lined with cheering, sympathetic workers. From the windows hang Red Flags, posters bedeck the walls, overhead, transversing the streets are streamers bearing fighting mottoes. A diversion—Fascists imprudently try to utilise the occasion for propaganda hy leaflets. Speedily a section of the Red Fighters fall out and their filthy weapons are torn from the disciples of Mussolini, who scurry away, cowed.

The Stadt Park reached, the Central YCL Committee mounts the rostrum, follow representatives from the Front Fighters, then an American Party representative. Cheer upon cheer follows the Chinese delegate as he mounts the platform. The bands strike up, the International is taken up by the mighty crowd and swells into a heaven rending challenge to imperialist aggression, a call to international unity to the workers. Then the delegate from the British YCL, telling of the fight of the British young workers. Excitement reaches to fever heat when a Berlin comrade comes to the platform to present to the British Youth a wreath bearing the device "Better Death than Slavery". Thaelman, Communist member of the reichstag, exposes the war plans and war preparations of imperialism, his challenge is aken up by the 50,000 voices in a tremendous roar of assent to his call for militant struggle.



The speeches finish at last; again the International! The demonstration disperses not to the homes yet, hut to witness the football and racing of the worker sportsmen and later to witness a fireworks display.

"Youth Day, Hamburg, Easter Saturday and Sunday, 1927" is over!



But its inspiration lives, its message spreads throughout Germany. The spirit of Youth Day is the spirit of Revolution, the spirit of the working class youth, the spirit which is going to carry them forward in the fight for a Workers' Germany.

But what will Dempsey do to the winner? We know how much he will make in dollars and cents—the question is, how much will he get in the nose? If reports are true, Jack

Dempsey is looking like the Dempsey of old, and that looks bad to anyone who has to fight him. Oh, well,—what's the difference? The birds that go out to see them sock each other will pay a high price for the privilege of watching this sport (?).

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THERE are people who are of the opinion that this column is appearing under false pretenses, or in simpler terms that it is not what the name implies, since, when the captain of its soul is in good humor superinduced by a hot meal, a victory for the Hankow government, the bankruptcy of a prominent Kiwanian or the death of a British duke, the column is optimistic and good mental breakfast food. But when he has not the price of an order of spaghetti, or Chang-Tso-Lin succeeds in raising a new loan, or Marshall Pilsudski of Poland gets in a fresh carload of garlic, this department of The DAILY WORKER is as gloomy as Clarence Darrow, when he is not engaged defending a murderer or a gang of bootleggers.

TO sum up, the critics of "Current Events" claim that as a general rule the column has as little currency in it as our treasury. I hesitate to ask our readers for an opinion, lest, I might be accused of wishing to get too intimate with them or starting an illegitimate correspondence. Nevertheless, being a peaceful individual and wishing to retain the friendship of the followers of this column, if anybody can suggest a more appropriate name they are welcome to shoot it in.

WE are told that cleanliness is next to godliness and it is generally admitted that a good shine improves the looks of a person's footwear besides furnishing prima facie evidence that the wearer is not a poet, at least not an unsuccessful one. But the Lord's Day Alliance, trembling for the safety of our souls has decided that it is sinful to shine shoes on Sunday. Should the shineless Sunday follow in the wake of the beerless Saturday the nation will be set for a drive against hilarity in general, and a person caught smiling in New York city may soon be taking as much of a chance with his liberty as the author of a readable novel.

WILLIAM HALE THOMPSON, was returned to City Hall in Chicago on the platform of war to the death against England and Englishmen. One would imagine from reading this gentleman's campaign speeches that the redcoats were in possession of the Fish Fan's Club, that tony, floating speakeasy in which Thompson's closest friends drowned their sorrow after William E. Dever captured city hall. "Big Bill" let the world know that he was not afraid of the British empire and threatened to "bust King George on the nose" if he inserted that organ into the domestic affairs of Chicago.

THE Irish were ready to make Thompson honorary president of the Irish Free State, and the Germans did not care who won the war or whether the Kaiser stayed in Holland or not. "Big Bill" hated the English to the satisfaction of all who like their hates at a safe distance. He charged mayor Dever with nurturing agents of King George in the public school system, chief of them being superintendent McAndrew, who debauched the school books and insisted that John Hancock was a bootlegger of tasteless tea.

THOMPSON won the war against England, but it appears that immediately after the armistice "Big Hearted Bill" was ready to relent. Samuel Insull, a cursed Saxon, who hailed from the tight little isle and now owned almost everything in Chicago but the soiled underwear of its inhabitants, purchased "Big Bill's" friend, senator-elect but unseated, Frank L. Smith. It is reported that he dropped a big wad of dough into Thompson's campaign kitty before he went on a visit to his native land. Anyhow on the day following Thompson's triumphal entry into city hall, Insull visited the mayor and traction stocks started to climb heavenwards. Insull owns almost everything on wheels in Chicago except the baby carriages.

A GENTLEMAN by the name of Blair, an American and a friend of Dever's is head of the surface lines. But Insull owns the power that runs street and elevated lines. Thompson turned down thumbs on the American Blair but took the Englishman Insull unto his bosom. Which is another sad story of a patriot caught politically shirtless tho it is quite probable that not more than one Chicago voter out of a thousand that voted for "Big Bill" will see thru the sham.

COOLIDGE SUPPORTERS PROFIT FROM FLOOD

ONE MORE COAL MINE BLAST IN PENNSYLVANIA

Three Killed; Accident Details Kept Secret

NEW PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 19.—Another terrific coal mine explosion adds to the long list that has been piled up since the drive against the United Mine Workers has been started. At least three men are killed in the Bell Colliery, near Tamaqua. Immediately after the blast, while efforts were being made to get news from the scene of the accident, the single telephone wire leading to the mine was disconnected.

Those familiar with coal mine accidents suspect that some one is trying to prevent any detailed stories from going out, as accounts of loss of life in recent accidents has aroused among miners a determination to compel the more effective use of safety methods underground.

Miners Lay Blame For Cable Accident On Bad Machinery

SCRAN. . ", Pa., May 19.—Bureau of Mine officials were busy denying reports today that faulty machinery was responsible for dropping 10 miners down to the bottom of a shaft in Johnson No. 1 mine of the Scranton Coal Co. at Dickson City, near here.

Both legs of Llewellyn Evans, a miner, were broken while two other miners suffered broken legs and the others in the mine cage were painfully bruised when the cage fell 30 feet with terrific force.

Within a few seconds the entire cable, weighing six tons, came hurtling down the shaft smashing the cage to smithereens. Fortunately the injured men had been extricated.

Mine inspectors declared the engineer had fainted although miners standing near him declare he was knocked unconscious by a flying bit of machinery as the cable slipped from the drum. If the accident had happened while the cage was farther from the bottom of the 600 foot shaft, certain death would have been the lot of the union men.

Miners, Angered by Cappellini's Order, Threaten to Strike

SCRANTON, Pa., May 19.—Ordered back to work by District President Rinaldo Cappellini as soon as he had returned from the State Federation of Labor convention, 300 miners of the Florence Colliery at Dupont, near here, are threatening another strike unless their demand for payment on the basis of $6 a car is met. The men have been on strike since May 3.

The miners charge Cappellini with failure to attempt a settlement along favorable lines. Instead, the president of District 1 instructed a member of the conciliation board to order the men back to work. They are getting $4.12 to $5 a car now.

Anthracite Diggers Want Vanzetti Free

SCRANTON, Pa., May 19.—1,200 members of United Mine Workers Local 213 have wired a request to Governor Fuller for a full review of the Sacco-Vanzetti case. The union's members work at the Diamond colliery of the Glen Alden Coal Co.

35 Japanese Miners Killed in Mine Fire

TOKIO, May 19.—Thirty-five miners were buried alive, and one hundred and fifty others escaped, when fire broke out to-day in a coal mine at Kyoutoki, in the Saca Perfecture. Rescue parties are working in the hope that some of the entombed men may still be alive.

Italy, Pet of Morgan and John Spargo, Funds War Debt on Easy Terms

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Italian bonds to the value of $2,042,000,000 were delivered to the U. S. Treasury today by the Italian ambassador as the final step in the funding of the Italian war debt. The ambassador received in exchange the original demand notes held by the treasury.

Especially favorable debt settlement terms have been granted Italy, to which J. P. Morgan and Company has loaned vast sums of money. The Fascist dictatorship has been maintained largely thru the loans of the House of Morgan, it is stated.

DIE-HARDS WON'T PAY FOR DAMAGES TO ARCOS OFFICE

Hicks Fails to Explain Raids in Commons

LONDON, May 19.—Sir William Joynson Hicks, Home Secretary in the die-hard Cabinet, announced in the House of Commons this afternoon that the Baldwin Government will not compensate the Arcos, Ltd., Soviet Union trade organization, for damage done to their offices during the raids. Walls were smashed, valuable safes were drilled and other property damaged in the course of the raids.

The Home Secretary also announced that he would postpone his promised statement on the police raids until next Tuesday. "It takes time to manufacture documents," was the comment of one political observer.

Although right wing Laborites in the House of Commons have made only a half-hearted protest against the raids, there is a great deal of feeling against the policies of the die-hards among the rank and file of the workers.

Plans For War

It is rumored that the "missing document" which caused as the excuse for the raids, were the minutes of the proceedings of the Imperial Defence Committee containing plans for a military offensive against the Soviet Union.

The purpose of the raid is regarded as threefold: the severance of relations with the Soviet Union, attempt to goad the U.S.S.R. into a war, and an attempt to discredit the Labor Party's prospects for the next elections.

That the Home Office may resort to the manufacture of "documents" to accomplish its purposes is regarded as likely. Laborites still remember the fake "Zinoviev" letter, manufactured by the die-hards before the last Parliament.

Dogs Better Fed

LONDON, May 19.—The Parliamentarians called it a drawn decision after the following discussions relative to the merits in the clash last night between Lady Astor and Jack Jones, Laborite of Silvertown.

Lady Astor, during debate on the trades union bill had declared that reports that there was starvation in Wales during the recent coal strike were untrue but that there was considerable suffering.

"Your dogs are better fed than the miners' children," interjected Jack Jones.

"Shut up," was the retort that Lady Astor chose to make.

"Go back to America," was the comeback from Jones.

Passaic A. F of L. to Hold "Labor Week"

PASSAIC, N. J., May 19.—A Labor Week with meetings every day and evening to further labor's cause in this textile city is planned by the Central Trades and Labor Council. Paul W. Fuller, head of the labor council's education program, will be in charge. He was formerly educational director in District 2, United Mine Workers, under John Brophy.

The Labor Week, with rallies, movies, entertainment and educational features will be held in July.

BRITISH CONFER WITH CHIANG TO PLAN CHINA WAR

Feng Sweeps on Toward Chengchow, Key City

SHANGHAI, May 19.—The actions of Sir Miles Lampson, British Minister to China, and Chiang Kai-shek are being watched with great interest.

Chiang arrived here yesterday with a bodyguard, numbering 100, while the British Minister has left Peking for Shanghai. That Lampson is coming here for the purpose of conferring with Chiang Kai-shek is regarded as more than likely.

What form British support of Chiang will take is still unknown. Britain has temporarily abandoned her plans for open war against Nationalist China in view of her virtual isolation in the Far East and the opposition to intervention at home.

Basil Newton, representative at Hankow, who has been recalled by the British Foreign Office, has also left for Shanghai.

Feng Sweeps Toward Chengchow.

HANKOW, May 19.—Although no reliable reports have been received about Feng's movement since the capture of Loyang, former stronghold of Wu Pai-fu, central Chinese war lord, it is rumored that Feng is rapidly sweeping toward Chengchow. Chengchow is the crossing of the Lunghai and Peking railroads and is regarded as a key position in the twofold Nationalist drive against the war lords.

• • •

Chiang Hard Up.

SHANGHAI, May 19.—Chiang Kai-shek is making every effort to raise money which to pay his discontented troops.

Only about 12,000,000 Shanghai dollars have been subscribed to Chiang's 30,000,000. Chiang is using terrorist tactics to force local merchants to subscribe to the loan.

Crazed by Debts, Farmer Blows Up School; 38 Dead

BATH, Mich., May 19.—Crazed by financial worries which culminated in the foreclosure of his farm last week, Andrew Kehoe placed dynamite in the basement of the Consolidated School here which resulted in the death of 38 pupils and teachers.

Kehoe, who was treasurer of the village school board, had been heard to complain frequently of the high cost of maintaining the local school which had been improved extensively recently.

Besides the known dead more than 85 are known to have been injured by the explosion.

Kehoe himself was killed, together with Emory E. Huyck, superintendent of the school, in a second explosion, this one in Kehoe's car as it stood in front of the demolished school a half hour after the disaster.

Bible-Pounders Fight To Ban Evolution and Sunday Shoe Shiners

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 19.—An anti-evolution bill, making it unlawful to teach in a public school in the state, any theory contradicting the biblical theory of creation, was passed by the House of the Florida Legislature.

Violation of the provisions is considered a misdemeanor.

Dr. David G. Wylie, president of the Lord's Day Alliance, is leading the fight to abolish shoe-shining on Sunday. Wielding a rag and a brush on Sunday, is a sin in the eyes of the Lord, Dr. Wylie believes.

Marines Continue Drive Thru Nicaragua; Burn and Kill; Lose Two Men

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Admiral Latimer reports that the Nicaraguan liberal force which killed Captain Richard Buchanan of the marines and a private, not named in Latimer's dispatch, is surrounded and has offered to surrender.

Private advices here state that the marines were ravaging the country, burning "suspicious" villages, and trying to disarm small patrols and scouting bodies of the Constitutional President, Juan Sacasa. One of these groups when fired upon, retaliated in kind, and the suffering a loss of fourteen killed, drove back the marines for the time being and escaped. It is doubted whether the force Latimer states is being forced to surrender is actually the one engaged in the skirmish.

USSR THREATENS TO LEAVE GENEVA CONFAB, IS RUMOR

Want Recognition of Soviet System

GENEVA, May 19—Officials at the World Economic Conference have stated to the press that the Soviet Union delegation has threatened to withdraw. No confirmation of this statement has yet been received from the Soviet Union delegates.

The delegates, it is said, have asked President Theunis of the conference for assurances that the eventual resolutions adopted by the conference will recognize openly the possibility of the co-existence of the Soviet and capitalistic economic systems.

The delegations threatened to withdraw unless such assurances were given.

USSR Asks Tariff Sovereignty.

The Soviet Union's resolution calling for the tariff sovereignty for all nations were quashed by Chairman Coljin of the Commerce Commission. The resolutions had special reference to China, whose tariff is regulated by the powers.

The Soviet Union delegation also proposed that the recommendations for a lower tariff adopted by the Commission be amended so as not to apply to Eastern Colonial peoples, where high tariffs are necessary for industrial development.

Propose Debt Cancellation.

Representatives of Germany and France, tacitly supported by the British, proposed at a private conference to bring before the World Economic Conference a resolution calling for the cancellation of war debts.

Peasant Revolt Crushed, Reports Phillipine Czar

WASHINGTON, May 19.—The war department has just received a report from Gen. Leonard M. Wood, governor of the Philippines, announcing that the peasant uprising "has been quelled without loss of life and there is no longer cause for anxiety."

Wood's statement was not corroborated from other sources.

Reserve Exploitation

More than 400,000 peasants are involved in the present revolt resulting from heavy taxation on small orders and excessive rentals. Numerous reports have arrived here of the brutal and reprehsive tactics of the Philippine constabulary, under the leadership of U. S. army officers.

Friends of the Philippines liberation movement are expressing great skepticism over the official stories sent out from Manila about the "insane Emperor" Entrenchorado. This is declared to be a device to cover the arrest of all leaders of the agrarian workers.

WORKERS! STOP THE MURDER OF SACCO AND VANZETTI

FEARS OF MISSISSIPPI LEVEE GRAFT EXPOSURE PREVENT PRESIDENT AND HOOVER CALLING SPECIAL SESSION

Floods Could Be Prevented by Using Methods Approved for Centuries

The Game Is to Defend System of Graft While Thousands Suffer

(By Washington Staff Correspondent of The DAILY WORKER.)

WASHINGTON, May 19.—For years statesmen involved in the levee graft have been insisting that the "levees only" system was the only one that could be effective in curbing the torrential waters of the Mississippi. Instead of learning lessons from the history of the world that the only effective way to handle rising waters in river channels unable to hold them is to construct spillways so they could be diverted to other channels, those who profited through the Mississippi graft or who were defenders of administrations whose supporters profited thereby have steadfastly refused to adopt the scientific method. Yet the very first thing that Hoover and his associates did when New Orleans was endangered by the flood was to blow up the levee at Pondryas in order to provide the river with another outlet.

Admit Fallacy in Action.

After fifty years of closing such outlets and damming the river between earthen walls, the very first thing these "levees only" leaders did when the flood became serious was to destroy the walls and let the water out. These simple and obvious facts have impressed themselves upon the minds of the Southerners, if not upon those of Hoover and his colleagues.

Hoover in a formal statement solemnly and gravely proclaimed:

"The present flood, which probably exceeds in volume any on record, shows that the levee heights, heretofore tentatively adopted by the Mississippi River Commission, must be revised upward. Bank protection by revetment and groins will also have to be extended to prevent caving banks."

The Lies of Hoover.

And then as if this observation was insufficient to prove either his staggering incompetency or his outright dishonesty, Mr. Hoover goes on to say that it is not true that levees raise the bed of the river and thereby necessitate the continual raising of the levees, no, that is not true Mr. Hoover says.

"The most widespread fallacy about levees, however," he declared, "is the assertion that they raise the bed of the river, so that in the long run they will merely result in the formation of an elevated trough. The

Shower Resolutions on Governor Fuller

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 19.—Several thousand workers braved a steady downpour of rain to participate in a demonstration arranged here by the Sacco-Vanzetti Emergency Committee of Buffalo as part of the campaign to secure "Life and Freedom for Sacco and Vanzetti."

James Campbell, Secretary of Local 81 of the Molders' Union and leader in the local Central Labor Council, acted as chairman of the meeting and introduced a resolution calling on Governor Fuller to release unconditionally Sacco and Vanzetti. The resolution which also pledged continued support for this campaign until its purpose its accomplished, was adopted by lusty and prolonged cheering of the assembled workers.

The Traction Swindle, Incorporated

This is the first article of a series The DAILY WORKER is publishing on the traction situation in New York City; a condition in which the traction workers are exploited, the riding public seriously inconvenienced and menaced and the Traction Trust enriched. Read these to understand the chicanery in the "Open Hearings" starting in ... May 23.

By ROBERT MITCHELL

The Traction Plunderbund is incorporated! Organized, enfranchised, chartered by the city and state. Among its directors are the highest officials in New York City and in the State Capital at Albany.

There is beginning a set of so-called open hearings which has to do with the preparation of a plan for the future operation of the city transit service.

This dummy hearing, this camouflaged and grotesque comedy about to be staged, marks the final scenes in a play of plunder, which for its brazen piracy, its unashamed corruption, is one of the most disgraceful proceedings in the records of American life.

Nor is this all.

These hearings which the New York State Transit Commission are about to open, are the culminating acts of a colossal conspiracy to pick the pockets of the masses who daily in the millions ride the subways, the elevated and surface lines of the city. They are the disguised preliminaries of a gigantic fare steal!

The forces behind this plunderbund have long before this already been set in motion. Only some minor details now await solution before the final net will be revealed in all its naked ugliness.

Over six millions of riders daily pay their fares into the coffers of the Traction Barons. Every rider, year in, year out, pays between $1.00 and $1.50 weekly in toll to these feudal lords. If the ten cent fare now planned should be successfully executed, you who are reading these words, will be compelled to contribute at least $50.00 yearly in additional tax. This means no less than one more dollar out of your pocket each week.

You will then be paying to the Traction Trust a levy of over two dollars weekly and you will have no means of escape from this hold-up try as you may!

When you begin to consider the necessity of deducting this amount which in many cases will be as much as $2.50 and even $3.00 weekly from your pay envelope for the outlay of fares alone, the real significance of the traction steal will become apparent to you.

Is there no one to protest the people against this gigantic outrage? Who is responsible for permitting

"MUTUAL" INSURANCE POLICYHOLDER NEVER GETS ANY OF THE PROFITS

PREVIOUS EVENTS OF INSURANCE EXPOSE.

The DAILY WORKER herewith continues its expose of the fraudulent methods employed by the "Big Four," who are the Metropolitan, Prudential, John Hancock and the Colonial Life Insurance Companies.

In this series it is charged that these companies who monopolize the weekly payment life insurance business are guilty of fraud, misuse of "mutual" funds, manipulation of policyholders' money and subornation, to perjury.

On April 27th Governor Smith ordered Superintendent of Insurance James A. Beha to make inquiries into the charges contained in the Harrison articles.

So far the official apologist for the insurance companies has not submitted his report. The expose has caused something resembling panic in insurance circles. It affects upwards of 40,000,000 American policyholders.

By CHARLES YALE HARRISON.

During the past year the "Big Four" have increased their assets nearly 500 million dollars. We have contended throughout this series of articles that industrial life insurance assets are never returnable to the "mutual" policyholder, in spite of the fact that Haley Fiske, president of the Metropolitan Life says, "Our policyholders own the company."

Despite the fact that comparisons are odious, let us compare weekly payment life insurance as practiced by the "Big Four" with savings banks.

Savings banks conduct their business at an expense, on the average of less than $2 per accounnt per year. It is much more laborious to keep books for an account than for a policy.

Charge For Investing

As required by the State Banking Department the deposits are invested in mortgages or securities designated by law, just as life insurance reserves are, with this difference, that while savings banks do not charge their depositors with an "investment expense," last year the "Big Four" charged their so-called cooperative policyholders $11,510,064 for investing the reserve in the best legally prescribed gilt-edge securities.

The "Big Four" would have quite a little difficulty in digging up bona fide vouchers for this eleven million dollars. There is a good time in store for an enterprising investigating committee.

Company Swindle Sheets

The present Superintendent of Insurance is most lenient in allowing all sorts of fictitious expenses items to pass unnoticed in the annual reports of these companies.

The Banking Department some time ago threw out an expense item of $5 for a box of cigars used at a bank directors meeting, on the grounds that savings banks were not organized to furnish cigars for directors who were well able to furnish their own cigars.

Savings banks recently applied to the legislature for authority to retain a small percentage of their surplus to protect them against runs. This was denied, and in paules, it is the savings banks that weather the storm.

Banks Distribute Interest

Savings banks distribute their net profits every six months in interest. Their investments, equivalent to the legal reserve of an insurance company, are the amounts due their depositors; they have assets but no reserves.

Insurance companies have no runs and have no bad debts, and can anticipate to within 1% of their death losses each year and yet the law requires the "Big Four" to keep a stupendous surplus when they have no actual liabilities, because each year each policyholder pays in, in advance, several times enough to meet his pro rata share of all losses.

Run On Insurance

A run on an insurance company would require the policyholders to be mean enough to die all at once.

A depositor in a savings bank can demand a statement of his account at any time. The New York Court of Appeals hes decided that a court of equity cannot require a "mutual" life insurance company to account to a policyholder, or to his legal representatives after death, for his share of the surplus, although it is admitted that the surplus (reserve) belongs to the policyholder—but the policyholder never gets it.

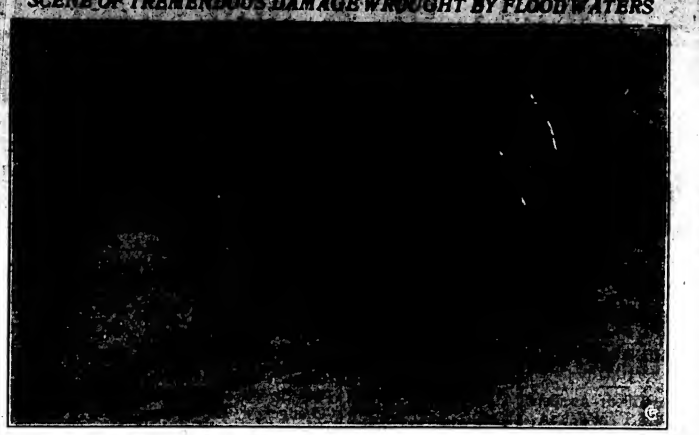
Our democratic lews, oligarchically interpreted, has placed this sacred reserve and surplus even beyond the reach and control of the law itself.

Like Gold On the Moon.

Each policyholder owns a share of the reserve, but he never gets it, and the law won't let him find out how much it is. He can't get near enough to throw a stone at it. The courts are very kind to Legal Reserves.

The fraternal insurance societies do business at a cost of from 70 cents to $2 per policy per year, and most of them in common with the "Big Four" collect premiums in dribs and drabs. For every $1000 paid in net death claims their expenses average about $124.

The "Big Four" spend $1775 for expenses for every $1000 paid as death claims.



Can more criminal waste be conceived? A saving bank with such management would be put out of business before it got fairly started. The officers of a fraternal or cooperative society with such management would be mobbed.

The four weekly payment life insurance companies with their monumental expenses and soaring surpluses, actually boast and point with pride to the pile of swag and say, "Firm as the Rock of Gibraltar."

Imagine a business organization boasting of its surplus obtained, not from the profits of a successful business but from assessments on its members.

Everybody loses in industrial life insurance except those who select the superintendent of insurance.

SCENE OF TREMENDOUS DAMAGE WROUGHT BY FLOOD WATERS

A remarkable air view of flooded Arkansas City, Ark., and its environs, covered by a wall of water ranging from 15 to 20 feet deep in most parts of the city, when the Mississippi opened a huge crevasse in a levee. Notice the encampments of refugees on the remaining levee and houses floating around in the current swirl.

"SUGAR BOWL" BATTLES FLOOD

Map of parishes composing the "sugar bowl" region of Louisiana, which has been battling not only the Mississippi's flood but the swollen Atchafalaya river to save its vast areas of sugar cane. Ringed region has been affected by levee breaks where arrows point, a well of water sweeping over plantations and communities. The vast torrent of water in the Mississippi is "using" other streams as "relief" outlets to the Gulf of Mexico. Predictions were for nearly 20 feet of water over the bottoms of St. Martin parish, near the mouth of the Atchafalaya river.

FEAR OF MISSISSIPPI LEVEE GRAFT EXPOSÉ PREVENTS COOLIDGE CALLING AN EXTRA SESSION

surveys and measurements carried out for over half a century do not show that the levees have appreciably raised the bed of this river."

It is not true he shouts, and yet he is preforce compelled to admit that the river bed has been raised, although he endeavors to deprecate the fact by declaiming about "appreciably." What Mr. Hoover might designate as not being "appreciably" appears very ominous to engineers and authority no less able than he and apparently far more honest.

Can Control Floods.

Opposing this "levees only" system is the "bypass spillway" or "safety-valve" plan. It calls for the use of levees, supported by spillways and passes. Nowhere else in the world is the "levees only" system used for flood control. In the Nile valley, in India, in France, and elsewhere, flood control is effected by use of spillways and passes aided by the levees. A spillway is the same as a crevasse, or a break, only the latter is uncontrolled or uncontrollable and the former is a manageable opening that allows the excess water out into prepared passes so that it can run off to the sea relieving the main channel of its overflowing burden of water.

Used Elsewhere in U. S.

In every other flood area in the United States the "bypass spillway" system is in use. In California, in the Ohio River Valley and other places the levee is only a part of the flood control system. Only in the Mississippi Valley, where of all places adequate flood control is most needed, crooked politics, dishonest officials, demogogic authorities have continued the antiquated method at the cost of billions of dollars in losses to the workers and the poor farmer. Every flood drags down deeper the workers in the lower valley, while enriching contractors and the petty bosses.

Returns For More Graft.

In spite of every failure of their system, these "levees only" advocates have returned for more funds and never once been denied their loot. Next session will see their powerful, well "healed" lobby once more about the halls of Congress. They will pull the ropes and manipulate the wires and the senators and representatives will twitch and jump, while the White House and the Cabinet will look on gravely and sneezously nod approval.

More millions will be forthcoming. In the past it was $10,000,000 annually, no doubt next year the ante will be raised to $25,000,000. The opportunity will be there to make special pleas, and who are the congressmen to withstand such pleas.

Involved in this issue of flood control is not only the problem of stemming inundations, but a water-power rights and privileges. Under the guise of providing relief no doubt lucious water-power steals will be put through. Who can tell, it is possible that even Muscle Shoals will be grabbed off.

Certainly, Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Hoover won't say no. Nor the Democrats.

And as for the Progressives—well, look them over and take what conclusion you can from that "uberblick."

Medical Quacks Mulct Suckers for Millions

WASHINGTON, May 19. — The American public is being "bunked" to the tune of millions of dollars a year by the so-called "Patent Medicine" craze, it was declared today by Dr. A. J. Cramp, of Chicago, head of the Bureau of Investigation of the American Medical Association.

The oiling middle-aged, who buys quack remedies, and women, who purchase useless and sometimes harmful cosmotics, are proving that "You Can Fool Some of the People All the Time," Cramp said. The Medical Association, with its 4,000 physicians in convention here, he added, has launched an educational drive to warn the public against all "bunk" remedies.

The Cosmetic situation was being considered by the House of Delegates, the convention's legislative body, where a resolution pended calling on Congress to enact a law regulating the manufacture and sale of beautifiers. The resolution was sponsored by the New York State Medical Association, after many cases of cosmetic poisonings were discovered.

Palestine to make a "non-partisan" survey of that sacred spot. Those of you who have followed the articles of insurance graft running in The DAILY WORKER, and particularly those of you who know something of the Insurance business from the inside, will understand that the traveling expenses of Mr. Frankei represent a good investment for the Metropolitan and will result in a few millions worth of new insurance written on the lives of Jewish people in the United States. It pays to advertise.

HERE is another good advertising stunt: Milton Hershey, the big sugar and chocolate man donated 40,000 pounds of sugar to the victims of the Mississippi flood. This act of generosity cost the magnate something like one thousand dollars. But it is worth several thousand dollars in advertising. Of course this angle of the case never occurred to the broad-beamed mind of Hershey. Just like casting bread upon the waters.

YOUNG, ambitious men not afraid of hard work and prepared to wait a few years for the dough should lend their eyes to the following news item: Two brothers who defrauded banks and business firms out of $150,000 were given terms of from five to ten years in Sing Sing. Should the boys get out at the end of five years it means a huge scale of $15,000 a year each. Should they stay in for ten, the pay check would be only $7,500 a year. Even at that forgery pays better than journalism.

POLICE COMMISSIONER WARREN, the new Tammeny chief, is making things hot for the gambling fraternity, as we can see by the papers. What we don't see in the papers, would be more interesting no doubt. The leopard does not change his spots and the tiger does not shed his claws. Tammony's conversion to public purity is a good advertisement for the presidential aspirations of Alfred E. Smith, out where the wild alfalfa grows. It is strange but true that millions of American voters fear that a catholic president would not enforce laws enacted by protestants. Tammany is now showing the world that it is ready to enforce all the laws that are fit to print.

BY the time these lines appear in print we will know whether Jim Maloney of Boston defeated Jack Sharkey of Lithuania in the tistic encounter that took place last night under the direction of Tex Rickard. Each of the warriors expects to be $100,000 to the good after the melee. Thousands of foolish Lithuenians and equally foolish descendants of Plous Ma Cool will quarrel over the respective merits of the combatents while they toil for 30 cents an hour. "Suffer the little children to come unto me" said the meek and lowly Nezarene "for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Innocence is just as useful among the customers in the boxing arena as in heaven. Rickard and Jehovah are in the same boat.

YOU'D be surprised to know how many people have a piece of this fellow" said a well informed sporting Insider to me a few weeks ago. He was referring to an ensemble practioner of the manly art who is being groomed by Tex Rickard to entice Jack Dempsey back into the squared circle. The "comeon" is barely able to crawl under the ropes but by the time Tex gets his one-per-cent sporting writers tuned up for and against the contestants the sporting fraternity of the United States will be ready to bet their B. V. D.'s on the outcome. And by the time this particular boxer gets thru his performance he will be a disfigured oar to the good.

Radio Stations Defy Commission's Order

Following a conference between Commissioners Celowell, Bellows and Sykes of the federal radio commission and Operator Chester R. Bohnsock of station WNYC, owned by the City of New York, it was agreed today that the station will be allowed to continue broadcasting on its present wave length of 570 kilocycles. No other sation will be permitted to use the same wave length.

Warning has been served on twelve New York sations that they must observe the commission's rule that stations must not vary more than one half kilocycle from their assigned wave lengths.

Twelve stations were found to be violating the commission's order by varying from .6 to 28.6 kilocycles from their assigned frequencies. They were: WPCH, WHN, WWRL, WKBO, WFBL, WGL, WFBJ, WSGN, WARS, WNJ, WMBQ and WGPC.

The Bishop Responds

Bishop William Montgomery Brown is the latest one to respond to the call for the defense of The DAILY WORKER. Denouncing vigorously the efforts of the Professional Patriots to suppress our militant daily, the Bishop has consented to personally enlist in the campaign to raise funds for the fight. He has left his many duties to go on tour at his own expense to raise the wherewithal for our fight against the forces of militarism and reaction.

Every worker who believes in The DAILY WORKER should follow the Bishop's example. Every comrade is in a position to reach a number of other workers to whom he can point out the danger which our fighting organ is facing. In every community proletarian minute men should get on the job to meet the emergency we are facing.

On May 29th we go to trial in the Court of Special Sessions. Our lawyers are busy preparing our case against the furious assault of the forces of capitalism. You must do your share to support the defense by a steady stream of contributions. Without this support we cannot fight. Roll up your sleeves at once. Follow the lead. Get on the job at once.

FAKE LABOR BILL EXPOSED BY DALY, AGENT OF BOSSES

Crime Losses Told at Industrial Meeting

Weaknesses of the forty-eight hour law for women, passed during the last session of the New York legislature, were pointed out by Mark A. Daly, secretary of the Associated Industries, in an address before the National Industrial Council in session in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Unwittingly, Mr. Daly agreed with labor critics of this measure, that this is not a forty-eight hour law but a fifty-one hour law. According to Daly:

Grave Abuse.

"No one knows whether the law applies to the manufacturing plant as a whole, to departments in a plant or to the individual workers. If it applies to individual workers, it opens the doors to grave abuse, for a scalawag employer can beat it under any system of checking that may be devised."

The convention was warned by Mr. Daly that New York State is falling behind in industry "in the face of the more liberal laws in other states, exemption from taxation and like inducements to manufacturers." There has been a falling off of 30 per cent in the last ten years, so Daly declares.

Staggering Figures.

The industrialists were given a set of staggering figures of the direct loss thru crime each year. The total, as estimated by William B. Joyce, president of the National Surety Company, is $3,000,000,000. Of this amount, $1,000,000,000 is stolen thru the post office; $1,000,000,000 in stock frauds; $400,000,000 in credit frauds; $250,000,000 in burglary, larceny and petty theft; $100,000,000 is embezzled; $100,000,000 in forgery; $100,000,000 piracies and custom frauds; freight thefts, $35,000,000 and home building frauds, $25,000,000.

As a cure, Joyce advocated a deeper interest in private and public morals."

50,000 Workers On Strike.

Over 50,000 workers of the American stock-yards are out on strike. For years the workers in the stockyards have been suffering under the most terrible conditions. They prepared meat for the entire world, but for themselves they had not even bread. They had to live on stale bread and poisoned meats that could not be utilized any more by the meat barons and was thrown out into the gutters, where it was picked up by the workers' children.

The stock-yard magnates have to their aid millions of dollars. They buy gangsters and scabs. They bring daily thousands and thousands of tramps to take the places of the workers who are out on strike.

The workers, on the other hand, are determined to fight to a finish for the betterment of their conditions.

This fight is one of the most bitter that has ever taken place between workers and bosses in the United States. The strike is already felt outside of the stock-yards.

Who will win this fight? The bosses with the gangsters and scabs —or the workers?

Attacks Stand Taken by Drys; Says Prohibition Has Failed

Japan Trade Unions Now Illegal

TOKIO (By mail).—Not as long are the trade unions of Japan were comparatively indifferent to International questions. Especially to the question of the unity movement of the International trade-union movement. Changing conditions, however, are increasingly pushing these questions to the fore.

It is true, relations to the R. I. L. U. and to Amsterdam as well as solidarity with workers in other countries were always broached by a small group of left-wing leaders.

The question of setting-up contact with Chinese trade unions was often raised among the class-conscious section of the workers. This question was raised at Sodomai conferences, but all the proposals of the left wing were totally rejected, without discussion.

Oppose Solidarity.

The Central Committee of Sodomai aces every means in its power to avoid questions of international solidarity, especially when the matter concerns unity with revolutionary workers of other countries. The fact that in 1924 a telegram of greetings signed by comrade Losovsky and sent to the Sodomai conference was completely ignored by the central committee is extremely characteristic.

The Sodomai leaders, however, had nothing against international reformation. Sudzuki and Nissio, the best known Sodomai leaders, for instance, attended the International Conference of Labor in Geneva, they made a complete study of Amsterdam ideology and returning to Japan commenced energetic propaganda of reformist ideas.

International United Front.

The campaign of the Sodomai leaders to get Amsterdam principles recognized was in complete contradiction with the demands of international working-class solidarity resolutely defended by the left wing of the Japanese trade union movement. This struggle drew the attention of all trade unionists to the questions of the international united front.

On the initiative of the Geneva Labor Bureau and with the support of the Japanese government, Sudzuki, Nissio and others very soon organized an "International Association of Labor" (Kokusai—rodokukai) in Tokio, the members of which became the leaders of the right wing in various trade unions. This association began its activities as the Japanese Section of the Amsterdam International, publishing the 'International Labour," which is still coming out regularly.

Child of Ruling Class.

This association is supported by only a very small section of the Japanese workers. At the outset even the Hlogikai, the revolutionary trade union center, set up contact with it. The Hlokikai, however, soon left the association, having become convinced that this "International Association of Labor" was simply a foster-child of the ruling clique in the reformist Sodomai, which cared nothing for the resolutions set up by the Amsterdam.

After the split in the Sodomai in 1925 and with the formation of an independent left-wing Trade Union Federation—the Hlogikai, the irreconcilable position of the right and left wings in international questions were made abundantly clear.

Can Expect No Aid.

Thus, on the Chinese question the positions occupied by the Sodomai and the Hlogikai differed completely. Whereas the Hlogikai sent their representatives to China and protested against the Japanese government's support of Chinese reactionaries, the Sodomai, supporting the government, declared that "insurgent Chinese workers can expect no help from us."

The same attitude was observed on the question of international and national unity of the trade union movement. While the Sodomai leaders support a policy of disruption, the left-wing movement in the Japanese trade unions organized a "Unity League" to stop further disruption of proletarian forces inside the country.

To Discuss Tactics.

In February last the "Unity League" convened a national conference of trade union delegates to discuss tactics for the movement against the Geneva Labor Bureau. This conference was attended by representatives of trade-unions, affiliated with the league, representatives of Left trade-union organizations and also by delegates from left-wing minorities in reformist unions. All organizations and groups of the left wing within the trade-unions were represented at this conference. The only exception was the Iaigurodo Renmai —the Federation of Arsenal Workers.

For Support Of Pacific Meet.

Delegates from Hongkong and the Shanghai General Federation of Labor greeted the conference. The following decisions were accepted: to reject the right of electing a representative for the International Conference of Labor to be held in Geneva; to make every effort to achieve unity of the international trade union movement; to give every support to the Pacific Trade Union Conference to be held in May in Canton and to re-ordinate the working class of the Far East into one organization. On the Chinese question the conference decided to demand that the Japanese and British governments withdraw their troops from China, to make a categoric protest against the dispatch of fresh troops, to demand the abrogation of unequal agreements, the return of the concessions to the Chinese without compensation, the immediate and unconditional recognition of the National government, recognition of the Peking government to be withdrawn. Furthermore a resolution was taken to send immediately a telegram of greetings to the National army and to all trade unions in China and also to telegraph labor organizations in England, India, Manchuria and other countries appealing for joint action.

The conference worked under police surveillance all the time and in the end was closed down by the police. Probably due to this fact the resolutions were not sufficiently clear, having been given insufficient consideration.

Drive Syndicalism Laws Off Statutes, Says Labor Defense

CHICAGO, May 19.—"Since the U. S. supreme court has declared the California and Kansas criminal syndicalism laws constitutional it will simply intensify the drive to wipe such statutes off the books," says the International Labor Defense in commenting on the Anita Whitney case which the court disposed of in Washington May 16.

Under the ruling Anita Whitney, long a pioneer suffragette and welfare worker in California, is subject to imprisonment from 1 to 14 years because she participated in a convention of a Communist political organization that died almost as soon as it was born. The principle evidence of recitationary crime that impressed the trial jury was a red piano over which a detective had draped over an American flag in his endeavor to manufacture a case.

The International Labor Defense states:

Defense Statement.

"The decision of the United States Supreme Court on the Anita Whitney and William Burns convictions under the California 'Criminal Syndicalism' law is one of the most reactionary opinions handed down by such body in the last decade. The Supreme Court has given legal sanction to one of the most vicious pieces of capitalist class legislation in the country. Under this California law, many of the best labor fighters have been rushed into prison with the barest pretence of a trial, usually presided over by violently anti-red judges.

Is A Precedent.

"The decision of the Supreme Court will be a precedent for the continuation of the other 'criminal syndicalism' and 'criminal anarchy' laws in other states that have been used for similar purposes, in essence the revival and legislation of a whole set of 'Alien and Sedition Laws' which existed about 150 years ago and which were repudiated by virtually the entire American people.

Class Prejudice.

"The obvious class prejudice which went into the opinion of the Supreme Court proves conclusively again the need of organizing a strong, united national working class movement for the elimination of these capitalist class laws and the clipping of the claws which have already taken their bitter toll of labor men and women. A big movement must be begun immediately, especially in California where the law has been used most viciously and widely, for the release of all the 'criminal syndicalism' prisoners, the removal of the law from the statute books, and the re-establishment of the right of all labor organizations to function freely and openly and without molestation from the legal tools of the manufacturers, bankers and business men of reartionary California.

"Every labor organization throughout of the country must immediately express its protest at this latest anti-labor act of the Supreme Court."

Arrest 3 Workers For Distributing Leaflets Outside of Cafeteria

Three members of the Delicatessen Countermen's Union Local 302, have been arrested outside the B. and B. Cafeteria, 280 West 38th St. on the complaint of the bosses. They had been distributing leaflets informing the public that the cafeteria, that had just opened, was not employing union workers.

Several days before the opening, representatives of the union had approached the cafeteria owners and suggested that they hire union workers. This they had refused, the distributing of the leaflets being the result.

The arrested workers, A. Fiukelstein, H. Grusky and I. Dressen, were held in $25 bail each by Magistrate Jesse Silverman for trial next Friday.

Rift in Cal's Church Over the Pastor's Faux Pas

WASHINGTON, May 19.—A serious split in President Coolidge's church, the first congregational, was reported threatening today as a result of the $50,000 libel suit brought against the pastor, the Rev. Jason Noble Pierce, by Howard T. Cole, government engineer.

Cole sued the pastor because of a letter Dr. Pierce wrote the shipping board demanding Cole be fired because of his alleged relations with a women member of the first congregational. Pierce charged that the engineer had "taken advantage" of his parishioner and then refused to marry her.

Prominent members of the church were represented today as being highly indignant over the publicity the church has received.

Members of the board of deacons, among whom is Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, were reported aroused over the impression that has gone forth that the church maintain an "espionage system" over members. This impression was thrown out by one paragraph from Dr. Pierce's letter to the shipping board which stated that deacons of the church had followed Cole and assisted in obtaining evidence against the engineer.

Scranton Carpenters Pat for Higher Pay

SCRANTON, Pa., May 19.—Striking carpenters here are standing pat for the $10 scale and a revision of working conditions. Out since April 1, they have rejected compromise offers from bosses.

Electricians, attempting to negotiate a new agreement with their employers, are deadlocked and may call a strike to enforce their demands.

Thirty-five Battleships In Effort to Land 13,000 Troops Here

CAMP ADAMS, Newport, R. I., May 19.—"The battle of New England is virtually staked and the American defenses are ready for war" when they pocketed 13,000 troops landed by the "British" armada and established them with heavy artillery fire, it was unofficially announced today.

Ten enemy transports with 20,000 men on board were theoretically sunk during the engagement.

The nine forts along the coast were reduced fifty per cent by battleship fire. Losses were heavy on both sides.

Today the war game was practically over. The principal expeditionary force of 13,000 man that had been landed in the beaches east of Narragansett Bay over a front of twenty miles had been "boxed" by the five divisions of defensive troops and from a hilltop stronghold the position of the enemy was "hopeless."

The enemy's main body and protecting vessels passed No Man's Land, Whistling Buoy, Martha's Vineyard, last night and turned into Buzard's Bay. They moved up Buzzard's Bay at midnight and assumed their landing formation.

Meanwhile the enemy was making feints at other points along the shore toward the west with the hope of deceiving the "Blue" commander.

Point Judith was put under fire and a land attempted there, but this movement was repelled. Early today five transports anchored several miles west of the Vineyard sound light. "British" battleships poured heavy fire into Point Judith.

Forts on shore and the Yankee scouting fleet engaged the enemy and sank ten enemy transports.

Another feint at a landing was made in the virinity of the mouth of the Connecticut river. This attack, too, was easily repelled.

Then the "British" made their main landing east of Narragansett Bay. The first and second waves that landed consisted of infantry, tanks and mountain artillery. The "enemy" extended their line across a stretch of from eighteen to twenty miles long, all the way from Littleton, through Adamsville and over to South Dartmouth. When this move became apparent to the "blue" command, five divisions of troops held in reserve were moved to the scene.

Six Thousand Vote To Strike Together On Pere Marquette

DETROIT, May 19.—A strike vote among six thousand employes of the Pere Marquette railroad was overwhelmingly in favor of walking out, say offirials of the unions involved.

The railroad recently granted a wage increase of 7½ per cent. to members of the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

The organizations involved over a long period of time have exhausted every possible effort to reach an adjustment through negotiations with the company and by mediation with the assistance of the United States Board of Mediation. When mediation failed, the mediators urged both parties to agree to arbitration, which the railway company refused to do.

Employes of each branch of the services named were polled, whether members of the union or not, and the percentages in each branch voting to strike were as follows:

Labor leaders at Chicago declared the strike grew out of the refusal of the Pere Marquette officials to negotiate disputes. The men, it is understood, declare the interpretation put by the management on regulations governing working conditions is at variance with the interpretation in effect on other roads throughout the country.

Tornado Devastates Middle West; 6 May Die in Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS, May 19.—Six of the victims of the tornado which devastated 175 residential blocks of Indianapolis last night may die, physicians said today.

Thirty-five others had been cared for in hospitals, a check this morning showed. More than 100 other received first aid treatments at fire stations, drug stores and in their homes. Seventeen injured remained in hospitals today.

Estimates of the property damage ran into millions of dollars.

It was estimated today between 300 and 400 homes were wrecked and that between 1,000 and 1,500 persons were homeless.

The Traction Scandal Exposed

made millions of dollars unfolded? Who is behind the deal?

No one can even begin to understand the answer to these questions who does not read Theodore Dreiser for many years have the moving force behind the operation of the New York City and State government. It is the invisible power behind the dummy political organizations which appear to rule these governments.

In the offices of the Morgan Banking Interests in Wall Street have been pulled the strings not only which operate the city traction lines but in those same offices have been drawn the wires which control the officials in the City Hall at New York and in the Executive Chamber at Albany.

Are these facts which are being reported or are they merely surmises and speculation? Evidence will be laid before the reader which will more than bear out these accusations.

The loss to the city through the operation of the subway lines under the so-called "Dual Subway Contracts" is a figure of nearly $17,000,000 yearly. Every year this huge sum is placed on the city budget to be paid directly by the tax payers and indirectly by the wage earners of the city. Since the beginning of the deal for this Dual Operation, the city has lost for the lines of operation alone, a staggering sum which is rapidly approaching One Hundred Fifty Millions of Dollars. If the city should carry out the terms of the present method of operation for the stipulated 49 years it would then have sunk in interest and sinking fund the figure of nearly $700,000,000.

But the city has already sunk over $300,000,000 as original principal investment in these subways. The total would make the colossal figure of ONE BILLION DOLLARS.

Even if it were possible for the city to continue under the present dasl, and even if the proposed 10 reut fare steal were not about to be executed, would the city be free and clean at the end of the stipulated 49 years of the contract? Not at all!

THE CITY WOULD STILL BE IN DEBT TO THE COMPANIES AN AMOUNT IN EXCESS OF $700,000,000.

For this figure represents the interest on the amount the city is already in debt to the Traction Trust as a result of past defirits. This is also assuming that the present rate of loss does not grow larger.

And on top of all this there is now about to be completed the ten rent fare steal!

In what direction shall the people of the city turn for relief from this organized and unprecedented swindle?

There is, for instance, the possibility of going to the Governor of the State, Alfred E. Smith. Al Smith has uniformly maintained the reputation of being "the friend of the people." Al Smith is rated among the most popular governors in the history of the state. At election time, not only the people as a mass, but the organized labor movement, prartirally the whole liberal section of the public and even the Socialists line up behind him in a body.

But is this not the same Al Smith who through his Tammany-controlled judge issued the injunction against the Traction Workers in their unhindered swindle now being perpetrated?

Is this not the same Al Smith who at the time that the gangster Industrial Squad beat up the I. R. T. strikers and when the appeal was made to him for action, failed even to answer to the wire sent him by the strikers?

Is this not the same Al Smith, this outstanding Democratic Candidate for the presidency, the one who sat across the table with Frank Hedley, Jerry Dahl and some others in a secret pre-election Traction deal not so many months ago?

And if we were to turn to the Transit Commission for relief, would we find there any remedy?

Are not some of these Transit Commissioners the personal friends of this same Al Smith and indirectly the ready and willing servants of the Traction Trust?

And are not others of these Transit Commissioners, the personal friends of certain Insurance Company directors who at the same time are directors of the Interborough Rapid Transit Co.?

And are not these Transit Commissioners playing the game of the Traction Interests who are directly linked up through Interlocking Directorates with the Big Four Insurance exposures which even now The DAILY WORKER is disclosing to the public?

And if we should turn to the liberal press for relief could we not there hope for a champion of the people's cause? Is there not at least one large liberal daily which "always opposes privileged classes and public plunderers?"

But is not the executive editor of that same daily one of those who attended this secret Traction Meeting at which Al Smith was present?

And the Mayor of the City?

Chinese Bail to Raise Funds For School of Own

New York's Chinatown will witness of a new experience next month when the first school for Chinese workers ever established in America will be opened by the Chinese Workers' Alliance with funds raised at a concert and ball tonight at Webster Hall.

More than 9,000 Chinese restaurant and laundry workers live in New York City and vicinity but eighty percent of them are unable to speak English, according to R. C. Fay, Director of the Alliance. Separated from the American labor movement by their inability to communicate with the organized workers, the Chinese are terribly exploited working from ten to fourteen hours for a wage of $25 to $30. Laundry workers receive somewhat higher pay but their hours are long and no holidays are given.

The Chinese Workers' Alliance is the only organization which is striving to raise the standard of living of these workers. At present, the Baptist Church is conducting the only public English classes which are open to the Chinese Workers of Chinatown. The Chinese Workers' Alliance School will be a real workers' school teaching trade unionism and English.

Tickets for the concert and ball, "A Night in New China" are on sale at Jimmie Higgins, the Workers' School and the Civic Club.

Can Revoke Permits, Says Mexican Court Curbing Oil Kings

MEXICO CITY, May 19.—The Mexican Government's right to revoke drilling permits granted to petroleum companies prior to the enactment of the regulatory petroleum laws was legally established today through a decision handed down by the Supreme Court yesterday.

The case in question was that of the Mexican Gulf Oil Company in which the Mellon family of Pittsburg, Pa., is said to be heavily interested. This company had appealed to the Supreme Court in order to test the authority of the government to revoke drilling licenses issued before the petroleum laws were enacted and all the judges voted to uphold the government's authority.

It was held by the Supreme Court that it is against the public interest to permit exploitation of oil resources in a manner "which is in violation of the present decision."

Huerta Smuggles Arms

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, May 19.—Enrique Breceda, alias W. B. Hamilton, a federal warrant for whose arrest was issued at Turson, Ariz., late yesterday on charges of conspiracy against the United States and exporting arms and ammunition into Mexico in violation of a presidential proclamation, was arrested by government operatives.

Breceda, aligned with the De La Huerta faction seeking the overthrow of the present government of Mexico, it is charged, was arrested by government operatives.

Will Hays, ex-G. O. P. Boss Busy Keeping the Movie Stars Out of Sin

LOS ANGELES, May 19. Tom Herrirk, motion picture cowboy, was murdered some time ago Sarah Herrick, the slain man's widow, Henry Isabell, Anita Davis, Joe Hunt and Iria Burns were arrested and indicted for murder. The trial is being presided over by Judge Carlos Hardy. This purist played a prominent part as a defense witness during the court hearings of another Hollywood character, Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson.

Serious crimes, and milder forms of moral turpitude, are common happenings, almost daily in the movie colony and vicinity. Being the "pope" of the moving picture industry, Will Hays, the former republican party boss, has his hands full trying to enforce meek, christian morality among his sinful Hollywood "Children". He was here recently on such a mission.

The main trouble in movieland is too much money for booze, dope, and "good times", for a few—and not half enough for food, clothing and shelter for the many.

Marriage Forces U. S. Citizenship on Mexican President's Daughter

TUCKSON, Ariz., May 19.—The daughter of the President of Mexico was an American citizen today following the marriage of Senorita Ernestina Calles to Thomas A Robinson of New York.

Robinson and his bride were honeymooning today, driving along the border in an official automobile of the Mexican Government. They were married yesterday in a simple service at Nogales.

New Conspiracies at Shanghai.

The arrival in Shanghai from Peking of Sir Miles Lampson, British minister to China; the departure from Hankow for Shanghai of Basil Newton, and the arrival in Shanghai from Nanking of the imperialist hireling, Chiang Kai-shek, can have but one meaning. These conspirators from the three alleged capitals of the conflicting forces trying to establish or maintain governments are to hold conferences in order to devise means of dealing with the situation confronting the imperialists.

Regardless of the official screen behind which these conferences will be at least partly concealed one fact stands out clearly. These marauders are preparing new attacks upon the nationalist liberation movement. Britain is exerting itself to the utmost to maintain the leading position in the fight against the revolution. It is sorely disappointed because its bought-and-paid-for lackey, Chiang Kai-shek, was not able to consolidate a government. The failure of that traitor and the right wing elements of the Kuomintang to stage a counter-revolutionary putsch, disguised behind revolutionary slogans, imposes on the imperialists the necessity of devising new plans to achieve their aim. The Nanking "government" has remained nothing but a military staff without an army. The mercenaries that still remain are insistently demanding money for their services. Chiang will probably demand from his British and American paymasters that they place substantial funds at his disposal. His attempts to impose heavy taxes upon the merchants have failed, because the first demand of the bourgeoisie, face to face with the demands of the workers and peasants making up the overwhelming majority of the Kuomintang, was that Chiang and his Nanking "government" stop making grandiose gestures about a march toward Peking and make peace with Chang Tso-lin.

Sir Miles Lampson is at least officially, if not actually, the head of the British diplomatic forces in China. He has been watching events in Peking. His underling, Basil Newton, has been spying upon the Kuomintang government at Hankow, and his departure for Shanghai was accomplished by the announcement that Britain will not deal with that government "because it has failed to make good its claim to govern in accordance with the standards of a responsible modern government." In Shanghai they will take inventory of the situation and concoct new military ventures.

This action of the British was followed by an announcement from an inspired source at Washington that "the state department will not follow the lead of Britain and break relations with the government of the Central Yangtze valley" (Hankow). Nevertheless the U. S. government carries out its own interventionist policy and increases its armed forces in Chinese soil and in Chinese waters.

Failure to induce the other powers to plunge madly into official intervention, in place of the underhanded war that is now being waged against the nationalist movement, imposes upon the agents of that nation the necessity of trying to get what it can out of the old game of subsidizing military lords. If Chiang Kai-shek gets further support from Britain he will have to agree to peace terms with Chang Tso-lin and participate in a concerted drive against the nationalists. That much is perfectly clear.

That this latest move of Britain will result in another fiasco is indicated by the fact that while the conferences are proceeding at Shanghai the army of Feng Yu-siang, formerly known as the "christian general," now in command of nationalist forces, is driving toward Honan-fu, while the main force of the nationalists is sweeping upward from the south toward the same objective. The military strategy of the Hankow forces is for both armies to meet at Chengchow, where the Peking and Lunghai railways cross. That point is the key to the entire northern military situation and will place the revolutionary forces in the strongest position they have ever occupied.

Without the meddling of the imperialist agents in China, the nationalist liberation forces would make mighty short work of their nati- enemies. The one thing that stands in the way of consolidation of a centralized government in China is the intervention of British, American, Japanese and other agents of imperialism.

The Class Angle of the Sacco-Vanzetti Case Must Not Be Blurred.

There is grave danger that the great outpouring of protest against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti now coming from liberal sources which have remained silent during the six and one-half years of mental and physical torture to which these innocent workers have been subjected, will blur the class lines of the case.

If there was ever a case in the United States in which the defendants were railroaded to death because of their activities and opinions as workers, the Sacco-Vanzetti case is it. As in the Mooney case from the day the accusation was laid the radical activities of the defendants have been stressed by the prosecution and have furnished it with most of its ammunition.

Little is heard of this aspect of the case in recent protests. The motives of the recent liberal recruits to the Sacco-Vanzetti defense are plain—the wish to counteract the widespread disillusionment among the American masses relative to the impartiality of capitalist courts which has grown up as a result of the exposures of the objectives and methods of the law enforcing machinery in the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

To a large section of the middle class and professional elements, a new trial or a review of the case has become a burning necessity. Otherwise there will remain among millions of workers the opinion that American courts are purely class instruments—a correct opinion but one which is so dangerous to capitalist and middle class peace of mind that even Judge Thayer may be sacrificed as the lesser of two evils.

The defense of Sacco and Vanzetti has suddenly become respectable and herein lies the danger. The American workingclass movement must not allow the would-be murderers of these two workers to explain away their crimes on the basis of the vagaries of one or more individuals. The class angle of the case must be kept to the front and the revolutionary section of the working-class which began and kept up the fight in the case of hostility and apathy must not allow the Sacco-Vanzetti case to be used to prove that no such thing as the class struggle exists in America.

Sacco and Vanzetti must be freed. They must be freed by the mass pressure of American toilers just as this mass pressure has kept them from the clutches of the executioners of capitalism so far.

We welcome the support of those elements which even at this late hour protest against the execution of two innocent men but we cannot allow the fact that Sacco and Vanzetti have suffered the tortures of the damned for more than six years because they are revolutionary workingmen, to be hidden under a last minute flood of humanitarian appeals—many of which, as already stated, have as their purpose the preservation of the fiction of the impartiality of capitalist courts.

Pioneers to Hear Famous Educators Discuss Schools

The "Young Pioneer Camp" have arranged a symposium on the question:

"Does the present educational system in the United States meet the needs of the children of the American Workers?"

Speakers on this most important subject will be:

Prof. Scott-Nearing, Bertran D. Wilfe, Director Workers School, Dr. Benzion Lieber, author of "The Child in the Home," Joe Freeman, just returned from Soviet Russia, and others.

In addition, a very fine program will be given by the "Young Pioneer Campers."

A short play, recitations, and a demonstration of activities and life in camp will be staged by the children.

Workers of New York will help the "Young Pioneer Camp" and will spend a profitable evening and enjoy a good time.

Tickets can be obtained at Jimmie Higgins Book Shop, 106 University Pl. and at 108 E. 14th St., Room 41.

Pass Resolutions in Favor of Advancement Children's Movement

At the Young Pioneer Camp conference held Monday evening at the Labor Temple, 14th St. and Second Ave., resolutions were adopted indorsing the work of the conference.

They point out the need of building children's working class organizations as an effective means of counteracting the anti-labor propaganda they receive at school and thru the work of such organizations as the boy scouts.

The need of a permanent workers' children camp is indorsed in the resolution and the campaign to raise $15,000 by the sale of $5 shares is approved.

Jobs Get Still Scarcer in Illinois

By LELAND OLDS (Federated Press).

Illinois employment which started to decline in March, a month sooner than in 1926, continued the slow downward trend with a decline of 0.9% between March and April, according to the Illinois department of labor. This brings April employment in Illinois factories to a level 3.9% below April 1926 and establishes the lowest mark since August 1925.

There were fewer workers on Illinois factory payrolls this April than in any April since 1922. The reduction compared with April 1923 amounts to 13.7% which means loss of jobs to upwards of 90,000 workers.

Many Want Work.

With the begining of the outdoor work season the free employment offices reported 184 applicants for each 100 jobs compared with 174 for each 100 jobs in March. But in spite of this improvement the number seeking jobs is higher than in any April since 1921 when the industrial depression was at its worst. In April 1926 there were 129 applicants for each 100 jobs.

The department remarks that the lockout of coal miners which began April 1 has increased the competition for jobs at only 1 of the free employment offices so far. Offices reporting high ratios of applicants to jobs were Cicero with 186 for each 100 jobs, Quincy with 173, Chicago with 186 and Aurora with 162.

Fewer Tailors Needed.

Clothing establishments led the decline with a drop of 4.8% in employment. The April cut in women's clothing jobs was the greatest in 5 years. Meat packing establishments laid off 1.3% of their workers, oil refineries 5.1%, shoe factories 5.2% and leather factories 4.9%. A drop of 3.1% in furniture was largely responsible for the 1.8% decline in employment in the wood products group. Machinery, electrical apparatus and agricultural implement manufacturers all reported fewer workers than in March.

The only important job gains in April were increases of 2.3% in textiles and 1.3% in building material industries. There was a seasonal gain of 9.4% in workers employed by building contractors.

Worse in New York State

Employment in factories in New York state declined even more sharply than in Illinois, according to the New York industrial commissioner. The reduction between March and April was about 2%, bringing employment nearly 5% under April 1926. The commissioner says:

"This year March failed to show an increase and this fact together with a decline in April as large as usual in April leaves the employment index for the month from 4 to 5% lower than a year ago. The employment level for the first 4 months of 1927 was lower than for the same period in any year since 1922".

Heavy reductions in the clothing industries and considerable reductions in most of the metal trades more than balanced gains in building material and auto jobs. Employment in New York factories is now nearly 15% lower than in 1923. This means loss of jobs to about 150,000 workers.

Two lockouts remain a menace to Chicago labor. The White (formerly Regan) Printing House persists in lame attempts to run openshop in spite of a heavy loss of business. Over 200 men and women are on strike pay as a result. The union millright shops which locked out 3,000 inside carpenters last week are not attempting to operate with scabs. A number of the shops have reopened at the old scale of $1.20 an hour. $1.25 is demanded by the union and $1.10 was offered by the bosses. (The Federated Press erroneously reported the old scale as $1.25 in a previous notice.)

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Editor, The DAILY WORKER:

I am unable to get contributions to help you now, but am sending my own check for $20. Wishing you great success, Sincerely,—Mrs. T. M. Nagle, Wesleyville, Erie Co., Penna.

Editor, The DAILY WORKER:

I am closing an article from "The American Appeal" (which paper is being mailed to be unsolicited), which I consider a splendid example of how the "Appeal" carries on the struggle for the workers.

As a worker I am not interested in the opinions of the employers' groups, even tho they are voiced, as the editor points out, "by one of the more liberal of American business men." It is about time that self-styled "labor" paper cease preaching class collaboration and defeatism and come out in the open on the side of the employers.

Please find the small sum of one dollar (will do better next time) which I have enclosed to help The DAILY WORKER.—Fred T. Douglas, Boston, Mass.

I. W. W. and The Chinese Revolution

Editor, The Daily Worker:

In a recent issue of "Industrial Solidarity" there was devoted considerable space to the present trend of events in China. But while the news columns show a sympathy for the Chinese liberation movement and against the betrayal of Chiang Kai-shek, there is an article on the last page in which the writer shows himself to be opposed to imperialism, but declines to take a stand openly on the side of the revolutionary Chinese masses. The only thing he does is to "shrug."

Are the present-day Wobblies thinking in harmony with the other petty-bourgeois liberals, yellow socialists and other pink supporters of the present order, who also "shrug" the head to see the significance of present-day events?

Force Leaders to Take Stand

I should like to ask the Wobblies: Can they see the difference between the propaganda of British imperialism and that of the Communists? Can the I. W. W. find no group of class interested in the Chinese revolution to line up with?

I know that the rank and file of the I. W. W. (especially on the west coast) have a strong sympathy not only for the struggling Chinese masses but also with the Soviet Union. It is time that they demand some open stand on the part of the leaders.

55th St. Cinema Opens With Russian Picture

A new intimate theatre, especially built for the showing of pictures, will open tonight at 154 West 55th Street. The Fifty-fifth Street Cinema, as the playhouse is called, seats but 299, all on one floor. The theatre is sponsored by the Art Cinema League, a new organization headed by M. Maiman, who seeks to present films of special merit, which may not have an opportunity of reaching the screen elsewhere.

The premiere program will feature "The Marriage of the Bear," the second Russian picture to be released in America by Amkino, the producers of that remarkable film "Potemkin." The opening program will also be composed of specially selected short subjects, including a color film with Maude Adams and a short picture titled "Magician of Talao" an Arabian night story in animated silhouette by Ewald Schummacker, by the German artist and director, produced by F. Maris Johnson expressly for the Fifty-fifth Street Cinema.

Broadway Briefs

At the Cosmopolitan theatre this evening Lawrence J. Anhalt will offer his revival of Gilbert and Sullivan's merry burlesque, "Ruddigore," with a cast including many of the players who appeared in the Park Theatre revival six years ago when "Ruddigore" ran beyond 200 performances.

"Tampico", from the novel by Joseph Hergesheimer, adapted by the author and Bartlett Cormack, is announced for early production next season by Jones and Green. This is said to be Hergesheimer's first play to appear on the stage.

Don Tompkins, a youthful hopeful who has been appearing with "Queen High" in Boston and Philadelphia, has been engaged by Schwab and Mandel for their new college musical comedy, "Hold 'Em Helen."

Richard S. Aldrich, manager of The Jitney Players, announces that the repertory for their fifth summer tour of New England and Long Island will include "The Duenna" by Richard Brinsley Sheridan, with the musical score by Alfred Reynolds; "Charming Leandre," by Theodore de Banville; "Sunset," by Jerome K. Jerome; "Comedy & Tragedy" by W. S. Gilbert; and "The Dead Shot," by J. B. Buckstone.

Sam Janney, author of "Loose Ankles" is going in for producing. He will present his new comedy, "A Very Wise Virgin," at the Bijou theatre, on June 2, with the following

Famous Heretic Bishop Speaks for Relief of Needle Workers in Jail

Under the auspices of the Committee of One Hundred, Bishop William Montgomery Brown is to speak at Central Opera House, East 67th Street near 3rd Avenue, on Wednesday evening, May 25th for the relief of imprisoned furriers, cloakmakers and dressmakers.

In addition to the rebel bishop, Paxton Hibben will be a speaker, and other members of the committee will talk briefly on the campaign for relief funds.

Admission will be 25 cents.

Both Sides "Win" in Sons of Italy Fight

Both factions in the Order of Sons of Italy in America claimed as a victory the Supreme Court decision handed down in Buffalo on Monday in regard to the legal status of the New York Grand Lodge.

The New York Lodge seceded in 1925 because the parent body had sent greetings to Mussolini. The court has ruled that it had no right to secede without affiliating itself with another fraternal organization of similar aims and purposes.

The court also decided that the election held by the so-called "loyal" faction at the time of this break was illegal, and a new election by the entire lodge must be held at once.

While the New York Lodge is not associated with the anti-fascist forces in America, it has steadily refused to endorse fascism as the parent body has done. Prominent in this seceding group are Congressman Fiorello La Guardia and Justice Cotillo.

Added to the differences which have caused the long factional fight in the organization, the New York lodge will now be faced with the question of taking an oath which the parent body has recently prescribed for all members. This oath pledges that the member is a "loyal Italian," who supports the king and the Italian government. Every member is required to subscribe to this oath, or resign from the lodge.

BERLIN, May 18.—Thousands of Communists yesterday paraded through the main streets of the city, carrying red and black flags and banners demanding the release of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Paper Box Makers Carry on Fight at Meeting Thursday

The Paper Box Makers' Union will meet Thursday at 6 p. m. at Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East 4th St.

As the paper box industry has not yet recovered from the 19 weeks' strike of last winter, the union is still feeling its effects. This mass meeting will therefore be a great event in the face of those conditions.

The organization campaign carried on by the union for the past two months has been a success with the slogan, "Bring The Union Back Into The Shops" in vogue with paper box makers. The officials of the union with the full assistance of the Executive Board and active members are working towards that goal.

Speakers include:

A representative of the International Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Makers' Union, John Conlin, secretary of the New York Central Trades Council, M. Feinstone, secretary United Hebrew Trades, Rose Schneiderman of the Women's Trade Union League, William Karlin, prominent attorney, Dr. Ch. C. Webber of Church of All Nations and Norman Thomas.

TAKE BOYS FROM SCHOOL FOR NAVY

Desperate efforts to stimulate enlistment in the army, navy and marines, even to the extent of taking boys from school were indicated yesterday in the publication of a recruiting appeal aimed directly at parents.

Another, an indirect effort to bolster enlistment through boosting a Broadway film, was revealed in letters sent from the Board of Education to all school teachers in New York City. This appeal not only aims at enlistment but at the enrichment of the exhibitors' coffers. "Rough Riders," the picture glorifying Theodore Roosevelt at the time of his questioned ride up San Juan Hill.

"Perhaps YOUR BOY does not want to go to school longer than required by law," reads the leaflet of the recruiting service, located at 39 Whitehall St. "He can serve a military post near his home or go to distant land." Such as Nicaragua, Panama, Haiti, China and the Philippines, the recruiters may have added.

Harness That Restless Feeling.

"The Army satisfies that restless feeling," the appeal continues, "to which all normal young men are subject. Have a talk with a recruiting sergeant anywhere in the city or call at headquarters."

The Rough Riders advertisement was sent out on a missionary bearing the imposing inscription:

"Board of Education of the City of New York, office of the Director of Lectures and Visual Instruction, 500 Park Avenue."

Ernest L. Crandall, the director, winds up his letter, practically an order for school teachers to fall in line with their pupils, in these words:

"Spirit of the Times."

"Based on the exploits of President Roosevelt at San Juan Hill, The Rough Riders manages to catch the spirit of the times and to present them, in all their historical and educational significance, through the medium of a well-ordered and highly pleasing scenario. There is a love story that holds the attention, comedy which provokes laughter continuously, patriotic and stirring drama, and all the other ingredients of good motion picture entertainment. And for those interested in education, there is the deeper condition of the influence of such a picture on the understanding and knowledge of history.

"Through a special arrangement, Mr. H. C. Hoagland, (Chickering 1750), who is in charge of the presentation of The Rough Riders has agreed to make reductions in prices for groups of twelve or more wishing to attend. He will also arrange for such groups to sit in a body in the theatre. I hope you will make an effort to see the picture."

Convoy, a navy film which lasted only one week on Broadway, was also the subject of free advertising, this time by the Navy Recruiting Station at 34 E. 23rd St. Proclaimed to be "produced with the cooperation of the U. S. Navy and officially approved by Secretary Wilbur, Convoy is used as a vehicle to stimulate much-needed enlistment for America's various imperialistic ventures.

Atheism to Clash With Rev. Straton; Row Over Uldine

The Rev. John Roach Straton and fundamentalism are scheduled to clash head-on on May 24 with Charles Smith and the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism.

Straton, the rabid anti-evolutionist who gets $10,000 a year for his services as pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, claims Smith pastors him with atheist literature. Smith retorts that the Rev. Straton is another.

The case will be heard in West Side court next week.

Straton is in dutch with a faction of his own church which resents his eagerness to attain the headlines. The holy man's contract to write a series for the evening Hearst paper on the Snyder-Gray case, served hot from the court room, was the straw that broke the camel's back. Straton was told to climb back into his pulpit and stay there.

Loses 1.71 Uldins

And then again, the Calvary medicine man has been plagued because such a good box-office attraction as Uldine Utley, the "child" evangelist whose age is estimated variously from 14 to 24, has been lost. Uldine climbed up the golden ladder to fame in Straton's pulpit, but lately she has been cashing in under new management. Last Saturday night she evangelised at Carnegie Hall while the Rev. Straton was holding a counter-rally across the street.

Efforts to pull Uldine down from her perch under the provisions of the child labor law have been fruitless so far. Little Uldine has no "working papers" permitting her to play hookey from school but the school authorities have winked at the violation.

The last meeting of the board was on January 9 when the elders strictly forbade Straton to collect side money of $50,000 as supreme bokuss-pokus of the Klan. The next meeting is Tuesday.

Strike at Sing Sing Wins Better Food as Men Quit Their Work

Sing Sing prisoners showed New York needle trades something in snappy strike action when they pulled a highly effective strike.

Sixty-five men were back on the job yesterday with all demands granted and none the worse save for "isolation" for a few hours. Gravel mixed with poorly baked beans brought on the spontaneous walkout, engineered by officers of the "union."

Sergeant-at-Arms Fred Horan and 12 deputies of the Mutual Welfare League started the strike when they resigned from the league in a body as a protest on the wretched food served under the "model" administration of Warden Lawes. Twelve prison barbers promptly discarded razors and scissors and 40 men in the knitting mill left their machines as the strike call spread quickly through the prison.

Warden Lawes has promised to improve the menu.

Standard Oil Miller Won't Delay Hearings

Just because a big gun like former Governor Nathan L. Miller is going to boom for the B.-M. T. in the transit hearings scheduled for next Monday is no reason for postponing the whole affair. So decided Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the present governor's transit commission.

Miller is now engaged in the highly profitable job of defending the Standard Oil in an Indianapolis case.

SURVEY OF U. S. DEPT. OF LABOR INVESTIGATOR STATES 8-HR. WORK LAWS FOR WOMEN HELPFUL

By LAURENCE TODD,
Federated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Propaganda against laws which limit the hours to be worked by women in industry has been carried throughout the country by the National Woman's Party of feminists on the one hand, and by organized employers on the other, until it has come up against a granite wall of facts. The women's bureau of the U. S. department of labor announces the result of a careful study of the eight hour law for women in industry. This study has been made by Miss Mary N. Winslow, and it covered industries and women's occupations in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, New York, Ohio, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana and California. Interviews with more than 1,000 working women were secured, on the effects of labor legislation.

The substance of the testimony of these 1,000 witnesses was that the laws regulating or limiting hours of work for women wage earners had shortened their hours, had shortened men's hours also, and had standardized working hours throughout whole communities. Far from being a handicap, as claimed by the groups of professional and leisure-class women who have been seeking the repeal of these laws, the legislation has been a distinct advantage to women in industry.

For one thing, eight-hour laws for women have opened up more jobs for them. Again, where employment of women at night was forbidden by law, and continuous operation of the industry was necessary, men were given the night shifts and women who have been employed at night were given daytime work.

Law Beneficial.

"The conclusions drawn from the investigation," says the women's bureau, "were that the claims of discrimination which have been made by those who felt that there should be no legislation applying especially to women were not justified by the facts. The testimony of more than a thousand women who were interviewed by the bureau showed that legislation had not handicapped them except in a very few instances."

These few instances had to do with such professional or semi-professional groups as women pharmacists, who might want to be employed at night, and the few women who would seek jobs that in some states are considered not suitable for women—such as gas and electric meter reading, taxi-driving, electric and acetylene welding and steel grinding. The investigation disclosed that in states permitting women to work at these jobs, some women have proved reliable and efficient workers. In Philadelphia, a firm employes women as taxi-drivers and is well satisfied with their work; in Ohio, women are not permitted to drive taxis.

Women pharmacists are barred from jobs more often by the prejudices of employers and prospective customers of the drugstores than by laws forbidding them to work nights or more than 8 hours, the survey shows. In California and Wisconsin, women pharmacists are exempted from the labor laws, being considered quite able to look out for themselves in wage bargaining.

Miss Winslow concluded that there is need to differentiate between various types of employment, in legislating for protection of women in industry, in order that the laws may serve their actual purpose, which is to safeguard industrial conditions for women who are unable to protect themselves in dealing with employers as to hours and conditions of their work. The great mass of working women need and defend this protective legislation. The favored few may not need it.

HATCH RAID ON JOINT BOARD TO 'FIND' FORGERIES

Plan Small Imitation of Arcos Outrage

Evidently inspired by the same bright idea which led Scotland Yard to make its recent raid on "Arcos" in London, the reactionary officials of the International Furriers' Union and the A. F. of L. reorganization committee have been hatching a raid on the furriers' Joint Board re The DAILY WORKER has learned from three different sources.

The scheme is that someone from the traitors' band—or some clever forger hired for the purpose—shall manufacture a paper bearing "instructions from Moscow" as to the conduct of the present struggle against the reactionary forces of the International. This document is to be carefully "planted" somewhere in the Joint Board building, and then a raid is to be staged by the police—of whose cooperation Edward F. McGrady, A. F. of L. organizer, has frequently boasted—and the Moscow document will be "discovered."

No doubt it would be "found" just on the eve of the convention; or possibly when the $100,000 Union Defense Fund had been completed and the workers were fully organized to resist every phase of the attack by employers and right wing. But now that the scheme has become known, the traitors will have to think up a new one. Nothing like this one will find favor with the workers, or stop the steady mobilization activities which are going on at the Joint Board headquarters.

Expect Furrier Decision

While the Joint Board has been expecting each day this week to have some word regarding the release of the nine fur workers in Mineola, on certificates of reasonable bail, it is confidently believed that the decision of Judge Mitchell May will be made known today. If the certificates are granted, the men can be released on bail pending an appeal of their case to a higher court.

Officials of the International were given an unexpected reception on Tuesday night when they went to Newark to address a meeting to which they had invited only a very few of the members of Local 25. They had carefully selected those members whom they thot were right wing sympathizers, and they had summoned them by letter to come to Kruger's Hall to begin the job of breaking up Local 25.

To their surprise, several hundred fur workers came to hear what the reactionary leaders had to say, and they were so upset they could not give the speeches of denunciation which they had intended. Pistro Lucci, whose ambition is to be the manager of Local 25, and A. Perkin, one of their wh who wants to force Lucci on the unwilling membership, came to the meeting hall with a half dozen scabs from various Jersey cities. Four of them had formerly belonged to the Newark local but were put out as scabbing.

Ida M. Tarbell, former progressive who is whitewasher of Elbert Gary and other industrialists have made her a pet of reaction, nevertheless addressed a letter to the governor demanding that the Dedham trial and declaring Sacco and Vanzetti to be "martyrs to their faith."

Philadelphia to Fore.

Noted Philadelphia educators, including the presidents of Bryn Mawr and Haverford colleges and the dean and faculty of the law school of the University of Pennsylvania have asked a review of the case. Among the signers are:

W. W. Comfort, president of Haverford College; Marion Edwards Parks, president of Bryn Mawr College; William E. Mikell, dean of the law school, University of Pennsylvania; Richard M. Gummere, headmaster, Penn Charter School; Charles F. Jenkins, president, Farm Journal; Edmund Stirling, editorial staff, Philadelphia Public Ledger; Carl E. Grammer, rector, St. Stephen's Episcopal Church; Frederick R. Griffin.

Phonograph Records.

Italian Boston was swirled today over the appearance of two Sacco-Vanzetti phonograph records. One is entitled "A Hymn Dedicated to Sacco and Vanzetti" and another "Protest per Sacco e Vanzetti." They were selling fast down around Hanover St.

J. P. Morgan Rejected "Angel" for Episcopal Bishop of Long Island

J. P. Morgan, commonly regarded as the most powerful figure in the investment world, is digging up $15,000 to keep the Episcopal bishop on Long Island. This was the report current yesterday when the right rev. Ernest M. Stires announced belatedly that his salary had been paid by a "friend of the diocese."

Chicago Schoolboy, Shot in Nicaragua, Misled by R. O. T. C.

CHICAGO, (FP) May 19.—The peacetime fruits of the militarist propaganda in American Schools, severely denounced by the Chicago Federation of Labor and President John H. Walker of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, are evident in the untimely death in Nicaragua of a Chicago high school lad, Marvin Andrew Jackson. He was reported killed while engaged with other marines as the unwitting tools of the sordid Wall Street adventure in Nicaragua.

The United States, under cover of protecting American lives and property, has been engaged without a declaration of war in imposing by force of arms a government that had been repudiated by the majority of Nicaraguans, but which is servile to New York banking houses. It was while attempting to disarm the liberal opposition that Jackson met his death. He was only 19 years old.

Fall For "Patriotism."

While at the Nicholas Senn High School in Chicago, Jackson was stuffed with the false patriotism of the R.O.T.C. and fell so completely under its militarist influence that he enlisted in the marine corps soon after graduating in 1926, and later was stationed in Nicaragua.

But for militarist propaganda that assailed him in the schools, Jackson might still be alive, doing useful work in his own country, instead of lying a victim of imperialist profiteering in a foreign campaign that will bring no glory to America.

PLUMBERS TURN DOWN EFFORT TO KILL 5-DAY WEEK

Reject International's Plan at Meeting

Members of Local 1 of the Plumbers' Union rejected by an overwhelming majority last night the proposal of the Executive Board that they should return to work immediately and submit their demands to arbitration. No return without the five-day week and the $14 day, was the decision.

A special meeting of the local had been called to hear a report from the Executive Board which has been in session for two days. Secretary-Treasurer Thomas Burke and President John Coefield addressed the meeting and laid before the members the proposal that they should return to work; within 24 hours the union's Conference Board should meet with the Conference Board of the employers, and if they could not reach a decision an outside arbitrator should meet one representative of the union and one from the employers. The decision of this arbitration committee should be binding.

The plumbers, who have been on strike since April 1st, absolutely refused to consider this suggestion, and one speaker from the floor urged the officers to return to Chicago and leave them to settle the strike themselves.

The discussion which followed the speeches of Burke and Coefield was still in noisy progress as the DAILY WORKER went to press; but members of Local 1 declared that nothing could cheer their refusal to accept the proposal of the Executive Board. They will continue the strike until the five-day week and the $14 day are granted by the employers.

...ER AND HOOVER AID LAMENT SCARCITY OF INVESTMENT SOURCES; UNEMPLOYMENT CERTAIN

By EMANUEL GARE (Federated Press).

A sharpening of public interest in the prospect in America of the European pronouncement by the American foreign investment specialist, W. H. Lamont, of J. P. Morgan & Co., and secretary of commerce Herbert Hoover. Lamont cautious against rash or excessive lending to Europe while Hoover advises against lending for unproductive purposes in Latin-America. Taken together these important figures in the American financial empire show that the two most important fields for foreign investment eventually will be providing their own capital and perhaps looking for foreign fields in which to invest their surplus funds.

Lamont, who might be described as secretary of state to the American capitalist monarchy, pictures the rise of American finncial imperialism during the world war. He says:

"We must recall that up to the outbreak of the war, America had for decades been borrowing heavily in Europe. Because, however, of America's enormous excess of exports over imports (such excess for war years 1916-1920 alone being over $18,000,000,000); because of the heavy repurchase by Americans of their own securities and because of the foreign loans made in the last decade, America's credit position had now been so far reversed that the gross annual interest and sinking fund service payable to America upon foreign loans and the dividends from industrial and other investments, now total about $1,000,000,000 per annum."

Lamont recalls that America furnished foreign countries with about $1,000,000,000 in new capital in 1925, bringing the total of American foreign investments to about $12,000,000,000. He reveals the plethora of American funds looking for investment when he speaks of American bankers as camping on the doorsteps of European governments, municipalities and corporations offering them money. And he raises the question how long this can last.

Prospect of Unemployment.

"I cannot," he says, "attempt to answer this question. Yet we can note some factors that are likely to affect this flow of American capital overseas. It is clear that Europe is getting more firmly on its feet. As farming land is restored, as manufacture increases, as necessity for purchases in America will diminish. As European enterprize prospers and as savings increase European investors will more nearly be able to return to their former practice of supplying capital for their own development."

Lamont holds that the American investor must scan the situation with increasing circumspection and avoid rash lending.

Hoover also notes the conversion of this country from a borrowing to a lending nation stressing the extension of American capitalism in Latin-America. In the last 8 years the United States has invested more than $1,200,000,000 in this field and continues: "I believe we may take it as a certainty that with the upbuilding of the economic structure each American state will in turn at some time begin to produce that surplus which will, when converted into capital, soon relieve it of the necessity of external borrowing. In time one by one of the other American countries will become centers for the export of capital."

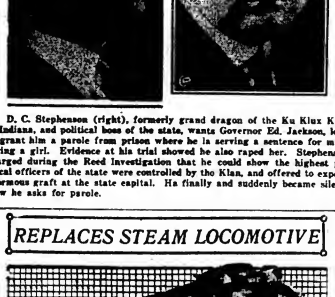
The only loans, according to Hoover, which could permanently enslave these countries are those made for unproductive purposes such as the balancing of budgets over-burdened by military expenditures.

Lowering of Workers' Standards.

The ultimate closing of the most important markets for American investment suggested in these statements means that the surplus of capital produced in this country will back up on itself. The first effect will be to make capital cheaper in the competition for opportunities to invest. But this will be quickly controlled by a capitalist combine which will become the absolute power in America.

The enormous surplus which American workers are producing for their masters will be forced, besides other channels than investment, that is into providing a wealthy leisure class with more luxuries, more services, more diversions, more ways of catering to the favor of the populace. Meanwhile the lack of demand for the surplus goods produced by American workers will mean unemployment with consequent lowering of the living standards.

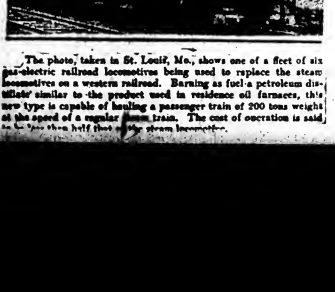
Non-Union Boston Shoe Workers Get Low Pay, Long Hours, 'Pep' Talks



By J. KRANTZ
(Worker Correspondent)

BOSTON, May 19.—Working conditions similar to those said to exist in China are found right here at the shoe factory of Hyde & Sons. Here workers toil 10 and 12 hours a day. I worked in the stitching department of this plant and found that the best sticher rarely makes more than an average of $18 or $20 a week. Children under the legal working age are also found here.

Sanitary Conditions Vile.



Sanitary conditions are terrible. In the "men's rooms" the water does not run. Lately the boss found a new scheme to add to the workers' burdens.

DRAGON WANTS A NINETY-DAY PAROLE

D. C. Stephenson (right), formerly grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan in Indiana, and political boss of the state, wants Governor Ed. Jackson, left, to grant him a parole from prison where he is serving a sentence for murdering a girl. Evidence at his trial showed he also raped her. Stephenson charged during the Reed Investigation that he could show the highest political officers of the state were controlled by the Klan, and offered to expose enormous graft at the state capital. He finally and suddenly became silent. Now he asks for parole.

REPLACES STEAM LOCOMOTIVE

The photo, taken in St. Louis, Mo., shows one of a fleet of six gas-electric railroad locomotives being used to replace the steam locomotives on a western railroad. Burning as fuel a petroleum distillate similar to the product used in residence oil furnaces, this new type is capable of hauling a passenger train of 200 tons weight at the speed of a regular steam train. The cost of operation is said to be less than half that of the steam locomotive.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED SINCE THEN

How the Workers of the USSR Celebrated May Day

(From the "Pravda" Editorial)

The whole working population of Moscow streamed into the streets. WORKING MEN AND WOMEN of the Red Capital marched in the first ranks from the districts. They lined up in their thousands and marched to the music of international songs, through the Red Square in an endless human stream. An ocean of banners. Fighting revolutionary slogans. Cheerful revolutionary songs. Like an iron mass in close ranks around the leader—the Communist Party. The slogans of the masses, printed on scarlet linen were those of the C. P. S. U. Leninist cohorts, those of the Communist International, for socialist construction; for peace and labor; against the war mongers; for strengthening the defence forces of the country; for the Chinese revolution, against the imperialist hangmen. These constituted the demands of the Moscow workers on May 1. With safe, measured tread, the proletarian rulers moved along in the 1st of May processions; the streets belonged to them, as does everything in our country, which, though still not rich, is increasing its prospects of construction."

Telegrams from all corners of the U. S. S. R. draw a picture of unusual exaltation during the First of May demonstrations. This year the First of May brought in new workers previously untouched by our propaganda. This particularly applies to the workers of the national republics, especially the women of the East; the women of Uzbekistan and Turkmenstan took part in the 1st of May demonstrations, for the first time and celebrated the occasion by removing their veils.

In many places before May 1st the foundation stones had been layed for new factories and workshops, workers' clubs, schools and other cultural institutions.

In Kharkov (capital of the Ukraine), a whole group of Chinese in the demonstrations attracted much attention.

The Red Front Fighters of Germany sent the following greeting to the workers of Kharkov: "Great dangers stand in the way of the working class; mankind is threatened by a new world war; with cannons directed against the Chinese revolution, the imperialists are aiming at the U. S. S. R. The working class of the whole world should close their fighting ranks solidly against Imperialism in defence of the Soviet Union."

In the town and environments many children's homes, creches, and homes for waifs and strays have been opened.

25th Anniversary.

In Dniepropetrovsk (Ukraine) the May day celebrations coincided with the 25th anniversary of the celebration of May day by the local workers; 50,000 workers took part in the demonstrations.

In Odessa, an unprecedented number of workers took part in the processions—more than 80,000. The foundation stone of the new Central Club of the metal workers was laid, and an institution of Jewish culture was opened.

The Sormov workers (Nijni-Novgorod), celebrated the 1st of May with great solemnity, as it coincided with the 25th anniversary of the 1st of May demonstrations of the Sormov workers in 1902, about which, ineidentally, Maxim Gorky wrote in his book "Mother."

In Vladivostok, foreign sailors from the boats lying in the ports, and representatives of the workers of far-Eastern countries, spoke at the meetings.

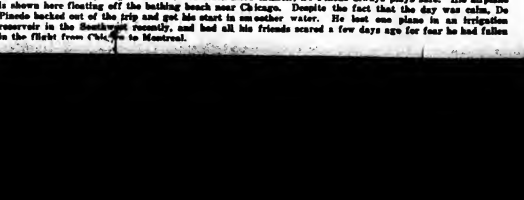
Electrification:

In Novorossisk (North Caucasus), the workers with great enthusiasm laid the foundation stone of the district electric power station (22,000 kilowatt).

In Zhitomir (Ukraine) the foundation stone was also laid of the local electric power station.

In Fergan, the foundation stone of the first large Uzbekistan weaving factory was laid; workers of Uzbek, who are now specially studying this work in the factories of the U. S. S. R. will be employed in this factory.

In Bobruisk (White Russia) the construction of a big wood-working combine has begun.



In Dezmits (Briansky province) the foundation stone of a Palace of Culture has been laid. In Kanavina (Nizhni) new settlements have been opened for the workers. In Vyks a huge workers' palace has been begun.

In Shushe (Azerbaidjan) a rest home has been opened. In Gandzha the foundations have been laid for an educational centre. In Borjom (Georgia) a new cork factory has been opened. In Simieropol (Crimea) the foundation stone of the new surgical hospital and Tailors' trade union house was laid. In Tuapse, a similar ceremony took place in connection with the new petroleum works and the workers' settlement. In Omsk (Siberia), the foundations have already been laid for a metal workers' club.

The May Day celebration in the national republics were of greatest interest from the every-day point of view. A particular feature of the May Day celebrations this year was the liberation campaign for the native women. In the squares of several towns amid throngs of people the women lighted fires and threw their veils into them—these are made of horse-hair. In Samarkand, 15,000 women took part in the demonstration all without veils.

The centre of the May Day celebrations in Tashkent, was the square of the Old Town. Here before the eyes of 25,000 people the Uzbek women one by one began to throw off their veils, and then, building them up on the ground in a huge pile, they burnt them amidst loud cheers from the crowd. On the eve of the demonstrations more than a thousand Uzbek women threw off their veils in the various clubs of the Old Town.

DE PINEDO FINDS LAKE MICHIGAN TOO ROUGH

The fascist flyer, De Pinedo, is touring the world by short flight airplane trips, and stopping in each town long enough to whoop things up by aid of the local black-shirts and Mussolini's nimble minded press agents. The posing as a bold, bad black-shirt himself, De Pinedo always plays safe. His airplane is shown here floating off the bathing beach near Chicago. Despite the fact that the day was calm, De Pinedo backed out of the trip and got his start in another water. He lost one plane in an irrigation reservoir in the Southwest recently, and had all his friends scared a few days ago for four he had fallen in the flight from Chicago to Montreal.

BOOKS

A VITAL SOURCE BOOK.

Commercial Handbook of the U. S. S. R. for 1927, published by the Soviet Union Information Bureau, Washington, D. C. $.30.

The second annual edition of this valuable reference book has appeared this year in considerably enlarged and improved form. It is a veritable mine of descriptive and statistical information about the Soviet Union. Between its covers are contained the data which will answer virtually every question which might possibly be raised concerning the political and economic organization of the Soviet Republic. All of its figures are official. During the summer of 1926 figures of production for previous years were submitted to the heads of the government departments at Moscow and to the officials of the various State Trusts and Syndicates for correction and revision. Figures for the economic year 1925-26 were all compiled from official sources. The entire volume is, therefore, the most accurate as well as the latest and most up-to-date body of data available in the English language upon the structure and function of the Soviet political and economic machine.

Among the topics discussed in the volume are, the Governmental Organization, Natural Resources, Agriculture, Industry, Transportation, Electrification, Banking and Finance, Trade, Co-operatives, Trade Unions, Protection of Labor, etc., etc.

The figures in all of these fields tell a stirring tale. The World War, revolution, counter-revolution, blockade, intervention and famine left Russia stricken. Basic machinery worth billions of dollars was completely destroyed and the technical personnel scattered or killed. Railways were almost entirely demoralized, about one-fourth of the trackage and most of the rolling stock being completely destroyed. The currency was practically worthless and foreign trade completely cut off.

This was the situation as late as 1921. But the Bolsheviks rolled up their sleeves and, without much ado, set to work. The results have been without parallel anywhere in history and far and away above the results achieved by any of the other European belligerents. Industry has completely recovered and is now passing the pre-war standards of production; railway trackage is a third greater than in 1913; the area under cultivation and production af most agricultural products also exceed their pre-war standards. The currency has been stabilized and kept steadily at par since 1924; the budget has been balanced and is even beginning to yield surpluses. Trade union membership on July 1, 1926 was 9,278,000—which ought to make even the triplet brothers, Matt Woll, Cahn and the "historian," James Oneal, sit up and take notice.

The Soviet Union Information Bureau has rendered a valuable service in making data of this type available. The volume should find its way to the bookshelf of every individual in the United States who is interested in the progress which is being made in the first Workers' State.

—JACK HARDY.

A LONELY PROFESSOR.

Chimes, a novel by Robert Herrick. Macmillan. $2.

Robert Herrick, a young New Englander of the "pure" strain, graduated from Harvard and then went to Chicago to teach General Literature in the Baptist university resurrected with the millions of John D. Rockefeller.

"A river of yellow prairie mud lay between the young man and the flat campus dotted with a half-dozen stone buildings, some still unfinished."

This was 30 years ago. Today, aided by the craze for college diplomas in order to acquire sharper tools with which to compete for the routine duties of the capitalist world, and by the modern methods of drives for millions, the University of Chicago has thousands of students and instructors; it boasts of countless buildings, influential financial boards, and dispenses yearly innumerable honorary degrees to officials of huge corporations, retired army officers, and those generous enough to contribute to the upkeep of this gigantic industry.

Herrick, now retired to a peaceful dude ranch at Santa Fe, New Mexico, says:

"Universities can't get money except by getting great numbers of students; so they dare not set any higher standards than rival institutions in the same neighborhood. So the American soul stays flabby; all that counts is show, and in every department you get by with superficiality. It is a lunch-counter system of education: read a novel and get a credit; then go out in the world and make a fortune. You cannot tell the graduates from the bathtub salesmen or the agents of barbers' supplies you meet in the lobby of the Blackstone hotel."

Chimes is an interesting novel of the academic world. It is not "keenly ironic" as its publishers insist, nor is it subtle. Herrick tells a striking story of the conflicts and compromises of the professor's life, and the social and administrative intrigues which hamper his work and his friendships. It is a study, however, only of appearances.

Herrick's disgust results not from his discovery that the university is (and quite naturally) one of the major propaganda agencies aimed to glorify the present system and to transfer its "traditions" from one generation to the next. Intellectually a snob, fastidious, ever conscious that he is "a Harvard man," the author through his fictional puppet Claverett despairs because "the life of the spirit" is neglected at Rockefeller's University of Chicago.

American universities will not tolerate the facts about economics, sociology, history,—property relationships. Herrick is apparently reconciled to this. What irks him is that the campus lords are also contemptuous of the austere mind, with its preoccupation with literature and the arts.

There is a danger of over-simplification. Trustees do not always directly oppose the cultivation of the aesthetic life. Actually they often spend millions of dollars in the construction of huge mausoleum-like libraries, distribute attractive fellowships, and publish learned theses on early English manuscripts.

For the student is taught not only in the class room. For every hour spent listening to even the most genuine scholar, the average college student spends weeks in absorbing the subtle master class propaganda around him.

The vaunted "culture" of the leisure class is hollow and without meaning. Veblen, Naaring, Sinclair, Lewisohn—all these have proved that its place in the American university is merely decorative. Thus the courageous teacher of literature becomes as dangerous to the ruling class as the courageous teacher of economics.

The position of such men as Herrick is really pathetic. Underpaid, lonely, patronized on the one hand by successful businessmen who consider them unpractical fools necessary to provide the college credits for their idle sons, and on the other by their more "virile" colleagues who join in booster songs at Kiwanis dinners, they blame individuals and vague "materialism" for a condition which is inevitable under a profit system.

GOOD NATURED CROOKS.

Revelry, by Samuel Hopkins Adams. Boni and Liveright. $2.00.

A story of the "Ohio Gang" presided over by the late president Harding thinly disguised here as Willis Markham, a jovial, good-natured fellow who liked his liquor and his poker games, and the cronies with whom he trained. This experienced crew of public plunderers lived the lives of pirate captains and pirates they were in fact.

The story opens with a poker game and ends with a suicide. Between the two events is the juiciest piece of political muckraking that has come my way in a long time. Unusual interest is added to the book thru the fact that the main characters are almost as thinly disguised as Willie Markham. They are there in all their ingiory from the president to Jess Smith—Harry Daugherty's go-between in the graft game. Revelry is worth the price of two good meals alright.

CALVIN COOLIDGE may trail the letters "M. D." after his name in the future if he wants to. The International Post Graduate Medical Association of North America presented the president with a diploma. The president earned it. He eats country sausage for breakfast and keeps his mouth shut most of the time. A man who can survive these two penalties is entitled to say boner running around loose. Be that as it may, methinks Cal would be happier if some political soothsayer guaranteed him a third term.

AN impersonation of Arthur Brisbane turning out his column. Ruth Snyder and Haury Judd Gray killed a man. What of it! The trouble is, they did not know how to make a clean getaway. Now, had Mr. Gray taken an airplane and flew to Rochester the Bomb Squad would have never heard of him. 50,000 airplanes stationed at strategic points could protect New York from the worst that the Abyssinian army could do. And if Calvin Coolidge is reelected he will not serve a third term. 100,000 airplanes would be cheaper than one earthquake.

THERE is a paper called "The Yellow Jacket." Its aims and objects are meritorious. There are a few of them: "To swat liars and leeches, hypocrites and humbugs demagogues and dastards." What a dastard is we do not know but they can go as far as they like against the humbugs. In all probability the editor of "The Yellow Jacket" is a champion humbug. He makes a living at it.

BEFORE these words appear in print Great Britain may have sundered diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union. The raid on the Soviet trade delegation headquarters did not produce any sensational documents but enough to give the British government an excuse for breaking off relations. That was the motive for the raid. The struggle between the political idea back of the Soviet government and the capitalist system, will continue until one or the other bites the dust. The capitalist system is doomed to kiss mother earth because evolution decrees it. The Soviet Union represents the new form of society which is developing in the womb of capitalism. The British government is playing the role of social abortionist, without success.

THE president of the French republic and the foreign minister of the same country did not visit England merely to see the beef eaters in the Tower of London. The visit was merely the consummation of an agreement already reached between the British and French foreign offices. The main note of the supposed agreement was hostility to the Soviet Union. Of course, agreements oftentimes fall by the wayside. It is quite possible that some other group of French politicians may wreck the present entente between England and France. And it is also quite possible that before the Tories reap the fruits of the now understanding, a general election may send them to the sticks. All those possibilities and probabilities must be taken into consideration. Life is not simple and politics is worse than that.

DUING his thirteen years of married life a gentleman from Hoboken managed to desert his wife ten times. He had ten children by her. Yet a hard-boiled judge confronted him with the alternative of spending a year and a day in jail or posting a bond guaranteeing $20 a week to his wife for the duration of that time. The defendant is still undecided as to what he should do. The man might have made the New York to Paris flight and won the title of the "Perfect Fool."

HERE is one reason why Marshal Pilsudski is running and running Poland: The inhabitants of a Polish village near Danzig recently broke into the house of a wealthy landowner intending to kill him and demolish a wireless set which they believed was responsible for a thunderstorm that raged throuout the night. The wealthy landowner not wishing to die before he spent some more of his dealth dropped on the floor and laid as if dead. Those who came to kill did not remain to pray. They fled in dismay. Of such is a Fascist government composed—until the militant minority gets busy.

THE peace mission of Mr. Stimson to Nicaragua is healthy laughing food but not for the Nicaraguans. Mr. Stimson believed that he could purchase the revolution by buying up all the Liberal rifles. He offered ten dollars for each surrendered gun. But it seems that the Liberals got real nasty either they made the sale and there have been more casualties after peace was declared than before.

FENG TAKES NEW TOWN IN HANKOW DRIVE NORTHWARD

Brand Anti-Nationalist Rumors As Lies

SHANGHAI, May 20.—Fang Yu-hsiang, "christian general," who has pledged his support to the Hankow Nationalist government, is moving rapidly southward along the Pakiug-Honan railway. His troops have taken Chintaukwang and are sweeping toward Kunghsien—strategic city in southern Honan.

Feng's troops are well-disciplined and their great restraint is winning for them the support of the peasantry in Honan, reports state. They are receiving a political education and learning the objects of the Nationalist movement.

No Attack On Hankow.

Reports that Chiang Kai-shek is moving against Hankow were officially denied by Chiang before leaving Shanghai for Nanking. Rumors about the imminent fall of Hankow being circulated by the British are utterly without foundation. No news that has been received from Hankow indicates that the Nationalist government is in any danger.

With four armies marching against Canton, with armies sweeping north from Hankow and with Feng leading 250,000 well-drilled and well-equipped men in a two-fold drive against the war lords, the Hankow government appears to be in an extremely strong military position.

British Circulate Rumors.

Observers here state that the British are circulating rumors about the "imminent downfall of the Hankow government" in an effort to create American sentiment for the severance of diplomatic relations with the Nationalists. Britain has already recalled her representative, from Hankow.

PEKING, May 20.—The Russian White Guardist Rasumoff, adviser of Chang Tsung-chang, Shantung warlord, has been sent to Peking to participate in the judiciary examination of Mme. Borodin and the Soviet Union officials captured by Chang Tso-lin in his raids on the embassy compound.

City Detective Receives Life Imprisonment For Killing Enemy of Graft

CANTON, Ohio, May 20.—Sentence of life imprisonment in the Ohio State Penitentiary, with solitary confinement each year on July 16, (the anniversary of the murder) was the penalty pronounced upon Floyd Streitenberger, city detective of Canton, today by Judge Frank Clevenger, for complicity in the murder of Don C. Mellet, Canton publisher. Mellet was assassinated by gunmen last summer. Two other men are serving life sentences for the murder.

The trial showed the police department in a deplorable state; many individuals on the force being in close cooperation with vice and rum rings. The murder of Mellet took place because this state of things was attacked in his paper.

Hungarian Parliament Joins Hands With Italy and Fascism by Treaty

BUDAPEST, May 20.—Accompanied by a plethora of eulogies which described, Mussolini as "the finest statesman in the world" and fascism as the "finest political system," the Hungarian parliament has ratified its treaty with Italy.

The fight for the adoption of the treaty was lead by Count Bethlen, foreign minister, who threw the chamber into an uproar when he resorted to invective in denouncing those members who fought any alliance with Mussolini.

Call International Parley at Hankow to Fight Imperialism

BERLIN, (FP) May 20.—In an effort to unite the movements for national independence in the far east, a congress will take place in Hankow, China, in June under the auspices of the League Against Imperialism, according to George Lazabury, its president. The league was formed in Brussels in February at the first international congress of colonial peoples and representatives of European and American labor movements.

The plans call for representation of the independence movements in the India, Indo-China, the Philippines, the Dutch East Indies, and Korea. The League against Imperialism has appointed as its European and American delegates to the congress George Lansbury and A. A. Purcell of the British Labor party, Henri Barbusse of France, Alfons Goldschmidt of Berlin and Roger N. Baldwin of the United States.

The Kuomintang party in China will act as hosts to the congress.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, left, and former Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, right. Baldwin shoots up Chinese villages, and MacDonald sent airplanes to bomb Hindu villages. MacDonald has just been repudiated by his own party, the independent Labor Party, and Baldwin is getting into hot water with that section of his class which wishes to continue trading with the Soviet Union.

FIVE-DAY WEEK THRUST UP AS BIGGEST ISSUE

Plumbers' Action Turns Situation Overnight

Overnight the five day week has become the burning issue in the New York building trades.

When Plumber's Local 1, of Brooklyn, defied the entire international executive board together with International President John Coefield and Secretary Thomas Burke Wednesday evening on the issue of arbitrating the five day week demand, the 1,700 striking members put new life into an issue close to the heart of every building trades worker.

"Go back to Chicago," was the meaningful advice given international officials when a rank and file rebellion against bureaucracy shoved over board the nice little deal that the executive board had framed with the Building Trades Employers' Association. Unsuccessful in the Monday night meeting in forcing Local 1 to abandon the five day week, the International tried again Wednesday evening—and failed.

Today the next step is very plainly up to the bosses—and the International. While the Employers' Association held a hurried conference yesterday at 11 a. m. to consider the situation brought about by the unexpected fighting spirit in Local 1, the International was swinging the use-

Who'll Shelter Young Go-Getters as Y.M.C.A. Drive Falls Far Short

The tremendous effort of the local bourgeoisie to collect $6,500,000 to house stray bank clerks and aspiring climbers after success and vice presidential desks went awry, the Y. M. C. A. panhandling committee announced sorrowfully yesterday.

Despite snappy ads and he-man appeals to shake down the business gentry, the Y. M. C. A. fell far short of the quota for new buildings, but will continue to pass the hat until all $6,500,000 or its equivalent in pledges has been collected.

The total, including non-cash pledges, came to little over $4,000,000. The high-pressure salesmen back of the drive complain that 27 other drives for funds were under way at the same time.

Anti Saloon League Demands Control of Prohibition Offices

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Official announcement of the resignation of General Lincoln C. Andrews, assistant secretary of the treasury, since April 1, 1925, has headed Federal Prohibition enforcement, was made late today by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

Seymour Lowman, former Lieut. Governor of New York, was appointed to succeed Andrew, who has been under fire from the Anti-Saloon League.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 20.—The Anti-Salon League today delivered to President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon a demand that the new dry regime set up by the reorganization act of Congress, be made virtually an independent arm of the government.

Snub Distiller Mellon.

The League's pronouncement, contained in a resolution of its executive committee, reminded Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Mellon that the act was passed with "the unmistakable understanding" that the new commissioner of prohibition "would be entirely free and unhampered in the performance of his duties."

While the prohibition chiefs refused to amplify their statement, it was declared to be tantamount to an open declaration that the new commissioner must be independent of the dictation of Mr. Mellon and Lincoln C. Andrews, supreme dry bureau chief, to satisfy them.

Money For Politics.

The present budget of the League is $450,000 a year, McBride said. The special campaign will aim to increase to $750,000 a year until after the 1928 election.

The executive committee of the League, meeting behind closed doors here, affirmed the main goal of the organization—to prevent the nomination of a wet candidate for president, and to prevent any tinkering with the dry law in the platforms of the two major parties.

"Look Out Al."

"This means," said a formal statement from the executive committee, "that a strenuous campaign will be waged against Gov. Al Smith, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, Gov. Ritchie and Senator Reed of Missouri, and any other candidate who does not stand square on prohibition."

While the League heads were meeting, Senator David I. Walsh (D) of Massachusetts, issued a statement severely arraigning the organization.

Walsh Calls It Presumptious.

"The announcement that the meeting to prevent the nomination of so-called wet candidates by the Democratic Party is highly presumptuous," said Walsh. 'Dry Democrats might very well resent it, for as every public man knows the League is part and parcel of the Republican Party."

The League, Walsh said, has surpassed all its "previous effrontery" in attempting to take control of both major parties and "maintain the same paralyzing hand over the approaching conventions that it has maintained over Congress."

ENGDAHL SPEAKS AT OZERY MAY DAY CELEBRATION

Anxious to Learn About the United States

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

(Special to The DAILY WORKER)

OZERY, Moscow Province, April 30, (By Mail).—This is to convey the greetings of the 10,000 textile workers of Ozery, about 100 miles south of Moscow, to the textile workers of America.

This greeting is extended especially to the heroic fighters in the textile mills of Passaic, New Jersey.

It goes also in the warmest comradely spirit to the textile workers of Massachusetts, the state that now plays the role of assassin of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

I pledged myself to extend these greetings of the textile workers of Free Russia to those in America, still victims of capitalist oppression, at the impressive May Day gathering held in the local theater here on the eve of May Day. My promise met with instant and great enthusiasm.

May Day Eve

The big demonstration was to be held on the morrow, May Day. But tonight there was a preliminary gathering that filled the theater with the full representation of the Local Soviet, the members of the leading committees in the Communist Party in Ozery, as well as the active workers in the trade unions, delegations of workers and others admitted by card only.

Here were assembled the working men and women who are responsible locally for the building of the new social order.

Foreman Once Owner

"What has become of the former owner of the factory?" I asked later as we were riding off to the station, for the return to Moscow.

"Oh, he is a fireman in our mill," smiled the worker who rode with us, one of the officials of the union.

"He is the leader of our chorus," added this worker.

"And does he sing the International, too?" I asked.

"Oh, yes," came the answer. He leads in the singing of the International and he sings, too. And his son and daughter are also in the chorus, and they also sing the International."

My instructions on leaving Moscow were to carry the greetings of the Communist International and of the

IMMINENT DANGER OF COLLAPSE AS DIE-HARD GROUP HUNTS AN EXCUSE

Officially Admitted Police Failed to Get Evidence of Mysterious "State Paper"

Izvestia Warns War Makers That Workers of U. S. S. R. Want Peace But Fear Nothing

LONDON, May 20.—The Conservative Party cabinet is hopelessly split over the excuse that is to be given the House of Commons for the raids on the headquarters of the Soviet Union trade delegation and the offices of Arcos, the Anglo-Soviet Union trading corporation doing a big business between the two countries as a result of the trade agreement.

In all quarters the fact that the government had to abandon its announced intention of giving a statement to the House of Commons yesterday, and beg for another week's time, is taken as a sign of weakness, weakness such as few British cabinets have ever survived.

It is admitted by all that the police did not find the "important state paper" the finding of which could alone justify or even appear to justify the violent breach of diplomatic immunity which Home Secretary Sir William Joynson-Hicks committed in the raiding of Arcos House.

Entire files of the letters and records of the trade delegation and Arcos were carried off to Scotland Yard by the raiders.

"All the documents have been examined and the so-called stolen document unfound." Arthur Ponsonby, Under Secretary in the Foreign Office under the Labor Premier MacDonald, remarked to-day. "Why, then, cannot the government make a report? I dismiss the idea that they are fabricating forgeries in the interval. A government which was born by the aid of a Russian fraud may conceivably find its death in the same quarter."

This last is a reference to the "Zinovieff Letter" forgery which won the Conservatives the last general election.

Might Knock Out "Jinx."

It is known that the group in the cabinet following Joynson-Hicks intended yesterday to publish documents of very dubious authenticity showing a connection between the Communist International and the activities of members of the trade delegation, and to demand a severance of diplomatic and trade relations between Britain and the U.S.S.R. on this basis, incidentally, of course, solving the question of an excuse for the raid.

The more moderate wing of the cabinet, led by Baldwin, who fears to wreck British industry altogether by checking the growing trade with the Soviet Union, and afraid that public ridicule would follow another such open forgery as that of the "Zinovieff Letter," has at least temporarily vetoed the plan.

Baldwin seriously considered disavowing the raid, and asking for the home secretary's resignation, but realized that the die-hards were strong enough in his party to wreck the cabinet, and force another general election. The quandary continues.

Would Remove Immunity.

The extreme die-hard faction is led by Winston Churchill, Lord Birkenhead and Sir William Joynson-Hicks.

Though this bears no more love for the Soviet Union than the Churchill group, the other faction believes it wiser to pursue a more moderate policy. It holds the view that the "Professional Patriots" Begins Serially in The DAILY WORKER Monday

How the business interests of the United States help to enforce the "goose-step" in the schools and colleges thru the aid of the American Security League, American Legion, American Defense Society and kindred organizations are explained with startling vividness in "Professional Patriots" which begins serially in The DAILY WORKER on Monday.

This book, edited by Norman Hapgood, also tells just who play the "rich angels" to the organizations who disguise their labor-hating activities as guardians of the public good.

"Professional Patriots" is based on material gathered by Sidney Howard and John Hearley. It is published by Albert & Charles Boni.

Give Sinclair Three Months for Contempt, But He May Not Serve

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Harry F. Sinclair, multi-millionaire oil magnet, was sentenced today to three months imprisonment in federal prison for contempt of the United States Senate. He also was fined $500.

Sentence was pronounced by Justice Hitz in District Supreme Court before whom the oil magnate was tried and convicted some weeks ago of refusing to answer questions propounded to him during the Senate's investigation of his lease of the Teapot Dome Reserve, notorious because of charges of wholesale bribery of U. S. Cabinet officers.

Sinclair, however, will not begin to serve his sentence, as his attorneys have appealed the conviction to higher courts, and will eventually take it to the Supreme Court if necessary.

ASK KELLOGG TO BAR BRANTING AS SACCO'S LAWYER

Boston Tories Aroused by "Outsider" in Case

BOSTON, May 20. Reactionaries who are fighting for the execution of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti on July 10 are bringing pressure to bear on the State Department, it became known today, to bar Georg Branting from the United States.

Branting, a noted Swedish lawyer, is the son of the late Hjalmar Branting, former labor premier of Sweden. He has been named by the Scandinavian Sacco-Vanzetti Defense committee, comprising labor groups in Sweden and Norway, to assist in the defense of the two Italian anarchists doomed to die for a crime they did not commit.

The brilliant young Swedish lawyer is due to arrive in New York on the Rotterdam next Thursday, but he will be greeted not only by friends of Sacco and Vanzetti but by hostile immigration authorities of local Tories succeed in persuading Kellogg to bar him. According to the Boston Herald, they object to "outsiders" and especially foreigners interfering in a "purely domestic, state case."

William G. Thompson, chief of defense counsel, was cheered with Governor Fuller for the entire afternoon yesterday, presenting evidence requested by him. Transcript of the evidence in the Plymouth trial, in which Vanzetti was betrayed by his own counsel, was laid before the governor by Thompson.

Holmes Writes Fuller

President H. A. Garfield of Williams College and head of the famous International Institute of Politics has appealed to the governor for the "fullest possible investigation" of the case while Dr. John Haynes Holmes, the liberal New York pastor derided the idea that radicals commit criminal offenses. In a friendly letter, he "challenges" the governor to "search all the history of radicalism for the past 100 years and you will not find a single socialist, Communist, anarchist or radical of any stripe who ever became involved in highway robbery, banditry, or any other crime of that character."

MAG FEARS FACTS ON FLOOD SCANDAL

Could Easily Avert Grim Disasters

(By A Staff Correspondent)

Washington, May 20.—The control legislation will center about the O'Connor bill. The measure has been before Congress for many years a decade, and was drawn UP in 1923, was actually a law. But the power and pressure of the contractors who build levees was strong enough to stave its repeal and it has been fought over since.

The O'Connor bill was originally formulated by Senator Newlands of Nevada, and was known as the Newlands bill. It provides that an independent commission, consisting of representatives of the war, navy, interior and conservation departments, as well as engineers from civil life, be created for the purpose of studying flood control and preparing a plan to prevent such disasters as that now ravaging the Mississippi River Valley. For this work an appropriation of $500,000 is authorized.

Millions Squandered.

A half million dollars is a large sum, but it is merely a drop in the well compared to the hundreds of millions that have been poured out in the futile plan known as the "levees only" method for flood control. Since 1879 more than $200,000,000 has been spent by the federal and state governments for the building of levees and yet every time a great flood takes place these breastworks have been broken and swept away to the ruin of thousands of other farmers and workers.

Plea for More Graft.

Of course this is great business for the contractors who build levees. They have grown rich and politically powerful. In fact so influential are they that in the midst of the present disasters while levee after levee was SCHILLER crumbling and sinking, Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover and Secretary of War Dwight Davis had the brassmess to issue public statement announcing that the "levee only" plan was the only commendable method for controlling floods and urging the necessity of building higher and greater levees, costing of course tens of millions of dollars.

Of course levees are essential. No one denies that, certainly not those who criticize the present policy of putting the whole burden of flood control on levees. But lavees do not prevent floods. They confine the excess water but outlets must be found for it. And outlets are found by either blowing up the lavees and inundating great areas as Mr. Hoover himself did in the present flood, or the river sweeps over the levee or brushes it aside and creates its own outlet.

Could Avert Floods.

If a system of levees were built provided with spillways, artificial openings that allow the water to run off in prepared passes, it would mean, of course, that once the system was built the fat, juicy contracts for perpetual levee building would end. And this is what the politicians with their eyes on patronage, graft and appropriations do not want. And so Mr. Hoover and Mr. Davis, with the approval of the good Mr. Coolidge solemnly denounce the spillways plan as visionary and cry loud for more levees.

But there are indications that the South is somewhat aroused and has made up its mind that it has been fooled long enough. Appropriations, fat ones, as much as $25,000,000 in fact, will have to be made to restore the shattered levees. But at the same time it is the determination of those urging spillways that the O'Connor bill be again enacted into law and an independent survey of the situation made.

Army In On Same.

The army engineers, who have flood control work in charge, have proven too willing accomplices of the politicians. They are a part of the vicious wasteful system and it is now proposed to make a disinterested inquiry and draw up an Intelligent method for dealing with the problem. Pitiful as is the sum asked for by the O'Connor bill in comparison with the tens of millions to be expended for more levees nevertheless it has already incurred the disapproval of "economy Cal." After Mr. Hoover's profound observations about the dog being "visionary" Mr. Coolidge further damned it by parading his old wooden war-horse "economy."

But Coolidge and Mr. Hoover are going to be very much outsiders at the next Congress. Tho Democrats and the farm bloc are going to be in control and there are indications that they propose giving the president and his ubiquitous secretary of commerce a hard time of it. At least all of Washington is hoping their Republican colleagues, hope so.

HOOVER SEES HOME ENGULFED

This remarkable photo, snapped from a coast guard patrol boat, carrying Secretary Herbert Hoover's party into the flooded parishes of Louisiana, was taken less than five minutes after the levee broke at Boyadieux. The raging water is soon engulfing the home of a wealthy planter in the "Sugar Bowl" district.

All New York Workers Will Be At The Reception Ball Given In Honor Of The Recently Released.

Prisoners.

One to the strennous efforts of the Joint Defense and Relief Committee, the furriers who were condemned as the famous Minesin trial were released on bail. Chas. Wolfish who was behind bars for over four months, was also released recently. Chas Wolfish is a man of about 40 years of age and has been for over 18 years a good standing member of Local 2, I. L. G. W. U. He was at all times a davoted member of his union. Four months ago he, together with several other cloakmakers was tried by the famous Judge Rozalsky and sentenced to prison thanks to the efforts of the Sigman machine. After serving his term, he is now released. The New York workers are preparing a big reception hall for the released fighters of the working class. The reception will take place at the Star Casino, 107th St. and Park Ave., on Friday evening May 27th. The ball is being arranged by the Joint Defense and Relief Committee. All the released prisoners will be present, also their brother workers whom they did not see for such a long time.

A Metal Worker Sends $5.00.

We received the following letter:

Dear Comrades: Enclosed please find a check for $5.00. I am sorry I cannot send any more at present. I wish you success in your fight against the hooligans of the right wing machine. You have a hard fight, but your victory will be the more glorious.

With greetings,—A metal Worker from Toronto, Canada.

Tomorrow: A Mass Meeting.

Next Sunday, May 22nd at 2 p. m., there will be a big mass meeting arranged by the East New York Workers Club for the arrested cloakmakers and furriers. The mass meeting will ha held at 864 Sutter Ave., Brooklyn. Well known speakers will address the meeting.

Twenty-six Seamen May Die on 'Indiana Harbor'

SAN FRANCISCO, May 20.—As a last resort in the battle to save the lives of 26 seamen on board the steamer Indiana Harbor, breaking up on the Northern California Coast, an army plane took off this afternoon for the scene of the wreck. It will attempt to drop a line on the stricken ship which will enable coast guardsmen to rig a breeches buoy and take off the endangered men.

I.L.G.W. Shop Chairmen Meet Next Thursday

Shop chairmen and active members of cloak and dressmakers locals affiliated with the New York Joint Board will meet in Cooper Union next Thursday, May 26, right after work to discuss various union problems including the transfer of the unemployment insurance fund to Sigman's hands. Possible legal action on this matter will be considered by the workers.

Seek Three For Crime.

American Communist Party to the workers at Ozery.

The chairman opened the meeting by calling on one of the members of the Local Soviet to read off the names of the Presedium decided on for the gathering. The comrade, a young worker, with a red kerchief bound round her head, mounted the platform. She was evidently very popular among her comrades as she was greeted with considerable applause.

"You are one of the members of the Presidium," one of the comrades assured me, in a tone that indicated it was considered a great honor to be selected for this post.

Sure enough, my name, and the fact that I represented the Communist International and its American Section, was read off in a clear voice so that even I, with knowledge of only half a dozen Russian words, could clearly understand. The announcement that some one from from America would speak was greeted with enthusiasm. I mounted the platform with the other Presidium members.

For the Communist International, I told of the situation developing in the imperialist attack against China, and of the new offensive planned against the Soviet Union. The Chinese situation is now uppermost in the minds of the workers of the Soviet Union.

Urges Economic Development

I pointed out that the big task of the workers locally, and thruout the Soviet Union, was the rapid development of Soviet industry and agriculture during the present period of "peace," the best means of strengthening the position of the Soviet Power at home, and thus encouraging and inspiring the workers in capitalist lands to follow their example by ending the reign of private profit.

For our American Communist Party, I pledged our utmost in struggle against the American imperialism that takes leadership in the war against the Chineso revolution, to exert every effort and meet a new war on the Soviet Union. When I pledged the American Party to struggle along the pathway of Leninism, the orchestra broke into the International and the audience rose singing.

The story of the Passaic strike and of the Sacco-Vanzetti case aroused a deep interest.

While I spoke in the English language, an excellent translation was given by Comrade Gerish, an American deportee attached to the Comintern.

Many Eager Questions

While I was talking I noticed that slips of paper were being passed up to the chairman. I developed that these were eager questions. After one of the local representatives of the workers had responded to my remarks, I answered as many of these orite question seemed to be, "How many members are there in the American Communist Party?" and "How many members are there in the American Young Communist League?" Another question sought information as to legislation favoring women in America, while another asked concerning the number of political prisoners in America. Another favorite is, "What do the workers in America think of the Soviet Union?"

Ask About Youth

Outside the theater is a park containing a refreshment pavilion, a band stand and an open air movie theater seating 2,200. Before the meeting opened, I took a walk thru the park with Comrade Gerish, only to be asked by a group of workers to answer some questions concerning "America." The first one, on this occasion, was, "What are the conditions of the American workers?" I tried to give an exact survey as briefly as I could but it must have taken at least ten minutes, interspersed with additional questions on the same subject. Then the question, "How do American workers spend their spare time?" also took some time to answer. We also discussed the Youth movement and the Young Pioneer Movement in America, and were taking up the question of "What will the workers of America do if the Soviet Union is attacked?" before an ever-increasing audience when the call came that the meeting was about to start. Thus half an hour had slipped by as a few moments.

During the day the question had arisen, whether to stay in Kolomno for the May Day Demonstration on the morrow, or return for the demonstration to be held in the Red Square, before the Kremlin, in Moscow. This was the Tenth May Day since the overthrow of czarism and Moscow had planned to make much of the International Labor Holiday. Moscow won. America is far from the Soviet Union. The trip is not made often and 10th Anniversaries do not happen so frequently perhaps as one would desire. The capitol won, therefore, over the provinces.

So we left Alexsei V. Nikolaev, Chief of the Financial Department of the Moscow, speaking, reporting on the latest achievements of the Soviet Government. A group, of earnest, questioning children followed me out of the building, wanting information about the children in America. I gave what I could in the time allotted me, then waved "Good Bye!" "Das vidania!"

Pioneers in America should write to these children of the textile city of Ozery, of Kolomno, and of other cities of the Soviet Union. They would get interesting letters in reply.

New Rulers of Russia.

Just a word about Comrade Nikolaev, the type of worker who is taking command in the Soviet Union. Nikolaev was formerly a baker. His father was a peasant. He was in the Red Army in Yaroslav Province in the North in 1918. His father still lives here. The chairmanship of the village soviet was but the stepping stone to more responsible work. For the past six years he has struggled with Soviet finances. Now he is not only the chief of the Financial Department of the Moscow Province, but also a member of the provincial executive committee of the Moscow Soviet. The population of the Moscow Province is now 4,500,000. Moscow itself has a population of 2,100,000. Comrade Nikolaev bubbled figures but he was most proud of the fact that the Moscow Province spends five times as much on education now as it did five years ago. Russia is coming up.

trade of the Soviet Union in necessary for tottering British Industry.

Would Remove Immunity.

The more moderate faction is said to favor the abrogation of the agreement of 1921 and the signing of a new agreement devoid of the rights of immunity. That the Soviet Union will consent to an agreement that does not guarantee the safety of her representatives of the immunity of her offices is extremely unlikely.

Moderate Note.

MOSCOW, May 20. — Commenting on the note of the Soviet Government the Pravda writes:

"Our note written in the hour of danger to international peace will enter history as one of the most moderate and peace-breaking documents ever penned. Chamberlain's note and the raids on the Arcos offices were carried thru against the will of the international proletariat.

"Our polley was dictated directly by the Intsrests of the masses of the Soviet Union and the toilers of the world. Our government's words were preceded by a powerful mass protest. We want peace and trade, but the British Government must be careful not to try the patience of the workers and peasants of the masses of the U.S.S.R."

The Izvestia says that the British Government must have courage to loudly declare that it is initiating a rupture with a government occupying a huge part of the earth and representing one hundred and fifty million people.

"While the people of the Soviet Union are ready to receive a sincere conciliatory reply, they face a rupture without astonishment or anxiety, firmly believing not only in their right, but in their strength to achieve final victory."

Taffy Pulling Ends.

LONDON, May 20.—The stale visit of President Doumergue, of France, and Foreign Minister Aristide Briand came to an end today. The French statesmen spent three days in England.

So we left Alexsei V. Nikolaev, Chief of the Financial Department of the Moscow, speaking, reporting on the latest achievements of the Soviet Government. A group, of earnest, questioning children followed me out of the building, wanting information about the children in America. I gave what I could in the time allotted me, then waved "Good Bye!" Boston Stocks Advance Despite Commission Order

The stock market post-mortem of the Interstate Commerce Commission's action in turning down the proposed lease and merger of seventeen railroads when railroad stocks advanced yesterday.

The Commission's rejection of the Loree deal, by which the anti-union men of the Delaware & Hudson, who is trying to build a fifth trunk line system between New York and the west, fought to gain control of the Missouri-Texas region, simply didn't fooze the gamblers in rail stocks. Apparently well informed that the Commission would eventually ratify the merger when certain objectionable details were changed, the speculators advanced the entire stock list in a vigorous advance. Many stocks went to the highest price of the year.

It was stated in Wall St. that Kansas City Southern, the Loree road attempting the merger, would take prompt measures to comply with the Commission's requirements for the promotion of the merger.

Details of the numerous group marriages, said to have been engineered by the religious leader to cover him from investigation, were told by the witness.

Worcester Workers Call Strike After Refusing U. S. Aid

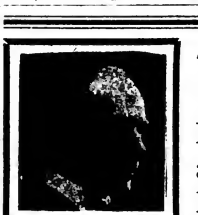
WORCESTER, Mass., May 20.—A general strike of laborers was declared last night at a special meeting of Local 620, International Hodcarrier's Building and Common Laborer's Union.

The strike starts at once and will affect every construction and building job in Worcester. A roll call of members was taken before adjoining the meeting and pickets were assigned to the various jobs which will be picketed en-masse.

Have Support.

Local 210, Hodcarriers, have agreed to walk out if necessary and other locals as well as bricklayers will be asked to support the strike to a successful conclusion. About 700 men, mostly members of Laborer's Local 620 are expected to quit work.

The main object of the strike is to gain recognition of the union and establish a minimum wage of 65 cents an hour for laborer's.



Two contractors have already signified their intention to pay 58 cents per hour, but with an effective strike they will come across.

Strike Is Late.

This strike is about 3 weeks late. Miss Anna Weinstock, a representative of the U. S. Dept. of Labor Intervened in an attempt to avert the strike when news of the impending strike reached Washington.

Many futile conferences were held and while the International representatives were suggesting that the local present Miss Weinstock, the government conciliator, with some "suitable token of appreciation for her efforts to strike the controversy peacefully," the rank and file members demanded that she be kept out of this struggle and replied that since Miss Weinstock gets paid by the government, it would be more appropriate for Calvin Coolidge to give her a present for her efforts since she is of no earthly use to the workers.

"Any one that is on the payroll of a capitalist government is not paid to be of service to labor," was the general cry at the meeting.

They Have Tried It Before and Failed

● "PRAVDA," the oldest Bolshevist newspaper, and the central organ of the Russian Communist Party celebrates its fifteenth birthday triumphantly, after many years of the same kind of attack which our DAILY WORKER is undergoing. They tell us "It was suppressed, persecuted, confiscated; its editors and collaborators were arrested and banished, but it always rose again. . .always with the same determination and the same will to victory." And finally "When the first Bolshevist Labor newspaper had only existed for a little more than five years, the one hundred thousand workers, who had stood by "Pravda" in the years 1912-1914, had increased in such a way that in November the Party and "Pravda" were backed by the majority of the population of the country which had carried off victory in the revolution."

Today we are under the fire of the same black forces which attacked the "Pravda" in Czarist Russia. The example of our Russian comrades has inspired us with the same indomitable spirit of resistance to the forces of reaction. With the firm support of thousands of workers throughout the country, The DAILY WORKER will not only overcome successfully the present attack, but it will succeed in carving out for itself the same influence and power among the American masses which the "Pravda" won for itself in Russia. R. R. Moore Speaks at Big Negro Meeting in Philadelphia Sunday

PHILADELPHIA, May 20.—Richard R. Moore, who was a delegate to the Brussels Conference against Imperialism held early this year will be the principal speaker at a mass meeting at the Shiloh Baptist Church, Lombard and 12th Sts., tomorrow afternoon at 3.

Arranged by the local branch of the American Negro Labor Congress, this meeting will be the first of a series to plan a campaign of agitation among Negro workers.

De Pinedo Halts Again For Fascist Speeches; Doesn't Mind Accidents

SHIPPEGAN, N. B., May 20.—Francesco De Pinedo, aviator, propagandist for Mussolini, arrived here after a series of minor accidents. Disillusionment is being felt in many quarters about his reputed skill as a result of the aviator's difficulty in getting around the country in spite of the fact that he is receiving the active support of both Italy and the United States.

De Pinedo left Detroit several days ago, after a large fleet of Henry Ford's planes had been sent out to search for him. The large number of "forced" landings which the aviator has made during the past few days coincides happily with his pre-arranged program to make fascist speeches at receptions in his honor in numerous cities of the United States.

BRONX BARBERS AND GIRLS WIN THEIR DEMANDS

After a short but decisive three day strike 2,000 union barbers and beauty shop girls in the Bronx were back on the job Thursday with all demands won except for a reduction of one hour on Saturday.

The new agreement was signed in union headquarters on Boston Road when the bosses agreed to raise the wages of week end workers from $20 to $22, of Saturday barbers from $13 to $14, and to close beauty shops at 9 promptly.

Exceptional among the demands won was that providing that in all shops employing more than one barber and two girls, the boss is to donate the time of one barber and one girl for one day to help organize scab shops in the Bronx. Thus the bosses themselves will pay for organization work.

Members of the union who stayed on the job during the strike are to be hailed before the union executive board to pay $25 fines.

Shops Close at 8 P. M.

Working hours for barbers will be between 9 a. m. and 8 p. m. with 10 p. m. on Saturday, instead of the 9 p. m. closing asked by the union. Beauty shops are to close promptly at 9.

Beauty parlor girls who toil from 10 to midnight in the gilded shops of the complexion industry are winning a better life with the victory of local 560.

"Sorry madame, but its 9 o'clock; union closing time," my lady is told as she comes for a permanent wave after a late dinner.

Fought for Women.

It is the first New York barber strike that was fought for the women as well as the men. Of the 2,000 strikers some 200 were women manicurists and "wavers" and ace massage experts over other beauty strikers employed in union barber shops.

And now the strike is continuing with vigor against the beauty parlors for women only, employing thousands and women in non-strike times, under scab conditions. Some 500 of these workers are already out and the rest are rapidly responding to the "beauty" pickets.

Sadie Reisch of the Women's Trade Union League, who has been picketing with the strikers, told their story.

Often Worked Till Midnight.

"The beauty parlor workers were at the mercy of the boss. They worked from 10 to 9 and often to midnight, with no union to protect them. A customer coming in at closing time for a permanent wave that might take 2 hours was seldom turned down and the girl received no extra wages.

"A 9-hour day is the first demand of the union, and after that comes a scale of wages that standardizes the pay for the different beauty crafts. Till now the girl took what the boss offered or took herself away for another job where conditions were equally as bad."

New Scale.

The new beauty shop scale runs as follows: Permanent wavers and dyers get $45 with 50% of all takings over $65 a week; and similar pay for marcel wavers and haircutters the same. These are the most skilled workers. Pay for less skilled runs as follows: Marcel wavers who do no haircutting get $35, with 50% of everything over $50 a week; eye brow tweezers and shampooers get $25 with 50% over $40; manicurists get $20 minimum, with 50% of everything taken in over $30; booth workers get $35 with 50% over $50 receipts.

A strike of 3,000 barbers in the district below 14th St., Manhattan may follow the Bronx strike, it was announced yesterday by Abe Greenwald, chairman of the New York Joint Board of the Barbers' Unions.

Unionization of all shops in the financial district, on lower Broadway and on the west side would be the purpose, he declared.

Immigration Men Investigating Entry Of Kushner to U. S.

Matthew Kushner, Young Workers League member, was "free" again yesterday.

Arrested several weeks ago for passing out "Hands Off China" leaflets, Kushner was held for investigation regarding his entry into the United States six years ago when it became apparent that he could not be held on any other charge.

Magistrate Vitelli in 57th St., court reluctantly let Kushner out of jail, but hung a suspended sentence over him. It not before the Judge had let loose a Parthian shot that "I understand you are under the impression that you're being hounded."

Kushner, whose experiences in the past three weeks had led him to form a firm conviction on this score, smiled and left.

Attorney Joseph R. Brodsky of the International Labor Defense handled Kushner's case. He is also representing Herman Moskowitz, arrested the same time for passing out leaflets, Brodsky declared.

Thuggery Charges Against Boss Are Dropped by Judge

Adolph Lowey, president of the Laundry Owners' Association and Frank Marel, one of the bosses' guards, were dismissed by Magistrate Brodsky Thursday morning when brought before him charged with attacking Max Fiseman, member of the Laundry Drivers' Union.

Brodsky gave the boss and his lackey a mild warning to leave the "workers alone" when discharging them. They attacked Fiseman last Tuesday because he had informed housewives of the strike at the North American Laundry.

The injunction proceedings against fifteen members of the Laundry Drivers' Union is cracking. When brought before Judge Mullen in the Bronx County Court yesterday the hearing was postponed until next Monday. When leaving court A. Mandelbaum, attorney for the bosses informed Max Brodie, manager of the union that the bosses would drop the case.

PLAN STRIKE IN ASSOCIATED FUR SHOPS, GOLD SAYS

As a warning to those manufacturers who refuse to participate in the fractional union fight by discharging workers who are not registered with the International, the Associated Fur Manufacturers Inc. has expelled two well-known members, B. Labenbaum and Reicher & Rauboygel.

This is the first outward sign of the inner revolt which has been seething in the association ever since its board of directors arbitrarily commanded the members to discharge all workers who refused to register. A large percentage of association firms is utterly disregarded this ruling and apparently the directors think that such a threat as this expulsion of two important firms will serve as an example to the others and bring fear to their hearts.

Many authoritative observers believe the effect will be just the opposite, and the expulsion order may lead a wide-spread move of resignation from the assicated on the part of manufacturers who are interested in continuing uninterrupted production and do not wish to interfere in matters that concern the union only.

Planning General Strike.

In a letter sent Thursday to all Independent fur shops manufacturers, Ben Gold, manager of the Furriers' Joint Board, stated that the Joint Board is now planning a general strike in the Associated shops. This is why the leaders of the Associated are making every effort to "lure" new members into their organization—on the principle that misery loves company, says Gold.

Gold adds, "the Joint Board suggests that you can go on conducting your business and production normally if you will keep out of the Associated and continue your peaceful contractual relations with the Joint Board and its Locals 1, 5, 10 and 15.

"The Joint Board takes the liberty to suggest to you to keep out of the general strike by refraining from interference in the internal union struggle. If you keep out of the Associated, you will keep out of the trouble."

Tony Gamblers Flee City as Grand Jury Probes Big Jamboree

Tony, upper class gamblers who were found disporting themselves in a $100,000 club in the Biarfield Hotel Sunday night fled the city yesterday for Atlantic City and other idlers' resorts to escape a hearing before the grand jury.

The couples still found in the city testified yesterday. But the others, including two vice presidents of large corporations and others living in "pretentious residences and employing butlers, chauffeurs and maids," according to Inspector Valentine of the Police Commissioner's confidential squad, had left forwarding addresses.

One of them claimed he had lost $28,000 in three nights at the club, but did not seem particularly worried thereover. Seven clubs employees are held for indictment.

Scranton Carpenters Pat on Wage Scale

SCRANTON, Pa., May 20. (FP)—Striking carpenters here are standing pat for the $10 scale and a revision of working conditions. Out since April 1, they have rejected compromise offers from the bosses.

Electricians, attempting to negotiate a new agreement with their employers, are deadlocked and may call a strike to enforce demands.

CLEVELAND, May 20.—The Jewish Working Women's Club will give a basket party on Saturday, May 24, 8 p. m., at the Freiheit Hall, 3514 E. 116th Street.

The proceeds of the party will be sent to the Cloakmakers' defense Committee. Every sympathizer with the Cloakmakers is invited to attend the party and help to swell the fund.

CHICAGO INTERRACIAL COMMITTEE FOR TRADE UNION WORK AMONG NEGROES REPORTS PROGRESS

CHICAGO, May 23.—There has been organized here an interracial committee to stimulate trade union organization among Negro workers. Headquarters have been established on the South Side in the center of Chicago's industrial Negro population and considerable progress in the work of the committee is reported.

L. M. Coleman, secretary of the committee has issued the following statement of the city to be addressed by prominent trade union speakers and organizers.

Our Program.

"The Chicago Committee for the Promotion of Trade Unions Among Negro Workers is composed of representatives from trade unions (both Negro and white) affiliated to the American Federation of Labor, unaffiliated trade unions, semi-labor organizations, representatives of unorganized workers, and individual sympathizers. Its meetings are held on the first and third Thursdays of each month, 8 P. M., at the Electrical Workers Hall, 236 E. 35th St., Chicago. In order to finance the work of the committee all members and sympathizers are requested to make a minimum monthly contribution of 25 cents. Those who are in a position to contribute a larger sum are urged to do so."

Purpose and Function.

"The purpose and function of this committee is to promote trade unionism among Negro workers in Chicago for the improvement of their wages, hours and working conditions, and to educate them in their class interests economically and politically."

Education.

"1. To carry on an extensive program of education among these workers in the principles and purposes of trade unionism, and to establish labor forums and schools for systematic discussion and instruction in working class problems.

"2. Pamphlets to be sold at a small price and leaflets to be distributed in large quantities free, dealing with the Negro in American industry, the necessity for organizing into trade unions, and other vital problems confronting them, will be printed from time to time by the committee.

"3. Special campaigns will be initiated and conducted to penetrate the unorganized masses with out literature and program.

"4. A series of mass meetings will be arranged in different parts of the city to be addressed by prominent trade union speakers and organizers.

"5. As soon as the work of the committee develops sufficiently it shall establish a monthly organ to enable it to more systematically carry its message to the workers."

Organization.

"1. To organize the unorganized Negro workers. To secure the recognition and actual affiliation of these workers to the A. F. of L. Where this cannot be accomplished immediately, bonafide unions will be built on a functioning basis and the fight for their recognition and affiliation continued until it is granted.

"2. To carry on an energetic campaign to remove all race barriers in the unions.

"3. To actively participate in all strikes, and to further a program of aggressive trade unionism.

"4. To defend the rights of Negro workers in the trade unions and in the industries.

"5. To fight against company unions, welfare associations, and other schemes organized as substitutes for real trade unions.

"6. All sections of this organization will establish connection with their respective progressive and left wing trade union groups, without, however, merging their identity.

"7. In the promotion of its work the committee calls upon the entire local trade union movement for its support and co-operation and earnestly solicits the assistance of sympathetic union speakers and organizers."

If you are in favor of this program you are eligible to join and we urge you to become affiliated to the committee. Come to our next meeting and lend your assistance in building this movement. For further information write to or call:

PLUMBERS' ACTION BRINGS FIVE DAY WEEK TO FORE; YIELDING OFFICIALS FACE REVOLT

ful old club of suspension over the heads of the Brooklyn plumbers, on strike since April 1.

Threats of the revocation of Local 1's charter were so current that members believed there must be fire where there is so much smoke. So far as the International is concerned, there was "no announcement for the press now." Nevertheless President Coefield was in conference for most of the afternoon.

Bronx Backs Brooklyn.

Nearly as dramatic as Local 1's action was that in Local 463, representing plumbers in the Bronx. Spiking rumors—and reports published in the capitalist press—that plumbers in the rest of the city outside Brooklyn strike, were bringing pressure to end the strike, Local 463 by a unanimous vote expressed its admiration in the splendid fight of Local 1. Not one official dared oppose the mass sentiment.

Sentiment in the Bronx meeting ran swiftly against the International officials for their willingness to agree with the bosses that the strike must be called off first before negotiations begin. The formal bargain presented to Local 1, that the strike be called off and the demands arbitrated was regarded as the virtual death of the five day week, if accepted.

With the bitter experience in mind of Seattle building trades workers last week who arbitrated the five day week demand and lost it entirely, the Brooklyn plumbers have determined to stick it out until the Building Trades Employers' Association is willing to talk reason over that and the $14 scale.

Local 463 staged an insurrection of its own Wednesday night over the injunction obtained by union officials against the bosses. Members were indignant that officials would seek to use the ancient anti-union club in their own behalf. "A stain of 463," declared one enamy of the injunction, whether used against labor or for it.

The present injunction, obtained from the Bronx court to restrain the bosses from continuing their lockout, has been in effect a week without one plumber being taken back to work. Seventy members of the union were instructed yesterday morning to present themselves to as many bosses with copies of the injunction.

The bosses just laughed and told them to come back Friday, Saturday or Monday. Of the 45 plumbers who reported back to the union hall, not one had gotten a job out of the injunction.

The slow paralysis of New York's building industry as a result of the plumbing tie-up is becoming apparent this week as thousands of carpenters, plasterers and other workers seek vainly for work. While no estimates of unemployment were available, nevertheless union halls were filled with members seeking work while many jobs have closed down.

NINE FREED ON CERTIFICATES BY BROOKLYN JUDGE

Big Welcome for Heroes of Long Strike

Three hours of waiting only served to increase the enthusiasm of the thousands of fur workers who jammed East 22nd St. outside of Joint Board headquarters to welcome the fur workers who were released from Ludlow St. "certificate of reasonable doubt" after being tried and convicted in Nassau County for an alleged raid on a Rockville Center fur shop during the 1926 strike.

No sooner had the autos carrying the men turned into 22nd St. from Broadway, than the cry rose "Here they come!" and there was a mad rush for the corner—in spite of policemen and every other attempted obstruction.

The cars were stopped, the men grabbed and carried down the block on the shoulders of devoted fellow-workers.

There were shouts, and embraces, hand-shakings and tears, and the released prisoners had scarcely a chance to greet their patient wives, and mothers and sisters and sweethearts, before they were carried to the windows of the building to be cheered and saluted by a vast crowd of workers who could not manage to squeeze into the building.

Mourn Missing Comrade.

"We never expected such a welcome," each man protested. And there was only a disappointing note—the fact that Oscar Mileaf was not with the others because after the trial he had been taken to Welfare Island to serve out a six months sentence given him on a disorderly conduct charge framed-up by the right wing.

The workers released yesterday were Maurice Malkin, Leo Franklin, Samuel Mencher, Philip Otto Lenhart, Martin Rosenberg, Joseph Katz, George Weiss and Jack Schneider. When they had been carried into Gold's office at the Joint Board they stood at the open window and talked to their comrades. The same sentiment came from each man.

"We are back on the job," fellow-workers. We are glad to be released so that we can go on with the fight to preserve our union. We are ready to go back to the picket lines and join with all of you in driving the right wing traitors out of our union forever."

Judge Questions Trial

In ruling for the appeal of these fur workers, Justice Mitchell May said:

"That an atmosphere could easily have been created at the trial to influence the minds of the jury against the defendants is readily apparent upon the most cursory examination of the records.

"Having in mind this situation and that the proof offered by the people was far from impressive, the conduct of the District Attorney in his opening examination, cross examination and his summation are to be carefully criticized. That the District Attorney went a long way to insure the conviction of the defendants cannot be gainsaid. . . It is seriously questionable whether the defendants were able to secure that fair and impartial trial which the law insures."

Loyal to Joint Board.

What was planned by the reactionary officials of the A. F. of L. and the International Fur Workers' Union as an attack upon the registered workers of Kazarsky & Grubman, 251 West 30th St., was turned into an enthusiastic demonstration of solidarity with the Furriers Joint Board yesterday morning and resulted in the arrest of vice-president I. Winnick and a scab named "Bordilla" as well as three left wing workers, Philip Glassman, Abraham Kaplan and William Schifrin.

The workers of the Kazarsky & Grubman shop, all of whom are registered, have gone on strike in protest against the boss's refusal to take back two members of the shop, who have been members of the union for years, and very active in strike and other union activities.

The shop was ordered by the International officials to return to work, in spite of the discharge the officials refused to support the workers—who were no doubt discriminated against with the full knowledge and connivance of the right wingers. The workers of the shop have remained on strike in spite of threats and intimidation, and therefore the International has been attempting to introduce scabs into the shop.

Thursday morning, I. Winnick, a vice-president of the International, and B. Stetsky, a vice-president driven out with the old corrupt Kaufman regime, appeared in West 30th St., with a scab nicknamed "Bordilla," who is well known for his scabbing during the last strike. They were met by the hisses and taunts of hundreds of workers who had joined the picket line in sympathy with the workers of Kazarsky & Grubman. It was impossible for the scab agents to reach the building.

Is Finds Out Sentiment.

Suddenly, "Bordilla" made an attack on Abraham Kaplan, one of the active unionists who has been refused reinstatement in this shop, and this brought a score of workers to the defense. In the general struggle which followed, Winnick and Stetsky were shown clearly what the workers think of them, and their union-smashing activities.

Winnick and "Bordilla" were arrested charged with assault, and they caused the arrest of Glassman, Kaplan and Schifrin on the same charge. All five were released on $50 bail in court with Markowitz, the lawyer who represented Winnick, was a representative of the manufacturers' association named Greenberg.

This open collaboration between the bosses and the right wing is being shown in many other ways which is quickly rousing the workers to the danger which threatens their union if the International should gain any further power.

Lady Prefer Rabbish Pile to Children's Home, Bob's Sent Back to Orphanage

Two boys, both 13, who escaped from the Children's Society Home at Dobbs Ferry, more than two weeks ago, were found sleeping in a pile of rubbish near the corner of 20th St. and Lexington Ave. yesterday.

The lads were found by Patrolman Kaslovsky of the East 22nd Street station, as he was making his rounds. He took them to the police station, where they admitted running away.

The boys are Adolph Rosenstein and Richard Pingos. They said they had been inmates of the home for two years. They were turned over to the Children's Society to await the arrival of officials from the home who will take them back.

UNION BUSTERS ARE HALED TO TRANSIT QUIZ

Berwind and Hedley to Explain Control

The mysterious William F. Kenny, the big contractor, who pals around with Governor Smith, will be quizzed closely in the transit hearings next week, Samuel Untermyer, transit counsel has announced.

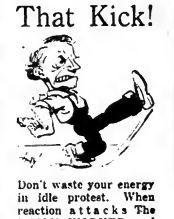
Kenny, who with his associates controls the B. M. T. and the I. R. T., is considered the connecting link between the subway crowd and the governor's office. He is constantly by the governor's side. The other might be accompanied Al aboard the Berengaria when the governor said howdydo and goodby to J. Ramsay Macdonald, departing for England.

Kenny, with Chadbourne, the financial backer of McAdoo in the 1924 Democratic party fight for presidential nomination, will be questioned closely about the exact extent of their control of New York's biggest public utility.

Edward J. Berwind, the big coal man who makes fat profits out of selling non-union coal at a big margin to furnish the electricity which runs the traction system here, will also be haled before the commission next week. While his famous exploits as a union-buster may not be brought to the fore, it is certain that his profitable connection with the Barwind-White Coal Co. and the I. R. T. will be.

Frank Hedley, the union-buster on the I. R. T., who had quite a few broken strikes to his "credit" will also be asked to appear before the commission, along with J. L. Quackenbush, general counsel for the I. R. T. It was Quackie who conceived the brilliant idea of depriving I. R. T. strikers last summer of their homes through some legal hokus-pokus.

Fake Bakery Union Issues Phony Label to Deceive Buyers



Jewish bakers continuing their strike against Pechter's and Massing's bakeries in the Bronx found a new enemy when the strike-breakers were organized into a fake "union" by the bosses.

A fake union label, stuck on loaves taken in these non-union shops, is confusing many housewives who do not examine the sticker closely. The strikers ask that purchasers make sure that the Bakers' union label is affixed to all bread they buy.

Leaflets warning friends of the union of the deception being attempted by the two shops, which have been struck for several weeks, were passed out yesterday by union members.

Reaction Hits Snag in Building Trades.

The action of Local Union Number One, Plumbers Union of Brooklyn, in defeating attempts to establish the principle of arbitration of basic questions like the five-day week, will be welcomed by every worker who has been sickened by the shameless display of reaction recently in the needle trades and other unions.

The 1,700 members of this union of highly skilled workers made their protest so emphatic that the international union officials were forced to recede from their stand. The support given Local Number One by the large Bronx local shows that the spirit displayed by the Brooklyn plumbers is no sporadic flare-up but is the product of deep discontent with existing conditions and the methods employed by the union officials to meet them.

The injunction secured by the union officials against the bosses is just as ineffective as might be expected. The injunction is the bosses' weapon and can not be used successfully by labor organizations. It weakens the morale of the workers and creates false confidence in the impartiality of capitalist courts. Only officials who are too close to the bosses to be of much value to the workers will attempt to use the injunction as a major weapon.

The rank and file plumbers have shown their dissatisfaction with such methods and the officials have replied, according to reports, with threats of revocation of charters. It is noticeable that right wing union officialdom, when the membership shows every intention of fighting the bosses, always turn in anger upon the rank and file instead of the employers.

The struggle in the local building trades, not only because of the militancy shown by the workers, but because it comes at a time when the right wing is making every effort to prevent it, is of national importance. In addition to these strikes and lockouts, there is a wave of other smaller strikes and organization movements which have the possibility of developing into more important struggles.

In certain sections of the labor movement the worker-employer-cooperation scheme seems to have hit a snag. It will pay the left wing to watch closely even the smallest signs of a revival of militancy and prepare to give direction which will broaden them into real mass movements against both the capitalists and their labor agents in official union positions.

Growth of Chinese Communist Party.

At the congress of the Chinese Communist Party held in Hankow beginning May Day figures were presented by Chen Tu that proved the rapid growth of the Party from a small and determined revolutionary group of only 994 members at the last congress in January, 1925, to 57,967 members.

In the same period the Young Communist League increased from 2,365 to 35,000.

In the trade unions and peasant organizations the growth was equally remarkable. In 1925 only 150,000 workers were organized in the trade unions, whereas the unions now have a membership of 2,800,000. The peasant unions increased in membership during the same period from 200,000 to 9,829,000. The student unions have a membership of 420,000.

Most figures are dull and uninteresting, but these figures eloquently testify to profound social changes that have taken place in China. Nowhere else has there been such an astonishing growth of the labor movement in a period of less than two years and a half. The last conference of the Communist Party of China was held on the eve of the great strike that broke out in February, 1925, and soon became general throughout the industrial centers of China. In that strike the Communists emerged from a small group somewhat isolated from the mass of workers and peasants into the one dynamic force in the labor movement. They became the leaders and organizers of the masses.

By applying correct tactics and throwing their energy into the Kuomintang, the nationalist liberation movement, they became the motivating power in the campaigns against imperialism; in building up the army they were the most energetic and had the advantage of the advice of comrades well-trained in the art of insurrection.

By virtue of their position as leaders of the working class and because the proletariat is the only force in China that is cohesive enough to lead an independent political existence, the growth of the labor movement kept pace with the growth and influence of the Communist Party.

In China, as well as in all countries where history has placed revolution on the order of the day, the Communists have shown, by their superior leadership and self-sacrificing devotion to the cause of labor that they alone are capable of directing the revolutionary forces against the power of the master class.

A party rooted as deeply in the masses of the workers and peasants as is the Chinese Communist Party cannot be exterminated no matter to what monstrous extremes the imperialist butchers and their lackeys go in their desperate efforts to forge the chains of slavery upon the masses.

The past achievements of the Communist Party give assurance that the liberation movement in China will drive forward against the imperialists to the establishment of a workers' and peasants' government.

"Breaking Chains" Makes I.L.D. Converts

AKRON, Ohio., May 16. (By Mail) "Breaking Chains," moving picture epic of the Russian Revolution, was presented here last night by the International Workers Aid, to an enthusiastic audience of 700 workers.

Carl Hacken, organizer for the International Workers Aid, outlined the aims of the organization and its role in the class struggle. At the conclusion of his talk, over a dozen workers filled out application cards for membership in the organization.

The Soviet Union Delegation at Geneva Exposes the Aims of World Imperialism

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

THE World Economic Conference at Geneva has been turned into an event of first class political importance for the working class by the delegation from the Soviet Union.

Into the sessions devoted to strengthening the capitalist economic front against the workingclass, the extension of trade agreements, negotiations between gigantic international trusts, discussion of tariff problems and preparations for placing still more of the burdens of "stabilization" upon the masses, the Soviet Union delegation has projected the two questions:

(1) Does the capitalist world recognize the existence of another system opposed to itself which has maintained itself for 10 years?

(2) What are the intentions of the capitalist governments—peace or war?

HERE in the United States there is undoubtedly a strong tendency to undor-estimate the importance of the appearance of the Soviet Union at Genova and the negotiations that have taken place there. But European diplomats, who had planned to turn the Geneva conference into an offensive against the Soviet Union, and who heard gleefully the news of the raid op the Soviet Union Trade delegation office in London, know that just as the raid itself has become a boomarang smiting sorely the heads of British imperialist government, so has the Geneva conference become a forum from which the Soviet Union delegation broadcast to millions of workers the contrast between their policy of peace and the war policy of the imperialist nations.

THE bluff of the imperialist nations has been called. Their representatives know only too well that substantial alleviation of the economic diseases of Europe, without Russian participation, is impossible.

They whistle to keep up their courage, but the clear formulation put forward by the Soviet Union delegation has gone straight to the hearts of the European workingclass.

Gregory Sokenikov put the issue squarely: Either economic relations with the Soviet Union or armed intervention as in China—war or peace. The responsibility rest upon the imperialist governments, not upon the worker' and peasant' government of the Soviet Union.

THERE are other important aspects of the conference which have not escaped the notice of the world press correspondents who know something of the labor movement. It is, when all is said and done, in the labor movements of the various countries that the Soviet Union finds its strongest allies.

The New York World correspondent reports:

"Meanwhile agreement between the Russians and the International Labor Office, whose leaders are mostly socialists, has been advanced by private conference. Heretofore the leaders of the Second International have been the most active opponents of the Third, but now some of them are determined to secure Russian cooperation in their work."

THIS is another way of saying that the mass pressure for support of the Soviet Union and its anti-imperialist struggle is forcing even sections of the reformist leaders to abandon their position of unrestrained hostility.

In its directions to its various sections for their activities in connection with the Geneva Economic Conference published In International Press Correspondence for April 28, the following paragraphs are to be found:

"The order of business of the Conference does not contain a single question representing the immediate requirements of the working class of Europe. The unemployment problem has been barred from the agenda. On the other hand, the Conference will be used for the purpose of preparing an attack on an International basis against the wage and labor conditions of the working class, an attack which the workers of the world can only meet by the creation of an Internationally united and militant trade union movement.

"But it is not only for this reason that a watchful eye must be kept on this Conference by the working class. It is also in connection with the menace of war, which it is the duty of the international working class to combat. At the same time there can be no doubt that illusions entertained by the Second International will be cruelly dispelled by the outcome of the Conference. Furthermore, the Conference demonstrates to the working class the existing imperialist antagonisms, which contain the germs of armed conflicts between imperialist groups and which can be solved only by the overthrow of the capitalist order of economy."

THE assertions quoted above, written long before the oConference convened, have been borne out fully by events at its sessions. The presence of the Soviet Union delegation has brought out sharply the insoluble contradictions in capitalists economy from which arise the rivalries that make imperialist war an ever-present danger.

The presence of the Soviet Union delegation and their ultimatum to the economists and diplomats of world imperialism has drapatised again, for the whole working class, the existence of Soviet State, challenging world capitalist on every point of its program.

The Soviet Union delegation, (aided greatly of course by the desperate acts of British imperialists who have convicted themselves of trying to provoke war) administered a political defeat to capitalism at Geneva. It is the task of the Communists to state so clearly that every worker will understand the tremendous significance of this defeat in a period when British imperialism has been trying secretly for months to set up a war front against the Soviet Union which would appear at Geneva in the preliminary form of a united boycott by the capitalist nations.

The Forward Crowd Too Much Even For J. Ramsay MacDonald

By H. M. WICKS.

THIS is the age of internationalism. Face to face with the international bourgeoisie and its most loyal and valued flunkeys, the second international, stands the international proletariat. But as capitalism itself, even within a given country, does not enjoy uniform development, there arise antagonisms within the ranks of the two historically opposed classes, so the unequal development on an international scale gives rise to groups and groupleta within the international organizations of the capitalist class and its auxiliaries, such as the socialist international.

In countries where capitalism is weakened because of inaxorablo economic and political forces the socialdemocratic parties and their leaders, the heroes of the second international, are catapulted into positions of responsibility where their task is save what they can of the wreckage in order that capitalism may have a new, if short, lease of life.

Such was the condition in Germany after the world war, when the Scheidemanns, Eberts, Noskes and others launched murderous attacks on wholesale scale against the working class in order that their masters, the capitalists, might maintain control of the governmental machinery and thereby protect their right to the private ownership of industry. In England the ruling class also has to rely upon their good and faithful servants of the second and Amsterdam internationals to aid them in their fight against the increasing militancy of the working class. The rule is that in those countries where the impact of the class struggle has weakened the capitalist class the social-democrats play important roles as defenders of things as they are.

In the United States, because of the fact that the ruling class here is powerful and arrogant and feels itself capable of dealing with its own slaves, it doesn't require the aid of the MacDonalds or Thomases or Clines or Scheidemanns to maintain power. In the European situation the capitalist class is firmly convinced that it needs the aid of the reactionary leaders of the second international in order to maintain power. In the United States the capitalists feel that they are for the most part powerful enough to do without such aid, or if it is required the Greens, Wolls and Lewises serve their purposes. So the main task of the yellow socialists today is to try to persuade the capitalists that they need them to hold the working class in chains. Since tho only remnant of the old socialist party extant in the United States, aside from Victor Berger's outfit in Milwaukee, is that group around the Jewish Daily Forward and since the masses of Jewish workers are swinging to the left and deserting the American representatives of the second international, there is grave danger that the last refuge of the discredited socialist party will be wiped out before its leaders have a chance to prove to the capitalists that they can be depended on to more or less heroically defend capitalism when it can no longer stand on its own feet. Through theoretically pledged to carry out in this country the policy the parties of the second international carry out in Europe, historical development has relegated the American socialists to the miserable role of bootlickers of a labor aristocracy that developed independently of the alleged political parties of labor and that plays the role of agent of the capitalists that the socialists in other countries play.

IN New York the socialists are doing the dirty work of the Greens and Wolls, by leading the attack against the rank and file of the labor movement. But they are not meeting with marked success; the petty bourgeois elements that support the Forward gang have no roots in the working class—they have long ago graduated into all sorts of business-men. Aside from the petty bourgeoisie, only paid thugs and gangsters still follow in the wake of the Forward, and recent events point unerringly to the fact that long before the socialists here have a chance to defend the master class in its last extremity the workers themselves will have disposed of them.

In waging a fierce fascist campaign against the left wing in the needle trades, the only industry in which the socialists of New York ever had the ghost of mass support, the Jewish Daily Forward, and its English speaking prostitutes of the type of James Oneal, were forced at first to call to their aid the riff-raff, the rag-tag and bob-tail elements of the dofunct counter-revolutionary forces of Russia and finally, after the failure of such scoundrels and liars as the notorious menshevik, Abramovich, and the comic-opera expremier, Kerensky, they tried to use the politically bankrupt, J. Ramsay MacDonald, for their purposes.

IT was a good scheme. There was nothing wrong with the strategy. Unfortunately for the Forward gang, it didn't work. Certainly J. MacDonald would never balk at the job of defender of a right-wing movement against the Communists. His record in Britain has proved his love for that sort of thing. He is the defender of the official right-wing bureaucracy in the British labor unions. When J. H. Thomas is in a tight fix he can always rely upon MacDonald, the former leader of the Parliamentary labor forces, to come to his aid.

If Bill Green or John L. Lewis were in distress, J. Ramsay would defend them without hesitation.

But the Forward gang is not the American labor movement. It never was even an important part of it and never will be. In fact it is not a part of the labor movement at all these days. It speaks for the labor bureaucracy in the needle trades, a forlorn outfit of incompetent and unprincipled office holders who have been defeated by the rank and file and who only exist in their positions through the practice of fraud and violence against their own membership. The main support of the Forward gang comes from people who at one time, when the Forward first started on the lower east side, were workers, but have evolved into other walks of life. While the Forward remained on the lower east side, its supporters moved up-town, to the Bronx and Washington Heights and Jewish graduated from the ranks of the workers.

Respectable petty shop-keepers, petty clothing and shoe manufacturers, grocery vendours, pawnbrokers, rabbis, advertising writers, movie show proprietors, restaurant-keepers, high-salaried officials of the United Hebrew Trades, thugs and gangsters, the right wing leaders of the innumerable petty business outfit and ita official organ, the Forward. When celebrations are pulled off to commomorate some such thing as the thirteenth anniversary of the founding of the Forward, at which MacDonald was advertised to appear—but didn't—this aggregation with their numerous progeny turn out in full force.

They do not bring their offsprings in order that they may learn something of the struggles of the workingclass today in order to show them off. Since the parents have managed to get away from the shops on the east side, they want their precocious children to get farther away so they yearn for them to become violinists, saxophone or piccolo players, operatic singers, contortionists, ballet dancers, pole vaulters, six-day bicycle racers, Al. Jolsons and Eddie Cantors, orchestra conductors, literati—in short anything but workers and revolutionists. Forward celebrations furnish opportunities for the youngsters to display before their fond mammas and pappas their budding genius.

IT was just such an affair at which the distinguished J. Ramsay was advertised to appear. He, who had consorted in knee breeches and silk stockings with the royal family of Britain; whose eminence is unchallenged among the best people of England was to appear as court jester for pickel peddlers, sandwiched in between them on the program like Will Rogers to Zeigfeld's follies between Fanny Brice and Gallagher and Shean. This was the dismal prospect that faced MacDonald. What to do?

He left England in order to avoid being in the absurdly ridiculous position of being kicked out of political life by his own party, the Independent Labor Party, because of his treachery to the working class before, during and since his term as premier of Britain. Fleeing to these shores, he was to be made still more ridiculous by playing the clown before a mob of the petty bourgeoisie.

No wonder he suffered a severe attack of diplomatic illness and refused to come within a hundred miles of the celebration of the thirtieth anniversary of the Jewish Daily Forward!

SO, as far as the voyage of MacDonald was concerned, it was almost a total loss to the Forward and its hangers-on who hoped to regain some of their waning prestige.

On the night that he left for England, MacDonald paid a short visit to some of the Forward crowd, which enabled them to somewhat save their faces before the petty bourgeoisie, but that is all.

MacDonald has come and gone, but the left wing remains, stronger than before he came, because forces which the yellow socialists can neither overcoma nor understand, are shaping themselves so that Abe Cahan, Morris Hillquit, James Oneal & Co. will never have the opportunity to play in this country the filthy role that the European leaders of the second International have played during and since the world war—that of voluntary executioners of the working class.

TORY ANTHEM

Some gentlemen from Scotland Yard
They called at Moorgate Street;
Their etiquette was perfect,
And their voices they were sweet;
In the gentlest Cockney accents
They detained the Russian Reds—
They drilled some safes, they bust some walls,
They punched a couple of heads.

You may talk of Alexander,
And Hector and Hercules;
Of MacDonald and Lysander
And heroes such as these.
When the sun sets on the Union Jack,
And Die-Hards die too hard,
The guardians of the Empire
They rush forth from Scotland Yard.

They drilled some safes, they bust some walls,
And yet 'twas NOT a raid;
They merely sought a document
Lost, stolen, or mislaid;
They know the Reds at Moorgate Street
Had learned some secret stories;
Thank God that Britain in her need
Is governed by the Tories!

At home the Empire's in a mess,
In China, in a fix;
But Birkenhead has hiccoughs
And the Cabinet has Hicks!
Though Arcos has no documents
For Scotland Yard to get,
Thank God that Mr. "Zinoviev"
Resides in London yet.

Last time we were in trouble
He composed a lovely letter;
This time, no doubt, he'll help us out
(Let's hope he'll do it better)
The China situation's bad,
The home one is no beauty.
O Downing Street expects each spy
To do his noble duty;

Ramsay MacDonald, all considered, was a bad investment for the Jewish Daily Forward. He made a bad crack about not wanting to "shout socialism from the housetops." That was a hard one for the so-called socialists who paid his fare to swallow. Then he refused to comment on the Sacco-Vanzetti case, which the socialists are ostensibly supporting, upon a silly pretext.

Kerensky is turning out better for them. And so far as we know cost them less. At least the Forward probably did not pay his fare. He was good "front" for right-wing rallies and teamed up nicely with Matty Woll. But towards the end the A. F. of L. seems to have plied him a little too strong to suit even the Forward crowd. This crowd, it happens, has maintained that it favors recognition of the Soviet Union by the American government. But now the A. F. of L. executive—on the basis of Kerensky's information—has reaffirmed its opposition to recognition.

A Professor Complains.—Harry T. Collings, Professor of Economics at the University of Pennsylvania (the same citadel of learning which kicked out Scott Nearing), bewails the difficulties of life in Brazil. In an article on the cost of living in South America, published in the current "Current History," he complains thus:

"Every family, even of the middle class, must have at least one servant and usually two, since the social customs of the country do not permit the wife to do housework. A servant's wage has now risen from $15 to $25 a month in the larger cities and wages represent only a part of the cost. The food for servants, entirely different from that of the family, costs a considerable sum each month."

There must be some way out of this sad difficulty, professor. Let's see. How about training the servants to do without food? This process may involve a number of casualties, but no great economic experiment has ever been accomplished without some sacrifice. Or—as an afterthought—why not have the family, even the middle class family, share the servants' food?

What the War Was About.—The "Montreal Gazette" carries this story out of Chicago, dated May 11:

"Two young engineers, who have worked shoulder to shoulder for more than four years in the peaceful haunts of one of Chicago's largest industries, today compared notes to discover that they once sought each other's life to achieve the grim ends of battle during the war.

"These men both cited for their bravery by Canada and Germany are Harry Ratcliffe, 28, whose home was in Winnipeg, and William Seligman, 29, formerly of Frankfort.

"Comparing notes, these two men revealed coincidence as strange as fiction. During the great battle of Paschandaele, Ratcliffe, a corporal of the Little Black Devils, 27th Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force, and Seligman, a private of infantry regiment 368, Imperial German Army, discovered that they were less than fifty yards from each other on that eventful day of November 5, 1917.

"From his secret vantage point, Seligman recalled he managed to mow down one Canuck machine-gunner after another. But there was one intrepid gunner that he could not oust from his gun which was spitting death to the Germans.

"That man, he is certain, is Ratcliffe, who routed the Germans in that war encounter. So fierce was the battle that Seligman was ono of the 15 men out of 97 who escaped after failing to oust the sturdy Canadian machine-gunners."

The story does not tell how these two heroes feel about it now. But if they have any sense they must feel extremely foolish.

DRAMA

The Resurrection of "The Thief"

Alice Brady and Lionel Atwill Bring Henri Bernstein to Life

WHAT happens when a mediocre play is skillfully produced is splendidly illustrated these days at the 48th Theatre in the hands of Alice Brady and Lionel Atwill.

Granted a token of comparison one is naturally led to say that the result is far happier than when a good play is poorly produced and acted. "The Thief" is a play of the drama-by-the-yard-and-cut-to-measure school of playwriting, is a typical exhibit of the work of Henri Bernstein, hackneyed playwright and emotional thrill-monger.

A country house—a drawing room—the best appointed that a large sum of money has been shelled out for. Seductive woman that the host's son, a romantic youngster of nineteen, is the culprit. He confesses to the thief before the first curtain—to the audience, through the kind grace of Bernstein, deus ex machina—well, it's one of those plays.

Under Mr. Atwill's marvellous direction this banal story and most obvious mechanical claptrap took on flesh and blood.

In spite of the fact that the play lacked the social forces which drive men and women to emotional and spiritual heights or depths, and substituted cheap theatrical tricks in their stead, due to its perfect cast and direction the play takes on a semblance of reality.

Miss Brady read something into her lines that Bernstein never dreamed of when he wrote "The Thief."

There can be no doubt that the personal revival of this piece will be a financial success, which means that it will be some time before we see Miss Brady in a vital effort. Her performance in "The Bride of the Look" still remains her outstanding achievement.

In the supporting cast Mona Kingsley's capable work stands out most noticeably and under circumstances which call for great praise and consideration. Anthony Fraser as the romantic youth is a good deal more than adequate.

While the production as a whole suffers from the humor of native production theatrical art it affords a lesson in conventional dramatic art and craftsmanship.—C. Y. H.

Broadway Briefs

Murray Phillips who revived "Kempy" at the Hudson theatre yesterday, which is playing to put on "Rain" instead, "Turn to the Right," "The Wedding Fee," "Captain Applejack," "The Boomerang," "Aloma of the South Seas," "Wedding Bells," "The Green Hat," "Mercenary Mary," and "Lovely Lady."

Whitford Ames has a new play for George Arliss, and will bring it out during the fall. He is also planning to direct Gilbert Gabriel's "Enough" sometime in the fall.

"Take Another Guess," the new musical comedy which Henry H. Osborn and Sam H. Gutman, are producing, opens at the Garrick Philadelphia, Monday evening, May 23, prior to the Broadway premiere two weeks later.

Charles Dickens' "Pickwick," which has been touring since February and is now playing in Boston, will be seen here next season.

Ramon Arbuckle, known to film fans as "Fatty" is coming to Broadway in a comic revival "Baby Mine." The play, which will be presented by John Cort, is scheduled to open here June 6, is the work of Margaret Mayo, and was done here in 1910.

On the Screen

THE MISSING LINK

There are redeeming features to this mediocre comedy. These are particularly evident in the pantomine of Syd Chaplin who brings his excellent mimicry to the movies from the English music halls. If is there, together with his artist brother Charlie, that Syd Chaplin got his training. In justice to Syd Chaplin, he has developed his own movie style, and has become a comedy star second only to his brother.

As a noted explorer, with whose fame as a big game hunter the natives are tremendously impressed, Syd acts as a referee in a fight between two natives. The winner is to become his bodyguard. He explains the rules in pantomime, according to the Marquis of Queensbury boxing rules: no hitting in clinches, break clean, and no hitting with the opponent on the ground. It is excellent fun and the following fight in which the rules (as usual in boxing) are absolutely disregarded, is more good fun. Other occasional bits of excellent work plus the laugh-provoking antics of Akka, a chimpanzee with pants on, are the only redeeming features of this inane and rather dull picture.

"The Missing Link" is a far, far cry from that excellent comedy "The chimpanzee as around Syd Chaplin, gave us the bloomyba from his repertoire in his splendid characterization of Old Bill. The gags in "The Missing Link," built as much around the Chimpanzee as around Syd Chaplin, were by large rather stupid. No opportunity was given this excellent comedian to show his real ability to advantage. Chuck Reisner, director of "The Better 'Ole" also directed this film which will add no credit to himself nor the star. Ruth Hiatt takes the part of the blonde who is always evident in the comedies for no reason at all. Let us hope that the Warner Bros. in their next Syd Chaplin comic, will give us something better than this rehash of stale slap-stick acted in the jungles that so evidently never grew in Africa. With the presence of authentic pictures like "Chang" even we arm-chair travelers can get wise to fake movie props.

Additional compensation on the program including the "Missing Link," at the Colony Theatre in New York, are the Vitaphone presentations. No matter how dull a program may be presented, the Vitaphone is always intriguing in its demonstration and vision of future possibilities. —W. C.

Editor's Notes

By ALEX BITTELMAN

NEWS comes from the Philippine Islands of a revolt in Occidental Negros Province, led by a man called Flor Intenchendo whom the capitalist newspapers choose to call "the self-styled Emperor of the Philippines." The reports declare the uprising squelched, its leader insane, several casualties in dead and wounded, and over 600 arrested by the constabulary.

What is this revolt about? Of this the capitalist press says nothing. Presumably, it is one of those "little affairs" that repeat themselves every now and than, being merely "incidental" to the process of establishing civilization among the Filipinos. But is it so, really?

Only in one newspaper story, coming at the tail end of it, do we find some inkling as to what was actually at the bottom of this latest revolt in the Philippines. We quote:

> The revolt is hooked up with general discontent among laborers in the sugar plantations, who live on 40 cents a day.

Which reminds us that one phase of the situation in the Philippines, the most important one perhaps, has been sadly neglected even by the radical sections of American labor. We mean the labor angle of the movement for independence among the Filipinos.

How much attention is the labor press of this country paying to the conditions of the plantation slaves in the Philippines? No attention at all. How often does the labor movement in America discuss the labor movement in the Philippines? Very seldom, if ever. And yet, it is precisely the masses of Filipino workers and peasants that should be of most interest to the labor movement in the United States. Even from the point of view of Filipino independence the toiling masses of the islands represent the most basic and reliable force.

Perhaps this latest revolt of the plantation laborers, who are forced to live on 40 cents a day, will succeed in attracting the attention of American labor to the agrarian and labor phases of the Philippine situation. And when we say this, we do not mean the short attention that the reactionary officials of the American Federation of Labor are paying to Latin America. We do not propose that Matthew Woll and his kind step into the Philippines in the struggles of the Filipino workers. No, we mean something entirely different. We mean closer relations between the toiling masses of the United States and the Philippines for common struggle against American capitalism, and, in the first instance, for the complete independence of the Philippine Islands.

BRITISH imperialism is quite definitely and consciously driving towards war upon the Soviet Union. The recent raid of the Soviet commercial offices in London is merely one more link in a long chain of intrigues, maneuvers and provocations, in which the Baldwin government of forged documents are past masters, designed to sharpen the situation and to precipitate a military attack upon the first Workers' and Farmers' Republic.

The excuse given for the police invasion of the Arcos offices is so ridiculous, and obviously manufactured to suit a purpose, that no intelligent person can take it seriously. This alleged hunt for a "lost document" is a fraud on the face of it.

Here is a little news item by the Associated Press from London:

> Questioned regarding the police raid on the Soviet house, Sir William Joynson-Hicks, the home secretary, told a crowded and animated session of the house of commons today that information sent to him by the secretary of war last Wednesday had satisfied him that a certain official document was or had been in the possession of someone on the premises occupied by Arcos, the Soviet commercial organization.
>
> Now, mark the language of the noble lord. He was satisfied "that a certain official document WAS OR HAD BEEN in the possession of SOMEONE on the premises OCCUPIED by Arcos." And on the basis of this the lord proceeds to raid the official commercial agency of a foreign government.
> Has the "document" been found? No, it has not. The above press dispatch continues:
>
> The document in question was not found, but her situation to help the American capitalists crush
> Sir William reiterated that he was satisfied that it is or was in the Soviet house.
> It is this "finger-was-diplomacy" of a government that came to power with the help of forged documents that is now threatening the peace of the world. These are desperate maneuvers of bankrupt gamblers trying to embroil the world in a new carnage in the hope of thereby saving their own skins. The working masses of England, America and the world over must not permit this game of the British imperialists to continue. Coupled with the demand of "Hands Off China" must go the demand of "Hands Off the Soviet Union" in such large and powerful volume that the imperialist robbers of Great Britain do not dare to proceed any further with their game which must inevitably bring upon us a repetition of the bloody days of 1914-1918.

PRESIDENT Doumergus of France, accompanied by Briand, his foreign secretary, is now paying a visit to the British Crown. We are being assured that this is a friendly visit at which "incidentally" politics also will be discussed.

Many things are coming up in these incidental political discussions, in which China and the Soviet Union are undoubtedly playing a major part. England has not given up hope of creating a united imperialist front against the Chinese revolution and against the Soviet Union. Chamberlain is therefore working hard to secure the support of France. But the latter has several outstanding grievances against England, among them, British support of Italy against France in the Balkans, British support of German opposition to the French occupation of the Rhineland, etc. French imperialism seems to be quite willing to listen to British overtures provided the latter are accompanied with substantial concessions on these "disputed" points. Having the above in mind, we can understaud better the reports that are now coming from London, and which say:

> He (Briand) will try to win the British to the French Cabinet's point of view and, according to well informed sources, it is likely that he will succeed with Mr. Chamberlain, because (now read carefully—A. B.) the British in their present far-eastern and Russian entanglements regard the Franco-German disputes as of little consequence.

In other words, Chamberlain is now ready to pay

YOUNG PIONEER CAMP

The Young Pioneers of New York and New Jersey have begun their drive this year to establish a permanent Workers' Children's Camp. For the last two years hundreds of workers' children have gone to Young Pioneers Camps, for two, three and four weeks. They have lived during that time in the open air, slept in tents, went on hikes, sang songs, played all kinds of out-door games, built camp fires, held interesting talks, etc. While in camp they knew they were in a Workers' Children's Camp and not in a bosses' camp as the boy or girl scout camps. They knew that while they were playing and enjoying themselves, they were building their minds as well as their bodies for the workingclass.

Comrades, this camp needs your support. You must get your friends to go there as well as yourself. For information, send your letters to Young Comrade Corner, 33 First Street, N. Y. C.

Does Not Believe in Bible Study

Dear Comrades: I enjoy reading your paper. I took it to school and the children read the jokes and riddles. They enjoy them. But when they read about the Cantonese religion they asked me whether I believed it was right to have singing instead of bible study. I said that I did think it is lots better. They said, "I can't help it if you don't know any better." I believe they should not have bible study.

Capitalists & Workers' Children

By JOSEPHINE DARGIS.

The workers make a living for the capitalists. But the capitalists pay no attention to the workers. Once I saw on the street a nice limousine with a chauffeur. In the car there was a beautiful dog looking out of the window. Out on the street was a forlorn boy with ragged clothes, shivering with cold selling papers. He looked at the limousine with a sad face saying to himself, "I wish I had a dog's life."

What's the truth about the capitalists? Workers make the millions for the capitalists. They give the money for building churches, and pay thousands of dollars to our bosses. Compare the workers' children to the rich. The worker's child has for lunch only hard bread and butter. The rich have all kinds of dainties. Do they give the poor children anything? NO! When the poor children grow up they again make millions for those capitalists.

THE LITTLE GREY DOG

Today traveling was more difficult than it had been yesterday, for Benjamin's feet were blistered. he groaned and complained at every step. The dog comforted him, encouraged him, let him ride on his back a little while tho the boy was too heavy and after a few minutes the dog's bones would crack and he would lie down. Deep sorrow tormented the dog, surely the servants of the rich man were somewhere in the neighborhood, determined not to return home without the boy. And even if they were not found, how far was it to the north? How would they get there if Benjamin was already too tired to go further?

Toward midnight they suddenly saw a fire burning on the meadow. People must be there. The dog dragged the boy into some thick bushes, told him to keep still, crept softly toward the fire. A pot hung over the fire, and a blond man sat before it. Close by stood a wagon with large wheels, to which a brown horse was harnessed. The dog looked at the man very searchingly. He looked different from the people at home, had a very light skin, kind blue eyes; surely he was a northerner. But was he a good man? Then the dog remembered that only good people understand the language of animals, and the dog decided to tell him the story of little Benjamin. Carefully he came closer to the fire and said softly, "Good evening, man. Are you a northerner?"

THAT DAY

By HERBERT GUREWITZ

Oh, when will that day, that magnificent day
Come to relieve us from our wretched prey!
From the grip of those tyrants that rule this earth,
With condemning hand, and iron girth.

2.

Oh, when will it come? I ask you again,
When man will be liberated from his unjust pain,
And will throw off the yoke from those long bruised shoulders,
And cast them off that use us as boulders.

3.

That time shall come, yes, it shall come;
When all will be happy and not only some.
Then will we have our laugh, loud and long,
And all the world will be nothing but song.

4.

We will not be ruled like pigs and swine
By the suckers and grafters who drink blood-wine.
They shall not live by our work and toil
Nor shall they feast while in sweat we boil.

5.

There will be no slaves nor will there be masters
And our foes will be less full of disasters,
We shall have our day, dear brothers, but in due time
When we and our kind shall be sublime.

Answer to Picture Question

By RAYMOND KOZUL

The answer to the question "What is a vacation" published in the Young Comrade Section of May 6, 1927 is—All school children receive a two-months vacation every year. The bosses and capitalists are doing this not because the children are going to get a rest but because the teachers demand it. Do you think that the teachers spend their vacations by going abroad and visiting other countries. But we have to stay in our own city and find a job so that we may help our fathers. Not long ago we were studying about New York and our teacher was telling us about her visit to the Niagara Falls and she thinks she has a lot of brains but she's only got the brains of a one-year baby.

RICH AND POOR

By GEORGE YAKIM—Akron Pioneer Group.

There's a whole lot of difference between the rich and the poor boy. The rich boy gets whatever he wants. The poor boy has to work and even so he won't get what he wants because he can save but very little.

The rich boy or girl have all the pretty and good clothings. They can have candies, ice cream, toys or tickets to a show anytime. Did you ever see the clothes and toys of the poor kids? The rich children won't even look at them.

The rich children have all the good meals they want. Big breakfast, big lunch, big supper. All the tasty cookies and fruits. After a good supper they go to bed. Nice and warm beds in nice and warm rooms of their own. And the poor children? Well, they do not eat too much. They can't be too particular either. Sometimes they are quite hungry when about to leave to the school or to go to bed. As to the poor children's bed, you know from experience that it is not very pleasant for 4 or 5 children sleeping in the same bed with the rest of the family in the same room which is not very warm either wintertime, but a hell summer nights.

Spargo in Looking-Glass Land

By N. SPARKS

A Revolution does queer things to a certain type of parlor radical. It whisks him around, makes him dizzy, reverses his sense of direction as a magnetic storm may do with a compass. North becomes South and East becomes West. The whole world becomes topsy-turvy; wrong becomes right and right becomes wrong; tyranny becomes freedom and freedom becomes tyranny. Like Alice, he finds himself in Looking-glass Land, with the whole world on the other side—strange, removed, and unreal.

Like Alice, Spargo finds life in Looking-Glass Land to be nothing but an insane chess game. Gone is the logic of economics, of the struggle of classes, and of power with the conclusions and incoherence of a dream. Gone is the economic effort of millions to free themselves from oppression. A "Great Man" makes a nation Fascist or Bolshevist at will. Powers are moved and are captured. A Napoleon dominates the scene.

Into each gentleman's picture of the world has Spargo transposed himself as a result of his visit to the first glimpse of open class warfare and revolutionary victory.

John Spargo, "Has the genius of Shakespeare." In his stupendous commonplaceness" is the answer. Because Mussolini consists of "commonplaces intensified to a degree rarely attained." In just the an manner over which all the inhabitants of Looking-Glass Land, the Gryphon and the Mock Turtle, the March Hare and the Dormouse would nod their grave approval!

For Spargo, Lenin and Mussolini are Tweedledum and Tweedledee. Only since this is Looking-glass Land, it is Lenin who is the romanticist while Mussolini is the realist!

To Dante's hand a young romantic descended to hell by way of the World War. He came back to behold the light of dawn and found his way by way to his holiness, or in it, his romanticism changed every and he became a realist. . . From a position that was as dull as time-worn tinsel he ascended to a position so thorough that it dazzled the eyes by its brightness."

In much spirit strains the poet Spargo sings of his hero. Mussolini—the high traitor sings of his hero, Benito Mussolini. Let us translate:

"In the history of the workers has arisen many a great, a young socialist-romanticist who, because of his kind, a social patriot who went to the war. While enjoying a major's comfortable position of power and authority, he found the dull and commonplace such as the bitter, monotonous daily struggles of the workers had never known. And not having a real scientific understanding of Socialism, the process of social evolution, he took in his mouth and he came back to Italy more than ever, agog for greater power and greater power. From the age-old sober Socialism of an upward class struggle against the capitalist system, he hopped to the timed romanticism of revolutionary nationalism, in the heights of Chief Executive of Italy with the initiation of bloodshed and of the Grand Inferno Infernal."

In just this the true story of Mussolini as it would appear to anyone except Spargo-through-the-looking-glass?

Let us create some more of Spargo's Looking-glass statements. Once you have the key it is easy to understand. Reverse everything and you have the truth.

"Mussolini the revolutionary would have seen in the Socialist the revolutionary. . . . He would have seen in the class struggle the key to the door of internationalism. Mussolini the realist saw in it the threat of death to the one reality of supreme consequence, Italian nationality and unity."

And now let us ask Spargo, the looking-glass realist, what "the one reality of supreme consequence in the present reality" conflicts with "the one reality of supreme consequence"—Yugoslav nationalism, which "the one reality" of French nationalism conflicts with "the one reality" of German nationalism, when German nationalism conflicts with British nationalism. Then, indeed, would find his "one reality of supreme consequence" in the form of a few shellfish on the shore or a few cents grubbed out of the woods!

No wonder Spargo-realist was to serve Italian nationality by robbing it of its world foes. It was a discovery in the midst of the struggle that the conditions of modern life make the nation dependent upon its neighbors for more than upon its "glorious." And for "the fierce romanticism of the Mussolini formulation!" Alas "for poor Karl Marx, the scientific, the romantic! Had he been a realist of the Mussolini type, he too might have described them "the conditions of modern life make a nation dependent upon its economic mechanism" for more than upon anything else.

Poor Lenin! Compared in the leadership of the Russian Revolution to Mussolini because in the leadership of the conserving and constructive forces." Again the topsy-turvy of the looking-glass.

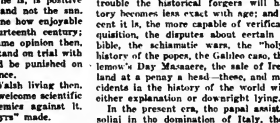
Lenin who raised himself higher than Louis Lenoir by ranged himself on the side of the defense of the present reality." Just as, in Looking-glass Land, George III is placed higher than Washington, Louis XVI is placed higher than Marat, the Emperor of China is placed higher than Sun Yat Sen, and the Kaiser is placed higher than Liebknecht.

To Spargo, Lenin and Mussolini are Tweedledum and Tweedledee. The sole grounds for this tabloid comparison are that both were once comparatively unknown and both "rose to power" and headed dictatorships. Yet as soon as even these apparent resemblances are examined they crumble to pieces.

From almost the beginning of his activity Lenin was known and recognized as the leader of the Russian revolutionary movement, while Mussolini was a vacillating, uninspired, and timorous socialist. The dictatorship headed by Lenin was (and still is) the dictatorship of the party of the workingclass — a party built up through years of struggle by thousands of devoted workers/ The dictatorship of Mussolini is a personal dictatorship, a dictatorship based on a patchedl-up alliance between the petty-bourgeoisie and big business, a dictatorship against the workers, carried on by a "party" submissive to the Duce's slightest gesture, a party developed overnight, without a history or a theory, with no record of class struggle save hooliganism and punitive expeditions against the workers.

Lenin "rose to power" as a natural consequence of his inspired leadership and loyalty to the cause of the workers.. Mussolini rose to power as a result of his despicable treachery.

And yet of these two (who resemble each other no more than the lion resembles the wild pig) Spargo dubs Lenin the romanticist, and Mussolini the realist. Lenin, studying, organising, patiently building—the romanticist; Mussolini, making bombastic speeches in his socialist days and pestering the comrades for protection against plots—the realist. Lenin fighting against the illusions of the war—the romanticist; Mussolini, putting on a uniform "for the Fatherland"—the realist. Lenin assuring free development for all peoples, Mussolini demanding that everyone else clear out of the Mediterranean. Lenin founding a new society, Mussolini trying to patch up the old. Lenin founding the Communist International to carry on the struggle and prevent future wars, Mussolini standing over Europe's powder magazine and making bravura gestures with a lighted cigarette. Lenin with his self-effacing enunciation of the tactics for victory, Mussolini with his paranoic proclamations bristling with "I"s. Lenin inspiring the greatest love in the hearts of millions, Mussolini inspiring only the horror felt in a nightmare.



And of these two, Spargo tells us that Lenin is the romanticist and Mussolini the realist. Is this not Looking-glass language?

Spargo the little traitor worships Mussolini the big traitor. Spargo the little madman worships Mussolini the big madman. Spargo the erstwhile romantic socialist worships the finest flower of all the romantic socialists.

Certainly the panic engendered in Spargo by the first glimpse of the reality of what was for him always a romance—the class struggle—has transposed him into Looking-glass Land where black is white and white is black. Romance is Reality and Reality is Romance. From Looking-glass Land the real world is incomprehensible and inaccessible. The workers will march on and will achieve their victory; they will accomplish their emancipation through the methods of Lenin— the Great Realist. Spargo will neither see nor understand. There he sits in Looking-glass Land, carefully inspecting Tweedledum and Tweedledee. And what character in the dream is Spargo himself? Is he the mad March Hare or the equally mad Hatter? Or is he merely Humpty-Dumpty who had a great fall?

Go hang yourself, John Spargo, for never in life will you regain the world of reality.

REVISIONISM WINS A RECRUIT

Dr. Walsh, brilliant thinker that he is, is positive that it is the earth that moves, and not the sun. In passing, it is pleasant to imagine how enjoyable it would be if this were the fourteenth century; for if the doctor had held the same opinion then, he would have an opportunity to stand on trial with Galileo before the Inquisition, and be punished on that body's rack, a martyr to science.

Perish the thought! Were Dr. Walsh living then, instead of avowing belief in an unwelcome scientific theory, he would be writing polemics against it. Of such stuff are christian "martyrs" made.

To avoid controversy, the catholic revisionists would have to consult archaeology and straighten out many of the errors made by the ignorant writers of the Old Testament, which furnish much amusement for modern freethinkers. There are many kings, battles, cities and invasions incorrectly mentioned, that furnish much proof that the Biblical writings were created many centuries after the dates their authors inserted in the manuscripts. These, of necessity, must be expurgated.

Once they come to the period covered by the New Testament, the cross-bedecked scholars will be on slightly easier ground. They may find it best, of course, to eliminate those quotations attributed to Jesus that make him appear, in the light of modern newer psychology, to be a neurotic-obsessed prophet of doom. For chastity and asceticism are no longer considered the prime virtues. And, unfortunately for the early disciples, the world never came to an end as Jesus is quoted as predicting, and probably will not for some time to come.

Perhaps, on the recommendation of the editor of "The Catholic World," who dotes on striking scholarly poses that are obviously better mimicry than scholasticism, the story of the loaves and fishes will be made more plausible. But these are minor matters.

One portion of scriptural history that Mr. Belloc will have some trouble rewriting, is the part used by atheists proving that of all the apostles who claimed, or are said, to have seen Jesus, only a few were recorded as doubtful honor. Many other points in the gospels of Peter and Paul will have to be cleared up, especially those referring to the time when they were supposed to have been written.

No doubt a few quotations will be inserted, attributed to Peter, to disprove the fact that the Catholic Church was really born at the first Council of Nicea in 325 A. D. It is dangerous for the doctrine of the primacy of Peter, on which the entire theory of the papacy has been built, for catholics to know that before the fourth century, the church was merely an atheistic sect, without dogma or doctrine, other than that the Messiah had come, and that the kingdom of god was at hand for the lord's annointed.

Perhaps, too, the jabbering about the poor inheriting the kingdom of heaven will be toned down a bit; in these days of social unrest, when the message of Communism is spreading like wildfire, and the laws of historical progression are beginning to show that the poor will eventually inherit the earth, the capitalist backers of the holy hop-houses will demand the removal of the benediction on inheritance by the poor. But perhaps this will depend upon the mintueness with which the monkish quibblers survey the documents in question.

The more recent the researches become, the more trouble the historical forgers will have, for history becomes less exact with age; and the more recent it is, the more capable of verification. The inquisition, the disputes about certain books of the bible, the schismatic wars, the "holy" wars, the history of the popes, the Galileo case, the St. Bartholemew's Day Massacre, the sale of Ireland to England at a penny a head—these, and many other incidents in the history of the world will necessitate either explanation or downright lying.

In the present era, the papal assistance to Mussolini in the domination of Italy, the clerical revolt against the Mexican labor government, the activities of the missionaries in China in opposition to the Nationalist movement: all will occupy the brilliant imaginations, the facile minds, and the treacherous pens of the skull-capped "revisionists" of history.

I could continue writing paragraph after paragraph, citing instance after instance in history that would require much unscrupulous ingenuity to explain away, or apologize for. But they are historical facts, and catholic apologists can wrangle over them until Thomas Paine is reanimated like Beecsie's sinner who became saint; they will remain indelibly in the musty records of man's progress through the ages, undismissable indictments against the tyrannous Roman Catholic hierarchy.

One more quotation, and I will cast Belloc's essay in the wastebasket where it belongs. I cannot resist the temptation to include it here, for it gives us valuable insight into the workings of the catholic mind.

"I doubt whether the greater part of the small catholic body in England," he says, "even those of them who have paid special attention to historical study, have realized in how high a degree the whole story of European civilization, including the story of England and Ireland, is presented to them through the medium of violently anti-catholic propaganda." The majority of catholics—those who have a right to the name, I mean—are educated in the parochial schools, where their whole outlook on life is colored by catholic teaching. If all those years of unremitting have no effect, I cannot have much respect for the mental capacities of the average church-member.

The class-conscious worker, who usually reads several capitalist newspapers and magazines in addition to his own radical publications, is able to sift without much trouble the wheat of truth from the chaff of vicious, lecherous capitalist propaganda. But perhaps I am straining a comparison, contrasting the intelligent, open-minded class-conscious worker with the bigoted, much "educated" church-member.

Where the Red Flag Flies

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

HERE we are, about 80 miles from Moscow, to the South, as Philadelphia is from New York, or Milwaukee from Chicago.

Kolomna is one of the oldest towns in the Moscow Province. It is mentioned for the first time in 1177; this town being the last fortified place on the south of Moscow. It played an important part during the battles between Moscow's grand dukes and the Tartars.

"The Guide to the Soviet Union" tells us that the walls of the Kremlin crowned by pinnacles were erected by Italian architects in 1508; that the Pyatnitskiye Gate and the Marinkina Corner Tower are in a specially good condition. It is also declared that the ancient Voskresensky (Resurrection) Church, built about the 13-14th century, and the Uspensky (Assumption) Cathedral, dating with its belfry from 1672, are also worth noticing.

But what we are most interested in is the fact that the Red Flag of the Social Revolution flies over the City Hall (the House of the Soviets); that the Local Committee of the Communist Party is holding its meeting this Saturday afternoon, IN THE CITY HALL, and that the local Communist newspaper, a bi-weekly, The Kolomna Worker, with 4,000 circulation, also has its offices IN THE CITY HALL.

Kolomna will always be memorable to me as the place where I met for the first time a Communist mayor in a city of the Soviet Union. It is the place where I first saw a lower unit of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union at work.

We had stopped off at Kolomna on our way to Oxery for a May Day meeting on this Saturday night, the eve of May Day.

In little more than three hours we had made the distance by auto from the Comintern Building in Mokhovaya Street, in Moscow, first stopping at the beautiful building housing the financial department of the Moscow Province to pick up its head, Alexeev Vaseilevitch Nikolaev, also a member of the Provincial Executive Committee of the Soviets, who was cooing along to make the main address in Russian. I was to speak in English for the Communist International and the Workers (Communist) Party of America, and Comrade Gerish, a deportee from America, came along as transintor. The chauffeur completed the party.

It feels good to ride in an auto in the Soviet Union. It symbolizes to a great extent the successful struggle of the Russian masses to get off their knees, where czarism tried to hold them, and stand erect. The plodding horse with his meager load to market is being supplanted on the road, just as the tractor is lifting the burden of toil on the land.

The district thru which we sped was that truck garden and the dairy country of Moscow. With the coming of May Day here spring is coming into its own and everything is turning green. In the meadows frequently as we passed were great herds of cows, with greater flocks of sheep. The hills rolled lazily toward the horizon, with the woods everywhere plentiful. The peasant still likes to build his home with logs, and there are many indications that the peasant's son likes to follow after him.

The buildings of the summer resorts of the Moscow workers are more modern, setting an example for the peasantry. They are to be found in the hilly and woody country along the Valley of the Moscow River.

We discussed the agriculture of the Soviet Union, its forestry problems, the relations between the city workers and the peasantry, the development of animal husbandry, the housing problem in city and village, the recovery of industry and many other questions as the auto kept up a steady pace of from 40 to 50 miles an hour over a road that was an exceeding revelation to me, who had been told that the highways of the Soviet Union were "no good." It was thus that we came to Kolomna, passing a huge farm implement manufacturing plant on its outskirts as we entered the gates of the city. The plant was probably not as large as the McCormick or International Harvester Plants in Chicago, but its size was, nevertheless, impressive.

The population of Kolomna is set down as 25,000 for 1923. It is claimed that it now has at least 35,000. It boasts a huge machine works, founded in the 80's of the 19th century, where 11,000 workers are now employed.

We stepped out of the car into October Revolution Street before the City Hall that faces a large public park across the highway. We were first greeted by the Commandant of the city. Inside the City Hall we met the assistant mayor and then Comrade Grueshin, the Mayor. He escorted us to the meeting of the Party Committee in the Party's own headquarters on the second floor. On the walls are pictures of Karl Marx, and of the Second Congress of the Communist International and a banner given to the party by the trade unions of the city on the occasion of its 25th anniversary, 1898-1923. An organizer was making a report on the condition of the party nucleus in a local factory that turns out military uniforms. There are 150 party members in the factory and the fact that 13 had failed to report in a re-registration was considered a calamity. Only 60 per cent was taking advantage of Marxian lecture courses, which was not considered sufficient. This, however, would be considered an exceedingly high percentage in the United States.. We could only remain for a few moments because we had to catch our train for Oxery. But Our Mayor, Comrade Grueshin, got time to point out that the beautiful park across the way had come into existence since the revolution, that the electric and water system in the city were new, and that other important improvements were under consideration. The city owns a fleet of modern auto-buses to transport the workers from their homes to their workshops.

Across the street from the City Hall was the Soviet Hotel, where we got a bite to eat. On another corner was the local branch of the Moscow Bank. Then there was a branch of the Sewing Machine Government Trust, announcing that it was a part of the All-Union Council of National Economy. On the way to the station we saw the new housing program in action. It had been started in 1925. Some buildings, each housing eight families, had already been completed. Others were under course of construction. Thus Kolomna, more than 15 centuries old, was energetically contributing its share toward the building of the new social order on May Day, 1927.

A Heart Cry from Amsterdam

THE position of workers in Bulgaria under the present dominating military fascist clique is painted in the blackest of colors by a piteous appeal published in the "Bulletin of the Amsterdam International," of March 15. Regulation of labor conditions does not exist; the enterprises are unsanitary throughout; the state gives no relief to the unemployed, who number more than one hundred thousand; trade union organizations are persecuted relentlessly. In a word, "the general economic and political reaction is becoming more intolerable."

All this and much more is true: During the past four years, when police repressions, arrests and murderous treatment in the police stations had been unable to smother the revolutionary labor movement, wholesale massacres were resorted to. Many of the foremost workers have been killed off; scores of the best trade union workers have been beaten up among whom was a secretary of the Revolutionary Trade Union Centre— Comrade Jeko Dimitrov.

The Amsterdamers write in their Bulletin that the reformist unions in Bulgaria (numerically weak) carried on a resolute struggle against the military-fascist reaction and were subjected to police persecutions. This is an insolent and shameless lie. The whole world knows that the Bulgarian reformists actively supported the fascists during the coup d'etat of 1923. The well-known reformist trade union leader and member of the Central Committee of the Social-Democratic Party, Kasasov, became a minister in the fascist government. Gregory Danov, another leader and secretary of the reformist trade union centre besides the other thirty socialist deputies entered parliament on a general fascist ticket.

Moreover reformist leaders did not even refrain from personal participation in torturing and killing revolutionary trade union leaders. In Plovdiv, Comrade St. Kiradjiev, the secretary of the Tobacco Workers' Union, who was very popular among the revolutionary workers, was killed by the reformists. In Tatar Pasardjik, Ivan Iliev, the well-known theoretician of the reformist trade union movement himself directed the torturing and killing of hundreds of revolutionary workers and peasants in the September days of 1923. All this the Amsterdam leaders know perfectly well.

Last year when the reformists organized the so-called Balkan Conference in Sofia, the Bulgarian workers through their independent trade unions demanded that the question of the White Terror in the Balkans be included in the agenda of the conference. Sassenbach and Martens who were directing the conference, bluntly rejected this demand, stating that it could not be expected to occupy itself with political questions, referring to the internal affairs of other countries. With the fascist reaction in Bulgaria and all over the Balkan countries, the refusal to discuss this question was paramount to a silent approval. And now we have the edifying spectacle of Amsterdam shedding crocodile tears over the sufferings of the Bulgarian workers.

The assection of the "Bulletin" that Bulgarian workers are entering fascist organizations is also untrue. In the terrible conditions that have prevailed since the April 1925 massacres, when the Red Trade Unions were destroyed, the Bulgarian workers have begun to organize their own independent class trade unions, and, despite all obstacles, the laboring masses of Bulgaria are entering and supporting them today.

The Great Man Has Passed

By PAT DEVINE

—Sketched by Boardman Robinson.

THE leader of his majesty's opposition and erstwhile leader of the Independent Labor Party in Britain is grieving America with his austere presence. "Ramsay Mac" as he was lovingly called, has had a most illustrious career during which the traditional diplomacy, for which he is notorious, enabled him to bluff the rank and file of the I. L. P.

In the years preceding the formation of the Communist Party of Great Britain, many present members of that Party were members of the I. L. P. They constituted a Left Wing that bitterly fought the opportunism of MacDonald, Snowden and many others of that ilk.

The big fight at I. L. P. conferences after the Russian Revolution, was on the question of the Second or Third International. A Scottish Conference held in Paisley, adopted practically unanimously the following resolution:.

"To disaffiliate with the Second International and affiliate with the Third International." This resolution economically went on the agenda of the National Conference (representing the British Isles) on the subject of Socialism.

"Ramsay Mac" and his colleagues knew the overwhelming feeling in the I. L. P. was against the Second International . . . and that the resolution as it stood would be adopted. Accordingly, they put on their thinking caps in order to devise some scheme for surmounting the difficulty.

The National Conference saw the results of this thinking. When the Standing Orders Committee reported on the resolution they stated it was a double barrelled one . . . dealing with two distinctly different questions. They therefore recommended that two resolutions be made of it, namely:

1. "To disaffiliate with the Second International."
2. "To affiliate with the Third International." The first resolution was unanimously adopted. It is a matter of fact, however, that for years after that decision, Ramsay still remained as official of the Second International. Treachery and double dealing have always been his stock in trade.

On the Second resolution, the new historic 21 points evolved. After much wrangling and misinformation, the I. L. P. decided (some time after) to give allegiance to the 2½ or Vienna International.

The Left Wing left the Independent Labor Party at the Southhampton Conference, and became part of the Communist Party of Great Britain.

The evil genius of all the right wing fights was the "enemy" Ramsay, who never stopped his bitter attack on the progressive elements inside and outside of his party.

Opposition to his policy was being built up by the Left Wing inside the I. L. P. once more. The Whitleys, Maxtons, Buchanans, Lansburys, etc., etc., began to definitely oppose his blatant opportunism.

With the great influx of voters to the British Labor Party, Ramsay's prestige as a National figure increased. The extreme tendencies of his followers became a nuisance. How could he prove to the capitalists that he could run capitalism better than they, if his army of back benchers inside Parliament were so bitterly class war in their attitude.

At last he found a remedy! With the cooperation of Snowden, (the labor member of the capitalist government), Thomas (the treacherous leader of the Railwaymen,) and Snowden, (the Liberal statesman, later always fought militant working class action), he devised the scheme of expelling Communists from the Labor Party. This was carried by the Inner leadership of the Labor Party, and an attempt was made to have it enforced in the local labor parties.

Resolutions are easily passed but not so easily put into practice. The majority of the Labor Party were against Communist exclusion, and refused to expel them from the Party.

Time passed with the Communists still in the Labor Party, and Ramsay fighting like the mischief to keep them out.

The Labor Party was returned to Parliament in 1924 as the second biggest single party in Britain. No party without the assistance of the Liberals could take over the government. The Liberals decided to support MacDonald and the Labor Party went into office. The Cabinet selected caused much fighting because of the obvious passing over of many of the best working class leaders for men like Lord Thomson, and Trevellyan, who were nothing more or less than glorified liberals. The hand of MacDonald was clearly seen in the composition of the Cabinet which in reality was a coalition between Liberals and Laborites.

During its brief term of office, the Labor Party passed the Dawes Plan—which enslaved Europe and placed the hegemony in the hands of Wall Street. The Transport Strike saw MacDonald threaten the leaders with the enforcement of the Emergency Powers Act, which would have totally crippled the unions and placed all power in the hands of the employers. No definite bill was submitted to Parliament that was an attempt to concretely better the working class conditions. With the passing of the Dawes Plan, Liberal support of MacDonald departed, making a General Election necessary.

MacDonald, instead of going to the country on a question of labor principals, allowed the election to be fought on the question of the "Campbell prosecution" now famous as the "Don't shoot case."

It is proper to mention that during his period of office, MacDonald allowed the shooting down of the natives of Iraq. Militarism was nourished instead of starved. The Labor Party passed out without bettering its position.

During a bitter fight on the "Socialism in our time" I. L. P. resolution between the Maxtons, Wheatleys and the Campbells, Stevens and Mac-Donald, an article appeared in the Glasgow Forward —foremost Socialist Weekly—designating the Left Wing as "eenie oonie asses." MacDonald was definitely fighting to discredit the militant section of his Party.

Much water has flown under the bridge since then. The General Strike saw MacDonald once more actively sabotaging the workers... Not one word of encouragement came from his lips during that most important period. Rather was he doing all he could to break down the morale of "his people" who by their actions were proving how incapable they were of following a milk and water reactionary leader. When Sir John Simon stated the General Strike was unconstitutional, MacDonald hastened to disassociate himself from it . . . he being a constitutionalist.

The raid on the Russian Trade Delegation in London is only a continuation of the anti-Soviet tactics of the British Die-hards . . . rationalised by MacDonald. As a result of the raid much forged material will be "discovered" that will be of use to the right wing reactionaries in their fight against the progressive workers of Britain.

It is significant that the raid should come just as the Communists were mobilizing the workers for action against the notorious trade union bill now before Parliament. MacDonald used the last Government Blue Book—on Communist activity—in his fight to expel the Communists from the Labor Party. The impending disclosures are more opportune for "Ramsay" who must once more fight those progressive elements who still believe in the working class fighting against all inroads into their hard won Trade Union Rights.

Was it chance that led MacDonald to America at this time, I WONDER?

REVISIONISM WINS A RECRUIT

By WILL DE KALB

MR. HILLAIRE BELLOC, the English essayist who is kept as busy as a professional state's witness at a Communist trial defending the Roman Catholic Church with his suave pen, announced in his biweekly statement to the clerical press—syndicated at regular "big-name" rates — that he has gone over to the ranks of the revisionists of history. This will come as a shock to Rupert Hughes, W. E. Woodward, H. G. Wells, H. W. Van Loon, and other members of that scholastic group, familiar though they may be with the catholic publicist's opportunistic precocity.

"Let us rewrite history!" appeals Mr. Belloc, with boyish enthusiasm. If he did not qualify it by attempting to grind his ever dull axe, a liberal-minded person might throw in his support with a doubting aye. But Mr. Belloc makes no attempt to conceal the motive underlying his new move in affiliating with a school of historians much hated and attacked by his casocked pagan contemporaries.

"It is high time we began to react," he says. "We must begin to rewrite and to reread the history of our own past (i.e., that of the Catholic Church—dismal reading for the catholic!) and of the past of Europe as a whole. Catholic history is simply true history (!) for it was the Catholic Church that made Europe. . .and if you read the story of Europe or England in the light of anticatholicism, you get its whole form distorted." To this, I can only add "sic!" I need not ridicule the paragraph; its author has already done so.

With holy horror, Hilaire relates how he was brought up on a history book written by "old Frank Bright, a typical Oxford book, profoundly anticatholic in its whole presentation of the past." If Belloc's parents had been good catholics, they would have sent him to the Jesuit University of Dublin, where all his schoolbooks would have been strictly kosher. However, with much sadness and regret in his wavering voice, the medieval apologist recounts the poisoning of his mind by what I consider an unimportant, thought fair, (to the bourgeoisie) history book.

That Belloc's mind is poisoned, I cannot, in view of his literary activity, gainsay; but I think it is more accurate philologically to classify it as narcotized.

An analytical study of the essays written by the British lay churchman leads one to suspect that he has never read any educational work that took its place in the bookstalls sans the imprimatur of one of the pope's business agents. Belloc is very naive in despairing his partial education, acquired by reading expurgated books. Education, I know, is a process looked upon with much fear and disdain by those who sell the gospel over the bargain counter; yet one hardly expects an apologist, clever essayist though he may be, to speak so frankly.

One can easily imagine the kind of history Mr. Belloc and his business friends would write. It would be quite an orderly history, I assure you. The story would begin some 5,000 years ago, for a catholic "revisionist" would consider it an honor and a duty to plagiarize Genesis. A few clerical scholars are in doubt of this point; some are sponsoring the blasphemous belief that the world is more than six thousand years old. But I doubt if this would make much difference, for Mr. Belloc wants his history book to be strictly conformistic.

It would proceed onward to 33 B. C. almost like a popularization of the Old Testament—Dr. Will Durant, of "Story of Philosophy" fame, and Bruce Barton, the puritanic discover of The man, and The book, could be valuable assistants here—except that the forged predictions of the prophets concerning the coming of the Messiah might be touched up a bit, to appear more convincing.

The scores of minor contradictions, of strictly scientific and historical importance, would have to be ironed out, of course. But there are always Jesuit and Dominican lackeys handy, capable of the task. And no doubt Dr. James J. Walsh, who is always a stickler for accuracy when it doesn't mean much, will insist upon the Joshua fable being made to harmonize with current astronomical theories. For

THE MINER GOES ON STRIKE

By H. G. WEISS

Down in the bowels of the earth he digs for coal,
Wielding a pick above his sweating face;
There is no room within the narrow space
To stand upright; he burrows like a mole;
And like a mole is all but blind; the light
Stuck in his cap is burning red, not white;
The dust is stifling in the grimy place;
He coughs and spits . . . Thank God, they quit tonight!
Come five o'clock; he gathers up his tools
And trudges to the cage—two miles or more.
Tomorrow they'll be bringing up the nules
And sending in the gunmen by the score.
The wife and kids—aw hell—he didn't know—
Step on it lively, buddy, up we go!

The Conflict Between Italy and Yugo-Slavia

By B. BOSHKOVITCH

UNDER the auspices of French diplomacy and for the protection of the "peace" treaties against Bulgaria, Hungary, and Austria, the Little Entente was founded, that union of the three states, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Roumania with the help of which France desired to guarantee its hegemony in the Balkans. But France's rival in the Balkans is Great Britain, which likewise endeavors by all means at its disposal to strengthen its influence there. Besides the imperialism of France and Great Britain, however, an aggressive policy is also carried on in the Balkans by fascist Italy, which has the advantage over its greater competitors of being far nearer the scene of action. In collaboration with the British imperialists, those of Italy have established themselves in Bulgaria and are constantly augmenting their influence on Roumania, Greece, and Hungary. In its endeavors to convert the Adriatic into an Italian sea, Italy has already laid hands on Flume and is on the way to convert Albanian on the Board of this society.

Italian capital has already found a firm footing in Albania, the foreign trade of which country presented the following aspect in 1925: 75 per cent, or three quarters of the turnover fell to the share of Italy, 21 per cent to that of Greece, and 3 per cent to that of Yugoslavia. In 1926, the First Albanian Bank was founded with a capital of 12½ million gold francs. Of this capital, 50 per cent is Italian, 23 per cent Albanian, 15 per cent Swiss, 8 per cent Yugoslavian, and 4 per cent Belgian. The chairman and two of the managers are Italians. One half of the reserves is deposited with Roman banks. Furthermore, 18 months back, a group of Italian capitalists, headed by the well-known financier Mario Alberti, concluded a loan agreement with the Albanian minister of finance for a sum of 50 million gold francs, to run for 40 years at a rate of 7½ per cent, the annuity service including amortization amounting to about 8 millions.

Last year a Society for the Economic Promotion of Albania, created mainly with Italian capital, was granted concessions for forest exploitation in the Skutari region, besides concessions for the construction of railways and roads of strategic importance in a possible attack on Yugoslavia. There is only a single Albanian on the board of this society.

By means of the Anglo-Persian Oil Co. and the Anglo-Dutch Royal Dutch Shell, Great Britain has succeeded in extending its influence to Albania. In connection with the exploitation of the naphtha sources there was lively competition in Albania between British and Italian interests, but this ended with the acquisition of extensive naphtha concessions by Italy, too.

The interests of Italy and Yugoslavia are diametrically opposed in Albania. In June, 1924, there was a revolution in that country which destroyed the power of Achmed Bey Zogu, the adherent of the Serbs, representing the interests of the feudal landowners (Beys). This revolution, indeed, was directed against the power of the Beys and against the remnants of medieval feudalism and favored the confiscation of large landed property and the distribution of the land among the peasants.

At the head of the new government was Fan Noli, who was backed by Italy. The old government of Achmed Bey Zogu fled to Yugoslavia, whence it managed with the full support of Belgrade to depose Fan Noli and to restore the old regime of the landowners. This connivance has been admitted by the Yugoslavian foreign minister, Dr. M. Nintchitch. In the Paris paper "Le Matin" of February 16th, 1927, Dr. Nintchitch openly declared that at the close of 1924 his government financed and organized the overthrow of Fan Noli. Finally, however, Italy succeeded in winning over the Yugoslav puppet Achmed Bey Zogu, by which means the Italian fascists paralysed the anti-Italian policy of the Albanian government.

For a time it seemed as though the Yugoslavian government of Pashitch and Nintchitch would succeed in coming to an understanding with the Italians under the influence of British diplomacy. According to the agreement of 1924, Italy and Yugoslavia had each its separate sphere of influence in Albania and in other disputed regions of the Adriatic. Yugoslavia renounced its claims on Flume in favor of Italy and was in its turn alloted the entire coastal stretch of Dalmatia. The Serbian government agreed to this settlement so as to have a free hand in regard to some disputed points in Macedonia and on the Egean Sea in relation to Bulgaria and Greece, in which connection it was desirable that all available Yugoslavian forces be concentrated on the Eastern boundary. In Yugoslavia's foreign politics, the "Egeans" got the better of the "Adriatics."

Very soon, however, it became apparent that Italy had no intention of sharing its sphere of influence in Albania with Yugoslavia. The fascist government of Italy made use of the rebellion of certain class of the Roman-Catholic persuasion in the North of Albania in November 1926 for the purpose of forcing Achmed Bey Zogu to sign the agreement of Tirana between Italy and Albania. By means of this treaty Italy gained full control over the foreign policy of Albania.

This agreement between Italy and Albania is backed by Great Britain. Both in the "New York Tribune" and in the "Matin" it was reported that on the occasion of a meeting at Leghorn between Chamberlain and Mussolini, the former promised that Great Britain would not prevent Italy from laying its hands on Albania. British diplomacy works behind the scenes. It is influencing Roumania, Bulgaria, and Greece in an anti-French sense. Under the lead of British diplomacy, fascist Italy is driving a wedge into the Little Entente, France's main prop in the Balkans, by ratifying the so-called Bessarabian protocol. The yet unofficial union between Italy and Roumania will mean the secession of the latter state from the Little Entente and the complete leading over of Yugoslavia.

The agreement between Italy and Albania caused an acute government crisis in Yugoslavia. Indirectly this treaty was directed against France and also against Turkey, which particularly suited Great Britain, since the latter has long endeavored to alienate Yugoslavia from its allegiance to France and to draw it into the British net. As the protector of Yugoslavia, France cannot contemplate with equanimity this advance of Italian fascism, which already threatens the French interests in Syria and North Africa. Nor can Turkey remain inactive in view of the feverish zeal of the Italian fascists, which also menaces Asia Minor.

Isolated Yugoslavia now begins to think of an approach to the Soviet Union. True, the parliamentary speech of the Yugoslavian Foreign Minister, Dr. Pertitch still bears the marks of indecision and half-heartedness as regards Soviet Russia, though under the pressure of public opinion he had finally to own that "the Yugoslavian people would gladly welcome the renewal of relations with the Soviet Union."

The conflict between Italy and Yugoslavia in regard to Albania is therefore of more than local interest; it has acquired great international significance. It augments the tension not only in the Balkans, where an explosion may ensue on the slightest provocation, but also in other parts of the world. True, the imperialist powers are at present endeavoring to prevent any premature outbreak of hostilities in the Balkans, since they are at present still occupied with China. It is a moot point, however, whether they will be able to quench the spark once kindled in the nick of time.

The working masses in Yugoslavia already scent the smell of gun-powder on the Albania frontier and are therefore redoubling their exertions against the outbreak of a new war. In this connection they reckon on the indispensable help of the international proletariat. Thus supported, the working masses of the Balkan countries will be able to take up a successful fight against war, against imperialism, and in favor of the Balkan Federation of Peasants' and Workers' Republics.

EDITOR'S NOTES

mit Briand considerable freedom of action with Germany, since the France-German dispute has all of a sudden become "of little consequence," in order to secure for England greater freedom of action against China and against the Soviet Union. In fact, this is how the press dispatch concludes (Constantine Brown in the Chicago Daily News):

> The British have already won the French to their side regarding China and expect that M. Briand will confirm their present policy. In the same way they expect him to promise full support in the coming dispute with the Soviet Republic, which last week's raid on the Soviet house in London made inevitable.

There is the whole story of the present "friendly" visit of the imperialist rulers of France to the imperialist rulers of England. It is to patch up comparatively "minor" differences, such as the fate of the Balkans and the well being of Germany, in order to concentrate with combined forces against the major enemy of the present moment. This major enemy in the eyes of world imperialism are the workers and peasants of China and the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union.

The danger of war is here. The conspirators against the peace of the world are carrying on their damnable intrigues without let-up or interruption. Hence, the efforts of the working class and all enemies of imperialism must be doubled and tripled to prevent this danger from becoming a reality.

FOLLOWING the report of Henry L. Stimson, personal representative of President Coolidge in Nicaragua, that "the way is now open for the development of Nicaragua along the lines of peace, order and ultimate self-government," there comes the news of a bloody encounter between American marines and some sections of the liberal troops. The casualties reported thus far are fourteen liberal soldiers and two American marines dead, and several wounded.

This is Mr. Stimson's conception of peace, order and ultimate self-government. This is the peaceful way in which President Coolidge is assisting the big American bankers in establishing their rule in Nicaragua. This is supposed to be not brutal imperialism but mere protection of American lives and property.

When incidents of this kind occur, the one to blame is not the American government but the broken up bands of liberal troops who refuse to be disarmed and crushed by American marines. When Nicaraguans, or Mexicans, or Porto Ricans or Filipinos refuse to be invaded by American military forces and governed by a dictatorship of American generals or admirals, the responsibility for whatever happens is always placed upon the people who refuse to submit to the merciful rule of American imperialism. And this is called democratic and enlightened justice.

Very little is now being said in our capitalist press of what has actually happened to Nicaragua as a result of the recent American intervention. If the truth were told, everybody would know that Nicaragua is no longer an independent and free country, that the actual rulers of the land are American bankers who are enforcing their domination with the help of the navy and the marines. Nicaragua has become a colony of American imperialism the same as India is a colony of British imperialism. And the manner of treatment that American imperialism deals out to its colonies is not a bit better than the treatment given to their colonies by British and French imperialism.

Indeed, we may be proud of our ruling class. It is doing it as well as the older imperialist powers and, maybe better. Let us therefore continue to work towards the end that when the American working class begins to square accounts with its master it will do it as well, if not better, than the most advanced sections of the world proletariat of today.

PACIFIC LABOR CONFERENCE STARTS IN HANKOW

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

IN connection with the visit of the French president and foreign secretary to London it is not without significance that the British delegates at the Geneva economic conference had a united front with the French delegates against the Soviet representatives. Those things do not happen by accident. It means a definite policy, for the moment anyhow. And the developing conflict between the commercial interests of Great Britain and the United States was demonstrated by the due support given to the Russian delegates on important points by the Americans.

THIS need not be taken by anybody as evidence that a united front of all the important imperialist powers against the Soviet Union is impossible. This danger always exists. Fortunately the pirates quarrel with each other and rob each other, and this tendency is almost as much of a life saver for the young Workers' Republic as the might of her Red Army.

• • •

THE twenty-five year old American known as "The Flying Fool" established a new record in the air. The hop from New York to Paris is a great achievement. Thus human ingenuity and individual daring is gradually conquering the elements. Had this young man attempted a feat like this a few hundred years ago and had he actually managed to fly he would be burned at the stake by the ancestors of the type that now ban radical books and censor good plays.

A SO-CALLED Japanese observer rises to say that native tradition has ended "red" power in China. This talk of tradition as a decisive factor in social conflicts is a lot of hunk. The hard facts of life make short work of traditions that originally developed out of a different set of facts. What is decisive in China is not tradition but the economic pressure that is compelling over 400,000,000 workers and peasants to emancipate themselves from foreign imperialism and native capitalism.

• • •

THE British government did not find any "sensational documents" as a result of the raid on Arcos but much literature was seized. The government of forgers and burglars would be a great disappointment to us were it not able to find some justification for the unprecedented attack on the rights of the Russian Trade Delegation. Scotland Yard could take the files of the official organ of the Communist Party of Great Britain and make the hair of the British bourgeoisie stand on end with horrific quotations.

ALEXANDER Kerensky continues to tell his yarn about the early days of the Russian revolution, when he with other agents of the allied powers tried to keep the Russian workers and peasants loyal to the Allied cause. Kerensky failed, thanks to the Bolsheviki, and if the masses of the Soviet Union are now certain that they will never again be called on to jeopardize their lives in a war waged in the interest of some capitalist power.

• • •

LAWS against the free expression of opinion are further proof of class rule. In a classless society there would be no need for such laws because there would be no need for a government to suppress the people. All governments are organs of suppression. Here, somebody will rise to say that in this respect the government of the Soviet Union is no better than a capitalist government, it also suppresses its foes. Quite right but one cannot judge the morality of an act by the method but by the purpose.

• • •

THERE is no free speech in the Soviet Union for the class enemies of the workers. They are tolerated during the transition period from capitalism to socialism. But while in the United States, England, France and in all capitalist countries it is the robber class that enjoys the sweets of power, in Russia it is the working and peasant classes that enjoy it. And while the capitalist system of society aims to perpetuate class rule with its inevitable repression of opinion, the Soviet system aims to abolish the need for the use of force.

Pittsburgh Coal Police War on Miners

BERWIND, FOE OF UNIONISM, WILL TESTIFY HERE

Called as Witness in Transit Inquiry

By TOM ROBERTS

E. J. Berwind—rapacious and aged—an enormously rich union buster, has been summoned to testify before the New York State Transit Commission this week.

Gossip already has it that Berwind will contemptuously ignore the summons. The octegenarian is one of the [illegible] in the American financial world through his control of the giant Berwind-White coal combine and his directorship in the Interborough Rapid Transit Co. and in nearly a score of railroads, steamship lines and other public utilities.

The transit commission wants Berwind to answer some embarrassing questions. It is charged the Interborough is fattening the old man's treasury by purchasing Berwind-White coal at quotations above the market price.

Hard Boiled.

Berwind is cold, hard and haughty. He resents being haled before the bar of inquiry and rumor is active that he will find pretexts for remaining away in his magnificent Spring quarters. He remembers the disagreeable hours of the summer of 1922 when his company was put on the pan in a similar inquiry.

That was during the summer of 1922 when the United Mine Workers had shut down the Berwind-White mines in Somerset County, Pa. The company was evicting miners' families wholesale. President Brophy of the district union sent a committee of miners to New York to picket the fine New York residence of the old aristocrat.

Got Razzed.

What with the picketing before his gates and the city's probing into his profiteering the Berwind plutocrat received the worst razzing of his career. He does not want the experience repeated.

Berwind fought out the 1922 strike with an army of gunmen and sheriffs. One of the incidents of that struggle comes fresh to memory. It was the raping of the wife of a miner named Rakola.

Mrs. Rakola lived at Windber, the biggest Berwind-White coal town, a few miles south of Johnstown, Pa. Berwind is very rich. He seeks to perpetuate his name. So he named his coal town Wind-ber, a reverelon of the two syllables of Ber-wind.

Drunken Gunman.

There were 40 gunmen in that town—drunken, lousy thugs fetched in by detective agencies from Chicago, Pittsburgh, Johnstown and West Virginia. One night the Rakola family was asleep—husband, wife, baby and brother-in-law. Ten gunmen crashed

Turn to Last Page For First Installment Of "Professional Patriots"

This issue of The DAILY WORKER carries the first installment of "Professional Patriots." This book, edited by Norman Hapgood from material gathered by Sidney Howard, co-author of "The Labor Spy," and John Hearley, contains spicy details about the 25-odd anti-labor organizations who operate in this country, under the guise of "patriotic" societies.

By far the most interesting facts deal with the manner in which the National Civic Federation, organized in 1900 to "reconcile capital and labor" took on its suppressionary anti-radical activities immediately after the war.

If you want to learn just where the National Civic Federation, National Security League, American Defense Society and minor organizations of the same variety get the cash necessary to finance their activities, turn to page six now and look for the succeeding installments which will appear daily.

Open Chinese Communist Youth Meet at Wuhan; 40,000 Are Represented

HANKOW, May 19 (Delayed).—The Fourth Congress of the Chinese Communist Youth opened at Wuhan today.

Delegates from the Communist Youth International, the Communist Youth of the Soviet Union, the British Communist Party, the Kuomintang and the Chinese Communist Party welcomed the delegates to the congress.

Reports from the Chinese Communist Party and the Communist Youth International, as well as the tasks of the Chinese youth in the workers' and peasants' unions are included in the agenda.

There are approximately forty thousand members of the Chinese Communist Youth represented at the congress. There were but two thousand young Communists in China two years ago.

President Sacasa Leaves Nicaragua; Marines Swarm In

PUERTO CABEZAS, Nicaragua, May 22.—Attended by a vast crowd of Nicaraguans who recognise him as their constitutional president, Dr. Juan B. Sacasa and staff left yesterday on the sloop Wawa for Port Limon, to spend a term as a political refugee in the friendly state of Guatemala.

Occupation of most of the country by U. S. marines, who are proceeding under orders of President Coolidge's direct representative Henry I. Stimson to disarm the constitutional, Liberal armies and to maintain in power the hireling of Wall Street, the puppet "president", Adolfo Diaz, has caused Sacasa to take this step.

Can Run Later.

After the United States, in the name of Diaz, has policed the country for two years more, American officered constabulary will allow Sacasa's group to run one of their number for president of the country against Diaz. but the voting places will be crowded with Diaz' armed mercenaries, and the entire election will be under the direct supervision of the American forces which have placed and maintain Diaz in office. Sacasa's plea to Stimson and U. S. Secretary of State Kellogg, that a couple of other American countries be allowed to act as joint supervisore of the election, was hypocritically refused by Kellogg, with the excuse that the United States could do nothing about that unless Diaz should ask for it too.

War Smoulders.

Part of Sacasa's army is expected to remain in the interior of the country, protected by the population which is almost a solid unit in opposition to the traitor Diaz and his rule. There will probably be guerrilla warfare and at any time the vigilance of the U. S. navy and the American officered constabulary relaxes, there will be a mass insurrection against Diaz. But the open warfare is considered by most to be ended for the time being. The independence of Nicaragua has been brutally crushed out, Nicaraguans agree, by the United States naval and marine forces, and one more conquest is added to the empire of American business.

Was Recognised.

Sacasa's government was recognised by Mexico and other countries, and the Diaz, conservative armies were on the point of complete defeat at the time the United States openly intervened.

The U. S. minister at Managua at one time threatened to expose instructions from Kellogg to do all possible to keep Diaz in power and destroy liberal sentiment at a time when the Coolidge administration was asserting its "neutrality" in the internal affairs of Nicaragua.

KNOCK OUT EYE OF ONE WORKER, SHOOT ANOTHER

Peonage Used in Drive Against Union

(By Worker Correspondent)

HILLS STATION, Pa., May 22.—James Moore, colored, did not want to work for the Pittsburgh Coal Co., and be a scab in the lock-out the company maintains against its union members.

As a result he is lying in the hospital with a bullet thru his body, shot in the back by company police, and Walter Wales, of Cannonsburg, a coal and iron policeman employed by the Pittsburgh Coal Co. at Montour Mine No. 4, here, is out on bail, charged with felonious assault and battery for shooting him.

Crime Concealed.

No reports to the county authorities was made of the shooting, which took place several days ago, and nothing was done, until constant agitation and talk about it caused County Detective Dinsmore to investigate. Dinsmore was told by the coal and iron police that Moore was found in the mining village at Montour No. 4 mine, and "could give no reason for being there." The police stated that he was taken to the police barracks, but escaped thru the window, and fled, and was fired on, after he had opened fire on the police. Dinsmore's investigation brought out the information that Moore did not have any weapon, and that he was a former employee of the company, and had come to town to take his wife away. He met the coal and iron policeman, was threatened and began to run. He was not arrested, but simply shot down as he fled, and an attempt made to keep the incident a secret.

Philadelphia Police Bar Harbor Allen's Play About Mr. God

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 22.—The Philadelphia police department yesterday barred the one act play "Mr. God Is Not In" that was to be presented by the Workers' Theatre Alliance for the benefit of The DAILY WORKER.

Chief of detectives Gumbarov entered the Machinists Temple, 13th and Spring Garden Streets and notified the committee in charge that it could not be produced as it is sacrilligeous.

The play was written by Harbor Allen, former dramatic editor of The DAILY WORKER, and publicity director of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Prof. A. Joffe, famous Russian physicist, noted for his revolutionary theses on the electron and atom, will speak tonight at a joint meeting of the American Society for Cultural Relations with Russia and the American Physical Society tonight at the Physics Laboratories, Columbia University, 119th Street and Broadway.

Tonight's lecture by Dr. Joffe is part of the plan of the American Society for Cultural Relations with Russia to diffuse information on recent scientific developments in the Soviet Union.

SCAB COAL COMPANY PROPAGANDA

Here are two of the posters of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, engaged now in trying to operate its mines non-union. These placards are lavishly scattered about the district, and are so utterly false and misleading that only to read them is to doubt them. Recent shootings and beatings by the company have brought out the fact that "Steady Work" means debt slavery; "Good Working Conditions" means inimmerable accidents and wages so low that the miner can not live on them; "Square Deal" means being shot in the back when you try to leave the job; "Friendly Bosses" means having their coal and iron police invade your home and knock out your eye.

SHANGHAI, May 22.—In connection with the shortly expected arrival of the British Minister, Sir Miles Lampson, who, it is believed, is coming here to negotiate with Chiang Kai-shek, a vicious propaganda campaign is being directed by the imperialist press against the Hankow government.

All reports about "the imminent fall of Hankow" and the disorganization of the Nationalist forces are without any foundation, according to a German journalist who has just arrived from the Nationalist capital. The situation thruout the whole Yangtze valley is quite normal, he said.

Thirty-eight thousand jobless participants in the Hangkong strike are demanding doles from the Canton authorities, and threatening hostile action against the right-wing administration.

LATINS RAP U. S. GUNBOAT POLICY AT GENEVA MEET

Soviet Union Demands Full Recognition

GENEVA, May 22.—Latin-American delegates severely denounced American gunboat diplomacy at the plenary session of the International Economic Conference yesterday.

Pointing out that financial investments by Wall Street bankers in Latin-America have invariably been followed by political intervention by the state department, and appealing for European investments, Senor Narvaez, delegate from Colombia declared:

"Although New York markets have been fully open the last few years and $100,000 invested in Colombian securities, certain interventions by the state department into our internal affairs inspired apprehensions and brought a desire to have our securities listed concurrently on other markets."

"While Salvador needs capital," said Dr. Arcadia Ortiz, Salvador representative, "it would not welcome elemente coming in which might afford pretext for unwelcome foreign intervention, a type with which pain ful experience has acquainted us."

USSR Demands Recognition.

Demanding recognition and the adoption of resolutions declaring that in order to re-establish world prosperity Communism and capitalism must work together, the Soviet Union delegation rejected the meaningless compromise preamble drawn up by Roland Boyden of the American delegation.

The "compromise" preamble reads, "Recognizing the importance of the renewal of world trade, but refraining absolutely from infringing on political questions, the conference regards participation by all members of the countries attending, irrespective of their economic systems, as a happy augury for pacific commercial cooperation of all nations."

Industrial Insurance Agents Gyped by Insurance Trust

This series of ten articles, of which this is the first, will deal with the exploitation of the industrial insurance agent and methods to combat the evils of weekly payment life insurance. The series is the result of numerous requests to publicize the details of the swindle and fraud to which the agent is subject in common with the policyholder.

ARTICLE 1.

By CHARLES YALE HARRISON.

The machinery which the "Big Four" employ in perpetuating the exploitation of the forty million policyholders which are members of these "mutual" companies, consists of about one hundred thousand employes.

The majority of these workers are known as the "field force," that is to say, they are the agents who collect and canvass in the field. That the field is productive goes without saying and is further attested to by the enormous amount of insurance in force as reported by these corporations.

It is commonly assumed by the policyholder of a weekly payment life insurance company that the agent is well-paid and lives, so to speak, on the fat of the land.

Agent Spied On.

Nothing is further from the truth. The industrial insurance agent is overworked, has no definite hours, is underpaid by means of a cruel system of fines and "cuts" in his salary and is spied upon by an army of spies in the guise of assistant managers.

In common with workers in other industries and businesses, after years of hard work in building up this enormous system of swindle to which he is an unsuspecting party, he is set loose with nothing to show for his years of labor unless under such conditions he cares to point with pride to the colossal assets which these companies have and say with Haley Fiske, "Not best because biggest, but biggest because best."

The "White Collar" Stiff.

It is safe to say that the average wage received by the industrial agent is considerably lower than those received by semi-skilled workers in factories or mills. To compensate him for his low wages, the agent is bolstered with phrases such as "you are in business for yourself" or "someday you, too, will be a manager" and tripe of a similar nature.

In this series of articles we intend to show that that which makes the agent an unwilling accomplice in the fraud of industrial life insurance is a vicious system of operation which places the agents' remunerative interests in direct opposition to the interests of the policyholder.

During the series of articles just concluded exposing the fraudulent methods used by the "Big Four" the recurring question was, "Why isn't the industrial agent shown up?"

Equally Swindled.

There is nothing to show up. The agent is a worker who is equally swindled and exploited and suffers economic iniquities as well as does the policyholder.

The factors which contribute to his exploitation and which render the defrauding of the policyholder more facile are the following:

The "Fines."

1. The system of lapse charges which operates in such a manner as to compel the agent to "dynamite" business which under existing circumstances will be compelled to lapse before it has accumulated a cash or non-forfeiture value.

2. The institution of competitive selling stunts which redound to the companies' benefit and leaves the ignorant public saddled with more insurance protection than it can possibly pay.

3. The penalizing for lost business which compels the agent to work as late as nine and ten, o'clock at night without payment for such work.

4. The creation of a system of payment of "special salaries" payable to agents and assistant managers which pit these workers one against the other and result in a hostility which prevents the organization of agents for protective purposes.

5. The uncertainty of the amount of wages which the industriel agent receives coupled with the present commission system makes his relationship with the policyholder an antagonistic one.

6. The "hounding" of agents for business production and the system of charges and fines which ultimately drive the agent out of his job. This results in large labor turnover which operates in the company's favor, as will be later shown.

Will Be Exposed.

Each of these points and others will be treated in this series and will, we believe, be of vital interest to every agent of the "Big Four."

We urge our readers to see that each of these articles finds its way into the hands of an industrial life insurance agent.

The purpose of publishing these articles is not merely to make known the facts upon which they are written but to create a sentiment among industrial insurance workers which will ultimately result in a concrete, organized opposition to the system under which they are enslaved.

Berwind, Foe of Unions, To Testify on Transit into their house. Nine forced the two men to come down stairs—on the pretext of searching for liquor. The tenth did the job.

Early next morning when the news got out 40 gunmen might have been killed by enfuriated young miners, had union officials not restrained them. The incident had the effect of intensifying the strike, which lasted more than a year till the sabotage of the international officials of the United Mine Workers finally broke the walkout.

Old Open Shopper.

Old Man Berwind had fought the U. M. W. of A. since 1894. At times, as in the strikes of 1906 and 1922 armed forces were used. The rest of the time the friendly neutrality of international presidents was useful.

John L. Lewis has always refused to encourage a strike against the Berwind-White Co. In 1922 the strike was led by District President John Brophy. Lewis refused aid, even in publicity. Readers of the U. M. W. of A. Journal would not have known that Somerset county was shut down, and Berwind's company and Rockefeller's Consolidation Coal Co. were being effectively attacked.

Repeated His Tales.

In early 1923 the Journal made a violent attack on the Somerset men. Lying charges were made that "reds" were dynamiting coal properties. In this Ellis Searles, Lewis' editor, was merely parroting the accusations of the Berwind-Rockefeller-Hillman gang themselves.

Berwind has again had another brush with the workers. Early last month a strike hit two of his Somerset county mines for several days. The workers forced the management to reinstate some of the strike leaders and the battle ended.

Huerta Indicted

Adolfo de la Huerta, former provisional president of Mexico, has denied federal charges filed against him at Tucson, Ariz., charging him and four other defendants with conspiracy to violate the neutrality laws of the United States by shipping arms and ammunition to Tucson in furtherance of an alleged revolutionary plot against the Calles government of Mexico. He admitted, however, when surrendering for bail in Los Angeles, that revolutionary forces in Mexico are fighting under his banner.

HOT CAMPAIGN AGAINST ROUSE OF "BIG SIX"

Milliken Slated to Head Printers

Wednesday is election day in "Big Six" the New York local of the International Typographical Union, and the largest local typographical union in the world.

The present incumbent of the presidential chair, Leon H. Rouse, a notorious reactionary, who has used every known trick of labor fakirs to prevent the membership of the newspaper composing rooms obtaining shorter hours, is completing his twelfth year as president of "Big Six." He has two opponents, William M. A. Powers, and D'Arcy (Doc) Milliken.

Powers is the candidate of the odious "Administration" or Wahneta outfit that for years dominated the International Typographical Union, and through a conspiracy with foremen of newspaper and job offices tried to starve out of the industry, through depriving them of jobs, all who refused to subscribe to its treacherous policies of playing the employers' game.

Milliken Deserves Support.

Of the three candidates, only Milliken has a program that deals with realities and that is based upon a decent trade union policy.

The Powers campaign rummitter is a cowardly anti-labor and in fact of the most reactionary policies. The Rouse outfit has nothing to offer except lies and misrepresentation about the progress the unions has made under his rule. As a matter of fact all intelligent members of the union recognize the fact that Rouse has been an impediment to progress and that the union would be much further advanced if he had been kicked out of office years ago. As long ago as 1924 the newspaper printers had within their hands the six-hour day, but Rouse, with the aid of President Charles P. Howard, blackjacked the membership into accepting the publishers' demands.

Rouse Discredited.

This is the first time in the twelve years that he has been president that the Wahneta machine has not supported Rouse. Although at International conventions, where he usually goes as a visitor, Rouse attends the so-called progressive caucus, he is a low political trickster and has always been acceptable to the Wahnetas. There is but slight difference in principle between the two. However, his recent actions have been so violently anti-union that it is plain, even to the stupid Wahnetas that he is discredited among among the membership, so they did not nominate him this time. Instead they nominated Powers, an utter ignoramus who is discredited among the membership, never having contributed anything to the union in the way of constructive thought or suggestion.

Only Milliken of the candidates has a clean record as a staunch fighter for unionism. He has been prominent in the labor movement for a quarter of a century and has never been known to be connected with shady transactions or to be on the employers side of a controversy.

His campaign committee, composed of all the outstanding progressives in the union, are confident that he will be elected this Wednesday.

NEWS FROM NEW JERSEY

Weiszand Is Denied Hall by Order From Petty Politicians

PERTH AMBOY, May 22.—It has just been learned that the acting police commissioner of this city was the one who warned the owner of the Columbia hall here not to permit its use for a meeting last Thursday night at which Albert Weisbord, leader of the Passaic textile strike, was to have been the speaker.

Against Workers.

This experience presented to the workers a vivid example of small politicians, hall keepers and civil officers acting together in the interests of the bosses. A permit for Weisbord's meeting had been secured from the local police, and a deposit had been placed on the hall.

No Explanation Given.

When the committee appeared to make arrangements for the meeting, however, the owner refused to open the hall, curtly declining to give any explanation or reason for his action. He said, "I refuse to say anything and am thru with the meeting."

An unusually large crowd had appeared to hear Weisbord and a successful open air meeting was held opposite the hall.

Bishop Brown to Speak.

Bishop William Montgomery Brown will be the principal speaker at a meeting arranged by the local branch of the International Labor Defense at Washington Hall, Payette St., near Madison Ave.

Open Air Meetings.

Every Saturday evening there will be an educational meeting at the corner of Smith and Elm Sts., as a part of a drive to organize the organized workers of Perth Amboy, and to acquaint them with the great danger of another imperialist war.

(Special to The DAILY WORKER).

NEWARK, N. J., May 22.—Railroad workers all over the country are in revolt for higher wages, the B & O Plan and company union experiments notwithstanding.

Yesterday we read about the threat of the workers on the Pare Marquette threatening to strike unless they receive increased wages and better working conditions. The recent increase granted by the railroad arbitration boards to thousands of workers on many roads proves that the workers refused to accept the starvation slave-like conditions they work under.

The employees of the Hudson and Manhattan Tubes are also in revolt for better wages. The man receives $5.60 for an eight hour day. This wage is lower than received on the I. R. T. or B. M. T. which is $6.90 per day. At the last meeting of the local affiliated with Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, many of the men were in favor of declaring a strike. This action was temporarily delayed until an official of the International arrives from Cleveland.

Hilfers Helps the Bosses.

NEWARK, N. J., May 22.—At the meeting of the Essex Trades Council it was reported by representatives of the Widow Glenny Sons Local 234 that the bosses were violating the agreements with the union and hiring scabs.

The question was placed in the hands of the arbitration committee for investigation. Henry Hilfers, head of the arbitration committee, has visited some of the bosses but in vain. This gentleman instead of defending the union criticises the local and informs them nothing can be done. The members of the local are indignant and are waiting impatiently for the agreements to run out, so they can deal with the bosses. This local has a fair agreement with its employers including certain holidays which meets with the displeasure of Hilfers. Instead of fighting aggressively to defend the interests of the union Hilfers is playing in the hands of the bosses and accuses the union members of being Bolsheviks because most of the members are Ukrainians.

Hilfers was dumped as state secretary of the N. J. Federation, and it is safe to say that in the time he will be compelled to retire from active participation in Union Labor work.

Austria Metal Workers Present Gift to Soviet Labor On Anniversary

MOSCOW.—As a mark of solidarity, the unemployed copper workers of Vienna sent a copper vase to the Metal Workers' Union of the USSR as a May 1st gift. In the letter accompanying the gift, the Vienna copper workers (a section of the Austrian Metal Workers' Union) write:

"We would like this small present to be a token of the fact that the free copper workers' organization of Vienna, proudly regards itself as the vanguard in the fight for international trade union unity. Long live unity. We extend our proletarian hands to you in fraternal solidarity."

Mayor Gives Bail

Mayor John L. Duvall, above, of Indianapolis, Indiana, and his brother-in-law, William C. Buser, city controller, have given bail after the filing of affidavits against them in the Marion County criminal court, charging conspiracy to commit a felony. The affidavits, filed by William H. Remy, prosecuting attorney, allege that Duvall and Buser had falsified sworn statements as to contributions to the Duvall campaign in 1925. The mayor is charged, also, with violating the corrupt practices act in promising offices in obtaining election support.

Pan-Pacific Conference Of Labor at Hankow

tion by a representative of the Nationalist News Agency discloses that the defences along the Yueh-Han line are more than ample to cope with any possible danger that may arrive.

Rumors here have had a large enemy force anywhere in Hupeh or Honan, and everywhere the situation is completely in control. Nationalist forces are advancing steadily northward and the planned attack against Chengchow is expected momentarily. Ganaral Yang Sen, the constitutionally unreliable warlord of Szechuan, is held completely in check upriver.

A subsidiary force of General Feng Yuhsiang is cleaning up remnants of Wu Pei-fu's forces northwest of Hupeh while his main force is joining with Tang Shen-chi in the northward drive.

A big mass meeting was held here to welcome the delegates to the Pan-Pacific Labor Conference which opened sessions yesterday. The conference is here present from France, America, England, Java, Korea, the Soviet Union and Japan.

Delegates from Australia were unable to attend because they had been refused visas by their governments, while a number of Japanese delegates were placed under arrest and were prevented from leaving for the Conference.

The Conferenee was scheduled to have been held at Canton on May 1st, but was changed to Hankow because of right wing control of Canton.

Defeats Chang.

HANKOW, May 22.—The troops of General Feng Yuhsiang ("Christian General," who has allied himself with the Hankow Nationalists) decisively defeated the seventeenth corps of Chang Tso-lin's army. Chang's troops are retreating in disorder to Chengchow.

The Nationalist troops captured large quantities of military supplies and took a large number of prisoners.

The battle was perhaps the most stubborn one fought in Feng's southern drive along the Peking-Hankow railway. The Northern troops were better equipped, possessing armored cars, airplanes and heavy artillery. Heavy losses were sustained by both sides.

Correct Policy.

HANKOW, May 22.—In presenting its greetings to the Executive Committee of the Communist International, the Fifth Congress of the Chinese Communist Party declared that analysis of the revolution made at the Seventh Plenum of the International is correct and will serve as a guide for the Communist Party of China.

The establishment of a Government dictated by the working class, the peasantry and the small business men, traders and artisans corresponds to the present stage of the Chinese revolution, the statement said.

Chen Answers British.

(By Nationalist News Agency)

HANKOW, May 19 (delayed).—In reply to the communication from Basil Newton, the British representative in Hankow, stating that in view of the failure of the Nationalist Government to carry out the stipulations of the Hankow agreement and to make good the claims to responsible government, Eugene Chen, the Nationalist Minister of Foreign Affairs, sent the following communication to Basil Newton on May 17:

"The Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Nationalist Government acknowledges the receipt of the communication dated May 17 which has been made to him by the British Minister through his representative at Wuban (Hankow).

"In disclaiming his Government's responsibility for the course of events indicated in the communication under reply, the Minister of Foreign Affairs has to emphasize the fact that however sincere may be the British Government's appreciation of the ideals of the Chinese people, it is only by statesmanship born of knowledge and vision that the British Government will be able to meet the aspirations which the minister has voiced and confinnes to voice on behalf of revolutionary and Nationalist Chine.

Scores British Militarist Stand.

"Had their policy and action been informed by such statesmanship, the British Government could not have failed to perceive the palpable contradiction between the policy of peace and conciliation as expressed in the Hankow agreement and the other policy of military intervention and political sabotage necessarily implied in the despatch to Shanghai of the greatest naval and land force which Britain has ever concentrated in the Far East since the Opium Wars. The menacing and warlike character of the entire British expeditionary force with its séamen and soldiers, its battleships, destroyers, and gunboats, its aeroplanes, its armored cars and tanks, its trenches, barbed wire and sandbags, is so glaring that the British explanation of the defensive and peaceful mission of the expedition savours of gross cynicism.

"It is any wonder then that the promise and possibilities of the Hankow agreement have been frustrated and the British proposals of January 27 have seemed a gesture of derision and mockery and conditions along the great line of the Yangtze have arisen which make it difficult to sustain economic stability which would mean unemployment for workers in England and in Nationalist China? Instead of fastening on the British engine of war at Shanghai as the signal cause and most active counter-revolutionary activity in Nationalist territory the British Government dig into sand and pretend it is 'Communist influence' and not their own blunder that has agitated and inflamed Nationalist China since the conclusion of the Hankow Agreement.

Trust of Masses.

"While the Foreign Minister has indignantly to repel the allegation that those for whom he speaks 'have failed to make good their claim to government in accordance with the standards of responsible government' as well as to protest against the representation of the Nationalist Government as a 'regime totally incapable of discharging the responsibilities of a civilized government,' he has to assign to British policy and action the responsibility for the present state of relations between Nationalist China and England. And these relations will never improve so long as British statesmanship fail to realise that the Nationalist Government at Wuhan are the sole depositary of the state power in Nationalist China and, because they have the confidence and trust of the revolutionary masses, are alone competent and able to reach an enduring settlement with the British Government and people."

Scare Imperialism In China in Front Of British Embassy

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Carrying placards demanding the withdrawal of British troops and warships from China, more than one hundred men and women staged a half-hour demonstration in front of the British embassy yesterday.

Huge crowds gathered in front of the embassy to watch the demonstration caused a traffic jam.

Among those participating were members of the Kuomintang, members of the Workers (Communist) Party and the Young Workers League. The demonstration was organised under the direction of the Hands Off China Conference of Baltimore, Philadelphia and Washington.

"America is No Catspaw for British Imperialism," "China for the Chinese," "Down With British Imperialism" and "British Imperialism Must Not Plunge the United States Into a War With China or the Soviet Union," read some of the placards displayed.

Workers Party Statement.

In a statement issued after the demonstration, the Workers Party declared that British imperialism was attempting to goad the Soviet Union into a war.

"With startling rapidity there have taken place the shooting down of peaceful strikers, the concentration of thousands of troops in Shanghai, the horrible massacre of Nanking, the provocative raid on the Soviet embassy in Peking, the mass of warships around Hankow and finally the raid on the Russian trade delegation in London," says the statement.

A. F. L. Executives Ask Locals Oppose Indiana Injunction

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 22.—In the case of Indianapolis Street Railway Company vs. Robert B. Armstrong and John Parker, which establishes a precedent for the extension of the injunction power of judges and its use against the formation of labor unions, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor has adopted a resolution of protest.

The resolution is, in part, as follows:

"WHEREAS, In the case of the Indianapolis Street Railway Company vs. Robert Armstrong and John M. Parker (vice-presidents of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America) and others, it has been held that a court order restraining them from advising employes of the Indianapolis Street Railway Company to strike could be extended to apply to all persons having knowledge of this order,' which included certain employes of the company, and

"WHREAS, This construction of the said provision of the said Clayton Act opens the way for any employer to obtain an injunction against his employes to prevent a strike, said

"WHEREAS, Under the precedent established by this decision any employer can apply for an injunction against outsiders, possibly even agents of his own, and then have the said injunction extended to cover his employes, who can then be enjoined without even the right of hearing, be it therefore

"RESOLVED, That the Executive council of the American Federation of Labor calls upon all city central bodies, state federations of labor and local unions in the United States to take action, encouraging and approving this contest by the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes, and that the secretary be and he is hereby instructed to forward this resolution to these various affiliated bodies."

WORKERS OF SOVIET UNION NOT WORRIED BY BARRAGE OF LIES

By WM. F. KRUHE.
(Moscow Correspondent of The DAILY WORKER.)

THE recent hectic orgy of fake news stories and alarmist rumors that raised the pages of the capitalist press in America gave unmistakable proof of a fact as cheering to labor's vanguard as it is distasteful to the bosses—that among the working class there is a mounting interest in the affairs and progress of the first workers' and peasants' republic, the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. The big American dailies do not waste their ink on such subjects unless the workers are thinking about them—and thinking favorably. When this interest on the part of the relatively backward American workers reached the point of crystallizing into a trade union delegation to visit Soviet Russia—what else was to be expected than precipitate activity from the lie-factories of Riga, Bucharest and Chicago?

But this activity proves too much, as well as too little. It does not prove its original assertions of discord and disintegration in the Soviet Union—these yarns are so improbable that even a considerable section of the American capitalist press was moved to remonstrate—it proves instead that the workers of America are beginning to stir along the same lines which their fellow-workers of Britain, Germany, Austria, Belgium and many other countries have long since travelled, namely, to the interest in and the gathering of first hand information, through a workers' delegation, about what is actually taking place in Russia today. It is for the purpose of helping to meet this renewed interest that the following data is submitted.

Where is Russia Going.

Every worker, in Russia or elsewhere throughout the world, is vitally concerned with this question. What is the line of development—is it upward or downward, is it toward the increasing socialization of industry or is it objectively strengthening the position of the "new Soviet bourgeoisie"? Are the productive forces growing, what is the tempo of growth and how will this affect the development in the years immediately before us?

The answers can be given immediately and unequivocally—the productive forces are growing, the socialist elements in all fields of activity are on the ascent, the position of the working class, absolutely and with respect to other social elements, is becoming increasingly predominant.

This does not mean that the millenium has arrived—nor that everything is to the complete satisfaction of those who bear on their shoulders this greatest achievement in all the life of the working class. The shortcomings and deficiencies are exposed with a frankness, a ruthlessness, that absolutely flabbergasts the American Babbitt—accustomed as he is to a perpetual process of concealment of all weaknesses in his little individualistic penny-at-hand enterprise, and inexplicable also to the trust managers who for self-preservation keep to themselves all information except that which they think is good (propaganda) for the workers to know. Only by this fearless exposure of shortcomings are remedies found and realistic programs mapped out in a workers' economy.

There has been a most encouraging raising of productive forces on all fields. In agriculture, for instance, with a total valuation of crops (on the basis of pre-war prices) of 10 billion rubles in 1925 we find this year a valuation of 10,700 million, or an increase of 7%. There has been, furthermore, an increase of 15.3% in village manufacturing of more and other technical pictures.

The Position of Industry.

In industry as a whole we find an increase of 13%—in the heavy facture. Some increase in acreage devoted to hemp and cotton is shown, but this is offset by a decline in Ukrainian acreage of flax and sugar beets. Great store is laid upon the development of the technical crops as an indispensible basis for the industrialization of the country, and extensive irrigation and colonization projects are under way to foster the branches 19.7%, in the light 12.3%. New capital sunk into industry this year will amount to 845 million rubles, as compared with 750 to 780 million actually so invested last year. Reckoning on basis of total commodity-production at pre-war production costs we get the following comparison with the 1923 situation: 1926 agriculture shows an increase of 151%, and 1926 industry 237%. Under the state budget the Department for Planned Economy (Gosplan) will put into industry this year 380 million rubles, as compared with 193 million last year, an increase of 96.4%. Last year, however, an additional 140 million rubles was raised in loans for these same industries making the actual increase assured from the budget alone 47 million. Total money increased by 150 million rubles or 17%; total bank resources by 24%.

CHARGE STIMSON PLAYED GAME OF BIG BUSINESS

Will Face Fire of Pres. Coolidge Critics

By A Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, May 22.—President Coolidge's "peace" emissary to Nicaragua, Henry L. Stimson, may not have had much trouble in "persuading" the revolting Nicaraguan generals to disarm, but he will not have quite as easy a time of it disarming criticism in congress.

Mr. Stimson is going to have to explain quite a number of things to certain congressional quarters. It was authoritatively indicated by a source very close to Senator Borah, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, and Senator Swanson, ranking democrat on the committee, that they propose hailing Mr. Stimson before the committee when congress convenes and giving him the opportunity of "persuading" them to lay aside their disapproval of his activities.

Hailed Coolidge Lie.

Mr. Stimson's "peaceful" pursuits in Nicaragua did one thing as far as the administration is concerned. It ended for good the pious observations by President Coolidge that the United States government was not trying to meddle in the affairs of the revolution. This was of course a bald lie, but outside of a few anti-administration journals, the myth was supported. Anyone who was at all informed knew that the administration was solely responsible for the elevation of Diaz to the presidency and that he could not hold the office twenty-four hours if the American marines were withdrawn.

The expose of Stimson's activities in Nicaragua, his threat to the revolutionists, which has already materialized in armed clashes between marines and revolutionists, put an end to the lying sham of Coolidge and Kellogg's pretences of non-partisanship.

So it has been with other matters in the Nicaraguan affair. Throughout the months it has staggered from one brutality and blunder to worse, it has always been the case that every assurance that either Kellogg or Coolidge gave turned out to be exactly the opposite and every denial they uttered to have been a miserable lie.

Some Big Business.

American interference in Nicaragua throughout the quarter-century of such meddling has been imperialistic, brutal, vicious and mercenary. It was contrary to the law of the United States and in violation of the integrity of Nicaragua and the sovereign right of the Nicaraguans to settle their own affairs. All this intermeddling was done solely at the behest of American financial and concession monopolists and where they failed to obtain the troops and warships needed by them to enforce their looting they framed a "killing episode" to compel armed intervention.

The state department, from Knox's time down to the present maladministration under Kellogg has always been the willing accomplice of these interests. It has not only supported the activities of American buccaneers, but actually participated in the forcing upon the helpless country American loans and concessions that even the reactionaries in Nicaragua objected to. It may be too much to be hoped for, but it is entirely possible that the next congress may give the administration some grief on its activities in Nicaragua.

Two Killed in Train Crash.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 22.—Caught between two New York Central passenger trains when the driver of the automobile in which they were riding tried to "beat" the trains across a grade crossing here yesterday afternoon, two persons were killed, one is dying at a local hospital and two others were seriously injured.

Knock Out One Miner's Eye; Shoot Another

mine of the Pittsburgh Coal Co. is under arrest for knocking out the eye of a miner named Joseph and Andrew.

Starkey heard children shouting in the house of Andrew, and not liking what they said, he invaded Andrew's home, shot Andrew, who was standing at the foot of the stairs, calling to his sons to quiet down, and struck him a smashing blow on the left side of his head, crushing the eye socket, and so damaging the eye-ball that an operation to remove it was necessary.

State of Peonage.

Armed company guards hold any scab miners who come into town to their jobs at the Crescent Mine. Several miners who were enticed into the company's power thru misunderstandings, have been compelled at the point of rifles and pistols to go to work in the mine, and have been able to escape only at the risk of their lives, and in the dead of night.

Wages paid are very low, and men are in debt to the company, which practises, with the aid of Coal and Iron Police a sort of peonage.

In Company Jail.

Those owing money and attempting to leave town are arrested for "beating their bills" and thrown into the private jail of the Pittsburgh Co., which is a noisome cellar, in the basement of one of the buildings owned by the company. The cells are infested with vermin, and are damp, dark and unhealthy in every way.

The entire country around hates the Pittsburgh company for its brutalities and exactions. Recently a truck loaded with furniture for the use of scabs started for Red Hill. The truck was owned by the Detroit Rapid Transit Co.

The driver was misdirected all around the country by every one he met, and after being in Coal Center and Philipsburg, wound up on a railroad track on the bank of a river. A train came along and knocked it to pieces. The driver, who was slightly injured in the wreck, then produced a union card in the carpenters' union, and claimed he had never heard of the lockout in Red Hill. One of the problems of this struggle in the coal fields is the conspiracy of silence maintained by the newspapers of the vicinity, especially

Comintern Plenum Starts Sessions In Momentous Hour

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., May 22.—The ordinary plenum of the executive committee of the Communist International was opened here today with the problems created by the threat of war, and the struggle against this danger. The plenum had before it also at its first session the problems of the Chinese revolution, and the convocation of the sixth world congress of the Communist International, as well as other questions.

Pravda Points Danger.

An article in Pravda on the opening of the plenum of the Communist International points out that it comes at a most momentous and dangerous historical hour. The onslaught against the workers of Europe, against revolutionary China and against the U. S. S. R. are three links in the chain of the struggle of imperialism against revolution.

The danger of war, says Pravda, has immensely increased recently because of the sharpening of political and economic contradictions on a world wide scale and the more intense reaction, eager to drown revolution in streams of blood.

But the union of revolutionary republics gains strength and the Chinese revolution is growing. The rallying of the Bolsheviks all over the world is actually more necessary than ever, and the Communist International will know how to reply to the questions brought up by history and point out the right way to proletarian parties thruout the world.

Capitalist Justice

HARRY F. SINCLAIR, millionaire oil operator, cited for contempt of court to serve three months in jail, is still at large, although more than five years have passed since the notorious lease was made, which robbed the people of the United States of millions of dollars worth of oil lands. Even the capitalist New York World is forced to admit that his progress toward the cell, in which he so rightly belongs, has not been swift, "or that his arrival is near or even certain."

The DAILY WORKER and its staff will not receive such polite or considerate treatment at the hands of the Court of Special Sessions, when it comes to trial on May 27th. It will require the most determined struggle to wrest even the slightest concession from the capitalist courts. It is evident that the reactionary forces seeking to secure the suspension of The DAILY WORKER will leave no stone unturned in order to secure the swiftest possible action against our paper. In fact the very elements which are protecting the hide of Harry F. Sinclair, the Martin W. Littletons and the like, will be the very ones to expedite the blow against our paper.

Only the most energetic efforts on the part of the supporters of The DAILY WORKER will enable us to secure the necessary resources for a vigorous and effective legal resistance against the onslaught of the American Black Hundreds. The Pan-Pacific Labor Conference Rallies Millions for Common Struggle Against Imperialism

The convening of the Pan-Pacific Labor Congress, now in session in Hankow, means two things:

1. That the labor movements of the Pacific are preparing for common action against imperialism and colonial capitalism.

2. That the young Chinese labor movement by reason of its heroic struggle against both these forms of oppression, has been given the leadership of this great joint movement by common consent.

The Pan-Pacific Labor Conference, following closely upon the world conference of colonial peoples in Brussels to organize the struggle against imperialism, is of the greatest historic significance. Not only is it the first conference of this kind to be held (the only other effort in this direction being a conference of transport workers in Canton in 1924) but it convenes at a time when the Chinese labor movement is confronted with the task of organizing and leading the struggle for national liberation.

The hostility with which world imperialism regards this conference is shown by the arrest of the Japanese delegates and the refusal of visas by their government to the representatives of the Australian labor unions which sponsored the conference.

Planned for Canton originally the treason of Chiang-kai Shek and the armed aggression of imperialism in China made it necessary to remove the conference to Hankow—the industrial center of China and the stronghold of the revolutionary nationalist government.

The militant trade unionists of America, France and Great Britain are represented at the Conference and its sessions will formulate plans for linking up the labor movements of both the imperialist and colonial nations in a common struggle against world imperialism.

For the American workingclass, whose rulers are rapidly becoming the dominant factor in the Pacific, the Conference in Hankow is a call to action, side by side with the millions of colonial workers and peasants of the Philippines, China, Japan, Java, India and Korea.

The Conference marks a turning point in the history of the world labor-movement because it brings into the ranks of world labor in organized form the colonial and semi-colonial labor movements which the reformist leaders of the Amsterdam and Second International and the reactionary officialdom of the American labor movement have so far considered as unimportant factors to which no attention need be paid.

The Achievement of Lindbergh.

A former United States mail airplane pilot, twenty-five years of age, is acclaimed by the whole world because of his intrepidity in conquering single-handed in a monoplane the 3,800 miles that separates New York from Paris. The feat was accomplished in thirty-three and a half hours—an average speed of more than a hundred miles an hour.

No one begrudges young Charles A. Lindbergh his acclaim. His modesty, that caused him to regard with something approaching indifference the plaudits that greeted his record-breaking flight with but one stop from San Diego, California, to New York, thence a continuous flight from New York to Paris, is in striking contrast to the gang of naval aviators that the United States government has been advertising in order to popularize the idea of military glory before the masses of this country. Such a person as Lindbergh is not to be mentioned in the same breath with the Italian, De Pinedo, the cheap, publicity seeking, contemptible fascist propagandist lickspittle of Mussolini, who has been cavorting around the United States the past few weeks.

What may become of Lindbergh now that he has achieved fame is problematical. The American ambassador to Paris, Herrick, was on the job to welcome him and, although it was a private venture, the utmost effment will be made to utilize him for jingo propaganda, especially in view of the fact that its own would-be trans-Atlantic flyers of the Byrd calibre have thus far failed even to get started to Paris.

Already young Lindbergh has received offers of hundreds of thousands of dollars from movie theatre magnates, always on the alert to capitalize fame or notoriety in any form. He may recover from his modesty and rest on his laurels and wealth that is flowing his way. What becomes of him is of importance only to himself and those closest to him.

This flight brings Paris nearer to New York by many hours and is one more indication of the development of the technique of transportation that erases distances and geographically welds together the nations of the earth.

While fully joining in the general acclaim of this achievement, we must at the same time remember that the stupendous publicity attached to the flight, possibly even against the desires of Lindbergh, all bears the stamp of militarism. And the thought that irresistably clutches the mind of all who are even slightly aware of the clash of imperialist interests throughout the world is that this and other air flights signalize a revolution in warfare. No longer will the actual combatants be the sufferers, but today, in 33 hours, heavily loaded planes can leave New York and bomb Paris or London or vice versa. It means that in the next war the fear so acutely felt whep German dirigibles, easily detected and destroyed by anti-aircraft guns, hovered over the fog banks of England, will become a reality as the comparatively small, swift-travelling planes sweep over cities leaving death and destruction in their trail.

Every step in advance in the technique of industry or transportation is utilized by the war-mongers and young Lindbergh is hailed today and his heroic achievement connected with militarism and heralded to the world in order that all young men may come to regard war and everything connected with it as glorious. Such propaganda makes recruiting easier. The youth of the working class who are lured into the war machine in the hope of emulating Lindbergh must be taught that when masses of them go into the fray there is no individual records of heroism, and that no omatter how brave and daring they are they will perish ignobly and unknown in an infamous cause—the cause of the imperialist bandits of Wall Street, London, Paris and other centers of bank capital; a cause in which no worker should risk a hair of his head

ALL THE OLD EGGS ARE ROTTEN

The capitalist parties have no real issues—the points of difference between them are of minor importance, and largely such as can not be taken frankly to the voters. The republican and democratic campaigns therefore are fought over fake or obsolete issues—only the Workers Party gives the workers a chance to vote for something interesting to them.

Great Britain Meets Defeat at Geneva.

The debate which has taken place at the Geneva Economic Conference on the question of relations with the Soviet Union has shown clearly the sharpening antagonism between British and American imperialism.

The British representative, Sir Arthur Balfour, voted against the compromise resolution submitted by Henry M. Robinson, American representative, which had as its purpose the prevention of an open break with the Soviet Union representatives at the conference. This resolution declared that "participation of all nations irrespective of their economic systems is a happy augury for the pacific commercial relations of all countries."

Inasmuch as the raids on the Soviet Union embassy in Peking, in which Great Britain took a leading part, has been followed by the raid on the offices of the Soviet Union Trade Mission in London and the tories are working openly for a break with the Soviet Union, the American resolution is a slap in the face given American imperialism's chief rival.

The Soviet Union representatives voted against the compromise, the Turkish delegation abstained from voting and both delegations thus stand committed to the original demand for a declaration by the conference of peaceful intentions toward and trade relations with the Soviet Union.

British imperialism has met defeat at Geneva. Not only has it been forced to watch the revolutionary diplomacy of the Soviet Union tear great gaps in the European front against the Soviet Union which it has been so busily engaged in building but it has been given a public rebuke formulated by its main imperialist enemy.

The resolution of course is meaningless insofar as it affords a guarantee of no further offensives against the Soviet Union but the conference has shown to the world's workingclass the desire of the Soviet Union for peace as well as the indisputable evidence of the fact that even a temporary solution of Europe's economic difficulties is impossible without trade relations with the population in a country comprising one-sixth of the earth's surface.

Wall Street at Work in Nicaragua.

Dr. Sacasa, head of the Liberal forces in Nicaragua, according to dispatches, has sailed for Guatemala with his staff but intends to return in 1928 to contest the elections against Wall Street's puppet Diaz.

In the meantime the Liberal troops are being disarmed by American marines in a most brutal manner. The two marines who were killed recently lost their lives when they went into action against Liberal forces who had made no attack upon them. Dispatches state that bullets flying over the camp of the marines were considered sufficient excuse for the attack on the Liberals.

Diaz' army consists of American marines engaged in what the state department calls "pacification" of Nicaragua. This pacification, which is in reality war upon the Nicaraguan masses is designed to crush all opposition to Wall Street's candidate so that in 1928 Wall Street government can proclaim triumphantly that its candidate has been returned "with the support of the overwhelming majority of the Nicaraguan people."

This war upon the Nicaraguan people is being waged "without the advice and consent" of Congress. It is a bandit adventure of which the American masses do not approve but Wall Street-Coolidge-Kellogg government goes ahead with its plans for erecting a government subservient to its interests upon the wreckage of liberty and the bloody bodies of murdered Nicaraguans.

American imperialism is seen in action in Nicaragua. The fate of Nicaragua is the fate that Wall Street government has prophesied for all of Latin America.

It is the duty of our party and the American workingclass to form the closest possible alliance with the masses of Latin America—to set up a fighting front against American imperialism and defeat its murderous purposes by all possible means.

Wicks to Give Economic Interpretation

The series of four lectures on China to be given by H. M. Wicks, at the Workers' School, 108 East 14th Street, beginning this Friday evening, is the first attempt to depict the events in that country from a strictly economic standpoint. From every part of the world material for these lectures have been gathered and facts dug up about China that, if known heretofore, have never been co-ordinated so that they could be understood in relation to each other and to the events happening in China today.

Without understanding the economic factors involved in the great revolution in the Orient it is not possible to really know anything worth while of the conflict.

Treat For Students.

Those who have listened to Wicks' former lectures on international policy know that n treat is in store for them at these lectures. Careful outlines have been prepared and will be given to each student on attendance at the lectures. No one can obtain the outlines who does not attend. At each lecture the outline will be placed in the hands of the student before the start of the lecture, so that it can be followed point by point.

Many of those who heard Wicks lecture last year on "Locarno and the World Court" and his lectures this year on "China," have requested that this course be published, so arrangements have been made to take the lectures down in short-hand in order that they may be published serially in the Party publications and later issued as a book.

Iron and Bronze Union Hold Meeting Tomorrow

A very important general membership meeting of the Iron and Bronze Workers' union will be held on tomorrow evening, at the Rand School Building, 7 East 15th Street.

The first nomination for all officers of the union will be made and reports concerning the union's activities and the conditions in the trade will be given.

There are some recommendations of the Executive Board to be acted upon, also the result of the recommendations of the unemployment benefit committee will be discussed and adopted.

Street Car Workers Ask Aid in Injunction Fight

WASHINGTON. (FP) May 22.—Support by all branches of organized labor—local, central and state—for the appeal made to the federal supreme court against the injunction secured against the Amalgamated Street and Electric Railway Employes in Indianapolis, is asked by the executive council of the American Federation of labor.

The injunction aims to forbid workers to go on strike.

International Branch 1 sub-section 6-A will hold a mass meeting tonight, 8 p. m., at 46 Ten Eyck St., Brooklyn as a part of the Rutherberg Recruiting Drive for new members for the Workers (Communist) Party.

All workers are invited to attend and bring their friends.

NEW AMUSEMENTS

"Ruddigore," or the Curse of Timely Satire

Reviewed by VERN SMITH

"All philosophical pessimists should see "Ruddigore." The fact that its burlesque is almost pointless to half the audiences shows that the world makes progress. The naval and melodrama of the cursed noble family, the true heir living in disguise and concealment, the animated picture gallery of ancestors, the ruined mad maiden, which it is the principal task of "Ruddigore" to laugh out of existence, happily no longer exist. If Gilbert and Sullivan's quaint little opera continues to survive, however half heartily, it lives like Don Quixote, without what must have been the real salt and flavor its contemporaries tasted in it.

As for me, I got my kick out of watching the middle class ladies in the orchestra trying dutifully, in memory of Lucia and Ophelia, to feel sorry for poor mad Meg.

They do it well at the Cosmopolitan—well except the music is charming, the color scheme neatly worked out, the traditional costumes, and the acting equally so. Nothing is so eternally unchanging in its presentation and costuming as a Gilbert and Sullivan opera, and in this one there is little room for real genius.

The original touch is something that could not have been foreseen by the authors, and consists in superimposing on the comfortably athletic lines of the modern chorus girl costumes invented for the wasp-waisted beauties of years gone by.

Violet Carlson is an excellent May Rosebud; she tried to make understanding to an age of jass the burlesque of a character on which the peace that passeth understanding has rested for half a century and more. True, I doubt greatly whether any maiden ever managed her emotions by the book of etiquette, but in the days of Gilbert and Sullivan there were those, we are told, who thot they did.

But if you're tired of jazz, there is no better way you can gather arguments for your heresy than from the good old tunes. They're pretty. Such things are rare today; do not let your rationalism interfere with their enjoyment. Gilbert and Sullivan may be ancient; they may be one of the duties of middle class society; but they are intrinsically enjoyable.

And if you're anyways radical, you can't help liking the sacrilege with which the fame of Britain, ruler of the union jack are handled. The claws of the villain pro-tem are about to clutch the throat of the lady in distress, and a sailor waves the flag above her—Yoiled, by a union jack! Thirty hearts-of-oak cruise the seas in a little sloop, out of pure magnanimity of heart sparing every powerful French frigate they meet—"only a darned Monsoor." On such, say Gilbert and Sullivan, rests the fame of British fair play.

Beside the chorus of bridesmaids, there is a male chorus. Its only reason for existence is to provide support for the glowing hussar coats whose flapping sleeps bob thru the decorous melee that properly ends a comic opera act.

Herbert Waterous as twenty-first wicked baronet of the House of Murgatroyd, and Alexander Clark as Robin Oakapple are good actors and good singers.

Broadway Briefs

The Bronx Opera House, beginning tonight will show "Fog," the work of John Willard, author of "Cat and Canary," the mystery play which has been playing at the National Theatre for many months, will have the following players in the cast: Ben Hendricks, Jay Adair, Margot Lester, Alexander Clarke, Jr., Wilfred Jessup and Fred Garland.

This week's vaudeville program at Moss' Broadway will include: Princess Wah-letka, in her psychic act; Ruby Norton; Billy Glason; Val Harris and Vera Griffin and Esmond and Grant.

The Theatre Guild has acquired for production next season Romain Rolland's "That's the Game of Love and Death." The play was announced for production by the Neighborhood Playhouse sometime ago.

"Abie's Irish Rose" begins its sixth year at the Republic Theatre tonight.

"Spread Eagle," the anti-war satirical play's now running at the Martin Beck theatre, is reported to have been banned from the films because it is "unpatriotic."

Beginning with the first release for next season every picture coming from Warner Bros.' studio will be accompanied by a Vitaphone musical score.

Bishop Brown to Speak Daily Worker Defence

Bishop William Montgomery Brown will be the principal speaker at The DAILY WORKER Conference which has been arranged for Friday evening, June 3rd at 8 P. M. at Webster Hall, 119 East 11th Street. To this meeting, left wing organizations from all parts of the city are being invited including trade unions, Workers Party branches, left wing minorities, fraternal organizations, clubs, etc.

The purpose of the conference is to take up the question of the defense of The DAILY WORKER, now the target of attack from a number of patriotic societies which are seeking to suppress the paper. Specifically it will take up the question of the Giant Midsummer Carnival and Fair which has been arranged for Saturday and Sunday, July 23 and 24.

A number of organizations have already promised to take a prominent part by pledging to take charge of one or more of the attractions which are being arranged. Invitations have been sent to all of the organizations mentioned above.

REGINALD MASON

Gives a realistic tone to his role of philosopher in "Right You Are If You Think You Are," the Pirandello comedy at the Garrick Theatre.

"The Mikado" Will Be Ames' Next Production

Winthrop Ames is planning to present "The Mikado" early next season. This means that his plans for "The Gondoliers," which was originally announced, is laid aside for the time being. The Gilbert and Sullivan operetta will open in September at the Plymouth Theatre, where his last two productions "Iolanthe" and "The Pirates of Penzance" will probably be included at special matinees—for both of these operettas proved very very popular here. The production of "The Gondoliers," may also be done later in the season.

CO-OPERATIVES

The Question of Collaboration Between Producers and Consumers' Co-operatives

The world economic conference of the League of Nations, (May 1927, at Geneva) will also deal with the question of international collaboration between producers' and consumers' co-operatives. (Point 3) "Agriculture" contains the following proposals:

1. The present position of agriculture compared with the pre-war period with respect to production, consumption, stocks of goods, prices and free exchange of agricultural produce.

2. Causes of the present difficulties.

3. Possibilities of international measures of help:

(a) Development of international collaboration between producers and consumers' co-operatives, INCLUDING THE VARIOUS FORMS OF CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATIONS.

(b) Continuous exchange of all information on the general position of agriculture, scientific and technical investigations, agrarian credit, etc.

(c) Raising the purchasing capacity of farmers.

The Financial Position of Co-operatives in the Soviet Union

According to a report of the Trade Commissariat on the result of an investigation of the financial position of co-operatives, a change for the better has been registered in the CONSUMERS' CO-OPERATIVES which have been able to consolidate their position. The co-operatives' own funds amounted on 1.7.26 already to 27.5% of the total trade fund. According to the plan of the Centrosoyus about 34 million roubles out of clear profits are to be spent on re-imbursements, whilst 7,800,000 roubles is to be granted for cultural and educational purposes. The trade Commissariat recommends smaller re-imbursements and the formation of reserve funds to be invested in shares for a special inter-co-operative loan.

The PRODUCERS AND WORKERS' CO-OPERATIVES have also increased their own working capital. Whilst on 1.10.24 the latter amounted to only 21% of the total balance, it amounted already to 12.9% on 1.4.26.

Less favorable is the position of the AGRICULTURAL PRODUCERS' CO-OPERATIVES most of which are still working with funds which are not their own. Therefore, the Trade Commissariat considers further support for the agricultural co-operatives by means of long-term state credits amounting to 14,750,000 roubles.

The Position of Consumers' Co-operatives in the Ukraine

According to the statistics of the State Planning Commission (Gesplan) of the Ukraine, consumers' co-operatives had on January 1st, 1927, 2,100,000 members, which represents a growth of 20% in one year. Membership increased particularly in the rural districts, viz., 40%. The number of shops and other enterprises of the consumers' co-operatives has increased from 10,800 to 13,600. Last year's turnover, exceeded 1,300,000 roubles.

Workers' Co-operatives and Unemployment

The Central Committee of the workers' co-operative (Tsarabsektsia) has drawn up a plan how the affiliated co-operatives are to help the unemployed. The proposed relief action is at the same time a new form of recruiting members. A special unemployed fund is to be established out of deductions from clear profit and at the expense of re-imbursements. This fund is to provide for the unemployed long-term creditors. Thanks to this combine, 30 villages have already been provided with electric light. This year 4,000 peasant farms are to be electrified and new seed, cattle-breeding and other agricultural enterprises are to be established. It is also contemplated to build this year work-shop for the fixing up of machinery and also an oil factory.

Co-operative Pioneer Work in the Rural Districts

In LIOHOSLAVL (Tver Guberniia) ten co-operatives were organized in 1923 into the first AGRICULTURAL COMBINE in order to carry out agricultural measures with respect to flax growing and to new forms of flax dressing. The new factory has a model farm of 40 dessiatins which grows high-quality flax seed for the benefit of the surrounding peasantry.

Foresee Merger in Cotton Industry to Get Bigger Profits

The American Wool and Cotton Reporter, leading employer trade paper in textiles, hopes to see the competitive section manufacturing industry merge into one great trust. Its leading editorial in the May 19 convention issue is an argument for a national cotton textile monopoly.

The editorial hails the joint convention of cotton employers associations at Atlantic City as possibly the first steps towards such a combine. This convention brought together for the first time in ten years the National Cotton Manufacturers Association, representing New England mills, and the American Cotton Manufacturers Association, the southern group.

The argument for monopoly is profits. The Cotton Reporter points to the 14½ average profit on sales netted by the U. S. Steel Corporation and says the textile industry cannot hope for such earnings till it combines.

Effect on Labor.

Nothing is said of the effect of such a monopoly on labor and prices. But the history of the formation of the U. S. Steel Corporation shows more efficient warfare on labor unions and stiffer prices—steel rails alone jumping from $17 to $28 a ton almost immediately.

The significance of the American Wool and Cotton Reporter's editorial but reflects leading employer opinion. At the convention referred to President William B. MacColl of the New England association said: "This general trend, I believe, in the cotton industry, is toward consolidation, either through the selling houses or by the amalgamation of manufacturing units converting and selling their own products."

1 CHILD IN 4 HERE SUFFERS POOR EYESIGHT

26 Percent Half-Starved on East Side

One school child out of every four on the east side of New York City is suffering from defective eyesight according to a report presented yesterday to the executive committee of the Bellevue-Yorkville Health Demonstration by Godias J. Drolat, the consulting statistician of that organization.

Dr. Shirley W. Wynne, Deputy Health Commissioner, presided at the meeting of the demonstration, when the results of a six months' investigation of the physical defects of school children in the third grades of 24 elementary schools, public and parochial, located between East 14th and 64th Streets, were presented. The medical records of the children during the school year 1925-26 were studied for the findings recorded by the physicians of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the Department of Health. Through the co-operation of the Board of Education and the Superintendent of Catholic Schools, these records were made accessible.

Defective Teeth

Sixty-four percent, of these school children had defective teeth; 26 per cent. were under-nourished; 25 per cent. had diseased or enlarged tonsils; 15 per cent. had nasal defects interfering with normal breathing. More school girls were found to be suffering from heart disease and pulmonary defects than boys.

The large number of school children in the Bellevue-Yorkville section having impaired vision, defective nasal and oral conditions and a high incidence of cardiac disease may be accounted for by the daily strain caused by congested conditions in that part of the city, with insufficient sunlight, both in the tenements and in some of the older schools. These conditions place a greater burden upon their physical resistance than among children in other parts of the city. The physical defects found averaged 35 per cent. higher than those recorded by Dr. S. Josephine Baker, in 1921, among school children 8 to 10 years of age in the entire city.

13 Years of Tammany

Among those present at the meeting was Dr. Julius Blumenthal, Director of the Bureau of Child Hygiene, who pointed out that the Department of Health has, for its record work, the same number of medical inspectors as it had in 1914, although the number of children has increased about 200,000. In the New York City schools, for every 5,000 children only one nurse is available; and for every 11,000 children, one medical inspector.

The report on the physical condition of east side school children was referred to the Child Hygiene Committee of the Bemonstration for the recommendation of remedial measures.

WORKERS! STOP THE MURDER OF SACCO AND VANZETTI

Large Scale Farming Develops in the West

(By Federated Press).

The U. S. department of agriculture reports "increasing use of the harvester-thresher machines known as combines in the region between and the Rocky Mountains. The advantages of this machine are given as the lower cost of cutting and threshing grain, lack labor and a shortening of the harvesting and threshing periods.

These machines will undoubtedly hasten large scale farming. The department points out that the combining is profitable must cover acreage than the ordinary binder. It says:

"There must be 150 ar more acres available for cutting before costs with the combine fall below costs with a header and stationary thresher. This reckoning takes into account only the direct cash expenses ordinarily paid by the farmer, and the necessary replacement charges for the machines.

Cuts Labor.

"Eight-foot combines harvested 275 acres of grain on the average and 10-foot machines averaged 400 acres last season. The minimum crew operating a 18-foot or 16-foot combine is 2 man, not including grain haulers. Similar machines having a power drive from the tractor are sometimes operated by 1 man. It is estimated that the combine reduces the amount of labor necessary for harvesting and threshing in the great plains from about 3.6 man-hours per acre for cutting with the binder and threshing with a stationary machine to about 0.75 man-hours per acre."

This means a reduction of nearly 80 per cent in the man-hours required for harvesting an acre of grain. It means a serious cut in the jobs available for the migratory workers, accustomed to follow the grain.

Cooperative Tobacco Growers Prosper

Due chiefly to their cooperative selling the producers of burley tobacco have increased their return since 1920 by $111,477,423. This represents an average gain of 5c a pound over the price paid for burley tobacco in 1920 before the Burley Tobacco Growers' Cooperative Assn., was organized.

These are the striking statements of President J. C. Stone of the cooperative in a report accompanying payment to the growers in full for their 1926 crop. Emphasizing the advantage of cooperation Stone says:

Better Prices.

"Reports of sales throughout the burley tobacco district show that while the independent market average $12.55 a hundred pounds, our tobacco sold for $13.25, or 70c a hundred pounds more than was paid the outsider, gross, for his tobacco."

The association handled and sold 118,359,923 pounds of tobacco in 1926. The total cost of handling this crop was $1,659,705 or about $1.40 per 100 ponnds. This $1.40 per 100 pounds is itemized as follows: executive officers, directors and warehouse managers, 4.9c; receiving house expense, 28c; prizing tobacco, 19.6c; grading department, 14.7c; sales house expenses, 16.4c; freight, 18.2c; warehouse expense, 15.9; general office, 10.7c; community organization, 1.1c; legal, 2.4c; field service, 2.4c and official publication, 2.3c.

Stone tells the growers they have been overproducing and says that if they continue to grow more burley than is consumed "it simply means lower prices for burley tobacco."

Blames Cotton Farmers' Poverty on "Conservatism"

WASHINGTON (FP)—In a statement disclosing that small cotton farmers in the old cotton belt of the South are sunk to the lowest depths of poverty, Secretary of Agriculture Jardine makes the statement that "Traditional conservatism and lack of contact with other communities are considered the principal obstacles to the economic advancement of these people."

White small farmers in Georgia, Jardine discloser, are meeting the competition of the newer cotton regions of western Texas and western Oklahoma, where large-scale production methods and modern machinery have been adopted, by "accepting unusually low incomas and a notably restricted standard of living."

This record obtained from 288 white farm families in Gwinett county, a typical Piedmont district, showed an average net cash income in 1924 of only $421 per family. These families averaged 5 persons each.

Their cash income was supplemented by food, fuel and shelter from the farm, estimated to be worth $396 per family. Their actual outlay for family living averaged only $291. Most of them are tenants, and of the cropper families 34 per cent lived in houses with only one thickness of lumber. About 100,000 white tenant families in the old cotton belt east of the Mississippi River live at or below this standard.

Horsepower Gobbles the Worker's Job

By LELAND OLDS (Federated Press).

Substitution of machanical power and technic for human labor features the U. S. Department of Commerce report on the increased output of manufacturing per worker from 1909 to 1925. The report from census figures that the quantity produced per worker employed in manufacturing increased nearly 50% in the 25-year period, reflecting a growth of nearly 180% in the physical volume of production and of less than 90% in total person engaged.

The figures also show an increase of about 256% in primary horsepower used in manufacturing. Analysis shows that while the horsepower per worker of output has increased 100% the manpower per unit has decreased 33%. Twice as much mechanical power is now used for the same amount of product but only ⅔ as much human labor power. That is the story of the last generation in industry.

Labor Saving.

"Growth in output per person," says the report, "may be attributed to 2 sets of factors. The first set of changes includes the increasing utilization of machinery in production, the introduction of various sorts of labor-saving devices and methods, the growth of mass production of standardized articles, the elimination of waste and other economies resulting from improvements in methods and management.

For industry as a whole and for large groups of industries, however, a part of the increase in output per person is due to the shifting of production from industries dependant in a large degree upon labor to industries more susceptible of mechanization and of mass production."

The number of workers employed in the department figures by industries, were:

	Increases in productivity of industry, 1899-1925	Total output	No. of workers	Per capita output
Food products		119.6%	66.2%	33.0%
Textiles, clothing		90.5	63.3	90.3
Iron and steel		204.1	145.8	23.8
Lumber		6.8	7.7	—1.6 (decrease)
Leather products		33.8	38.5	—3.4 (decrease)
Paper, printing		317.5	156.6	62.7
Chemicals, oil		365.6	117.7	114.2
Stone, clay and glass		166.1	66.3	58.2
Non-ferrous metal		321.7	87.5	124.8
Tobacco products		168.7	7.7	149.4
Vehicles, autos		4666.0	326.4	1117.0
Ship building		22.2	13.4	7.7
All industries		178.4%	86.9%	49.0%

The extraordinary figures for the vehicle industry mark the development of the auto since 1899. Taking this industry back only to 1914 we find the total output increased 349%, the number of workers 97.3% and per capita productivity 229%. In the rubber industry the figures do not extend back to 1899, since 1914 its output has increased 39%, its working force 22% and its output per worker 156%.

Fewer Jobs.

The increased mechanical power reduces the jobs available per unit of output. In the food industrian there has been an increase of 7.3% in horsepower and a decrease of 24.7% in manpower per unit of output. In textiles horsepower per unit has increased 49.6% and manpower has decreased 16.9%. For iron and steel the figures are horsepower plus 33.8%, manpowar minus 19.3%; chemicals, horsepower plus 44.3%, manpower minus 53.4%; and in nonferrous metals an increase of 36.5% in horsepower and a decrease of 55.5% in manpower per unit of output.

In lumber and leather products industries we find very considerable increases in horsepower per unit of output coupled with slight increases in the number of workers per unit. On the other hand in the tobacco industry, due to the cigaret, the horsepower and manpower per unit of volume produced have both fallen sharply.

$50,000 For U-Boat Design.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Twenty designs were submitted today for the navy's new $5,000,000 super-dirigible.

A special board of naval experts will select the design and award a prize of $50,000 to the winner, which will be announced about the last of June.

Thackerye' Granddaughter Weds.

LONDON, May 22.—The Archbishop of Canterbury today issued a license for the marriage of Samuel Richard Fuller, of Washington, D. C., and Miss Hester Makepeace Thackery Ritchie, granddaughter of William Makepeace Thackary, the famous novelist.

WOMEN

WOMEN'S WORK

By KATE GITLOW (Sec. United Council of Workingclass Housewives).

In the United States, the married women are quickly undergoing a transformation from "housewives," i. e., housewives, they are becoming working women. It does not matter whether they are office or factory workers. The fact is that the housewives of today can be the working women of tomorrow. Others are housewives by night and working women by day.

The high cost of living and especially the high rents have driving even the well paid union workers' wives to earn some money to help maintain the American standard of living, as it is called here. There is no question that the poorly paid un-unionized workers' wives must work in order to make both ends meet.

When the world war broke out the worker in America was promised a better life. After the world war, the workers expected a more comfortable, easier life, but on the contrary, they have been confronted with more hardships. This does not exclude the better paid unionized workers. Big business in America immediately after the world war, began a campaign for breaking up the unions in favor of the open shop. The cost of living has risen and the wages have either gone down or are the same as before the war when things were much cheaper.

Women Learn.

These changes are affecting the minds of the workers' wives. It is now mneb easier to organize them than it was before the war. It is true that there were uprisings of housewives against the high cost of living before the world war. They died down with the coming of the war. Due to the activities of the bourgeoisie which was engaged in time of war in organizing the great masses of workingclass women for the war, the women have been brought to social consciousness. Now when they are not so un-informed about organization, it is much simpler to talk organization to them.

Workers' Wives Organize.

The worker's wife, the housewife, knows that she has to fight for better conditions for her family at home, for better housing, for better schooling and for other things that vitally concern the workingclass housewives. In the meantime she is also learning that the most important struggle goes on on the industrial field, on the job where she or her husband works.

In the last three or four years, working women's organizations have been organized with distinctly workingclass character such as the United Council of Workingclass Housewives, an organization of trade unionists' wives and other workers' wives. The activities of this organization during the different strikes as the Passaic, the paper box makers and the cloak makers' and furriers' strikes have done away with the illusion that women's place is only in the home.

Aided Textile Strikers.

It was the United Council of Workingclass Housewives that came in time to the textile strikers and it has not only carried on tremendous relief work, but it has also carried on organizational work by organizing the striking women, the strikers' wives and other working women and workers' wives. These women are now organized into working women's councils affiliated to the United Council of Workingclass Housewives where they are learning quickly the lesson of the class struggle. This proves that even housewives who were never thought much of can understand the great advantage of organizing and combining the working men and women at home and in the shop.

The United Council of Workingclass Housewives is fighting on many fronts with the workers, men and women, carrying on relief, picketing and holding mass meetings, organizing the workers' wives in the different struggles that are going on for better conditions for the workers. Many of the women are being arrested for their militant participation in the different strikes.

The workers' wives have been organized into cloak makers wives' councils. These cloak makers wives' councils are not only helping in the struggles of the cloak makers but are participating in the struggles of other workers. With the reactionary bureaucrats' attack upon the left wing, the committee is engaged in organizing especially the cloak makers and furriers' wives for the defense of the imprisoned cloak makers and furriers and against the reactionary labor bureaucrats.

Join United Council.

These organized cloak makers' and furriers' wives councils are affiliated to the United Council of Workingclass Housewives.

Working women and men are beginning to realize the great necessity for organizing and educating the great masses of workingclass women in the shops and the homes. They are beginning to see now that the workingclass women and men must unite in a common struggle to protect their interests.

The Joint Women's Committee is determined to organize greater masses of trade unionists' wives, to unite with working women from other trades. This committee has organized a larger committee of 2 from trade union and workingclass women's organizations to spread this movement nationally.

The committee had their first conference with women from shops trade unions and homes to arrange a mass meeting for the women to enroll them for the defense of the imprisoned cloak makers and furriers. The mass meeting was held in Cooper Union on April 6th, 1927. 3000 women from the shops and homes jammed the hall to protest against the reactionary labor bureaucrats and for the defense of the imprisoned cloak makers and furriers. This was the first meeting of its kind where working women from the shops and homes responded in such great numbers.

In Industrial Field.

Most of the activities of the United Council of Workingclass Housewives are on the industrial field. The barricades against the women, especially against the housewives, that they can not be organized and serve the working class, have been broken.

The task of this committee of 25 is now to organize trade unionists' wives and to unite them with the working women from the shops nationally for the defense of the imprisoned cloak makers and furriers for the left wing. The task of the committee is even greater. It has to establish permanent delegated conferences on a national scale where the women from many local homes and trade unions, can coma together and discuss problems of the workingclass as a whole and will act unitedly with the men workers and will be a standing army to rally at a moments' notice to defend their common interests.

Menaced By Fire.

Twenty families were hurried from their homes at the height of the rain storm yesterday when fire in the four story loft building at 42 Walter St., Brooklyn, threatened to spread to nearby residential buildings.

Boston Labor Body Probing Sweetser In Donovan Case

BOSTON, May 22.—Labor's fight on the state labor department and its violent labor-hating chief, "General" E. Leroy Sweetser is focussed now on the demand that Sweetser reveal the names of the trade union officials who, he says, gave Lin their approval of the discharge of Mary Donovan.

Miss Donovan, labor department inspector, was fired recently because Sweetser did not like her activity in the Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee, of which she is a member. Later he declared prominent labor men had told him privately that he had done just right.

A special committee of the Boston Central Labor Union has put visited the "general", who won his spurs in the Lawrence textile strike by trying to prevent textile workers from sending their starving children out of the city, but was not given the names of the "labor men."

James F. Burke of the moving picture operators, Rose Sullivan of the telephone operators, Harry P. Grages of the C. L. U. and Roderick McKinnon of the engineers were named as a new committee to continue investigation of Sweetser.

Miss Donovan has brought grave charges against the state labor department for failing to prosecute employers violating the labor code. A separate committee of the Boston Central Labor Union is initiating the probe.

Our Spring Fish Story.

MONTREAL, May 22.—Fishing with a light rod and worm bait in the St. Lawrence off La Prairie, Jules Brossard of St. Lambert was surprised when he felt a tremendous tug on his line. He had made a strike but the fish towed his boat against the current for a half mile before he finally landed it. The fish was a 75 pound sturgeon, measuring 5 feet 6 inches long.

Little Laundry Owners Raise $10,000 Fund to Influence Health Board

The Board of Health will have a chance soon to look at nearly $10,000.

That sum is being raised by the New York Hand Laundry Association through a $10 assessment on all its members in order to convince the board that it should relax measures of sanitary control.

Sanitary conditions in many of the little-hole-in-the-wall laundries are far from ideal, but the association feels that something can be done to make the board of health take a "reasonable" attitude, it is felt, through the raising of a $10,000 fund.

How the money will be spent has not been disclosed by officials.

Chicago Grocers Form Co-op. Bakeries; Hit at Non-Union Bread Trust

CHICAGO—(FP)—May 22.—The nonunion baking trust will receive a severe check in Chicago when 800 grocary stores axecute their plan for a cooparatively-owned bakery to supply them with bread and cake. Other grocers are ready to imitate the first group if the plan succeeds. The anti-union Ward Baking Co., will try to meet the loss by opening its own retail stations, the bakery workers union is informed.

Efforts to switch labor bakery patronage from the nonunion Atlantic & Pacific chain stores to the union made bread of the National Tea Co., are seriously cutting A. & P. bread sales, the union asserts.

Cops Attack Pickets In Building Trades Strike at Worcester

WORCESTER, Mass., May 22.—Cops infected themselves into the building laborers' strike here yesterday, when they attacked a group of pickets near a big building job on which scabs were working.

Professional Patriots

EDITOR'S NOTE—The DAILY WORKER begins today the publication in this space of "Professional Patriots," edited by Norman Hapgood from material assembled by Sidney Howard and John Hearley.

The present attack on this paper gives added interest to the sensational facts about the various brands of zealous "patriots" who are out to crush all groups fighting the forces of reaction in the United States.

In the case against The DAILY WORKER the principal witnesses for the state are George L. Darte, "adjutant general" of the Military Order of the World War and George Seitz, a "research worker" for the Keymen of America.

These are only two of the numerous societies that are doing the work of the open shop and labor-baiting interests in this country. Among the others who will be discussed in this series are the following: Allied Patriotic Societies, American Constitutional Association, American Citizenship Foundation, American Defense Society, Better America Federation, Civil Legion, Military Intelligence Association, National Security League, National Civic Federation, National Patriotic Council, National Association for Constitutional Government, National Clay Products Association, Constitutional Anniversary Association, Sentinels of the Republic, United States Builders of America, and several minor organizations.

Although the societies that carry on the work of reaction and suppression under the mask of patriotism are numerous, their total membership is relatively small. But they represent a large amount of money and a sensitive property nerve.

THE ORGANIZATIONS

The organizations which concern themselves with putting over a type of patriotism that stands for things as they are, defending the existing property and political system without change, and attacking all radicals, reformers, and free speech advocates as agents of revolution, are divided into two groups; first, the new crop which has arisen in the last ten years inspired by the war and the Russian Revolution and the older patriotic societies or those organized for other purposes which have taken on this job as a side-line.

The new type of professional patriotic enterprise is of three sorts: those which operate nationally, those confined to a section of the country, and those which are not really organizations at all, but represent some one patriot's enthusiasm, backed by a few friends or followers.

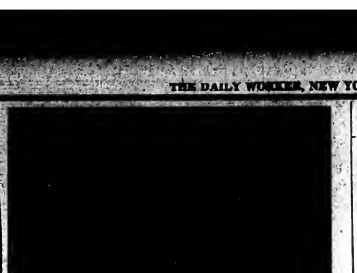
Of the organizations of some size operating nationally, there are three: the National Security League, the American Defense Society, and the National Civic Federation. The Security League came into existence in 1914 to put this country on a preparedness basis and into the war. The American Defense Society with similar objects began its career in 1915. The Civic Federation, organized in 1900 to reconcile capital and labor, took on its patriotic anti-radical activities chiefly after the war.

Fights Unionism.

There are several sectional organizations. The most active and highly organized is the Better America Federation of Los Angeles, which in reality represents the open shop interests of southern California. It has tried to extend its work outside the State and into northern California, but without much success. The American Constitutional Association with headquarters at Charleston, West Virginia, is also an employers' body, organized in 1920 to defend the interests of the coal operators and "to promote the open shop principle." The Massachusetts Public Interests League is another employers' organization, started in 1924 to defeat the child labor amendment in the State, where it was submitted to referendum vote. A different type is the Military Intelligence Association of the Sixth Corps Area with headquarters in Chicago, organized in 1924 by United States Reserve Officers. It expends most of its efforts in combating pacifism, especially among women. There is also the American Citizenship Foundation of Chicago organized in 1923 to promote Americanization among factory employees.

In Boston a little organization recently (1926) formed is the Industrial Defense Association, evidently destined for a very brief existence.

The organizations, which are virtually one-man affairs unlikely to continue beyond the individual's enthusiasm, are: The Allied Patriotic Societies, headed by Dwight D. Braman of New York City, a pretentious but ineffective federation, entirely on paper; the U. S. Patriotic Society, organized by Jacob Cash, New York City, in 1925, also mostly on paper; the United States Flag Association, and the Sentinels of the Republic with headquarters in Washington. The Government Club, New York, an organization of women, holding monthly patriotic luncheons at the Hotel Astor, broadcast by WEAF, and presided over by Mrs. George E. Owens, is also of this type, as is the Women Builders of America.



Newspapers Help, Too.

In the same class with these have been several publications—The New York Commercial,* a daily afternoon paper of 12,220 circulation, which ran a Searchlight Department under the editorship of Fred R. Marvin, whose sole enthusiasm is attacking all radical and reform movements, including organized labor; the Woman Patriot, a bi-weekly published in Washington, D. C., by J. S. Eichelberger; and the now defunct Progress in Industry (later called Industrial Progress), also published in Washington from 1920 to 1923 by Henry Harrison Lewis, now devoting his efforts to "Better Understanding Between Industry and Agriculture," backed by William H. Barr, President of the National Founders Association, which in turn publishes in cooperation with the National Metal Trades Association a monthly called The Open Shop Review, full of "red-peril" propaganda.

One enthusiast whose efforts have not yet been incorporated is a Philadelphia stock-broker, Francis Ralston Welsh, who has published anti-radical, anti-progressive, anti-labor pamphlets of his own, drawn chiefly from the Lusk Committee Report and R. M. Whitney's "Reds in America."

* Since this was prepared the New York Commercial has merged with the New York Journal of Commerce. Mr. Marvin is now associated with the National Republic but the Keymen of America continues its work as before, now at 120 W. 42nd St., New York City. Subscribers to the National Republic receive Mr. Marvin's "daily sheet service" both for $6.00 per year.

A group-photograph taken immediately after the acquittal of Agustin Morales, Chicago, May 9.

Morales was in Cook County Jail for five months, having been framed by the police for the murder of Policeman Lyman J. Stahl, at Melrose Park, Ill., Dec. 7. His trial lasted from May 2nd to 9th, inclusive, and was a hard fought battle against perjury and every effort of the State's Attorney's office to bang an innocent man.

The jury went out at 5:13, Monday, May 9. It came in at 6:00, and gave a verdict of not guilty, after only one ballot. Ten minutes later, Morales walked out of the jail and was received by his attorney and a group of Mexicans and Americans. Morales' case was regarded in Mexican consular and diplomatic circles as crucial, on its outcome depending the rights of Mexicans in this country to equal treatment under our laws.

If Morales had not had the backing of the Consulate, the services of an attorney who is a wonderful defender, and the support of a few friends who assisted by rounding up witnesses, he would have been railroaded to the gallows by the State's Attorney's office. The Mexican Consulate paid for the services of the court reporter, so that a transcript of evidence would have been available, if the case had to go up on appeal.

Report of John Brophy

To The Membership of District No. 2, United Mine Workers of America. Greeting:

The District Constitution provides that a Convention be held during the last month of the officers' term, in order that among other things there can be a review of the work before the officers retire.

Owing to the fact that a majority of the District Executive Board has seen fit to postpone the regular convention until after my term of office expires, I will not be able to submit my report to the convention. Because I believe that the membership should be familiar with the affairs of the union, particularly the major questions with which we have to deal, I feel it my duty to acquaint the rank and file with the facts which would have been contained in my report to a convention. For that reason I am sending to all local unions this resume of the past three years and set forth what I consider the steps necessary to maintain the integrity and to promote the strength of the union.

Following the last regular convention held in Altoona in March, 1924, the district scale committee met representatives of the operators' association in Philadelphia and on March 29th after several days' negotiations, cosummated an agreement based on the Jacksonville settlement for the Central Competitive Field. This agreement continued the wages and conditions of the contract then in force, to run for a period of three years, terminating March 31, 1927. This agreement was approved by a referendum vote of the membership of the district.

The signing of this agreement was heralded with great acclaim and predictions of a three year period of peace in the industry were made and accepted throughout the entire country.

Operators' Propaganda.

But hardly had the ink died on the agreement before operators in many districts, including our own, began to attack it as the cause of depression and stagnation in the coal industry. In this district there was what seemed to be a well organized propaganda drive to prepare the public generally and the miners as well for a downward revision in the miners' wage scale. This propaganda consisted of articles in the daily press, speeches at Rotary Clubs, Chambers of Commerce, etc., all purporting to prove that this whole section of the state would be adversely affected by the maintainance of the high wage rates.

The prolonged shut-downs and the propaganda of the operators affected the small business men to such an extent that in the latter part of 1924 the Punxsutawney Business Men's Association addressed an open letter to the operators and add to the prosperity of the people of Central Pennsylvania generally. To illustrate just how this was met I give my reply to this letter from the Punxsutawney Business Men.

A. G. Rosenthal, President
J. Boyd Hunger, Secretary
Punxsutawney Business Men's Association,
Punxsutawney, Pa.

Gentlemen:

The position of the United Men Workers on wage reduction has been stated at various times during the past few months. But in response to your letter of December 19, I will endeavor once again to show clearly and conclusively that lower wages is not the solution to the mining problem.

Chronic Malady.

Unemployment, or underemployment, is a chronic malady of the coal industry. This is due to the tremendous over-development of our coal resources. When business coaditions in general are bad, as at present, unemployment is increased proportionately with the depression in business.

In New England, in whose manufactories much of Central Pennsylvania's coal is consumed, mills and factories are shut down or are operating part time, with a result that their coal consumption is one third less this year than normal. The same thing is true to a greater or less extent in all manufacturing regions. This reduction in business reflects itself in coal, and both union and non-union fields are alike affected. This latter fact, however, the Central Pennsylvania Operators always carefully ignore.

Lower wages has always been the operators' cry during "hard times." But the miners in District 2 have tried it. Back in the 90's when the miners were unorganized and business was bad all over the country, the operators cut wages again and again. This competition had two results—less money for the operators less money for the miners with a consequently less amount of business for the business men and professional men and the community as a whole. The entire community suffered with the miners.

Periodically the operators offer us the same medicine for the same disease, even though its remedial qualities were proved all way back in the 90's.

Operators' Statement.

In 1924, which was a poor business year, the operators issued statements to the press which, with the exception of the date are almost identical with the ones they are sending out this year. They predicted at that time that the non-union fields were going to put the union fields out of business if the miners did not except a 30 percent reduction. They made addresses to Rotary Clubs, Chambers of Commerce, wrote letters, issued statements in the newspapers—all showing that the coal business was going to destruction, all because of the miners' wage scale. This bombardment of words continued until March, 1922, when they endeavored to enforce the 30 per cent reduction. The big strike settled the question.

But mark this—in January, 1923 after the poor year in 1921 and after four and a half months of strike in 1922—the Rochester and Pittsburgh Coal & Iron Co., paid a special dividend of 150 percent and the Pennsylvania Coal and Coke Co., paid a dividend of 40 per cent.

NUT CLAIMS PEASANTS NEED LAND

(Peasants dissatisfied with the distribution of land are revolting under the leadership of Flor Intrencherado, the so-called "Mad Emperor." Intrencherado will be confined in an insane asylum—News Item).

Now Major General Leonard Wood
Is a man of great bravado;
He's captured for the country's good
The mad Intrencherado;
They'll beat him or beguile 'im
In a Philippine asylum
That lazy, hazy
Extremely crazy
Nut, Intrencherado.

He put a crown upon his head
He wore the robes he needed;
The natives clamored to be led
The Emperor acceded.
He cut some funny capers
(I read it in the papers;
And I'm a sedulous
Very credulous
Reader of the papers).

The Emperor, he promised land,
The Filipinos cheered him;
The plan they thought was very grand,
But General Wood, he queered him.
The papers say the peasant
Has no grievances at present,
The mere illusion
Of brain confusion
For all is well at present.

MEXICAN PRIESTS ADMIT TRAIN MASSACRE

By M. G. PRIETO
Acting Mexican Consul General

Using the service of the great press bureaus of the United States to accuse the government of Mexico of "the cruelest religious persecution of modern times," the leading members of the Roman Catholic Church Hierarchy of Mexico, banished from that country for defying the laws, have issued a statement in which they thus accuse the Mexican government without bringing forward a single fact to buttress up their accusations. As their statement has appeared generally in the most prominent places in the newspapers of the United States, as acting consul-general to this country I ask the use of the same columns to make answer.

There has been no persecution in Mexico for religious beliefs at any time or in any place under the present government. This is a matter of record. There has been in the past the most cruel persecution for religious beliefs, including burning at the stake, but these persecutions took place when the Roman Catholic Hierarchy was in full power in Mexico. There have never been any such persecutions since they were deprived of their absolute power and privileges. The people of the United States should know that as a matter of history the cry of the church, when it fought to retain its special privileges, was "Down With Tolerance!"

It is very significant that the Mexican prelates have shifted their ground from denying that priests were among the leaders in the sporadic revolts which have occurred in Mexico recently, and now admit in this very statement the presence of priests among the rebel bands, but say that "some priests offered to be chaplains for the forces of the national revolt."

I have lived much longer among the people of this country than those prelates, and therefore know that the average reader will not be taken in by this Jesuitical excuse. But a few weeks ago these same prelates were denying the presence of priests entirely, and now that incontrovertible proof of their presence has been offered they hasten to put up such a foolish defense as this one.

It is only fair that the people of the United States should know why this change in position has been made by the Hierarchy. On the train from Guadalajara, where the recent horrible massacre took place, was Mr. Mestre, a prominent lawyer and well-known catholic, who was responsible for bringing about last year the meeting of the Catholic Hierarchy and President Calles in an attempt to settle the difficulties between the prelates, who refused to register as the law requires, and the government. In the statement which he has made to the Mexico City papers Mr. Mestre describes the cries of the wounded men, women and children, punctuated by the shouts of the attackers: "Viva the Virgin of Guadalupe!" and "Viva Christ the King!"

This devout catholic lawyer spoke of the horrible blasphemy of such cries in the midst of such horrible bloodshed. Mr. Mestre further stated that those acting as chiefs of the assailants boasted that they had among them some priests.

It was this statement of Mr. Mestre that doubtless caused the Hierarchy to engage in no more denials of the activity of a portion of the clergy.

The Hierarchy in their own statement have proved every charge that the Mexican government has brought against them. If these higher prelates had sufficient power to keep the clergy from ministering to the spiritual wants of the Mexican people by ordering them not to register as priests, then I submit to all reasonable men and women they certainly had the power to keep them from indulging in such fiendish activities as taking part in the massacre on the railroad between Guadalajara and Mexico City.

WITH THE Young Worker

NOTES FROM THE SOVIET UNION

By Our Moscow Correspondent,
I. AMDUR.

The youth played a very important part in the recent Moscow election. Weeks before the elections began, meetings of the youth were called by the Communist youth nuclei in the factories, offices, schools and workers' colleges at which reports concerning the work of the Soviets were given. Entire issues of wall-newspapers were dedicated to the elections, and the importance of all youth working to strengthen the Soviets was emphasized. The slogan "100% youth participation in the elections" was issued by the Young Communist League, and it was carried out everywhere. Many youth representatives were elected to the Soviets, including 26 members of the Young Communist League.

At the last conference of the Leningrad district of the Komsomols, (Communist youth league), it was unanimously decided to become the patron of the Chinese Young Communist League. Leningrad has taken the Shanghai league under its patronage, and Moscow has done the same with the Canton and Haakow leagues. The Soviet Union league will do everything in its power to help the Chinese league, giving its advice from its own rich store of revolutionary experience, and whatever material aid it can. Money to advance the work of the Young Communist League of China is already being collected in Moscow and Leningrad.

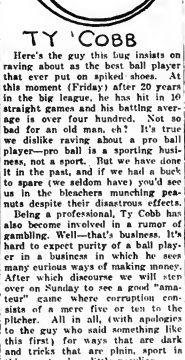
The capture of Shanghai by the revolutionary armies was greeted with great joy thruout the Soviet Union. The Moscow and Leningrad organizations of the Communist Youth League sent the following telegram to the Shanghai youth:

"Working youth, revolutionary students and young Communists of Shanghai who, together with the Shanghai proletariat heroically rose against the reactionary Shantung troops and government and led in the vanguard of the revolutionary Shanghai proletariat—joyful and brotherly greetings.

"The freeing of Shanghai is an effective blow against the united strength of Chinese reaction and international imperialism. We are highly confident that the toiling youth and revolutionary students of freed Shanghai will be the firm support of the Chinese revolution and the valued helper of the Chinese Communist Party. We call upon you to continue along the path of continued struggle with international imperialism. The workers' and peasants' youth of our country are with you."

NICARAGUA GETS A BAYONET PEACE



Peace has at last been declared in Nicaragua by the point of the bayonets of the United States marines. The liberals under Sacasa who are fighting the reactionary regime of Diaz, took off the bosses of imperialism, Seligman and Brown and Co. are forced to give up their arms or to be bled into submission. As the Louisville Courier-Journal puts it, "Peace in the form of a hawk rather than a dove, is hovering over Nicaragua." In this struggle innocent American young workers were butchered to help imperialist aggression.

The basis of the agreement is the establishment of a "protectorate" a colony out of what is supposed to be a free and independent country. The young workers of this country (the cannon fodder of imperialism) must rally their forces to struggle against imperialism, which goes hand in hand with militarism under the slogans.

Down with imperialist aggression and withdraw the troops from Nicaragua and China.

Fight against the danger of a new world war.

Boycott the citizens' military training camps.

TY COBB

Here's the guy this bug insists on raving about as the best ball player that ever put on spiked shoes. At this moment (Friday) after 20 years in the big league, he has hit in 16 straight games and his batting average is over four hundred. Not so bad for an old man, eh? It's true he dislike raving about a pro ball player—pro ball is a sporting business, not a sport. But we have done it in the past, and if we had a buck to spare (we seldom have) you'd see us in the bleachers munching peanuts despite their disastrous effects.

Being a professional, Ty Cobb has also become involved in a rumor of gambling. Well—that's business. It's hard to expect purity of a ball player in a business in which he sees many curious ways of making money. After which discourse we will step over on Sunday to see a good "amateur" game where corruption consists of a mere five or ten to the pitcher. All in all, (with apologies to the guy who said something like this first) for ways that are dark and tricks that are plain, sport in this country is a little peculiar.

Since the petting party between Maloney and Sharkey was called off another day, it won't be until the next blurb (on Friday) by this bug, that his ability as a prophet will be visible. You'll recall we said Sharkey would be entitled to a chance at the heavy money in fighting Dempsey. Maybe while you read this you will see the prophecy had soured a little.

MARCH FOR THE RED DEAD.

(By Whittaker Chambers)

For the dead who died fighting for us in arms, for the dead;

For the dead who died in prisons for the Revolution, for the imprisoned dead;

For those who died actively working in the factories or among the workers on the land, for these dead.

We march today, comrades, workers.

And for the living, for the living, for the living;

And for all lives freely given to the Revolution,

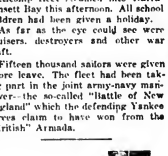
For all activity and thought transforming the world and the lives of the masses thru struggle,

We march today, comrades, workers.

But while we are living we take part in the process of change,

And when we die we are aware of nothing more;

So, more than the living, today we honor the Revolution's martyrs, the dead;



For the dead, the dead, the dead, we march, comrades, workers.

School Kids Forced to See Battle Fleet

NEWPORT, R. I., May 22.—The battleship fleet steamed into Narragansett Bay this afternoon. All school children had been given a holiday.

As far as the eye could see were cruisers, destroyers and other war craft.

Fifteen thousand sailors were given shore leave. The fleet had been taking part in the joint army-navy maneuvers—the so-called "Battle of New England" which the defending Yankee forces claim to have won from the "British" Armada.

This picture of a dead man jumping out of his coffin has nothing to do with this story. We are speaking only to the live ones. THE capitalist correspondents in China have been giving the impression recently that the Hankow government was on the point of collapse. We warned our readers not to take these dispatches without a liberal pinch of salt. It is to the interest of the imperialist powers to create the impression thruout the world that the Hankow government, which represents the interests of the Chinese workers and peasants is weakened to the point of futility. Such is not the case.

YESTERDAY'S dispatches indicate that the revolutionary nationalist forces have made important advances. The efforts of the capitalist correspondents to ally General Feng with Chiang-Kai-Shek have not survived. Feng is with Hankow. And Hankow has the same revolutionary connotation that Canton had until the northern advance and the defection of Chiang-Kai-Shek.

FOR the benefit of those who came to the conclusion that the treachery of Chiang-Kai-Shek meant a fundamental change in the composition of the nationalist forces fighting the foreign imperialists and the native militarists, I would draw attention to the manifesto issued by the Koumintang with headquarters at Hankow declaring that the merchants, manufacturers, peasants and workers are important factors in the Nationalist revolution. The capitalist correspondents want to create the impression that Hankow is trying to conciliate business. As a matter of fact the manifesto does not indicate any important change in the strategy of the general staff of the Chinese revolution.

SOME people came to the conclusion that when the Chinese Communists raised the slogan of the expulsion of the right wing of the Koumintang [illegible] the narrowing of the base of the nationalist revolution to [illegible] and peasants exclusively. Nothing of the sort. The trade union movement in China is young and inexperienced. The organization of the peasants is still in its infancy. The revolutionary middle classes still play an important role in the liberation movement. But the workers and peasants thru the Communist Party of China will redouble their efforts to secure the leadership of the nationalist revolution and change its character, in so far as conditions permit into a social revolution. We are glad to be able to report, from reading between the lines of the dispatches that the Chinese revolution is in a healthy condition.

IN all probability Great Britain will break off diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union. This act will be regretted by big industrial financial interests in Great Britain. The economic groups behind Winston Churchill and the extreme conservative wing of the cabinet want a break. They also want to establish a fascist government in Britain as soon as possible. It seems to me that this—the threatening break—is a stupid move on the part of the British government at this time. But beggars cannot be choosers, as the old saying has it. And while Britain is not yet reduced to beggary, his condition is far from an envious one.

IT is reported from London, or rather predicted that Italy will follow the British lead in case of a break with Russia. Chamberlain sounded out Finland of France when he was in London a few days ago but the French foreign secretary was evasive. Germany has turned a deaf ear to the British suggestion and the United States, not having recognized the government of the Soviet Union, seems bent on gaining as much commercial advantage as possible from the strained relations between the two powers.

THE Colombian delegate to the international economic conference in Geneva created quite a scene at that august gathering when he stated that Columbia would prefer the investment of European capital in that country to Wall Street capital because of the tendency of the United States government to interfere in the internal affairs of Latin-American republics. And the headline artist who fixed up the story for the New York Evening Post concluded that European capital was "foreign" in Colombia!

Building Bosses Facing Defeat

PLUMBERS ARE VINDICATED IN FIRM ATTITUDE

Dow Reports Admit Wages to Go Higher

1.—THE striking plumbers of Brooklyn will win their $14 scale and may gain the five-day week.

2.—THE striking plumbers helpers of the entire city, with the support of other building crafts, have an excellent chance of lifting their present low scale of $4 to much high levels.

3.—THE Building Trades Employers' Association is beaten in its lockout.

The predictions covered in the three points listed above were broadly hinted at yesterday by the Dow Service Daily Building Reports, the authoritative daily chronicle of the industry. In a special article by Allen E. Beals, the sweeping admission was made that the Building Trades Employers' efforts to "stabilize" wages and make an "example" of Brooklyn plumbers' strike have failed.

They have failed because the building industry has not yet started its decline and because the chaos in the industry does not permit a unified labor policy to be fully effective, according to the Dow Reports.

C. G. Norman, head of the Employers' Association, when queried by The DAILY WORKER yesterday on the Dow Reports story, snapped, "I am not responsible for what the Dow Reports may say."

But he did admit that a full month's efforts to club the Brooklyn strikers

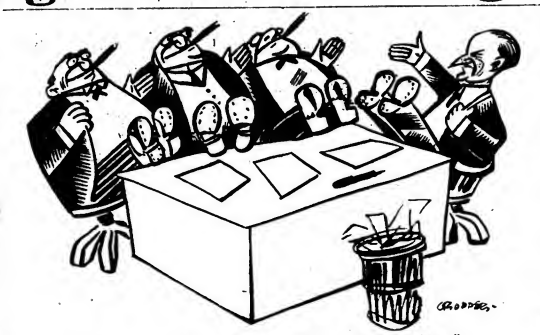
WORKERS PARTY WARNS AGAINST NEW WORLD WAR

Scores Arcos Raids and Imperialism in China

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Pointing to the studied attempts on the part of the imperialist powers to goad the Soviet Union into war, the Central Executive Committee of the Workers' (Communist) Party has issued a manifesto calling upon the workers of the United States to protest against imperialist activities that will inevitably plunge the world into a new war.



The full text of the manifesto follows:

Little more than eight years have passed since the "war to end war" was terminated. But today we find ourselves again in immediate danger of a new world war.

The raid of the British government on the Arcos is an act of provocation thru which the imperialists of Great Britain hope to provoke the peaceful workers' republic of Russia, and expect to push other imperialist governments into an immediately active united front against the Soviet Union.

The last world war was a battle for supremacy between two groups of imperialist powers. The victims of this battle were the workers. Those who escaped slaughter and maiming on the battlefields are being squeezed dry of their very life in a mad race for more efficient profit-making, instituted by post-war capitalism. But even during the war it became clear to millions of workers that in spite of high-sounding phrases about lofty war aims, they were the only ones selected as its victims. Resistance to the war therefore developed among the working masses. This resistance culminated in the victorious overthrow of Czarism and capitalism in Russia by the Russian workers. But in other capitalist countries, too, there developed the danger for the imperialists that the war would be turned into a war of the working masses against imperialism. This danger was the pri-

HANKOW, May 23.—The Nationalist troops pushing thru Honan are sweeping aside the Northern troops who stand between them and Peking, according to a report received here by the military council from General Tan Seng-chi, who is commanding the drive. The report states that the Nationalists have taken Siping and Shangtsai and the area along the Hungho River are rapidly marching on Kaifing and Chengchow, strategic centers in the northern drive.

The text of General Tan's report as given out by the military council follows:

"Our forces on May 14 opened an attack on the enemy at Shangtsai, Siping and Honsucheng. After a fierce three-day battle we captured Sangtsai and Siping and the area along the Hungho River on May 17, killing more than 5,000 and capturing 5,000 enemy rebels.

Capture Munitions.

"The army which recently joined the Northerners was completely routed. We captured ten field guns, twenty machine guns and 20,000 rounds of ammunition. We lost 700 men. Our vanguards have reached Chowiakow and are now advancing on Kaifeng and Chengchow."

Run Smith Professors Out of Town, Advice of Patrioteer Cashman

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., May 23.—Many professors at Smith College, a conservative New England women's institution here, would be driven out of town if residents of the city knew their real opinions, Joseph T. Cashman, of the National Security League told an astonished audience here.

"If I gave you the lowdown of some of the college professors in this city," said the professional anti-radical speaker, "the things they stand for, too immoral to circulate, I am sure you would drive them out of town before the clock struck midnight tonight."

Cashman was speaking in the center of Yankeeland reaction, the home town of Calvin Coolidge.

Many students and faculty members at Smith recently appealed to Governor Fuller to review the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

COOLIDGE MAKES HOOVER MASTER OF FLOOD FUNDS

Immediately Whips All State Groups Into Line

BATON ROUGE, May 23.—Tightening the grip of the banking interests on the already mortgaged farmers of the flooded districts in the South, and assuring a monopoly of the profitable business of "rehabilitation" for the inner ring of money lenders, Herbert Hoover has been today appointed by President Coolidge to be general supervisor and head of the $400,000,000 "reconstruction program".

At one time it seemed that state governments, more under the control of the suffering farmers, were about to cut under the federal government's terms, and perhaps even give away some money to the flood victims. Hoover's appointment will effectively stop this stampede in the direction of mercy, and stiffen the resistance of local business men to the clamors of the 750,000 country people driven from their homes, thru the government's criminal negligence to properly control the river, as great ricers abroad are controlled.

Hoover Cracks Whip.

Returning to Baton Rouge today after a three day swing around the three hundred mile flood rimmed circle of Louisiana, Secretary Hoover devoted himself immediately to the rehabilitation work he was forced to drop ten days ago when the crumbling west bank Mississippi levee unleashed the river over more than one-fifth of Louisiana's 40,000 square miles.

After a conference here with Governor O. H. Simpson's State Reconstruction Committee, Secretary Hoover arranged to leave late this afternoon by special train for Vicksburg, where he will meet the Missippi State Committee. On Tuesday he will go to Memphis, Wednesday to Little Rock, Thursday to Alexandria, and Friday to New Orleans. This programm will bring him to the southern end of Louisiana according to latest meteorological calculations, about the time the main body of the Atchafalaya Basin flood passes over the last stretch of inhabited territory in its path to the Gulf of Mexico.

Two-Thirds in Camps.

A recapitulation today of relief work since mid-April places at 500,000 the number of refugees cared for in 64 concentration camps. From this figure, officials estimate that almost 750,000 persons were driven from their homes during the six weeks sweep of the flood waters through the 700 miles of valley from Southern Illinois. About one-third, it is estimated, found refuge with relatives or friends in dry sections. Property losses, including estimates for the last fifty mile stretch of Central Louisiana still to go under, are estimated at $400,000,000. The death toll stands today between 300 and 350.

USSR NOW PLANS A TRADE BOYCOTT AGAINST BRITAIN

Will Transfer Trade If Relations Broken

MOSCOW, May 23.—The Soviet Union is making definite plans to boycott English industries.

This was made clear by A. P. Serebrovsky, vice-chairman of the Supreme Council of Public Economy. He declared that the Soviet Republic did not desire a break with England, but if that country's present attitude toward commercial relations continued unfavorable, the USSR would cease purchasing even those commodities England was best able to supply. Including among these are steam turbines, boilers, electric equipment, textile machinery, etc.

Serebrovsky explained that the Soviet Union was more interested in patterning their plans for industrial expansion on German and American methods. "America," he declared, "offers the best example of technical organization. England cannot give a good example because English factories have become obsolete, while the prices are higher than those of other nations."

• • •

LONDON, May 23.—The cabinet meeting tomorrow is expected to take up the matter of breaking trade, and afterwards presumably, diplomatic relations with the U. S. S. R. Sir R. M. Hodgson, head of the British trade delegation in Moscow has been ordered to report to the cabinet. Those in touch with the British trade delegation assert that a rupture of relations would hurt England more than the Soviet Union, which has shown itself able to exist without relations with any particular western power.

SACCO-VANZETTI COMMITTEE ASKS PUBLIC HEARINGS

Warns of Dangers in Secret Investigation

BOSTON, May 23.—Governor Fuller's star chamber inquiry into the Sacco-Vanzetti case ran up against its first real snag today when the Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee practically demanded an open, public investigation.

In a formal letter to the governor, the committee asks that the public be kept informed daily on the progress of the inquiry. Declaring that Fuller had never answered the committee's request for the appointment of a commission of five "impartial citizens" to conduct the inquiry, the committee asks that the lid be taken off the probe.

Demands are pouring in upon the committee for exact information concerning the progress of the secret investigation, the letter states, but the committee is as much in the dark as the rest of the world.

The letter is signed by Gardner Jackson, publicity representative for the committee, and by Joseph Moro, John G. Barry and Albino Felicani.

Thompson Sees Justices.

That William G. Thompson, defense counsel, inspired the letter is taken for granted here. Thompson was closeted with supreme court justices for several ours Saturday. He was declared to be discussing various angles of the court's whitewash of Judge Thayer, who was fully upheld in the appeal taken to the highest Massachusetts court.

Thomas F. McAnarney, who was associate counsel with Fred Moore for Sacco and Vanzetti before Thompson stepped into the case, visited Fuller and was in conference with him and Lieutenant Governor Allen and Joseph Wiggin, personal counsel for

PLUNDER NOT SERVICE MAIN AIM OF RING

Directors Own But Few Shares in Company

By ROBERT MITCHELL.

The state transit commission hearings got under way this morning with something of an explosion. Hardly half an hour had elapsed before two outstanding facts were revealed to the small group of "Traction Brains" which attended the sitting.

First, practically all, about 98 per cent of the stock of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company is held in the form of voting certificates by Wall Street brokers.

Second, and even more significant, the directors of the company hold practically no stock in the Interborough.

The meeting got under way promptly at 10:30 A. M. Assembled in the spacious headquarters of the transit commission on te tenth floor of 270 Madison Ave. were the legal and business representatives of apparently all the railroads and transit lines this side of the Mississippi River!

"Rough Stuff" Quakenbush was there representing the Interborough. Quackenbush appeared to be entirely "superior" to a proceeding of such minor importance. Nothing short of a strike and the importation of Chicago scabs and strike-breakers hits this gentleman as being worth while.

Miller Eyes Crowd.

Former Governor Nathan L. Miller was on deck with a cane and a handshake for all, glancing furtively in every direction with shifty eyes. Samuel Untermeyer with the face of an aged polly and the sharp eyes of an eagle, flower in his button hole, appeared as if dressed for a wedding.

Previous to the formal opening of the hearings, a statement was read by Untermyer reporting that John Delaney, chairman of the city transportation board, has telephoned declining the commission's invitation to be present. Delaney claimed illness as

TWIN TRACTION TRUSTS TO GAIN $700,000,000 IF CITY CONTRACTS RUN LEGAL LENGTH OF 49 YEARS

The Exposure Thus Far:

A secret deal has been entered into between Governor Al Smith, Mayor Jimmie Walker, the executive editor of a large metropolitan newspaper and the traction interests to sell out the city and put over the 10 cent fare.

The city and the taxpayers have already sunk over $300,000,000 in the subways; nearly $150,000,000 is the loss to date which the people have sustained on the incorporated traction swindle; over $11,000,000 per year is charged up on the city budget to cover the deficit for the city's part in the sell out.

The present so-called open transit hearings are a dummy proceeding to cover up this swindle and put over the 10 cent fare.

New York City is now the senior partner in the huge business of operating the largest subway system on earth. But New York was not always the blind partner who foots the bills in a scheme of financial jugglery unequaled in the whole three ring circus of Wall Street manipulation. New York had to await the dawn of the twentieth century for such an act!

In the year 1900, the city entered into a contract with one John B. MacDonald, now among the departed, under which about 22 miles of underground railway were to be built. MacDonald was only a "dummy" for another group as will be shown in a moment.

This agreement, the final cost of which to the city totaled some $57,000,000, came to be known as Contract No. 1. The lines built ran from Bronx Park, 180th St. south to 96th St. and Broadway, south on Broadway to 42nd St., east on 42nd St. to 4th Ave., and thereafter south to City Hall. Another arm of this line extended from 96th St. and Broadway north on Broadway to Van Cortland Park. The first section of the line was opened in 1904; the second in 1908.

The second venture in "public ownership" was launched in 1902 when the city let a contract for the construction of a line 3 miles long beginning at the City Hall and extending to Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn. The cost to the city was about $6,000,000. This section, called Contract No. 2, was opened in 1908. Contract No. 1 is with the Interborough Rapid Transit Company. Contract No. 2 was made with a subsidiary company of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company. As the latter was later reorganized into the Brooklyn-Manhattan Rapid Transit Company, we shall hereafter refer to contracts with the I. R. T. and with the B. M. T.

The construction and excavation work under Contract No. 1 MacDonald immediately turned over to the Interborough Subway Construction Company. Who was this construction company? Well, that is not very difficult to ascertain. Its officers and

UNDERPAID INSURANCE AGENTS AID "BIG FOUR" WALL STREET DIRECTORS

This series of ten articles, of which this is the second, deals with the exploitation of the industrial insurance agent and methods to combat the evils of weekly payment life insurance. This series is the result of numerous requests to publicize the details of the swindle and fraud to which the agent is subject in common with the policyholder.

Article II.

By CHARLES YALE HARRISON.

It is safe to say that without the agent an insurance company cannot live. Various companies here and abroad have tried to dispense with his services and have failed. For one reason or another people will not insure unless the pressure of personal solicitation is applied.

The enormous structure of the social institution of life insurance was built through the efforts of hundreds of thousands of agents who made the business what it is today.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, for example, is the largest financial institution in the world today. It has more assets than the U. S. Steel. It is stronger than Gary's corporation due to the fact that its assets are in liquid form and may be released as is deemed necessary by its oligarchical board of directors.

The Metropolitan Life insures over 26 million individual lives in the United States and Canada. The "Big Four" combined insure 40 million lives for over twenty billion dollars.

Due to the fact the premiums on weekly payment life insurance are payable at the home of the insured, these agents thus become the unconscious vehicles of the most pernicious capitalistic propaganda.

During the 1924 presidential campaign the Metropolitan Life printed tens of millions of circulars which were sent, via the agent, into six million homes, calling attention to the bogey of LaFollette's radicalism. It was pointed out that insurance funds are invested in Big Business and that a vote for LaFollette was a vote for confiscation.

This distribution of circulars by the agent is charged in the annual report to "welfare work" for which item the Metropolitan Life last year spent over eight million dollars. The Metropolitan is a "mutual" company.

"The Big Four" weekly premium life insurance companies employ, roughly, about 60,000 agents in the field in the United States and Canada. Each agent has about 200 families on his collection book with an average of four people in each family. As an agency for industrial espionage, it can readily be seen, he is invaluable.

Let us quote Italey Fiske on this question. Says he, "Not only are agents . . . a great piece of machinery when in their activities, constitute a public institution, but many activities of the company, conducted from the Home Office, have such an intimate relation to the public that added force is given to this designation . . . (by officials of the company) . . . Specific reference is made to the conduct of an industrial service, wherein where the relations between employers and employees are studied, based upon the company's experience . . . with holders of its group insurance and the like."

The agent's duties with an industrial insurance company are manifold. He must make his weekly collections from the 200 or so families which constitute his "debit." He must seek out new risks for new insurance. He must do several hours of bookkeeping in order to present a neat account of his petty financial transactions. He must locate families who have moved and learn his route without having an address. He must try to conserve old business which is in danger of lapsing. He must listen to hours and hours of harangueing on the part of his manager.

And for all this he is, in my estimation, one of the poorest paid of all white collar workers in America. So much so that the hard conditions under which he works compels a large turnover of labor in the thousands of branch offices throughout the country.

Some years ago a sporadic effort was made to organize these workers into a labor union. It failed because the attempt was haphazard and conducted without regard for scientific methods. A strike was prematurely called and the movement went up in smoke.

I have spoken to hundreds of agents throughout the country and not one has failed to say that the harsh and inhuman working conditions warrant the creation of a protective union.

At present due to the system of commission payments, the interests of the policyholders and those of the agent are diametrically opposed to each other. In reality this should not be so.

The exploitation of the agent by the company which results in tens of millions of dollars being pocketed by the company in fines and "charges to salary" is due to the fact that the agent permits the public to be overcharged and swindled by the company while he stands helplessly by.

He is helpless because he is unorganized, without his unconscious aid the fraud could not go on for another day.

As a class the industrial insurance agent is perhaps more intelligent and posted on public matters than any other skilled or semi-skilled worker. His contacts are with millions of unionized men who constitute his route.

That he is unorganized today in the face of a most shameless exploitation and swindle which is perpetuated on him is simply due to the fact that no serious efforts have been made in that direction.

That he has ample grounds for justifiable resentment will be shown in the forthcoming articles.

German Workers In Fight Injunctions Of U.S.A. Variety

BERLIN, May 23.—Fear is being expressed by German workers over the precedent set by a Saxon court recently in granting an injunction against the German Textile Workers Union. The order prohibits the union from "supporting in any way" a strike against the Saxon Wooden Yarn factory.

Labor leaders are reporting in the German press as protesting against the action of the court and declare that they will not tolerate their freedom of action to be restrained "in the American style."

Seek Freedom for Holtz.

Prof. Albert Einstein, Thomas Mann, and a large number of other German intellectuals have joined in a petition to the German government asking for a court revision of the sentence of life imprisonment being served by Max Hoelz, the so-called Saxon "Robin Hood."

The signers maintain that Hoelz because of his activity in the Communist uprising in Middle Germany in 1920 was framed on charges of having murdered a landowner named Hess. A confession has just been made by the man who actually shot Hess.

Needle Trade Defense

New York Workers Will Greet the Furriers.

Next Friday May 27th, all the New York Workers will gather at New Star Casino, 107th Street and Park Avenue, to greet the recently released victims of "Mineola Justice."

This welcome of the released prisoners will be given at the Grand Reception Ball which was arranged in their honor.

Do Not Keep Defense Money.

The Defense Committee is greatly in need of money. It is a crime against the cloakmakers and furriers to keep any money that was collected for them, a day longer than necessary. There are many people that have tickets, collection lists and roll call certificate booklets for which they have not as yet settled. Such binders the successful work of the Joint Defense Committee. All those who have money, tickets, roll call certificate booklets, honor roll lists are requested to immediately send in an account to the defense committee, 41 Union Square.

Bishop Brown Will Speak.

The famous heretic Bishop William Montgomery Brown will speak at the big mass meeting arranged by the Committee of One Hundred, on Wednesday night, May 25th at Webster Hall, 11th Street and 3rd Avenue. This mass meeting is arranged for the purpose of helping the families of the imprisoned cloakmakers and Furriers. Besides Bishop Brown there will be the following speakers: Paxton Hibben, Pascal Cegrove, Robert W. Dunn is Chairman. All New Yorkers are urged to come to this meeting. Admission 25 cents. Copies of "My Heresy," "Communism and Christianity," will be sold at this meeting at reduced prices.

Who is Next?

We received the following letter:

Dear friend:—At a meeting of the Ozoritzer Young Progressive Society, which was held on May 13th at Labor Lyceum, 219 Sackman Street, B'klyn, the defense of the cloakmakers and furriers was discussed and the following resolution adopted:

Whereas the Defense Committee is carrying on a campaign to help the imprisoned cloakmakers and furriers, victims of the revolutionary class struggle, we altho a non-partisan organization, pledge ourselves to support the Defense Committee in its work, until all the cloakmakers and furriers will be released from prison.

We will carry through all the campaigns of the defense Committee among the members of our organization. As a beginning we ore sending $60.00 and we will send some more a little later. With greetings,—S. Furhs, Secretary.

Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Asks Public Hearing

the governor. MrAnarney declared he had been called in by the governor but refused to comment on the subject matter of the conference.

The defense committee is split on the reception proposed for Sergeiranting, the Swedish lawyer who is coming to America to be associated in the defense of the two Italian anarchists. A Farnell will attend the meeting has been suggested, but some members of the committee feel that the governor will be antagonized by a public demonstration while he is rondsidering the case.

Force Enemies Into Open.

Friends of Sacco and Vanzetti fear the irresponsibility of Governor Fuller's secret inquiry into the case. They want a full open consideration of the world-famous case so that the sinister elements demanding electrocution of the workers on July 10 may be forced to bring their eleventh hour perjuries and falsehoods before a national jury of workers.

Either the public, forsual commission or a new trial would satisfy them better than the furtive examination of witnesses and evidence now going on in Fuller's office and home.

Mrs. LaFolletts In Appeal.

Mrs. Robert M. LaFollette, widow of the late senator, and Senator Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., with 48 other prominent Washingtonians have appealed to Governor Fuller for the appointment of an advisory commission to aid in the investigation of the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

Members of the faculties of the various Brookings institutes with publicists, lawyers and others signed the document. They include:

Mrs. Robert M. LaFollette, Sr., Senator Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., Walter J. Shepard, prominent sociologist, professor at Robert Brookings School of Economics; Harry H. Moore, economist in public health service; Arthur W. Macmahon, associate professor of political science, Columbia University; Helen R. Wright, professor, Robert Brookings School, author; Walton H. Hamilton, professor, Robert Brookings School; Thomas W. Page, former chairman Tariff Commission, now with Institute of Economics; W. F. Willoughby, director Institute Economic Research; Lewis Mumford, publicist, contributor to the New Republic; Burnita Shelton Matthews, president American Bar Association of the district; Rev. J. Paul Dresser, Church of the Holy City (Swedenborgen).

R. W. Baker, M. D., prominent physician of Washington; Dr. Louis Cohen, consulting engineer, professor, George Washington University; Mrs. Boston Halstead; Mrs. Abby Scott Baker; Mabel Costigan, president Women's Voter's League; Nina E. Allender, cartoonist; Maud Younger, executive board, National Women's Party; Mabel Vernon, executive board, National Women's Party; Mrs. Frank Hiram Snell; Emma Wold; Mabel VanDyke; Harriet Conner Brown; Florence P. Clark; Vera Fowler Lawris.

Among the lawyers who signed the petition are:

S. D. Hanson, C. H. Wigle, Louis Straw, Selig C. Bres, Norman F. Baessell.

Workers' Party Warns Of World War Danger

the . . . of the . . .

The proletarian dictatorship of Russia gave the exploited masses of the world, who themselves had been everywhere oppressed by the rule of the bourgeoisie, political freedom at the ruling class of a powerful and very important country. In its very existence the Soviet Union gives the exploited workers a consciousness of their power. This has made and still makes the existence of the Soviet Union a menace in the eyes of the imperialists. Therefore, the whole period since the end of the war has been filled with military intervention, diplomatic conspiracies, and all other possible forms of struggle against the Soviet Union.

The example set by the revolutionary workers of Russia and the inspiration supplied by the very existence of a workers' rule have strengthened and invigorated the resistance of colonial and semi-colonial masses against foreign imperialist oppression. The fight for independence of the oppressed masses in the extensive British colonies received new impetus. The Chinese masses arose from their slumber in their power and began a struggle for freedom from oppression.

Great Britain, whose most immediate interests were at stake, has since exerted all efforts to make the imperialist powers of the word temporarily forget their mutual antagonisms and unite on the basis of their mutual interests in a struggle against China and the Soviet Union. This has created an immediate war danger. The imperialist powers fully realize the threat to their interests by the Soviet Union and the ever growing struggle for liberation of the colonial and semi-colonial masses. The danger therefore exists that the imperialists of Great Britain will succeed in uniting the imperialist powers for a broader struggle against the Workers' Republics of Russia and against the awakening nationalist masses of the far east.

Threaten British Imperialism.

The danger which nationalist liberation in China creates for British imperialism in India and China is such an immediate one that the British imperialists will leave no stone unturned to win the imperialist powers of the world for a united onslaught against the Soviet Union and China. The raid on the Soviet Embassy in Peking, the bombardment of Nanking and the subsequent Five-Power note were all steps designed by British imperialism to gain its end.

American imperialism, altho scrupled with unprecedented aggression in its own particular "sphere of influence," Central and South America, still has sufficient common imperialist interests with Great Britain in China and against the Soviet Union to make the danger of a united front between American imperialism and British Imperialism a very real one. The American flag not only follows the dollar but, in the interests of its bondholders, precedes the dollar. Defense by American warships by American marines and American soldiers of the American dollars invested in Mexico and other Central and South American countries, is complemented by the sending of American warships, American soldiers, and marines to China to win new possibilities for investing American dollars.

The war danger created in China has been supplemented and made more serious by the incessant studied provocations perpetrated by British imperialism. Of these provocations, the raid on the Arcos is the latest and most outrageous one. The diplomatic forms, which this most haughty of the powers is always willing to grant to the representatives of the most insignificant princedoms of the world, were being outraged by the treatment accorded by the British imperialist government to the representatives of the Workers' Republics of Russia.

These studied insults against the Soviet Union are designed to provoke the Workers' Republic and are a bid for declarations of solidarity with the British imperialists on the part of the imperialists of the other countries. Like the raid on the Peking Soviet Embassy, the raid on the Arcos was a wilful attempt to create a cause for war. If the British imperialists succeed with their provocations, the nations of the world will be embroiled in a new world war. The fathers, brothers and sons of the working class will again be slaughtered in the hundreds of thousands. The women and children of the working class will again be starved by the millions.

Workers! You must not permit this!

Protest against American warships and marines in China!

Protest against the aid given by the American imperialists to British imperialists!

Unite your protest against the possibilities of a new world war into a mighty demand: HANDS OFF CHINA!! HANDS OFF THE SOVIET UNION!

Demand as a guarantee against intensification of the present war dangers the recognition of the Soviet Government in Moscow and the Revolutionary Government in Hankow!

Down with imperialism! Long live the solidarity of the oppressed of the world!—Central Executive Committee, Workers' (Communist) Party of America.

Filer Lindbergh's Father Fought for Nonpartisan League

WASHINGTON — (FP) — Capt. Charles Lindbergh, hero of the first direct air flight from New York to France, is acclaimed for his courage, his determination and his performance.

Young Lindbergh was 16 years of age when his father, the late Rep. Lindbergh, accepted the nomination of the Nonpartisan League conference in Minnesota, on the early spring of the war year, 1918, to run for the Republican nomination for governor on a platform of the farmers. The courage required to throw down the challenge to organized war profiteers in the Northwest at that time, when Gov. Burnquist and Sen. Frank Kellogg were backing the fanatical reactionary, Judge McGee, chairman of the state Council of National Defense, was no small thing. The heroic flyer of 1927 was old enough in those days to measure the heroism of his father, as he went from town to town, facing the howling mobs of patriots and the danger of assassination that were instigated by foes of the farmers' movement.

Tarred and Feathered

Delegates and visitors at the convention of the American Federation of Labor, held in St. Paul in June of that year, will not soon forget the two young farmers, organizers for the Nonpartisan League, who came to see the convention and to receive medical treatment for the tarring and feathering given them by the Burnquist-Kellogg enthusiasts. Many delegates went to the town of St. Cloud to hear Lindbergh speak, and witnessed the mobilization of armed forces to prevent the farmers from making any demonstration. They talked with Henrik Shipstead, then mayor of a Minnesota town and candidate for the nomination for Congress against Volstead, a standpatter. Shipstead's house had been smeared with yellow paint, in the night, when the local chamber-of-commerce element learned that he had joined the farmers' political crusade.

On billboards opposite the convention hotels were big posters, with pictures of shells bursting in American trenches in France, and in big type an alleged message from Pershing: "You take care of the Huns at home and we will hold them over here."

Lindbergh Beaten.

Lindbergh opposed war profiteers and war hysteria. He made no compromise with Wall Street, Kellogg, Nelson or Burnquist, who had set up their monopoly in patriotism and who had implied that the Minnesota farmers who asked them to secure a fair price for their wheat were enemies of their country. Lindbergh was beaten, but the courage and dignity of the anti-war record he made in the midst of war's rowardice was an estate of which his family is proud. After his death, the son flew over Little Falls, Minn., scattering the ashes of the father upon the land to which he was devoted. It was a symbol they understood.

Hero of Chauvinists.

PARIS, May 23.—Lindbergh is being made the pet of the big militarist interests of France. Yesterday the French Aero Club, hangout of chauvinists, gave him a noisy welcome and presented him with the club's gold medal. The President of France has pinned the Legion of Honor medal on his breast while he is to receive the Swedish Aero Club gold plaque and a cup from the French aero club.

American chauvinist officials here tried to appropriate the young American flyer for use in their own propaganda. They regard the marvelous welcome given the Little Falls, Minn., youngster as insuring that the Legion gang, when it hits Paris this summer, will be met with something less than hostility.

Banker-Envoy Elated.

Animosities between the French and American upper classes over war debts and the credit for bringing the late human slaughter house to an end have temporarily been laid aside. Ambassador Herrick, former president of the American Bankers' Association, is elated over the unexpected results of the achievement of the American "air ambassador."

Lindbergh is being financed by a St. Louis commercial firm and is having the most flattering offers pressed on him. So far he has not lost his boyish, unaffected manner. The use to which he is being put by the French military gang and the advocates of French-American alliance and remission of war debts is apparently unknown to him.

Smithsonian Says Venus Habitable.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Venus, the "glorious blue planet," defied by the ancients as the goddess of love, probably is better adapted to life than her celestial and militant neighbor, the earth.

This opinion was expressed by Dr. C. G. Abbot, director of The Astrophysical Observatory of Smithsonian Institution, and internationally known astronomer.

A picture of a landscape on Venus, drawn by imagination from Dr. Abbot's scientific observations, might not be unlike that in the primordial ages of the earth, uncounted eons in the past, before the birth of man. Venus, it would seem, is a luxurious, steaming and tropical jungle, a world in the making.

Bricklayers Helpers Back Laborers in Worcester Strike

WORCESTER, Mass., May 23.—With cops on guard at every job, the city's building laborers continued their folded arms policy today with the bricklayers' helpers now out. More than 100 bricklayers automatically joined the walkout when their helpers struck.

Nine strikers were fined $10 each as the aftermath of a police attack on the picket line.

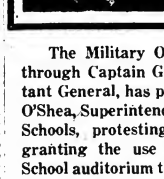
Greek Workers Strike Against Standard Oil

PIRAEUS, Greece, April 30 (By Mail).—Accompanied by brutality on the part of the police and gendarmes, four workers were arrested on the second day of the strike against the Standard Oil Co. One of those arrested was the president of the Benzine and Oil Workers' Union, Theochorides. The imprisoned workers are being defended by the Red Aid Committee.

The viciousness of the police aroused great resentment among all the workers of the city, and the secretary of the local Central Labor Council sent a telegram of protest to the secretary of the interior.

Women's Conference, New England, Talks Of Many Questions

BOSTON, Mass., May 23.—The New England Conference of Working Class Women held here elected an executive committee of 17 members to be responsible for the future work of the organization.



Seventy-five delegates were at the conference representing 48 organizations including trade unions, with a total membership of 7,500.

The questions discussed were women and the trade unions; women and war; maternity insurance and birth regulations; child labor and the school system; women and cooperative movement and the perfection of foreign born workers.

A resolution was passed greeting the Chinese women and asking for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The executive committee elected consists of Mrs. Eva Hoffman, Sonia Kaross, Miss D. Clifford, Charlotta Clayman, Olga Oikemus, Mrs. Florence Gage, Mrs. Galdman, Astor Berkowitz, Eva Biender, Anna Speaker, Mrs. Kagan, Mrs. Kouskia, Mrs. Lempi Parra, Mrr. Seltz, Mrs. A. Pulter, Dr. Antoinette F. Konikow and Morris Goldberg.

Who's Running This Country Anyway?

The Military Order of the World War, through Captain George L. Darte, its Adjutant General, has protested to Dr. William J. O'Shea, Superintendent of the New York City Schools, protesting against the action in granting the use of the Stuyvesant High School auditorium to the Civil Liberties Union for a meeting on the topic, "The Growth of New York City Since 1900."

Mrs. Rachel Davis, teacher of civics in the Woodbury High School of New Jersey, has had her contract for next year withheld, partly as a result of allegations made by the same Military Order of the World War.

And now The DAILY WORKER comes to trial on May 27th, as a result of charges preferred by these self-constituted arbiters of what the American people shall say and what information they shall receive.

It is high time that the workers speak quite plainly to these advance agents of Mussolini, who are seeking to institute the same black regime of reaction and suppression in this country as there is in tyrant-ridden Italy.

There is one way to speak clearly and unmistakably to these gentry. That way is to give such unanimous and whole-hearted support to the defense of The DAILY WORKER that these agents of American capitalism will understand fully that the masses of the workers will not tolerate any interference with their constitutional right to freedom of speech and press. Don't forget these are but the first few attempts on the part of extra-legal reactionary organizations to run our affairs. If they succeed now, they will make further excursions. Now is the time to call them to a halt. Your dollars are your command. Let us hear it—quick and strong.

U. S. S. R. WORKERS NOT WORRIED BY BARRAGE OF LIES

The weak spots in the general good showing are said to be in transport and building—yet here the advertising is such as would be lauded to the skies in any other country. In railroading, for instance, passenger traffic increased 11.7% and freight traffic 11%. On an estimated total revenue of 1415 million rubles, the railroads showed a net return of 66.5 million and the harbors 8.5 million, after deducting 50 million assigned to branches of transport that do not as yet pay their own way, and allowing 30 million for the continuation of new railroad building projects already under way. It should be noted also that "dead-head" tickets go not only to railway employees and their families, as in America, but that they are systematically used for cultural purposes, thus every student of a higher school can get a free ticket once a year to any point in the Soviet Union, though it be from Minsk to Vladivostok. Trade unions sending their members south to rest homes, etc., buy tickets at half price, and many similar concessions are made for other social service.

The building program, while extensive, cannot keep up with the demands made upon it, especially in Moscow where the housing situation will continue acute for years to come. In other centres conditions are rapidly approaching or have already reached normal. The sum expended on building are as follows:

Year	Total	Of which New Construction
1923	476 million rubles	147 million
1924	810 "	300 "
1926	1110 "	503 "
1926	1750 "	803 "

In addition to these sums expended there must be considered about 500 millions spent on the countryside for new building purposes.

Electrification.

The electrification projects are going ahead steadily. 100,000 kw. were added to the total capacity during 1925 and the coming year is expected to add another 180,000 kw. from major works and 150,000 kw. from new district enterprises. An example of the former is a tremendous new plant which harnesses the Kura, just above Tiflis (Soviet Georgia), and of the latter that in the autonomous province of Adjaria, 20 miles from Batoum, and about 5 miles from the Turkish border where small, almost perpendicular tunnels, hundreds of feet in length, are cut thru solid rock to tap a mountain lake to turn the turbines far down in the valley. Both of these projects are rapidly approaching completion and will, the writer was told when on the ground, completely change the character of local industrial development. Very great hopes are pinned to the electrification of Soviet industry and many will be the treasure chambers, like Georgia and Adjaria, that this white coal will unlock. A total of 159 million rubles will be spent on electrification this year.

Foreign Trade.

Nothing shows more conclusively the definite improvement of Russia's position than the figures on imports and exports duwng the last four years. It will be noted that the unfavorable balance (169 million in 1924, and 62 million in 1925) has given way to a positive balance of 75 million this year, to which should be added 50 lts.

Year	Export*	Import*
1923	522	439
1924	561	720
1925	670	732
1926	820	745

(*In million rubles.)

The leading role of the proletariat is not only not being undermined but it is becoming more predominant—absolutely and relatively. The total number of wage workers increased in the last year from 9,803,000 to 10,285,000, their wages increased on a general average of 6.7% in state industry the increase was 9% and in transport 10.2%. The productivity of labor at the same time is reported to have increased by 9%. Taking the various branches of industry separately we find:

Branch of Industry	Increase in number of annual workers	Increased average wages
Agriculture	5%	4.9%
Industry	6.8%	8.4%
Trade	5%	5.1%
Transport	2.3%	5.9%
Building	14.5%	7.2%
Public Ed. & Health	3%	11.6%

That the rule of the wage workers is increasing also relatively is shown by the gradually climbing proportion of total purchasing power in the Soviet Union that is held, first by the wage earners themselves,—and secondly, by their socialized industry: the former being given in the first of the columns below, and the latter in the second.

	Workers' Share	Socialized Industry
1923	23.8%	18
1924	26.0%	61
1925	29.0%	68
1926	29.5%	74

A final citation of figures that are probably already known through their use in connection with the discussion at the XIV Party Congress covers the relative share of private and cooperative trade in the Soviet Union, the former declining, the latter mounting in practically the same proportion:

	Private Trade	Co-operative Trade
1923	40.8%	24.2
1924	27.0	37.5
1925	24.0	42.0%
1926	22.0	44.0%

Let the capitalist press draw what comfort it can from this record in state housekeeping that shows off the Russian working class in such splendid contrast to the bankruptcy of the capitalist countries of Europe. To the working class of the world it is a cheering picture—it shows that their Russian comrades are more than holding their ground, that they are proceeding with the building of socialism under extremely difficult conditions—and that the workers of other lands have everything to gain by following their example. Productivity is being raised and new means of production provided by the workers themselves, the general industrialization of the country is proceeding, the size and preponderance of the industrial proletariat is increasing, while the socialist elements are more and more crowding out the private. Let us hope that the next anniversary of the workers' government that "could not last two months" will see other working class republics launched out upon the same road.

Pan-Pacific Labor Conference

(From Rotes Gewerkschafts Bulletin)
Translated by Whittaker Chambers.

The question of a Pacific Conference was first broached by the Austrian delegation at the II Congress of the R. I. L. U. (1922) at the time when an armed clash between the United States and Japan seemed imminent. But the immediate danger was removed and, together with that, the calling of a conference was postponed. The Conference of Far Eastern Transport Workers in Canton in 1924 at which representatives from China, Indonesia and the Philippines were present, created a substitute. That conference established a secretariat in Canton, for the purpose of maintaining relations between all the countries of the Pacific Ocean and for publishing a bulletin.

Fake League Confab Shattered.

Presently the situation changed. The problems of the Pacific came to the fore again. The League of Nations as well as the II and the Amsterdam Internationals became interested in Pacific questions. The League of Nations opened a branch in Tokio, the Labor Bureau of the League of Nations decided to call a Pan-Asiatic Labor Conference. The plan, whose realization was entrusted to Suzuki (chairman of the Reformist Trade Union League in Japan) and Joshi (General Secretary of the All Indian Trade Union Congress), was shattered by the opposition of the Chinese workers. Suzuki had to relinquish his idea.

In August 1926, the Japanese government tabilshed in Nagasaki another (certainly not a labor) conference which set itself very broad objectives. Japan hoped to create a Pan-Asiatic League of Nations in which she would play first fiddle. But the sweeping plans of the Japanese government proved a fiasco. Despite the strikingly curious measures and the very guarded utterances of the delegates, public opinion in the Far Eastern countries was not deceived as to the motives of the initiators. It is sufficient to note the leading article in the completely bourgeois paper "Mingo Shibao" which says:

Reformist Conference Fiasco.

"Under the cloak of Pan Asiatic trought the other Asiatic peoples are to do yeoman service for the Japanese interests. Japan hopes to protect herself against the anti-imperialist movements in the Soviet Union, China and in Mongolia by a Pan-Asiatic movement directed against the American and European imperialists."

In anticipation of an inevitable armed conflict America and Japan carry on a lively propaganda in the countries of the Pacific. The United States has founded in Honolulu the so-called Pacific Institute, and, thru this powerful medium and an all-embracing agitative and propagandistic work, is forcing the countries of the Pacific under American culture and American influence. The countless scientific, cultural, student, and other conferences, rallied by the Institute serve the same end, Japan, on the other hand, loses her efforts on the Pacific society, created under the direct protectorate of the Japanese government, with headquarters in Tokio and the principal cities of other Pacific countries, but whose activities do not embrace labor circles.

The Australian trade unions did not relinquish their idea.

All Parifie Labor Represented.

The conference planned for May 1st 1927, in Canton, was thought to be extremely significant. In its organization committee sat representatives of the Trade Union Council of Sydney and of the Chinese Trade Union League. Careful measures were taken to ensure wide representation from the Chinese trade union movement, from the center and left wing of the Japanese Trade Unions and from the Japanese Peasant Movement which is known stands in close relation with the workers. Other delegates from the Japanese colonies, Formosa and Korea, from the Philippines and Indonesia, from the American coast of the Pacific, i.e., from Canada and the United States, Mexico and Central America, were to participate.

Chiang's Betrayal.

The latest event, Chiang Kai-shek's betrayal and, as a result of that, the turmoil in a whole series of southeastern Chinese provinces, and in Canton itself, radically changes the situation. Despite the statements of Li Tin Sin, the present right Kuomingtang dictator in Canton, who has promised his "support" to the delegation of the Central Committee of the All-Trade Unions of the Soviet Union, it is very doubtful whether it will be possible to open the conference. The trade union movement is today forced into illegality. At Li Tin Sin's order hundreds, if not thousands, of the most active workers are being arrested in Canton. We have reports of the innumerable sacrifices of the Cantonese railway workers. Communists, and all that seems to hint of Communism, is hunted down. The union between Hankow, Shanghai and Canton is broken. And, on the other hand, the imperialist powers use every means to hinder the conference. The government of the Australian Union, for example, refuses to visa the passes of the delegates from the Sydney Trade Union, Council. Announcement comes from Japan of the arrest of the Japanese delegates in Kobe.

Naturally this tremendously increases the difficulties of the pending conference, which is threatened by the interference, if not by the forcible dissolution, of Li Tin Sin and the reactionary and imperialist powers who support him. The situation in the Pacific Ocean where the most vital interests of the imperialists collide with indescribable fury with the movement of the millions of the masses defending their most elementary national and class rights, more than ever demands the support and the cooperation of the forces of the labor organizations of the Pacific Coasts. It is clear that the working class, its struggle, its organization, and its united action, will soon decide the fate of the conflict which amidst incredible suffering, is bursting into flame thruout the Pacific. The conference may be delayed: BUT IT MUST TAKE PLACE! The situation in the Pacific, the interests of the national revolutionary and labor movement demand it.

(The treachery of Chiang Kai-shek necessitated the postponement of the conference to May 15th, and its transference from Shanghai to Hankow. No news has yet been received of the events at the conference.

In addition to the arrest of the Japanese delegates and the refusal of the government to visa the passes of the Australian delegates, Losovsky and other prominent members of the Soviet Union delegates were held under arrest by British officials at Hongkong. They were later released.—H. P.).

NEW RECRUITS FOR RED ARMY TENTH MAY DAY

Inspiring Celebration In Moscow

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to the Daily Worker).

MOSCOW, U.S.S.R., May 1 (By Mail).—It is the tenth May Day since the overthrow of czardom. It is a whole decade since the old order toppled and fell. The Union of Soviet Republics lives and grows in strength and power!

That is the thrill that sweeps the mighty hundreds of thousands of Moscow's proletarian hosts on this international Day, with the many tens of millions out over the Soviet Union.

The great stands that parallel the Kremlin Wall filled early. The leading spokesmen of the Soviet Power fill the Tribune on Lenin's Mausoleum. There is Stalin, Bukharin, Rykof, Voroshilof and a host of others.

The Invincible Army.

And out over the Red Square! It is filled with the soldiers, sailors, cavalry, airmen, artillerymen, the clenched fist of the Proletarian Dictatorship.

Ten years before, at the first congress of the Communist International, the soldiers of the Red Army had marched in this same Red Square, many shoeless, clothes tattered, bleeding feet, reddening the cobblestones, their spirits undaunted, hard as the granite pavement in the struggle against the capitalist foe.

Today every Red Army uniform sparkles with newness. The equipment could not be better. And the spirit—the spirit of the social revolution still lives, glowing strong as ever.

On the second as the clock in the huge tower of the Kremlin strikes nine, every unit of this fighting host rings to attention, and from as many corners of the Red Square, half a dozen Red Army bands thunder "The Internationale." The song of the revolution is the song of the Red Army.

Army Hails Leaders.

On prancing steeds, Clement Voroshilof, the People's Commissar for the armed forces, and the chairman of the Revolutionary Military Council, with the renowned cavalry leader, Budenny, come in review along the right lines of the Red Forces of the Soviet Union. Booted and spurred and in brilliant uniforms, the military attaches of capitalist lands, Poland, Lithuania, England, etc., there watch and must wonder as each Red Army unit, in its turn, thunders new cheers for Voroshilof and Budenny as they pass.

The review is over. Voroshilof mounts the Tribune of the Lenin Mausoleum. What is he going to say? Li Tin Sin, the present right Kuomingtang dictator in Canton, who has promised his "support" to the delegation of the Central Committee of the All-Trade Unions of the Soviet Union, it is very doubtful whether it will be possible to open the conference. The trade union movement is today forced into illegality. At Li Tin Sin's order hundreds, if not thousands, of the most active workers are being arrested in Canton. We have reports of the innumerable sacrifices of the Cantonese railway workers. Communists, and all that seems to hint of Communism, is hunted down. The union between Hankow, Shanghai and Canton is broken. And, on the other hand, the imperialist powers use every means to hinder the conference. The government of the Australian Union, for example, refuses to visa the passes of the delegates from the Sydney Trade Union, Council. Announcement comes from Japan of the arrest of the Japanese delegates in Kobe.

Naturally this tremendously increases the difficulties of the pending conference, which is threatened by the interference, if not by the forcible dissolution, of Li Tin Sin and the reactionary and imperialist powers who support him. The situation in the Pacific Ocean where the most vital interests of the imperialists collide with indescribable fury with the movement of the millions of the masses defending their most elementary national and class rights, more than ever demands the support and the cooperation of the forces of the labor organizations of the Pacific Coasts. It is clear that the working class, its struggle, its organization, and its united action, will soon decide the fate of the conflict which amidst incredible suffering, is bursting into flame thruout the Pacific. The conference may be delayed: BUT IT MUST TAKE PLACE! The situation in the Pacific, the interests of the national revolutionary and labor movement demand it.

(The treachery of Chiang Kai-shek necessitated the postponement of the conference to May 15th, and its transference from Shanghai to Hankow. No news has yet been received of the events at the conference.

In addition to the arrest of the Japanese delegates and the refusal of the government to visa the passes of the Australian delegates, Losovsky and other prominent members of the Soviet Union delegates were held under arrest by British officials at Hongkong. They were later released.—H. P.).

U. S. Oil Men's Choice For Mexican President

Preliminary maneuvering for Mexico's 1928 presidential election campaign is already under way and, as usual, the U. S. oil magnates are making many of the maneuvers. The candidate whom they are pushing forward with most insistence at the present time is Gen. Arnulfo Gomez, commander-in-chief of the government military forces in the state of Vera Cruz. Gomez is the main support of the semi-fascist landlords' organization known as the "Sindicato de Agricultores." He has been active in disarming peasants and breaking strikes of industrial workers. Long considered "unreliable" by the Calles government, he has several times been on the point of going into open rebellion, particularly during the difficult days of the U. S. government assault upon the sovereignty of Mexico over the question of the oil and land laws. Gomez established his liaison with the U. S. oil interests years ago, when he held sway over the state of Tamaulipas where the Tampico oil center is located. Tampico workers will never forget his strike-breaking and union-smashing activities, in which all methods not excluding murder, were employed.

Union. Then Rykoff, president of the Council of People's Commissars, spoke from the tribune of the Lenin Mausoleum. He said:

"For the 10th time we are celebrating the First of May. All militants, all toilers, all Red Army men are celebrating the First of May. In the Soviet Union this is the holiday of the whole population, not only of the advanced section of the working class as in other lands. While we, on our Red Square, are peacefully celebrating, in other countries the workers are compelled to meet with all kinds of reprisals. In all capitalist lands it is branded a crime to celebrate International May Day. In our country it is the holiday of the self-emancipated workers, it is the holiday of social reconstruction."

Greeting From Britain.

Then A. W. Murphy, representative of the British Communist Party in the Comintern, spoke declaring that, of "Here in the Soviet Union we can celebrate International May Day without the interference of the bourgeoisie.

Russia Is For Peace.

Nikolai Bukharin then told of the lowering war clouds in the Orient. He reviewed the efforts of the open and secret diplomacy, from hand-to-hand the Soviet Union with a blockade of bayonets.

"It is the attitude of the international proletariat that will dictate when this new blood feast shall commence," he said. "We must intensify the work of peaceful reconstruction while we yet have peace. The foundation of our success is to be found in the reconstruction of society. We must run to life the national and unbounded wealth now lying dormant. We must strain ourselves much more to make stronger our industry and agriculture. We must grow from the plow to the tractor, from hand-craft to machine production. We must strengthen the bond between the working class and the peasantry. Our Army, our Navy, our industrial reserve capacity are the instruments that make for the emancipation not only of our own people, but of the people of the entire world. Long Live Our Working Class! Long Live Our Peasantry! Long Live Our Red Army! Long Live the Inevitable Coming Victory of the Workers of the World!"

Then the parade of the Red Army began, to be followed by the procession of the workers, that lasted the remainder of the day. I shall attempt to interpret part of the meaning of the passing of great hosts in another article.

WILL USE ASIA MAP FROM FAR EAST INSTITUTE

A new map of Asia such as is used in the Far East University at Moscow and in the advanced Soviet schools has been received by M. Wicks and will be used in the first lecture of his course of four to be delivered on China at the Workers' School 108 East 14th Street. The first lecture is this Friday evening. The map is a huge one, covering half of the side of the room and will enable those in attendance to remember the relation to China of the rest of Asia.

The lecture will deal with the economic geography of China and will show why the great imperialist powers consider it the greatest prize in the world today.

Dialectic Presentation.

The Marxist-Leninist method of presentation will be used by Comrade Wicks. Instead of the old, incompetent system of presenting the history of a country as an isolated thing, separate and apart from the rest of the world, it will be presented in its relationship to the rest of the nations of the earth. Though separate for thousands of years from Europe, nevertheless even its great geographical barriers could not wholly prevent the East and West meeting at some points.

Invaluable for those who desire to understand the "Chinese puzzle" will be the outlines prepared for each lecture and to be obtained only by those attending the lecture. These will miss one will miss one fourth of the outline and guide to the further study of China.

wards the institutions of the Workers' Republic. This dispatch says that the heads of the industrial and commercial apparatus of the Soviet Union look to Germany and the United States for the most advanced methods of production and not to England. But even at that the needs of 160,000,000 of people would throw considerable trade to the British market provided a Labor government came into power in Great Britain or one not as prosecutive as the present government.

EVERYBODY in Nicaragua is pretty well satisfied with the situation there now excepting the liberals, deposed Calvin Coolidge's emissary Henry L. Stimson, on his return from his mission of "peace" to the Latin American republic. Well, now, this is interesting and rather amazing because it is a fact. And the fact is that everybody in Nicaragua, outside of Diaz and his Wall Street-hired flunkeys are for the liberals. Stimson went to Nicaragua and frankly told the liberals that the majority rule did not mean a damned thing to the government at Washington. Wall Street investments and the Panama Canal demanded that Diaz retain the presidency and the United States would be prepared no matter how many American marines had to be killed to attain it.

ANOTHER wicked slam has been dealt to the fiction that free speech exists in the United States. Not much consolation can be taken from the fact that two of the supreme court justices differed from the majority in the decision upholding the constitutionality of the conviction of Anita Whitney on a charge of having violated California anti-syndicalist law. Majority rules on the supreme court, that it is quite possible that had the Brandeis-Holmes view prevailed a communistic majority, the reactionary minority would refuse to recognize the decision. Our ruling classes are very obedient to law as long as the law suits them.

IF Brandeis and Holmes had voted against the decision of the supreme court upholding the constitutionality of the California anti-syndicalist law instead of simply confining themselves to an abstract attack on the suppression of free speech in general they would have had difficulty in proving their sincerity in the matter. The ruling classes of the United States will determine how much "free" speech they will allow their slaves and that will be just as much as they think the system can stand.

THE supreme court of the United States is one of the strongest bulwarks the capitalist system has here. They don't mind if a few of its members still retain a traditional affectation for Lincoln, Franklin and Jefferson. That does not hurt, since the respectable minority on the court will confine themselves to a mild protest. And creates the impression that the supreme court is not one reactionary mass. There are lots of ways of hiding the population. There is as much chance of the U. S. supreme court delivering a decision that will hurt the capitalist system as there is of the supreme court of the Soviet Union handing down a decision favoring the Nejamn. Both are class instruments. One is the bulwark of the robber system of capitalism; the other of the rising social order that is based on the laboring classes.

Professional Patriots Must Live.

The war with its hysteria still persists in the carcasses of a certain small but noisy strata of the population of the country. They still work overtime at the business of professional patriotism. Public interest in their antics has long ago subsided to the freezing point. Among intelligent people they are regarded with the same disdain that is accorded professional inhabitants of Greenwich Village and other freaks.

But somehow they manage to make an easy living preying on the gullible newly rich (and some of the older rich) who made fabulous sums out of the graft accompanying the war. They are kept busy concocting new "menaces" to the fortunes of these parasites. They have constantly to manufacture scares that will induce their gullible supporters to contribute money to their shady organizations, most of which exist merely to keep a few incompetents who cannot exist under normal conditions and in honest occupations in an easy job.

It is precisely this stripe of creature that is behind the persecution of The DAILY WORKER. They see in the frame-up against the editors and management of our paper a chance to circularize their list of suckers and try to extort money from them on the pretext that they are still holding aloft the sacred banner of patriotism and heroically defending the citadels of privilege. Aside from the well-known fact that the ruling class is constantly on the alert to crush us, these slimy creatures jump into the limelight in an effort to prove to their paymasters that they alone are capable of silencing the militant labor organizations and our most effective present-day weapon, our press. They are parasites upon parasites.

It is an easy matter to account for these particularly nauseating swindlers. Before the war they were never heard from. They are misfits, unable to exist by following legitimate occupations even in the society they pretend to defend. The war with its demand for professional patriots—four-minute men, red cross workers, poison propagandists, forgers, provocateurs, liberty bond salesmen and saleswomen, foreigner-and-red baiters, flag wavers, army chaplains—enabled this gang of semi-vagrants to live better than they had ever lived before. Hence they must, of necessity, in order to live, fan the flames of patriotism or again sink into the insignificant strata of society from which they emerged to thwart the evil designs of the Kaiser and help the late Woodrow Wilson make the world safe for the investments of J. P. Morgan and the rest of the brigands of Wall Street. They are part of the backwash of the war.

The serial we are running on "Professional Patriots" exposes the antics of this diseased growth upon the body politic, but does not explain the rotten objective conditions that gave rise to them.

This is written as a supplement to the "Professional Patriots" articles in order that our readers may know the real motives behind their exalted paens to patriotism and be able to expose them so that all readers will hold them in the contempt their execrable conduct so richly deserves.

Smashing Tory Government Is the Next Task of the Labor Movement.

The British government, following the raid on the Soviet Union Trade Mission, and its failure to isolate the Soviet Union at the Geneva Economic Conference, can choose now to break off relations, a move which is obviously a step towards war, or to let the whole matter drop, make the Churchill-Birkenhead-Joynson-Hicks combination the laughing stock of the world, increase greatly the prestige of the labor movement as a whole and the Labor Party in particular, and proceed to a general election in much more unfavorable circumstances than prevailed two or three months ago.

The British government has made errors in the past and survived. It has "muddled thru" until its ability to do so has become a tradition. But all this was before British capitalism entered a period of sharp decline. Strong systems can make mistakes—weak ones cannot afford it.

It is generally acknowledged now that the introduction of the bill for the suppression of the unions was a huge—a blunder of desperation.

The raid on the Soviet Trade Mission was to have been linked up with the drive on militant unionism, other nations were to be drawn into the front against the Soviet Union—then with British labor smashed and demoralized, the way would be clear for war upon Russia.

But the government has failed to rally any substantial support for its policy. On the contrary it has alienated those industrialists who want and need trade with the Soviet Union. The $50,000,000 loan to the Soviet Government which the latest dispatches say has been agreed to by the directors of the Midland bank is a very substantial straw showing which way the wind is blowing.

British industry shows little, if any, sign of improvement. According to a London dispatch to the New York Times, a reduction in prices of pig iron has failed to bring any new business; more coal mines are going on a short time operation basis, the outlook for new contracts in the shipbuilding industry is very poor indeed, the textile industry reports a discouraging future, etc.

Political maneuvering has failed to bring British industry back to normal. The defeat of the general strike gave the British ruling class a new lease of life but this too is nearing its end. The new attack on the British working class, directly connected with the conspiracy against the Soviet Union, has aroused the masses to the danger.

There is undoubtedly now in Great Britain the basis for a powerful drive of labor against the government—a drive which should have been the next step in the general strike, but which cowardice and treachery in the leadership prevented. The policy of capitulation put forward by the MacDonalds, Thomases, and their centrist supporters, has proved to be futile and dangerous—allowing just such surges of reactions at home and in China as have been indulged in.

The time has come for British labor to admit the correctness of the estimate made by the Communist Party of Great Britain and the revolutionary practicality of its program.

The government, now severely discredited, but still determined to take its revenge on the working class, can be routed completely if the rank and file of British labor permits no more betrayals.

We believe that the British workers have learned in the last few weeks that there is no such thing as separating questions of relations with the Soviet Union from the question of the life and struggles of the British working class.

Our Party Moves Forward

By JAY LOVESTONE, Acting General Secretary Workers (Communist) Party

It is now only a little more than one month since the various districts of our Party Organizations have swung into full activity in the Ruthenberg enrollment. Already the results achieved are gratifying evidence of the vitality of our membership.

In the first three weeks of the Ruthenberg enrollment our Party members showed their capacity for work, their ability to meet difficulties and spirit and devotion of the first magnitude to respond energetically to the party's tasks under the severest hardships. Here, our leader, Comrade Ruthenberg, died. A vicious offensive by the labor lieutenants of American imperialism, the employers and the government, had been going on for months against our Party. All our enemies were busy singing our requiem. We, the Communist Party, in America were a thing of the past. We were no more. And what was even better for the bourgeoisie and their socialist lickspittles of the species Oneal and other fake historians, we could be no more—no, no—never—ever again.

Some Significant Figures.

Here are some interesting figures that will make the socialist historians of the bourgeois chairs sit up and be paralyzed with disappointment.

In September 1925 our Party counted 14,037 dues-paying members. Of this number there were at least from three to four thousand who were counted as members thru the dual stamp column; that is, they were wives of members who purchased dual stamps—one stamp for husband and wife. Particularly among the former language federations was this practice in vogue.

In October 1925 the National Organization Department issued a call for the reorganization of the Party on the basis of shop and street nuclei. We proceeded with great energy to reorganize the party. We had just emerged from the most costly, disastrous factional struggle our Party had ever experienced. Practically only half of our membership responded to the reorganization call. To be exact, the dues payments in October 1925, the first month of reorganization, were only 7,213. By November of 1925 the number rose to 8,064. In December it mounted to 8,154. By January 1926 the figure reached was 8,780. And in March we totalled 9,052. This was the high point for some months to come. The summer period drew on and our dues payments naturally shrunk.

Reorganization Difficulties.

No one will deny that due to reorganization our party has been reduced in size, numerically, to an extent which some of us did not expect. But we must keep clearly in mind that the loss of dues-paying members is not as great as it would appear to the superficial observer. First of all, a minimum of twenty per cent of our dues payments before reorganization were not dues stamps actually sold to individual members but were only dual stamps—stamps given away to wives of comrades who were members of the party by grace of their husbands holding membership in the party. With reorganization, this social-democratic practice was dropped. There are no longer any dual or "by-grace" members.

Furthermore, the newly organized shop and street nuclei units are not all function well enough and regularly yet. There are many party members—far more active than many of the "regular dues-payers" in the pre-reorganization days of our party—who, because their units to which they are attached do not function as well as they should, are unable to pay dues regularly. We make these remarks, not by way of seeking to explain away anything or hiding any of our weaknesses. The aim is quite the contrary. We are here pointing out one of our most serious shortcomings.

Rally to Ruthenberg Enrollment.

The death of our leading communist fighter, Ruthenberg, was an irreparable loss to the party. This has been recognized by our sworn foes as well as by our most loyal followers. But the party set itself to work with a zeal and a determination to make good as much as possible the loss thus suffered by us. The Ruthenberg enrollment our Party was launched under the most trying circumstances. The response of the membership exceeded the most sanguine hopes of the most optimistic in our ranks. There was a new spirit in the Party. The inactive, to a large extant, became active. The active members redoubled their efforts. Better results were evidenced in all our fields of activity. Every section of the party responded promptly and vigorously to the call of the Political Committee, the leadership of the Party, to close ranks and build the Party.

Party Membership Grows.

Immediately the new Communist spirit showed itself in the status of our organization. We Communists don't view organization problems as questions distinct from the political. To us organization and political problems are invariably tied up as part of one and the same problem and as of building a mass Communist Party in the United States.

For the month of March 1927, the dues payments rose to nearly 9,500—to be exact 9,490. This is the highest dues payments we have had since September 1925. We must here keep in mind the fact that many hundreds of our members are at present involved in the severe disemployment in the needle trades in New York and in the strike of the United Mine Workers of America. The largest proportion of these party members refuse to take exempt stamps and prefer to wait in their dues payments until such time as when they can afford to pay up their back dues. This means that we now have an active party membership of more than twelve thousand.

April reports are not yet complete. All indications point to the upward swing in dues payments being continued.

The number of initiation stamps are not an exact index of the number of new members entering the party during a particular month. Some units even permit a new member to be in the party months before securing from their district offices the necessary initiation stamps. Yet, inaccurate an index of the influx of new members as the sale of initiation stamps may be, it has quite some value as an index of party organization progress. Let us again examine some figures.

In September 1925 the last month of the party organization on the old basis of language federation branches —286 initiation stamps were bought from the national office by the various Federation Bureaus. With the first month of reorganization, October 1925, the number fell to 253. It continued to fall to 158 in November and to 135 in December. By January 1927 the new units began to function with increasing regularity. There was an upward swing in the number of workers initiated into party membership. The total initiation stamps sold in January 1927 was 214. In the short month of February last the number rose to 275.

By mid-March most of the districts had not yet swung into the Ruthenberg. Still the few days which most of the districts participated in, the drive told appreciably in the influx of new members. These figures of new members will be especially important for April. Yet, in March last, 336 initiation stamps were sold. This means that a minimum of 236 workers were admitted to party membership in March. This is the highest figure reached in many months. Of course, there were many hundreds who applied for membership in the rousing Memorial celebrations held immediately after Comrade Ruthenberg's death. Not all of these workers were immediately enrolled into party membership.

Party Organization Moves Forward.

It is clear that the Party organization has taken a turn for the better. We have seen our most difficult days in the immediate post-reorganization period. We still have many serious problems of reorganization to solve. Some we have not even scratched the surface of in the least. But on the whole we have turned the corner—for the better.

TABLE SHOWING CONDITION OF THE PARTY ORGANIZATION

	1925
	Oct.	Nov.	Dec.
Dues Payments	7,213	8,064	8,154
Initiation Stamps	253	158	135
	1926

Dues Payments	8,764	7,711	9,490
Initiation Stamps	214	278	336

The pessimists may throw sand into their own eyes. The enemies of the party may hope in vain and perish in disappointment. But the Workers' (Communist) Party of America is a living, growing force, moving forward in the revolutionary spirit and line of its dead leader, Comrade Ruthenberg.

Letters From Our Readers

Editor, The Daily Worker:

I believe that the big farce of the year was the "conference on "Youth and War System" held last Saturday at the Labor Temple. Not one speaker was invited by this "open minded" society to present the Marxian point of view on this question. Instead of that an evangelist, who appeared to be neither a worker nor the son of a worker told the audience "to love their brothers," as a means to avoid future wars.

Still another fellow, named Christensen, who was once a candidate for president on the Farmer-Labor ticket, said that Esperanto was the only way to end war. After a few more speakers fed the audience with similar trash, the chairman announced that those who wished to take part in the discussion could do so, but said he would not tolerate any mention of "Communism or class war," and also declared that "Youth and War" was the subject of the symposium. A storm of protest came immediately from the audience and the chairman yielded.

A few young Communists, including myself, then took the floor and exposed this "ideal of Christianity." We pointed out that Rockefeller who is responsible for the loss of 7,000 lives at Nanking, has contributed $900,000 to the Y. M. C. A., which is poisoning the minds of young workers. One speaker told the audience why England, a "Christian" nation, —is trying to make war on Soviet Russia, while Soviet Russia, an "atheist" nation, is preventing war.

These so-called peace societies only becloud the minds of the young workers so that when war comes they will be fooled by nice phrases.

Fraternally yours,—S. Magidson.

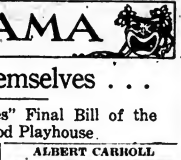
"Grand Street Follies" Final Bill of the Neighborhood Playhouse

The fifth edition of the Grand Street Follies will meet with the approval of these small bourgeois elements who get a kick out of a burlesque of their own foibles and who ratify their own inferiority complexes (to use the stupid language of psychoanalysis) by laughing at the ridiculous antics of their kind. It is a Menckinesque concoction.

The second incident is a slam at the police-censorship of the New York stage that resulted in Mae West doing a stretch in prison for producing a play called "Sex." There are a number of he-virgins furnishing a background for the ladies who have been guilty of appearing in prohibited shows, all doing time on Blackwell's Island.

Mr. Albert Carroll, one of the old favorites of the Neighborhood Playhouse, situated on East Grand, gives remarkable impersonations of Mrs. Fiske and Ethel Barrymore, which proves to remind one of how masculine are the voices of these two Broadway favorites.



Most amusing was the skit involving "Cautious Cal," president of the U. S. A., and "Nervous Nellie," secretary of home and foreign affairs. A person properly insignificant was chosen to portray Cal and he did a good job of it.

But the part dealing with the "origin of the black bottom" fell flat. Certainly the directors of the thing ought to get something to substitute for it.

All in all it is a good evening's entertainment for those who enjoy seeing the various antics of the Broadway harnstormers made ridiculous, and some of the acting is better than that of those they imitate.

Broadway Briefs

"Speak Easy," a melodrama by Edward Knoblock and George Roesner, will be given a spring try-out by B. Freedlander. Donald Meek, Anne Shoemaker, Dorothy Hall, Allen Moore, Olga Clement and Kathlyne Sjiday are in the cast.

Phillip Dunning who collaborated with George Abbott in the writing of "Broadway," has a new one, a comedy of back-stage life, titled "The Understudy." Jack Donohue is collaborating this time.

Henry L. Cort and Clark Rose will produce a new play called "The Brigand," by Paul Fox and George Tilton early next season. This will be followed with a musical comedy by Cort called "The Radio Girl."

Brock Pemberton has acquired for early production next season, a new comedy called the "Colonels' Ladies," by Fannie Heaslip.

Wolfe is Speaker at West Roxbury Picnic On Decoration Day

WEST ROXBURY, Mass., May 23.—Bertram D. Wolfe, director of the Workers' School of New York, will be the principal speaker at the Decoration day picnic next Monday at Caledonian Grove.

There will be a program of entertainment and music for dancing will be provided by a seven-piece orchestra.

"California Limited" Wrecked.

LOS ANGELES, May 23.—Dispatches to the Santa Fe Railroad Headquarters here state that between twenty-five and thirty persons were injured today when the two sections of the California Limited, the Company's crack flyer, collided four miles west of Flagstaff, Ariz. No deaths were reported.

Policy of Tories Attacked Before Boston Consulate

BOSTON, May 23.—A large crowd participated in the demonstration in front of the British Consulate which was arranged by the local Workers (Communist) Party.

The demonstration was in the form of a protest against the bombardment of Nanking, the general intervention policy in China, and the recent raid on the Arcos offices in London.

Fifteen signs carrying the slogans, "Hands Off China"; "British Empire Plans New World War," etc., were carried by the demonstrators.

TRACTION TRUST HOPES TO MULCT CITY OF $700,000,000 IN LONG CONTRACT

directors, composed largely of men not of individuals who were behind the Interborough Rapid Transit Company when it was later formed.

It would be too long a story to go into the records of graft and corruption, the buying off of city officials and the planting of public funds which accompanied this subsidy. It must suffice to be told here that out of an original investment of approximately $10,000,000, the Interborough Subway Construction Company has over $10,000,000 profit. This profit as well as the exaggerated original investment was turned in as part of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company's investment under Contract No. 1.

Other Contracts Even Worse.

The conditions under which the agreement with the subsidiary company of the B. M. T. were carried out were no less vicious though on a smaller scale. Bad as these conditions were, they are nothing as compared with the circumstances surrounding the execution of the later Contracts Nos. 3 and 4. Under the first two agreements the city sunk some $63,000,000 already referred to. Millions of this amount were plainly plundered through unnecessary and excessive construction and elevation costs. But at least the city has received about 4 per cent return on the investment from which it has been able to meet part of the interest on the bonds floated for the purpose of raising the principle.

In the case of Contracts No. 3 and No. 4, under which the city has invested over $240,000,000, the swindle was so executed that the city has received not a single cent in interest on this enormous investment. In addition it has been forced to meet a yearly deficit now amounting to over $11,000,000 to cover the interest charges on its bonds. The total of these yearly deficits has reached a sum which is rapidly approaching $150,000,000 of dead and irrecoverable loss.

Dual Contracts.

These Contracts No. 3 and No. 4 were likewise executed with the I. R. T. and the B. M. T. They date from March 19, 1913. They came to be known as the Dual Subway Contracts, incorporating and superseding the earlier agreements. The excavation and construction work was again paid for by the city. The companies doing this work were again the same concerns which operated the subways.

Of the $240,000,000 now invested by the city, a vastly greater amount than in the case of the earlier contracts was plundered from the public treasury through the padding of construction accounts, double charges, wholesale corruption and unchecked graft. But this was by far the lesser evil.

The conditions under which the traction companies undertook to operate the completed subways stand out as a monument of disgrace to the people and the public officials who permitted such conditions to be executed.

Lines To Be Built.

Under Contracts No. 3 and No. 4, some 48 miles were added to the I. R. T. lines and about 38 miles were added to the B. M. T. On the I. R. T. there was built the Seventh Ave. extension from Times Square south through the Clark St. tunnel into Brooklyn. The east side line was built beginning from Grand Central north; and the B. M. T. built the main Broadway line through the heart of the city.

The following were the conditions under which the transit companies agreed to operate the enlarged systems:

The first charge out of the earnings of the railways was to go in payment as interest on the original city's investment of about $63,000,000 under Contracts No. 1 and No. 2. This sum, a relatively small amount, has been the only portion which the city has thus far received on its total of over $300,000,000 invested.

The second charge is for interest and sinking fund charges on the watered stock and padded investments of the companies.

Easy Money.

The third charge is in the form of a so-called "preferential" which was a sum arrived at by taking the amount claimed to be the earnings of the companies as an average for the years 1910 and 1911. This preferential of "guaranteed earnings" amounts in the case of the I. R. T. to the sum of $6,335,000 and in the case of the B. M. T. to the sum of $3,500,000 annually! The "preferentials" are profits practically guaranteed by the city treasury.

Only after the above charges which go to the companies are paid, does the city receive any interest on its investments of over $240,000,000. There is another joker in the agreements. In the event that the earnings of the lines do not provide sufficient funds after the interest and sinking fund charges are paid to the companies to cover the "guaranteed preferential" of $6,335,000 and $3,500,000 to the companies yearly, the city becomes indebted to the companies for the deficit and this deficit is cumulative and bears interest compounded semi-annually at 5 per cent.

Have you ever taken a sum of money and figured it at interest compounded semi-annually for a period of years? If not, do now the joke! The loss to the city through this deficit alone estimated at the present rate of accumulation would, if carried out for the period of 49 years, the term of the contract, amount to SEVEN HUNDRED MILLIONS OF DOLLARS!

The city has received not a cent of return on the amount of over $240,000,000 representing the additional investments under Contracts No. 3 and No. 4. To pay the interest on its bonds issued to raise this investment, it has yearly had to put on the city budget a sum now over $11,000,000.

The next article will explain the conditions accompanying the drawing up of these monstrous agreements and expose the grafters and corruptionists responsible for the wholesale steal.

INDEPENDENTS IN EFFORT AT PEACE IN I. L. G. W. UNION

Committee of 50 to Seek Formula for Unity

Plans were laid for a committee of 50 at a meeting last night of the Independent Group of the Cloak and Dressmakers in Cooper Union to bring about peace in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Despite determined efforts to break up the meeting, which jammed the hall, a resolution was passed calling on "both factions involved in this struggle" to declare publicly that they agree for a peace with submission of the question of new leadership to a referendum vote of the membership, conducted by an impartial committee.

The committee of 50 is to "take steps to bring to an end the present struggle" with instructions to get in touch with the Jewish Council of Greater New York to assist in that work. The committee was given full power to work out plans to "establish order" based on a "spirit of unity and solidarity of all members of our organization."

Harry Berlin, a member of Local 10, whom disrupters attempted to shout down, declared the big issue in the union is not Communism. "I am not a Communist," he declared, but if I were, I wouldn't be ashamed to admit it."

Heard Patiently.

A Student, another speaker, called the entire audience and the sponsors of the meeting "Communists" and refused to stop speaking when his time was up. He yelled, "I dare anyone to touch me and make me stop."

The audience would not be provoked but kept on shouting, "Time is up; time is up," until he left the platform.

Another trick that failed to break up the meeting was an attempt to switch off the light. A Sigman henchman was discovered in time.

I. Brouner, chairman of the Shop Chairmen's Council, told the assembled workers that he is a member of the democratic party and a deputy sheriff in Kings County, but because he is opposed to Sigman's policy he is accused of being a Communist.

A. Alvois, Local 10, said that "it is difficult to be neutral after what has taken place in the union."

Brokers Hold Most of Traction Stock

an extent. The reason for this significant fact will be explained later.

The hearings were opened promptly on the appearance of the Transit Commissioners, Chairman John F. Gilchrist, Leon G. Godley and Charles G. Lockwood. Untermyer, special counsel for the commission, who is the main figure in the hearing, began with the reading of a long prepared statement calculated to set at rest anyone who might presume to question the propriety or the intention of the proceedings. The commission would listen to all and view all evidence impartially. The commission is in search of and will appreciate light from every direction.

His statement further laid down a method of procedure for the later hearings which consisted of five main principles:

First, the various interested companies would record themselves as being a part to the hearing.

Second, each witness of these companies to be called would appear as an individual.

Third, the commission counsel would examine witnesses.

Fourth, the company counsel might then question the witness.

Fifth, only one counsel would do the questioning.

Following the reading of this statement by Untermyer, former Governor Nathan I. Miller rose to present the position for the B. M. T. He began by stating that the hearings were "welcome" to his client and that they would "cooperate" in a spirit of the utmost helpfulness" and more to this effect destined for the stuffed ears of the people.

Fight Probe of Control.

Presently he came to the point: The B. M. T. would fight all attempts to investigate the stock transactions of its lines, a matter which they would maintain is not not "pertinent or relevant" to the inquiry.

The B. M. T. which is known definitely to be the controlling company of all the city transit lines, as was predicted in The DAILY WORKER, will seek to prevent all delving into its shady methods.

Following this was a statement by James L. Quackenbush, counsel for the Interborough, who did not deign to present his company's position in the matter but only objected to the waiver of immunity which Untermyer demanded of each witness. This point was left hanging in the air, so to speak, but it appears that witnesses will be under some persuasion to answer though there is nothing now to compel testimony.

Who Owns I. R. T.?

The first witness called was H. M. Fisher, secretary-treasurer of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company. Fisher is a hard boiled chestnut, typical of the Interborough. He had hardly been sworn in before Untermyer began a cross examination intended to reveal the real owners of the Interborough stock.

Fisher has a crying fifteen minutes in seeking to avoid the answer to direct questions. Did Sammy Untermyer, himself quite familiar with the internal affairs of more than a few concerns seasoned to put his hand on the sore spot in every instance.

Then the information came out: The stock of the Interborough is held by about 2,5000 stockholders who own together about 350,000 shares. This seems a pretty widely scattered ownership. But the first few questions on this subject revealed the fact that only about 6,000 shares of the total 350,000 were owned outside of Wall Street. That is, about 98 per cent of the stock and hence of the voting power of the company is in the hands of the brokers in the financial district. The full significance of this revelation will become clear in relation to the second fact disclosed.

Untermyer then devoted himself to establishing the nature of the directorship of the company. In a moment it was revealed that the members of the Board of Directors hold practically no stock in the company. The chairman of the board and the chairman of the controlling executive committee of the board, E. J. Berwind of the Berwind-White coal company owns no stock whatever! Frank Hedley, president and general manager owns but fifty shares. Buckner, another director, owned two! In fact all of the directors between them do not own a hundred shares of the company stock.

This is a strange fact indeed. But the meaning of it soon will become clear. On further questioning it was revealed that the coal bill of the Interborough amounts to some four millions of dollars a year; the insurance bill amounts to a figure in the large hundreds of thousands, perhaps more; the amount could not be extricated from the unwilling lips of Fisher. To the question often repeated as to how he explained the fact that none of the directors owned an interest in the welfare of the company, Fisher had no available answer.

Wall Street Control

The hearings broke off at this point. What do the two sets of facts disclosed mean? The first, that the stock is in the hands of Wall Street brokers is the possession of a voting trust enabling them to manipulate it at will, is proof that stock owners as well as the city and the public at large are being exploited by the huge Plunderbund inaugurated by the traction bandits. The brokers have nothing to lose in the swindle inasmuch as they do not own the stock but have merely secured possession of it for trading purposes and receive their commissions. At the same time the brokers are themselves under the thumb of the Morgan interests which now control the B. M. T.

Plunder Not Service.

The second fact disclosed, that the directors of the I. R. T. do not own any of the stock, convicts them as already stated in the DAILY WORKER of being a mere Plunderbund whose interests are directly opposed to efficient service.

They make their rake off and get their graft through enormous salaries and through the sale of coal, insurance, building supplies, steel, and other materials to themselves at enormously inflated prices.

They are limited in this graft only by the necessity of paying interest on the bonds of the company, a matter not difficult when it is, remembered that the city pays a yearly deficit of over $11,000,000 towards the upkeep of the subways.

The facts at the basis of the Plunderbund are explained in another column of The DAILY WORKER.

Building Bosses Lose Fight on Wage Rise

into submission had brought this result:

1.—The Brooklyn plumbers are still out to a man, and no serious effort is being made to fill their places.

2.—The lockout against the Bronx and Manhattan plumbers, engineered by this association, has collapsed.

3.—The lockout against the Queens and Richmond plumbers is being continued.

Local 1 Proves Correctness.

Thus the militancy and grit sense of Plumbers' Local 1 last week in refusing to arbitrate the five day week and the $14 scale demanded in a strike lasting since April 1 is borne out by the official commentators on the industry itself. Shortly after Local 1 had voted down overwhelmingly the International officers' demands that they return to work pending the arbitration proceedings, the Employers' Association called off the Bronx-Manhattan lockout, using as an excuse a week old injunction. At the same time the International officials hied themselves back to Chicago.

Building trades workers in Cooperative Hall, 347 East 72nd St. last night reflected the optimistic turn of events in a demand that the international union enter negotiations with the Plumbers Halpers' Association, looking toward their admission into the union with regular standing. The building workers also commended Local 1 and called for renewed support of the strike in Brooklyn and the locked out men in Queens and Staten Island.

proves the truth of Tan's report. Tan's report was received the day that British news agencies, and American correspondents under British influence, were wiring home stories about the fall of Shanghai; advices from that city indicate.

Feng Co-operates.

Co-operating with General Tan is General Feng Yu-hsiang, so-called "Christian General", who has allied himself with the Hankow Nationalist government. Feng has driven Wu Pei-fu, central Chinese war lord, back to Chengchow, where Feng is following him.

Americans Bombard Tawns.

SHANGHAI, May 23.—The United States destroyer Preble, when hit by stray machine gun fire, bombarded forts and villages on the south bank of the Yangtze with her main guns. Considerable damage was inflicted by the bombardment, it is believed.

* * *

Britain Withdraws Consul.

HANKOW, May 23.—Great Britain has withdrawn her consul from Chinkiang. All of the archives of the consulate have been removed, it is reported.

The withdrawal of the Chinkiang consul coming on the heels of the recall of the British representative at Hankow marks a new offensive of imperialist Britain against the Nationalist government here.

That Britain may attempt to forcibly regain the Hankow concession which she lost in a treaty signed early this year is not unlikely. Observers here regard the withdrawal of Great Britain's diplomatic representatives from cities in the control of the Nationalists is regarded as a prelude to open war against the Hankow government.

Chang Totters.

PEKING, May 23.—Chang Tso-lin's position is becoming more and more precarious.

Menaced by the rapidly advancing troops of the Hankow Nationalists, having lost (apparently) the support of Japan and facing the solid opposition of workers, peasants, merchants and students at home his fall appears to be near at hand.

The north is honeycombed with Nationalism and should General Feng come within striking distance of Peking, which appears likely, revolts in Peking and Tientsin would probably occur.

NEWS PRINTERS BACK MILLIKEN IN BIG SIX FIGHT

Wahneta and Near-Wahs Slated for Defeat

Progressive printers were winding up their strenuous campaign today in behalf of D'Arcy (Doc) Milliken for president of Typographical Union, Local 6 (Big Six) against the reactionary incumbent, Leon H. Rouse.

Rouse's main achievement for the newspaper publishers was to kill the six-hour day back in 1924 at a time when Big Six almost had the great victory in their hands. A third candidate is William M. A. Powers, a reactionary who has the support of the reactionary Wahneta group.

The Wahneta or "administration" gang for years ran the international union and through a conspiracy with foremen of newspapers and job offices tried to starve out of the industry the militant members who refused to subscribe to Wahneta policies. The Wahnetas were in charge of the union, under the leadership of Marsden Scott when the 44-hour strike was lost in many of the job shops, costing the union $10,000,000 and a heavy loss in membership.

The Wahnetas in the present campaign have stooped to the lowest forms of co-operation with the boss. With boldface talk of "blood-dripping flags of anarchy," they have tried to besmirch one of the union's outstanding leaders, "Doc" Milliken.

The line-up in the present election is Milliken, the progressive party candidate against Rouse, the turn coat who has held office for 12 years while playing to the Progressives and Wahnetas and serving the employers, and Powers, the out-and-out Wah candidate.

This is the first time in Rouse' career as president that the Wahs have failed to support him. But there is only a slight difference between him and Powers. Even the stupid Wah gang realizes that he is discredited among the membership and so have pushed Powers out. Powers is ignorant of the labor movement.

The election takes place Wednesday.

Professional Patriots

This is the second installment of "Professional Patriots," edited by Norman Hapgood from material assembled by Sidney Howard and John Hearley.

The present attack on this paper gives added interest to the sensational facts about the various crusade of zealous "patriots" who are out to crush all groups fighting the forces of reaction in the United States.

A group of military officers and organizations have been active in attacking pacifists and the opponents of compulsory military training in colleges and schools—usually on the familiar thesis that pacifism is aimed at destroying American defenses against Bolshevism. The military organizations most active are the Reserve Officers' Association, the Military Order of the World War—both national in scope—and one local association in Chicago, the Military Intelligence Association of the Sixth Corps Area.

This covers the newer type of organizations and individuals engaged in professional patriotism. Of the older types active now and then in the new crusade, or organizations devoted to other purposes which have taken to the cry, are nationally conspicuous—the American Legion and the Ku Klux Klan. Various employers' associations, notably the National Association of Manufacturers, the National Clay Products Industries Association Inc., the National Founders Association, the National Metal Trades Association, and various state and local "associated industries," have been active occasionally when aroused by some such revolutionary proposal as the child labor amendment. The Sons of the American Revolution, the Daughters of 1812, and the Daughters of the American Revolution have also been sporadically active when stimulated by the Military Order of the World War or some more hysterical post of the American Legion.

Propaganda Against Radicalism and Pacifism.

The most conspicuous activity of all the professional patriotic societies is their propaganda against what they conceive to be revolutionary movements. Their conception is vague and inclusive, ranging from the Communist Party to the child labor amendment and proposals for municipal ownership of public utilities. Pacifism comes under the ban on the theory that any movement against war is intended to disarm the United States and so open the country to capture by Russia.

The conceptions of radicalism vary with the societies. The center of attack is of course the communist movement and all friends of Soviet Russia. But from that center have radiated c...acks at socialists, the LaFollette progressive movement, the church peace organizations, liberal magazines and reform agencies, and particularly on proposals calculated to affect private business,—notably the child labor amendment and protective laws for women.

Here are some characteristic utterances and statements. Ralph M. Easley, chairman of the National Civic Federation, writing to Allen Wardwell, chairman of the executive committee of the Russian Famine Fund in 1922, on which served such citizens as Governor Alfred Smith, Cornelius Bliss, Jr., William Fellows Morgan, Charles W. Eliot and Cyrus H. McCormick, delivered himself thus:

"If the people who are contributing to the Russian Famine Fund understood that their money was going to be used by Lenin and Trotsky, contributions would soon cease." He added that he had "turned the matter over to the Department of Justice."

When Mr. Easley was interviewed by Miss Mary Lena Wilson concerning his attacks on the American Committee for the Relief of Russian Children, he indulged in characteristic language, referring to Captain Paxton Hibben, its secretary, as "a rascal and scoundrel," to the Reverend John Haynes Holmes as "wild and crazy," to the Reverend Henry Sloane Coffin as a "red" because he "founded that Labor Temple down there," and to Raymond B. Fosdick as "a wild red."

Easley Scared to Death.

Some of Mr. Easley's other characterizations are interesting: the former Mrs. Willard Straight he referred to as "the most dangerous woman in America"; the Amalgamated Clothing Workers as "the Balkans of America, no revolutionary act anything in Europe"; eighty-year-old Mrs. Henry Villard as "a most notorious pro-German and leader of the non-resistance forces in this country at a time when they played into Germany's hands."

He is quoted as saying: "I would drive every damned Quaker out of America," and "There are plenty of damned liberals in this country who are just as ready to believe Will Irwin and they are to believe the Government." Mr. Irwin had written up Mr. Easley in a magazine article entitled "This Man Worries Too Much."

Among the persons and movements publicly attacked by Mr. Easley are: Father John A. Ryan of the National Catholic Welfare Conference; the Reverend Iddings Bell, president of St. Stephens College;; Bishop Charles H. Brent of Buffalo, former chaplain of the American Expeditionary Forces; H. G. Wells for radicallsm in his "Outline of History"—"willful misinterpretation of the teachings of Jesus," and the "unpatriotic Tolstoian psychology (sic) of non-resistance."

Radicals in A. F. of L.

Mr. Easley's attitude toward the radicals in the labor movement, for which he was deeply concerned in his effort to hold the American Federation of Labor in leash through the Civic Federation's union of employer and trade-unionist, was voiced thus:

"Organized labor has in its own ranks some of the disloyal elements (referred to elsewhere in the article as 'socialists, I.W.W., and their "high-brow" echoers —Ed.), the pro-German Germans and the anti-English Irish who will play the Potsdam game at every possible opportunity; but disturbances will be reduced to a minimum because there are now plenty of laws and machinery for seeking out these treasonable persons and handing them over to the firing squad."

"To talk about education on Americanization as a method of dealing with such people is a waste of time, effort, and money. Only the fear of the law, backed up by the police, the militia, the Army and Navy if necessary, has any terrors for such terrorists."

So much for Mr. Easley, the most picturesque in speech of all the militant patriots.

The Better America Federation of Los Angeles also speaks up colorfully. In a booklet picturing on its cover a college Bolshevik peeping from a rosebud, the Federation's former secretary says:

"The bomb-throwing, bullet-shooting anarchist does not worry me very much. It is the subtle, highly intellectual pink variety that is boring into the very heart of America. Such tragedies as the explosion in Wall Street on last September 16th are horrible—monstrous, but they will never halt our progress as a people. America will carry on, despite Czolgosz, Tom Mooney, the MacNamaras, and their tribe. But when I find a slow poison being secretly injected into our body politic through the class rooms, I do worry—and so should you."

In one of the Federation's weekly letters to its members its officers say:

"We are urged to pursue vigorously our Americanization program to hold ourselves in readiness to fight in the breach all forms of radicalism, communism, and radical socialism. A great many of our members write that radicalism has obtained a too-hold among teachers in public schools."

Report of John Brophy

To District No. 2, United Mine Workers of America.

The present question is not one of a 30 per cent wage reduction with more work and prosperity on one hand and the present wages and little or no work, on the other, as the operators are presenting it.

Let us analyze the problem:

First, we must take into consideration the fact that the nation requires a certain amount of coal. When it has secured enough to meet all requirements it ceases to purchase. We are now consuming sufficient coal for all those requirements, yet unemployment is widespread. If the miners accept a reduction, it would obviously not create additional requirements. How then would such a reduction provide more work and more prosperity, when living costs for the miner are higher, if anything, rather than lower?

The results of a 30 per sent réduction would mean:

30 per cent less money for miners.
30 per sent less of miners' money for merchants.
30 per lent less of miners' money for merchants.

We must also consider the effect a wage reduction in Central Pennsylvania would have on the mining industry in the country as a whole. We must remember that West Virginia and the various non-union fields are not the only bitnminous coal producing districts. Were the miners here to accept a wage reduction, the Western Pennsylvania operators, the Ohio operators, the Indiana, Illinois and all the operators who are parties to the Jacksonville agreement would demand, and most justly so, the same concessions. The non-union fields would immediately follow suit and any slight advantage that might be gained by making the first cut here would in the course of a week or two, be wiped out and the same relative position would maintain between districts. The only result would be less money for the miners and consequently less for the merchants and the community at large.

The miners of District 2 are fully aware of the futility of the "wage reduction remedy." This is evidenced by the fact that in spite of months of unemployment and of privations and sufferings, there is not a single local union in the entire district that has suggested the acceptance of a wage reduction. On the contrary, many of them are urging that we stand firmly for the present agreement.

This is the position of the International Officers and the District Officers, but more than that, it is the position of the union miners of the country for whom we are but the spokesmen.

The present agreement is for a period of three years ending March 31st, 1928. That agreement was entered into after a joint conference at which all these various matters were carefully considered. Therefore, we see no advantage in having a joint conference now to discuss questions which are closed for a three year period.

We think the bituminous coal industry is in a chaotic condition and no stability will come to it until some form of regulation controls it. If the operators are not able to do so, then these people whose interests are dependant on the coal business, should appeal to Congress for the necessary regulatory laws that will make the coal industry stable and serviceable.

Yours truly,
John Brophy
President of District No. 2

Contract Repudiation.

In the early part of 1925 the Rochester & Pittsburgh Coal & Iron Co., began repudiation of contracts through a leasing system with their Adrian operation in Jefferson county following with Lucerne Mines in Indiana county and various other operations until they had a considerable number running on the 1917 scale. These included other subsidiaries of the B. R. & P. R. R. as well.

Other concerns followed the lead of the B. R. & P. Coal companies and repudiated their contracts with the union, either openly or through a leasing system, such as the R. & S., Allegheny River Mining Co., Hussey Coal Co., Middle Pennsylvania Corporation, Moshannon Coal Co., Morrisdale Coal Co., and numerous smaller concerns.

We protested vigorously against this contract jumping at various times. Following is one of the letters of protest to the Operators' Association.

To Clark
February 9, 1925.

Mr. B. M. Clark, President
Assn. of Bituminous Coal Operators fo Central Pa.
Dear Sir:

We are in receipt of a communication from your Association stating that the Rochester & Pittsburgh Coal & Iron Co. has resigned its membership in the Association. This announcement comes almost simultaneously with newspaper statements that that company has leased its Adrian Mine to the Jefferson & Indiana Coal Company ,whieb concern will proceed to operate.

Ever since tbs present scala agreement was signed last year the officers of your Association have conducted a campaign of propaganda to undermine that agreemant to which you were a signatory in your capacity as president of your organization. The propaganda took various forms, some more or less open, much of it under cover. Inspired news items purporting to show that the present wage agreement was responsible for slack work appeared almost daily in the public press; miners were approached by various mine managements with the specious argument that less pay would mean more work, and were urged to accept a wage reduction; men were intimidated by threats of eviction from their homes; so-called "citizens" groups were encouraged to form in order to crystallize public opinion in favor of wage revisions.

These and many more insidious means were employed or encouraged by your Association officers in an effort to set aside the wage provision of the Scale Agreement.

As President of the Rochester & Pittsburgh Coal & Iron company and associated coal companies you have served notices to families to vacate, or threatened to evict many in an effort to break their morale who have lived in your company houses in some cases for thirty years. The rentals you have received from these families have paid for those houses over and over again, and the labor of their men in your mines has made possible the payment of huge dividends to your stockholders—for example 100 per cent in January of 1923, or in the case of the Jefferson & Clearfield Coal & Iron Company, 150 per cent in January of the same year.

The whole economic struggle of our present day depends on confidence and the faithful carrying out of the pledged word. Credit—confidence in people to pay made possible our business life today. The trade agreement has been instrumental in bringing some stability into the relations between the employer and employee. Everywhere these contracts and agreements underlying all our social life. When confidence in the pledged word fails the social structure is endangered.

Your action as President of the Rochester & Pittsburgh Coal & Iron Company in leasing your Adrian Mine to a new corporation which intends to attempt operating on the 1917 scale is mere subterfuge, and is palpably meant to circumvent the contract. It constitutes therefore, in our opinion, a repudiation of your contract obligations, and an attack upon the United Mine Workers.

So far as we know, the action of that company of which you are president, has not been condemned by the Operators' Association, of which you are also president. It is indeed an anomaly and queer ethics, when the president of a company which repudiates contracts is also the president of an association, one of the objects of which is to aid in enforcing contracts.

The United Mine Workers condemn these actions on the part of officers of the Operators' Association, and especially that of the Rochester Coal & Iron Company, in connection with Adrian mine, and intends to use every proper means in its power to maintain its contract rights.

Yours truly,
John Brophy, President
District No. 2, U. M. W. of A.

WHEN WHITE, YELLOW AND BLACK TURN RED

Paled by hardships
Under the whip of exploitation,
The white race now blushes
At its servitude.
And a red glare
Spreads over the eastern horizon.

The peoples
Stretching over the vastness
Along the Yangtze,
Are hailing the overthrow of submission
And are assuming
The normal yellow of their birth,
Mingled with the red clearness
Of a new life.

Dark colonial slaves
Writhing under imperialist domination,
Will join hands with their brothers
Negro wage slaves,
And discard the fear of the underdog,
To take their place
In a world gone red.

And when—
The red blood of awakening has permeated
Through white, yellow and black—
A red, red world
Will greet a unified humanity.

MAY DAY IN THE SOVIET UNION

Ivanovo-Voznesensk (Textile centre). The foundation stone was laid of a new spinning mill which is to have 120,000 spindles.

The mill is being built on the banks of the River Talka, where the workers in the Ivanovo-Voznesensk usually celebrated the 1st of May in pre-revolntionary days, when they had to conceal themselves from the persecution of the police.

Leningrad. The "Red Putilox" works put out the first locomotive of the "M" series, which is the most powerful locomotive in Europe. Such locomotives have hitherto been built only in the United States.

The Karl Marx works in Leningrad produced the first wool combing machine to be produced in the U.S.S.R. Hitherto these machines have been imported from abroad.

In Nicolaiev (on Ukrainian coast): The Russud shipbuilding yard completed repairs and started work. This yard has been idle for the last 8 years. The yard will be engaged in building merchant vessels.

In Moscow. In the outskirts of Moscow the first asbestos works in the U.S.S.R. was started. Up till now asbestos goods were imported from abroad in spite of the fact that there are the richest deposits of asbestos in the world in the U.S.S.R.

In Kanavins (Nijhagorod province). The first cooperative large scale kitchen in the province was opened, capable of providing 12,000 dinners per day. The meals will be distributed in special thermos utensils to the factories scattered throughout the Kanavin district.

Sports in Soviet Russia.

According to the incomplete returns for 1926, there are over 4,000,000 workers men and women, engaged in physical culture in the U.S.S.R. In many provinces, a spontaneous growth of sports organizations is observed. For example, in one province the number of persons engaged in physical culture in the Vladimir Province increased by 226 per cent and in the Pskov Province by 258 per cent.

Everywhere considerable work of construction of stadiums, sport grounds, swimming stations, rifle ranges, etc., is going on. In Leningrad the great Lenin Stadium has been completed. In Moscow the Moscow Trades Council Stadium and the stadium of the Food Workers' Union, the largest of their kind in the country have been completed. At the present time the Dinamo Stadium is in the process of completion and will be the largest in the U.S.S.R.

In order to indicate the extent to which sport will develop during the coming summer, it is sufficient to point out that the Textile Workers' Union alone will spend no less than 100,000 roubles on physical culture.

One hundred and fourteen teams have entered for the Moscow football championship this year. No less than 300 referees will be required for these matches.

International Matches in 1927.

During recent years, Soviet sportsmen took part in 63 matches and contests abroad. This year matches and contests with working class sport organizations abroad will be arranged on a much larger scale.

The RSFSR football team which has acquired considerable popularity abroad will this year visit Germany, France, Belgium, Finland, Turkey and Latvia and possibly also Sweden. Light athletic teams have been invited to visit Latvia, Germany and France. Boxers have been invited to visit Braunschweig, swimmers to France and Belgium; boat teams to Germany, and shooting teams to Austria and Turkey. In addition to this a large excursion of 100 participants will visit Finland during the labor sports festival.

In June Yaroslav, Moscow, and Razan will contest teams in light athletic contests from the Working Class Sports Federation of France. In June, July and August, matches with football teams from Hungary, Austria and Turkey will be played in both Leningrad and Moscow. The visit of a Swedish football team is expected in September. In July, German cyclists are expected to visit Moscow, Tula, Bogorodsk and Leningrad. Moreover, representatives of working class organizations, from Finland, Latvia, Germany, France, Norway, Czecho-Slovakia, Austria and Switzerland are due to arrive to take part in the All-Union sports festival.

NOW IT CAN BE TOLD

WALL STREET AND THE FASCIST DICTATORSHIP

A Diplomat Looks at Europe, by Richard Washburn Child. Duffield & Co. $4.

A steady campaign to whitewash the Black Shirts is being carried on in the United States. The capitalist press—that staunch defender of democracy—has deluged the country with articles and feature stories about the greatness of Mussolini. He has been compared to Caesar and Bonaparte. I have not seen the religious journals, but very likely they compare him to Christ.

The Duce's pouts and poses are as familiar to every American as Babe Ruth's batting average. He has been hailed as the restorer of his country, a great statesman, an administrative genius. Above all he is the "founder" of a creed that will "save" the world from the "scourge" of Communism. Among his devoted "disciples" are Judge Gary and Otto Kahn, honorary members of the Fascist gang of Italy. Liberals like Horace Kallen and renegade Socialists like John Spargo have fallen all over themselves in their mad scramble to get their tongues near Mussolini's boot.

But here is the pioneer of them all. Richard Washburn Child, former American ambassador to Italy, can claim the honor of having "discovered" the fascist savior. Mr. Child was more than a pioneer; he was a scout and an impresario. He admits that he looked for a man like Mussolini, and when he found him, he did his best to recommend him to the State Department at Washington.

This book, written by a professional literateur in the best Saturday Evening Post style, is full of curious and occasionally important revelations. One of the most important of these is that the American ambassador (hence the State Department, and American High Finance) was aware that the Fascist coup was coming and favored it profoundly. In view of the financial and political support which American capital has since given to the Fascist regime, and of the oceans of pro-Fascist propaganda which have flooded this country, it is useful to hear the ex-Ambassador on the subject of dictatorship.

"In April 1922," Mr. Child confesses, "I sent word to Washington that I was certain that something would happen in Italy. I believed that there would be nothing which could prevent a dictatorship. I said so."

One of Mr. Child's reasons for saying so is that he knew Italy's future lay in water-power and "man-power" industries, which take raw materials and primary manufactures from other countries and convert them into goods for sale. Another was that workers were writing on the church walls of Italy: "Viva Lenin!"

Mr. Child says he had never seen Mussolini when he wrote to Washington, but having prophesied a dictatorship, he thought it his duty "to follow it up and find the man, whoever he might be." The important thing was the dictatorship. Mussolini came to see Mr. Child on invitation and asked him:

"What do you want to know?"

Mr. Child wanted to know his program; he wanted to know whether Mussolini was the man that he (i. e., American High Finance) was seeking. When Mussolini left the American ambassador, there was—Mr. Child phrases it neatly—"the beginning of an understanding between us." The two kept in constant touch, and Mr. Child kept the State Department informed. He wrote reports "on the new organization of the Fascisti forces." He found them heroic and noble. He dismisses the Fascist campaign of brutality against labor organizations and revolutionists lightly. The castor-oil story, he thinks, is "amusing, but it has been exaggerated."

Finally the "great day" came. Mussolini, the man whom Italian and American High Finance were looking for, marched on Rome. By pure accident, one might say, Mr. J. P. Morgan, a well-known New York banker, was present in Rome. He had come to Italy to see "ruins"; he had plenty of ruins to see, for the Fascists smashed the headquarters of trade unions and radical newspapers. Later he showed some interest in Fascist finance.

The rest of Mr. Child's chapters on Mussolini praise the dictator as fulsomely as Spargo. He compares him to Roosevelt, than which there is, one assumes, no greater praise. He approves heartily of Fascism's aims and methods. And he expressed this approval in public speeches and in code telegrams to Washington. Mr. Child was in this case the voice of Wall Street.

Earlier in these memoirs Mr. Child describes how he told the Genoa conference that the United States government "will not tolerate any agreements with Russia, separate or joint, which impair the rights of the Open Door or the property rights we claim in Russia."

Thus we spake the messenger boy of Washington and Wall Street, which aid and abet dictatorships, provided they are capitalist, and not workers' dictatorships.

THE COW IN THE VILLAGE.

The New Cow, a monthly periodical. Vol. I, No. 1. Greenwich Village, New York. $.25.

Dear Boys:—You are determined to be gay and impudent and to thumb your nose at the conventional bourgeois world. You are determined to keep pulling the reader's whiskers to prevent him from falling asleep. And you are probably also determined to laugh long and loud at any suggestion that there is such a thing as the class struggle, or if there is, that it matters very much. And being the disenchanted victims of a society that regards the artist with contempt and measures his worth in terms of money and popular success, you show your counter-contempt for such a society by whimsical rebellions, picturesque slappings and enormous pin pricks.

Being a Villager in my own right (11 Greenwich Avenue, ring bell three times), I speak without condescension. Your magazine is blithe and interesting, but it is very small potatoes. It is Hubert's Cafeteria, Troubador Tavern and the other Villager haunts done to death. Your satire has no bite, your irony dribbles in vacuo, your emotions are stuffed with straw. All your writing and posturing and shooting off your mouths interminably is based upon the assumption that nothing is important except "Art"—and even the importance of "Art" is illusory. The proper attitude is an elaborate pointlessness. Well, maybe you're right. Your own work proves your case admirably. Already it is a legend, it has ceased to be.

You are intellectuals, you say, artists. You have nothing to do with the mob, with the workers. They don't understand you. No wonder. Even intellectuals and artists may be expected to be human beings. And to be a human being is to have a relationship with all other human beings, to participate in a society, in its changes, its sufferings, its cries of anger and hope.

But maybe I'm getting too serious?

What would I have you do? Nothing. The workers of the world—they who do not understand you—will do your work for you. And when that work is done, you too will have ceased to exist.

* * *

Yours, with best wishes and hoping that The New Cow doesn't croak too soon,

—A. B. MAGIL.

THEY KNOW

Labor's hands built those courts, those dark, frowning walls,
And labor's hands can tear them down again.
O my brothers in the shadow, do you hear?
Let him speak words of death, for death is in the air.
Speak words of doom, O vulture cowering in terror,
For the world is an ear, a vast ear which hearkens to all you say,
A vast eye that observes all you do.
O never-to-be-alone, where is the chamber to hide your shameful nakedness from the sight of the all-seeing eyes of the world?
Where is the door which you can shut, lock, bolt, bar, and say:
I in here, they out there?
Fool! From henceforth the world is at your bedside when you sleep, or when you try to sleep.
From henceforth, this day, and all the days to be.
And the ones who have heard you speak are smiling.
Even the they go down to death, they are smiling.
For they know—do you hear?—they know
That labor's hands built those courts, those dark frowning walls,
And labor's hands can tear them down again.

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE capitalist correspondents in China have been giving the impression recently that the Hankow government was on the point of collapse. We warned our readers not to take these dispatches without a liberal pinch of salt. It is to the interest of the imperialist powers to create the impression thruout the world that the Hankow government, which represents the interests of the Chinese workers and peasants is weakened to the point of futility. Such is not the case.

YESTERDAY'S dispatches indicate that the revolutionary nationalist forces have made important advances. The efforts of the capitalist correspondents to ally General Feng with Chiang-Kai-Shek have not survived. Feng is with Hankow. And Hankow has the same revolutionary connotation that Canton had until the northern advance and the defection of Chiang-Kai-Shek.

FOR the benefit of those who came to the conclusion that the treachery of Chiang-Kai-Shek meant a fundamental change in the composition of the nationalist forces fighting the foreign imperialists and the native militarists, I would draw attention to the manifesto issued by the Koumintang with headquarters at Hankow declaring that the merchants, manufacturers, peasants and workers are important factors in the Nationalist revolution. The capitalist correspondents want to create the impression that Hankow is trying to conciliate business. As a matter of fact the manifesto does not indicate any important change in the strategy of the general staff of the Chinese revolution.

SOME people came to the conclusion that when the Chinese Communists raised the slogan of the expulsion of the right wing of the Koumintang that this meant the narrowing of the base of the nationalist revolution to the workers and peasants exclusively. Nothing of the kind. The trade union movement in China is young and inexperienced. The organization of the peasants is still in its infancy. The revolutionary middle classes still play an important role in the liberation movement. But the workers and peasants thru the Communist Party of China will redouble their efforts to secure the leadership of the nationalist revolution and change its character, in so far as conditions permit into a social revolution. We are glad to be able to report, from reading between the lines of the dispatches that the Chinese revolution is in a healthy condition.

• • •

IN all probability Great Britain will break off diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union. This act will be regretted by big industrial financial interests in Great Britain. The economic groups behind Winston Churchill and the extreme conservative wing of the cabinet want a break. They also want to establish a fascist government in Britain as soon as possible. It seems to me that this—tha threatening break—is a stupid move on the part of the British government at this time. But beggars cannot be choosers, as the old saying has it. And while Britain is not yet reduced to beggary, he condition is far from an envious one.

IT is reported from London, or rather predicted that Italy will follow the British lead in case of a break with Russia. Chamberlain sounded out Briand of France when he was in London a few days ago but the French foreign secretary was evasive. Germany has turned a deaf ear to the British suggestion and the United States, not having recognized the government of the Soviet Union, seems bent on gaining as much commercial advantage as possible from the strained relations between the two powers.

• • •

THE Colombian delegate to the international economic conference in Geneva created quite a scene at that august gathering when he stated that Columbia would prefar the investment of European capital in that country to Wall Street capital because of the tendency of the United States government to interfere in the internal affairs of Latin-American republics. And the headline artist who fixed up the story for the New York Evening Post concluded that European capital was "foreign" in Colombia!

"Flood rehabilitation is good business; we'll put Hoover in charge."

COOLIDGE MAKES HOOVER MASTER OF FLOOD FUNDS

Immediately Whips All State Groups Into Line

BATON ROUGE, May 23.—Tightening the grip of the banking interests on the already mortgaged farmers of the flooded districts in the South, and assuring a monopoly of the profitable business of "rehabilitation" for the inner ring of money bankers, Herbert Hoover has been today appointed by President Coolidge to be general supervisor and head of the $400,000,000 "reconstruction program".

Lining Up Business.

At one time it seemed that state governments, more under the control of the suffering farmers, were about to cut under the federal government's terms, and perhaps even give away some money to the flood victims. Hoover's appointment will effectively stop this stampede in the direction of mercy, and stiffen the resistance of local business men to the clamors of the 750,000 country people driven from their homes, thru the government's criminal negligence to properly control the river, as great rivers abroad are controlled.

Hoover Cracks Whip.

Returning to Baton Rouge today after a three day swing around the three hundred mile flood rimmed circle of Central Louisiana, Secretary Hoover devoted himself immediately to the rehabilitation work he was forced to drop ten days ago when the crumbling west bank Mississippi levees unleashed the river over more than one-fifth of Louisiana's 40,000 square miles.

After a conference here with Governor O. H. Simpson's State Reconstruction Committee, Secretary Hoover arranged to leave late this afternoon by special train for Vicksburg, where he will meet the Mississipi State Committee. On Tuesday he will go to Memphis, Wednesday to Little Rock, Thursday to Alexandria, and Friday to New Orleans. This programm will bring him to the southern end of Lonisiana according to latest meteorological calculations, about the time the main body of the Atchafalaya Basin flood passes over the last stretch of inhabited territory in its path to the Gulf of Mexico.

Two-Thirds in Camps.

A recapitulation today of relief work since mid-April places at 500,000 the number of refugees cared for in 64 concentration camps. From this figure, officials estimate that almost 750,000 persons were driven from their homes during the six weeks creep of the flood waters through the 700 miles of valley from Southern Illinois. About one-third, it is estimated found refugee with relatives or friends in dry sections. Property losses, including estimates for the last fifty mile stretch of Central Louisiana still to go under, are estimated at $400,000,000. The death toll stands today between 300 and 350.

Massachusetts Unions Fight Power Combine

BOSTON, May 23.—Massachusetts locals of the steam and operating engineers and stationary firemen will form a joint association to curb discrimination in rates charged by the big power companies. The unions claim large consumers are given power at ridiculously low rates for which small consumers have to pay.

More Police Officials Implicated In Canton, Ohio, Editor's Murder

CANTON, O., May 23.—The Stark County grand jury today was to weigh the worth of a story given last week by Floyd Streitenberger. Canton city detective, convicted of complicity in the Don Mellett slaying here last July which implicates in the crime two men, both officers of high rank on the Canton police force at the time of the murder. Streitenberger and his wife, Kate, were scheduled to appear before the grand jury.

The entire case of the murder of Mellett, a newspaper editor who gaged at the time in exposing sordid graft, is reeking with evidence which shows a connection between the Canton police force and the vice, rum and drug rings.

Olds, Who Lied to Press, First Aid To 'Nervous Nell'

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Robert E. Olds, former law partner of Secretary Kellogg and for the past 19 months assistant secretary of state, will replace Joseph E. Grew as undersecretary of state. The new job will make Olds acting secretary when Kellogg is away from Washington. Hitherto he has been legal adviser to Kellogg, and has displayed his diplomatic prowess only behind closed doors.

Misinformed Press

Olds' name came into nationwide notoriety last November, when it was disclosed that he had called into his office for a confidential talk the State Department correspondents for the three chief telegraphic news services, and had tried to induce them to publish, on their own authority, an attack on the Mexican government. His attack consisted in assurance that he had information proving that Mexico was seeking to establish a "Bolshevist hegemony" between the Rio Grande and the Canal Zone. When later called upon by the Senate foreign relations committee to make good this charge—which the Associated Press duly sent out to the country at the time—Olds and Kellogg were unable to produce any proof.

There are indications that progressives in the Senate will object to confirmation of the Olds appointment, when it comes to that body in December. They consider him a joke.

Chief of Black Shirts In Campaign to Stamp Out Masonry of Italy

WASHINGTON, May 23 (FP). — How Mussolini has stamped out Masonry in Italy is described in a letter from a 33d degree Mason to the Scottish Rite News Bureau, published here. The writer of the letter remains in Italy, and secretly smuggles news across the border.

His reports that the Scottish Rite headquarters in Piazza del Gesu, Rome, were closed last November, when the fascisti confiscated the furniture of the temples and the secretary's office. Soverign Grand Commander Palermi returned to his home in Sicily, since which time nothing has been heard of him. Only a few hundreds of the membership are left, out of thousands, since Mussolini dissolved the order by decree.

WORKERS PARTY WARNS AGAINST NEW WORLD WAR

Scores Arcos Raids and Imperialism in China

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Pointing to the studied attempts on the part of the imperialist powers to goad the Soviet Union into war, the Central Executive Committee of the Workers' (Communist) Party has issued a manifesto calling upon the workers of the United States to protest against imperialist activities that will inevitably plunge the world into a new war.

The full text of the manifesto follows:

Little more than eight years have passed since the "war to end war" was terminated. But today we find ourselves again in immediate danger of a new world war.

The raid of the British government on the Arcos is an act of provocation thru which the imperialists of Great Britain hope to provoke the peaceful workers' republic of Russia, and expect to push other imperialist governments into an immediately active united front against the Soviet Union.

The last world war was a battle for supremacy between two groups of imperialist powers. The victims of this battle were the workers. Those who escaped slaughter and maiming on the battlefields are being squeezed dry of their very life in a mad race for more efficient profit-making, instituted by post-war capitalism. But even during the war it became clear to millions of workers that in spite of high-sounding phrases about lofty war aims, they were the only ones selected as its victims. Resistance to the war therefore developed among the working masses. This resistance cuimnated in the victorious overthrow of Czarism and capitalism in Russia by the Russian workers. But in other capitalist countries, too, there developed the danger for the imperialists that the war would be turned into a war of the working masses against imperialism. This danger was the pri-

California Judge Gives Sacco-Vanzetti Friends 50-Day Suspended Term

By L. P. RINDAL.

(Worker Correspondent).

LOS ANGELES, Calif., May 23.—Twenty-eights workers, arrested for "unlawful" parading and the display of Sacco-Vanzetti banners at the International Labor Day demonstration, May 1st, were all handed out a suspended sentence of $50 fine or 50 days in jail by Judge Richardson on May 18th. Joseph Siminoff, jailed a few days later for the crime of using the public streets for a spirited speech on the Labor Party, was honored with the same sentence as the rest—only with the exception that his probation was fixed at two years.

Neutral Arbitrator Hot for Wage Cuts

HAVERHILL, Mass., May 23. — The "neutral" arbitrator in the local shoe industry wants lower wages and a "more flexible" agreement between the union and the bosses. Declaring the union "must bend or break," he declares the industry faces a diminishing rate of return in the next few years.

Appeal From Australian Organized Labor Ignored By Officials of A. F. of L.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—(FP). —Australian organized labor will have to settle its own quarrels at home, is the substance of a decision voted by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor on an appeal sent to it from the Melbourne Trades Hall Council, against official recognition in the United States of the labor mission of the Australian government's industrial mission now in the United States.

E. C. Grayndler, secretary of the Australian Workers' Union, is a member of this government commission, appointed by the conservative Premier Bruce. Secretary Holloway of the Melbourne council protested that the labor movement was ignored in the selection of labor members of the commission. He asked that they be not recognized. His appeal was submitted to the A. F. of L. in writing. Graynder appeared in person and, according to the statement given by President Green of the A. F. of L., he submitted "much interesting information concerning labor and the industrial situation in Australia, as well as the work and experiences of the Australian commission in the United States since it arrived about two months ago."

The executive council voted to recognize the commission and extend to them every possible courtesy.

HANKOW, May 23.—The Nationalist troops pushing thru Honan are sweeping aside the Northern troops who stand between them and Peking, according to a report received here by the military council from General Tan Seng-chi, who is commanding the drive. The report states that the Nationalists have taken Siping and Shangtsai and the area along the Hungho River are rapidly marching on Kaifing and Chengchow, strategic centers in the northern drive.

The text of General Tan's report as given out by the military council follows:

"Our forces on May 14 opened an attack on the enemy at Shangtsai, Siping and Heshucheng. After a fierce three-day battle we captured Sangtsai and Siping and the area along the Hungho River on May 17, killing more than 8,000 and capturing 5,000 enemy rebels.

Capture Munitions.

"The army which recently joined the Northerners was completely routed. We captured ten field guns, twenty machine guns and 20,000 rounds of ammunition. We lost 700 men. Our vanguards have reached Chowinkow and are now advancing on Kaifeng and Chengchow."

The resumption of train service between Hankow and Chumatien (recently held by the Northerners) proves the truth of Tan's report. Tan's report was received the day that British news agencies, and American correspondents under British influence, were wiring home stories about the fall of Shanghai; advices from that city indicate.

Co-operating with General Tan is General Feng Yu-hsiang, so-called "Christian General", who has allied himself with the Hankow Nationalist government. Feng has driven Wu Pei-fu, central Chinese war lord, back to Chengchow, where Feng is following him.

Americans Bombard Towns.

SHANGHAI, May 23.—The United States destroyer Preble, when hit by stray machine gun fire, bombarded forts and villages on the south bank of the Yangtse with her main guns Considerable damage was inflicted by the bombardment, it is believed.

• • •

Britain Withdraws Consul.

HANKOW, May 23.—Great Britain has withdrawn her consul from Chinkiang. All of the archives of the consulate have been removed, it is reported.

The withdrawal of the Chinkiang consul coming on the heels of the recall of the British representative at Hankow marks a new offensive of imperialist Britain against the Nationalist government here.

Wants War.

That Britain may attempt to forcibly regain the Hankow concession, which she lost in a treaty signed early this year is not unlikely. Observers here regard the withdrawal of Great Britain's diplomatic representatives from cities in the control of the Nationalists is regarded as a prelude to open war against the Hankow government.

• • •

Chang Totters.

PEKING, May 23.—Chang Tso-lin's position is becoming more and more precarious.

Menaced by the rapidly advancing troops of the Hankow Nationalists, having lost (apparently) the support of Japan and facing the solid opposition of workers, peasants, merchants and students at home his fall appears to be near at hand.

The north is honeycombed with Nationalism and should General Feng come within striking distance of Peking, which appears likely, revolts in Peking and Tientsin would probably occur.

Hatred of All Classes.

Chang's labor-smashing tactics, inspired by foreign mill-owners, have won him the hatred of workers, while heavy taxation and extortions from the peasantry have made the peasants Nationalist sympathizers. Executions of labor leaders in industrial centers like Tientsin are matters of almost daily occurrence and extortions from native business men and issues of enormous amounts of worthless paper money have won for Chang the hatred of the native merchants and industrial interests.

Chang's inability to cope with the situation or to hold the Nationalist troops have led Japan to favor a new regime in Manchuria, headed possibly by Chang's son, it is stated. Chang is now in Peking and is afraid to return to Mukden, it is said.

Has No Support.

Reports that Yen Shi-shan, war lord of Shansi Province, has joined Chang Tso-lin in his fight against the Hankow Nationalists are utterly without foundation. Chang has made frantic but futile efforts to see Yan and win his support. Yen, who is impressed with the strength of the Nationalists, is afraid to bet on a losing horse and is maintaining neutrality. Indications are, however, that he will join the Nationalists should they decisively defeat Chang's troops at Chengchow.

USSR NOW PLANS A TRADE BOYCOTT AGAINST BRITAIN

Will Transfer Trade If Relations Broken

MOSCOW, May 23.—The Soviet Union is making definite plans to boycott English industries.

This was made clear by A. P. Serebrovsky, vice-chairman of the Supreme Council of Public Economy. He declared that the Soviet Republic did not desire a break with England, but if that country's present attitude toward commercial relations continued unfavorable, the USSR would cease purchasing even those commodities England was best able to supply. Including among these are steam turbines, boilers, electric equipment, textile machinery, etc.

Serebrovsky explained that the Soviet Union was more interested in patterning their plans for industrial expansion on German and American methods. "America," he declared, "offers the best example of technical organization. England cannot give a good example because English factories have become obsolete, while the prices are higher than those of other nations."

Broaden Original Decree.

A decree has just been published by M. Mikoyan, Commissar of Trade and Director of the Foreign Trade Monopoly, expanding a decree issued last week ordering Soviet commercial agents to enter into trade only with such States as "are in normal diplomatic relations with this country and where trade delegations are guaranteed proper conditions for working safety."

The original decree was aimed in the direction of British business men, but the later document goes a step further and contemplates economic reprisals for the British raid by ordering Soviet representatives to cancel all licenses already given in England for export and import trade with Russia.

Cabinet Discusses Breach.

LONDON, May 23.—The cabinet meeting tomorrow is expected to take up the question of Russian trade, and afterwards presumably, diplomatic relations with the U. S. S. R. Sir R. M. Hodgson, head of the British trade delegation in Moscow has been ordered to report to the cabinet. Those in touch with the British trade delegation assert that a rupture of relations would hurt England more than the Soviet Union, which has shown itself able to exist without relations with any particular western power.

SACCO-VANZETTI COMMITTEE ASKS PUBLIC HEARINGS

Warns Gov. of Danger In Secret Investigation

BOSTON, May 23.—Governor Fuller's star chamber inquiry into the Sacco-Vanzetti case, ran up against its first real snag today when the Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee practically demanded an open, public investigation.

In a formal letter to the governor, the committee asks that the public be kept informed daily on the progress of the inquiry. Declaring that Fuller had never answered the committee's request for the appointment of a commission of five "impartial citizens" to conduct the inquiry, the committee asks that the lid be taken off the probe.

Demands are pouring in upon the committee for exact information concerning the progress of the secret investigation, the letter states, but the committee is as much in the dark as the rest of the world.

The letter is signed by Gardner Jackson, publicity representative for the committee, and by Joseph Moro, John G. Barry and Albino Faticani.

Thompson Sees Justices.

That William G. Thompson, defense counsel, inspired the letter is taken for granted hers. Thompson was closeted with supreme court justices for several ours Saturday. He was declared to be discussing various angles of the court's whitewash of Judge Thayer, who was fully upheld in the appeal taken to the highest Massachusetts court.

Thomas F. McAnarney, who was associate counsel with Fred Moore for Sacco and Vanzetti before Thompson stepped into the case, visited Fuller and was in conference with him and Lieutenant Governor Allen and Joseph Wiggin, personal counsel for

INSURANCE AGENTS AID "BIG FOUR" WALL STREET DIRECTORS

This series of ten articles, of which this is the second, deals with the exploitation of the industrial insurance agent and methods to combat the evils of weekly payment life insurance. This series is the result of numerous requests to publicize the details of the swindle and fraud to which the agent is subject in common with the policyholder.

Article II.

By CHARLES YALE HARRISON.

It is safe to say that without the agent an insurance company cannot live. Various companies here and abroad have tried to dispense with his services and have failed. For one reason or another people will not insure unless the pressure of personal solicitation is applied.

The enormous structure of the social institution of life insurance was built through the efforts of hundreds of thousands of agents who made the business what it is today.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, for example, is the largest financial institution in the world today. It has more assets than the U. S. Steel. It is stronger than Gary's corporation due to the fact that its assets are in liquid form and may be released as is deemed necessary by its' oligarchical board of directors.

The Metropolitan Life insures over 26 million individual lives in the United States and Canada. The "Big Four" combined insure 40 million lives for over twenty billion dollars.

Due to the fact the premiums on weekly payment life insurance are payable at the home of the insured, these agents thus become the unconscious vehicles of the most pernicious capitalistic propaganda.

During the 1924 presidential campaign the Metropolitan Life printed tens of millions of circulars which were sent, via the agent, into six million homes, calling attention to the bogey of LaFollette's radicalism. It was pointed out that insurance funds are invested in Big Business and that a vote for LaFollette was a vote for confiscation.

This distribution of circulars by the agent is charged in the annual report to "welfare work" for which item the Metropolitan Life last year spent over eight million dollars. The Metropolitan is a "mutual" company.

"The Big Four" weekly premium life insurance companies employ, roughly, about 60,000 agents in the field in the United States and Canada. Each agent has about 200 families on his collection book with an average of four people in each family. As an agency for industrial espionage, it can readily be seen, he is invaluable.

Let us quote Haley Fiske on this question. Says he, "Not one agente . . . a great piece of machinery which, in their activities, constitute a public institution; but many activities of the company, conducted from the Home Office, have such an intimate relation to the public that added force is given to this designation . . . (by officials of the company) . . . Specific reference is made to the conduct of an industrial service bureau where the relations between employers and employees are studied, based upon the company's experience . . . w: . . . ilers of its group insurance . . . se like."

The agent's duties with an industrial insurance company are manifold. He must make his weekly collections from the 200 or so families which constitute his "debit." He must seek out new risks for new insurance. He must do several hours of bookkeeping in order to present a neat account of his petty financial transactions. He must locate families who have moved away from his route without leaving an address. He must try to conserve old business which is in danger of lapsing. He must listen to hours and hours of haranguing on the part of his manager.

And for all this he is, in my estimation, one of the poorest paid of all white collar workers in America. So much so that the hard conditions under which he works compels a large turnover of labor in the thousands of branch offices throughout the country.

Some years ago a sporadic effort was made to organize these workers into a labor union. It failed because the attempt was haphazard and conducted without regard for scientific methods. A strike was prematurely called and the movement went up in smoke.

I have spoken to hundreds of agents throughout the country and not one has failed to say that the harsh and inhuman working conditions warrant the creation of a protective union.

At present due to the system of commission payments, the interests of the policyholders and those of the agent are diametrically opposed to each other. In reality this should not be so.

The exploitation of the agent by the company which results in tens of millions of dollars being pocketed by the company in fines and "charges to salary" is due to the fact that the agent practically sells in an account to the defense committee. 41 Union Square.

Bishop Brown Will Speak.

The famous heretic Bishop William Montgomery Brown will speak at the big mass meeting arranged by the Committee of One Hundred, on Wednesday night, May 25th at Webster Hall, 11th Street and 3rd Avenue. This mass meeting is arranged for the purpose of helping the families of the imprisoned cloakmakers and furriers. Besides Bishop Brown there will be the following speakers: Paxton Hibben, Pascal Cosgrove, Robert W. Dunn as Chairman. All New Yorkers are urged to come to this meeting. Admission 25 cents. Copies of "My Heresy," "Communism and Christianity," will be sold at this meeting at reduced prices.

Who is Next?

We received the following letter:

Dear friends:—At a meeting of the Ozoniter Young Progressive Society, which was held on May 13th at Labor Lyceum, 219 Sackman Street, B'klyn, the defense of the cloakmakers and furriers was discussed and the following resolution adopted:

Whereas the Defense Committee is carrying on a campaign to help the imprisoned cloakmakers and furriers, victims of the revolutionary class struggle, we altho a non-partisan organization, pledge ourselves to support the Defense Committee in its work, until all the cloakmakers and furriers will be released from prison. We will carry through all the campaigns of the defense Committee among the members of our organization. As a beginning we are sending $60.00 and we will send some more a little later. With greetings.—S. Fuchs, Secretary.

German Workers to Fight Injunctions Of U.S.A. Variety

BERLIN, May 22.—Fear is being expressed in German labor circles over the precedent set by a Saxon court recently in granting an injunction against the German Textile Workers' Union. The order prohibits the union from "supporting in any way" a strike against the Saxon Woolen Yarn factory.

Labor leaders are reporting in the German press as protesting against the action of the court and declare that they will not tolerate their freedom of action to be restrained "in the American style."

Seek Freedom for Holts.

Prof. Albert Einstein, Thomas Mann, and a large number of other German intellectuals have joined in a petition to the German government asking for a court revision of the sentence of life imprisonment being served by Max Hoelz, the so-called Saxon "Robin Hood."

The signers maintain that Hoelz because of his activity in the Communist uprising in Middle Germany in 1920 was framed on charges of having murdered a landowner named Illess. A confession has just been made by the man who actually shot Illess.

New York Workers Will Greet the Furriers.

Next Friday May 27th, all the New York Workers will gather at New Star Casino, 107th Street and Park Avenue, to greet the recently released victims of "Mineola Justice."

This welcome of the released prisoners will be given at the Grand Reception Hall which was arranged in their honor.

Do Not Keep Defense Money.

The Defense Committee is greatly in need of money. It is a crime against the cloakmakers and furriers to keep any money that was collected for them, a day longer than necessary. There are many people that have tickets, collection lists and roll call certificate booklets for which they have not as yet settled. This hinders the successful work of the Joint Defense Committee. All those who have money, tickets, roll call certificate booklets, honor roll lists are requested to report immediately and in account to the defense committee. 41 Union Square.

Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Asks Public Hearing

the governor. McAnarney declared he had been called in by the governor but refused to comment on the subject matter of the conference.

The defense committee is split on the reception proposed for Georg Branting, the Swedish lawyer who is coming to America to be associated in the defense of the two Italian anarchists. A Faneuil Hall meeting has been suggested, but some members of the committee feel that the governor will be antagonized by a public demonstration while he is considering the case.

Force Executive Into Open.

Friends of Sacco and Vanzetti fear the irresponsibility of Governor Fuller's secret inquiry into the case. They want a full open consideration of the world-famous case so that the sinister elements demanding electrocution of the workers on July 10 may be forced to bring their eleventh hour perjuries and falsehoods before a national jury of workers.

Either the public, formal commission or a new trial would ratify them better than the furtive examination of witnesses and evidence now going on in Fuller's office and home.

Mrs. LaFollette In Appeal.

Mrs. Robert M. LaFollette, widow of the late senator, and Senator Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., with 48 other prominent Washingtonians have appealed to Governor Fuller for the appointment of an advisory commission to aid in the investigation of the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

Members of the faculties of the various Brookings' institutes with publicists, lawyers and others signed the document. They include:

Mrs. Robert M. LaFollette, Sr., Senator Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., Walter J. Shepard, prominent sociologist, professor at Robert Brookings School of Economics; Harry H. Moore, economist in public health service; Arthur W. Macmahon, associate professor of political science,

Workers' Party Warns Of World War Danger

the world.

The proletarian revolution of Russia gave the exploited masses of the world, who heretofore had been everywhere oppressed by the rule of capitalism, a potent stronghold in the ruling class of a powerful and very important country. In its very existence the Soviet Union gives the exploited everywhere a consciousness of their power. This has made and still makes the existence of the Soviet Union a menace in the eyes of the imperialists. Therefore, the whole period since the end of the war has been filled with military intervention, diplomatic conspiracies, and all other possible forms of struggle against the Soviet Union.

The exhalpe set by the revolutionary workers of Russia and the inspiration supplied by the very existence of a workers' rule have strengthened and invigorated the resistance of colonial and semi-colonial masses against foreign imperialist oppression. The fight for independence of the oppressed masses in the extensive British colonies received new impetus. The Chinese masses awoke to a realization of their power and began a struggle for freedom from oppression.

Great Britain, whose most immediate interests were at stake, has since exerted all efforts to make the imperialist powers of the word temporarily forget their mutual antagonisms and unite on the basis of their mutual interests in a struggle against China and the Soviet Union. This has created an immediate war danger. The imperialist powers fully realize the threat to their interests by the Soviet Union and the ever growing struggle for liberation of the colonial and semi-colonial masses. The danger therefore exists that the imperialists of Great Britain will succeed in uniting the imperialist powers for a broader struggle against the Workers' Republic of Russia and against the awakening nationalist masses of the far east.

Threaten British Imperialism.

The danger which nationalist liberation in China creates for British imperialism in India and China is such an immediate one that the British imperialists will leave no stone unturned to win the imperialist powers of the world for a united onslaught against the Soviet Union and China. The raid on the Soviet Embassy in Peking, the bombardment of Nanking and the subsequent Five-Power note were all steps designed by British imperialism to gain its end.

American imperialism, altho occupied with unprecedented aggression in its own particular "sphere of influence," Central and South America, still has sufficient common imperialist interests with Great Britain in China and against the Soviet Union to make the danger of a united front between American imperialism and British imperialism a very real one. The American flag not only follows the dollar but, in the interests of its ultimate aims, even precedes the dollar. Defense by American warships, by American marines and American soldiers of the American dollars invested in Mexico and other Central and South American countries, is complemented by the sending of American warships, American soldiers, and marines to China to protect investments for investing American dollars.

The war danger created in China has been supplemented and made more serious by the incessant studied provocations perpetrated by British imperialism. Of these provocations, the raid on the Arcos is the latest and most outrageous one. The diplomatic forms, which this most haughty of the powers is always willing to grant to the representatives of the most insignificant princedoms of the world, are being outraged by the treatment accorded by the British imperialist government to the representatives of the Workers' Republics of Russia.

These studied insults against the Soviet Union are designed to provoke the Workers' Republic and are a rich declarations of solidarity with the British imperialists on the part of the imperialists of the other countries. Like the raid on the Peking Soviet Embassy, the raid on the Arcos was a wilful attempt to create a cause for war. If the British imperialists succeed with their provocations, the nations of the world will be embroiled in a new world war. The fathers, brothers and sons of the working class will again be slaughtered in the hundreds of thousands. The women and children of the working class will again be starved by the millions.

Workers! You must not permit this!

Protest against American warships and marines in China!

Protest against the aid given by the American Imperialists to Brit'sh Imperialists!

Unite your protest against the possibilities of a new world war into a militant demand: HANDS OFF CHINA!! HANDS OFF THE SOVIET UNION!

Demand as a guarantee against intensification of the present war dangers the recognition of the Soviet Government in Moscow and the Revolutionary Government in Hankow!

Down with imperialism! Long live the solidarity of the oppressed of the world!—Central Executive Committee, Workers' (Communist) Party of America.

Flier Lindbergh's Father Fought for Nonpartisan League

WASHINGTON — (FP). — Capt. Charles Lindbergh, hero of the first direct air flight from New York to France, is acclaimed for his courage, his determination and his performance.

Young Lindbergh was 16 years of age when his father, the late Rep. Lindbergh, accepted the nomination of the Nonpartisan League conference in Minnesota, in the early spring of the war year, 1918, to run for the Republican nomination for governor as spokesman of the farmers. The courage required to throw down the challenge to organized war profiteers in the Northwest at that time, when Gov. Burnquist and Sen. Frank Kellogg were backing the fanatical reactionary, Judge McGee, chairman of the State Council of National Defense, was no small thing. The heroic flyer of 1927 was old enough in those days to measure the heroism of his father, in the Northwest at that time, when the threats of mob violence and the danger of assassination that were instigated by foes of the farmers' movement.

Tarred and Feathered

Delegates and visitors at the convention of the American Federation of Labor, held in St. Paul in June of that year, will not soon forget the two young farmers, organizers for the Nonpartisan League, who came to see the convention and to receive medical treatment for the tarring and feathering given them by the Burnquist-Kellogg enthusiasts. Many delegates went to the town of St. Cloud to hear Lindbergh speak, and witnessed the mobilising of armed forces to prevent the farmers from making any demonstration. They talked with Henrik Shipstead, then mayor of a Minnesota town and candidate for the nomination for Congress against Volstead, a standpatter. Shipstead's house had been smeared with yellow paint, in the night, when the local chamber-of-commerce element learned that he had joined the farmers' political crusade.

On billboards opposite the convention hotels were big posters, with pictures of shells bursting in American trenches in France, and in big type an alleged message from Pershing: "You take care of the Huns at home and we will hold them over here."

Lindbergh Beaten.

Lindbergh opposed war profiteers and State Council of National Defense patriots. He made no compromise with Meyer, Kellogg, Knute Nelson or Burnquist, who had set up their monopoly in patriotism and who had enrolled most of the Minnesota farmers who dared organize to secure a fair price for their wheat were enemies of their country. Lindbergh was beaten, but the courage and dignity of the contest was conducted in the midst of war's cowardice was an estate of which his family is proud. After his death, the son flew over their farm at Little Falms, scattering the ashes of the father upon the land to which he was devoted. It was a symbol they understood.

Hero of Chauvinists.

PARIS, May 23.—Lindbergh is being made the pet of the big militarist interests of France. Yesterday the Aero Club, center of chauvinists, gave him a noisy welcome and presented him with the club's gold medal. The President of France has pinned the Legion of Honor medal on his breast while he is to receive the Swedish Aero Club gold plaque and a cup from the French aero club.

American Legion officials here tried to appropriate the young American flyer for use in their own propaganda. They regard the marvelous welcome given the Little Falls, Minn. youngster as insuring that the Legion gang, when it hits Paris this summer, will be met with something less than hostility.

Banker-Envoy Elated.

Animosities between the French and American upper classes over war debts will be forgotten for bringing the late human slaughter honse to an end have temporarily been laid aside. Ambassador Herrick, former president of the American Bankers' Association, is elated over the unexpected results of the achievement of the American "air ambassador."

Lindbergh is being financed by a St. Louis commercial firm and is having the most flattering offers pressed on him. So far he has not lost his boyish, unaffected manner. The use to which he is being put by the French military gang and the advocates of French-American alliance and remission of war debts is apparently unknown to him.

Smithsonian Says Venus Habitable.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Venus, the glorious blue planet, defied by the ancients as the goddess of love, probably is better adapted to life than her celestial and militant neighbor, Mars.

This opinion was expressed by Dr. C. G. Abbot, director of The Astrophysical Observatory of Smithsonian Institution, and internationally known astronomer.

A picture of a landscape on Venus, drawn by imagination from Dr. Abbot's scientific observations, might not be unlike that in the primordial ages of the earth, uncounted eons in the past, before the birth of man. Venus, it would seem, is a luxurious, steaming and tropical jungle, a world in the making.

Bricklayer Helpers Back Laborers in Worcester Strike

WORCESTER, Mass., May 23.—With cops on guard at every job, the city's building laborers continued their folded arms policy today with the bricklayers' helpers now out. More than 100 bricklayers automatically joined the walkout when their helpers struck.

Nine strikers were fined $10 each as the aftermath of a police attack on the picket line.

Greek Workers Strike Against Standard Oil

PIRAEUS, Greece, April 30 (By Mail).—Accompanied by brutality on the part of the police and gendarmes, four workers were arrested on the second day of the strike against the Standard Oil Co. One of these arrested was the president of the Benzine and Oil Workers' Union, Theohorides. The imprisoned workers are being defended by the Red Aid Committee.

The viciousness of the police aroused great resentment among all the workers of the city, and the secretary of the local Central Labor Council sent a telegram of protest to the secretary of the interior.

Women's Conference, New England, Talks Of Many Questions

BOSTON, Mass., May 23.—The New England Conference of Working Class Women held here elected an executive committee of 17 members to be responsible for the future work of the organization.

Seventy-five delegates were at the conference representing 48 organizations including trade unions, with a total membership of 7,500.

The questions discussed were women and the trade unions; women and war; maternity insurance and birth regulations; child labor and the school system; women and cooperative movement and the persecution of foreign born workers.

A resolution was passed greeting the Chinese women and asking for the release of Sacco and Vanzetti.

The executive committee elected consists of Miss Eva Hoffman, Sonia Kaross, Miss D. Clifford, Charlotte Clayman, Olga Oikenus, Mrs. Florence Gage, Mrs. Goldman, Astor Berkowits, Eva Blender, Anna Speaker, Mrs. Kagan, Mrs. Kouskia, Mrs. Lempi Parta, Mrs. Selz, Mrs. A. Who's Running This Country Anyway?

The Military Order of the World War, through Captain George L. Darte, its Adjutant General, has protested to Dr. William J. O'Shea, Superintendent of the New York City Schools, protesting against the action in granting the use of the Stuyvesant High School auditorium to the Civil Liberties Union for a meeting on the topic, "The Growth of New York City Since 1900."

Mrs. Rachel Davis, teacher of civics in the Woodbury High School of New Jersey, has had her contract for next year withheld, partly as a result of allegations made by the same Military Order of the World War.

And now The DAILY WORKER comes to trial on May 27th, as a result of charges preferred by these self-constituted arbiters of what the American people shall say and what information they shall receive.

It is high time that the workers speak quite plainly to these advance agents of Mussolini, who are seeking to institute the same black regime of reaction and suppression in this country as there is in tyrant-ridden Italy.

There is one way to speak clearly and unmistakably to these gentry. That way is to give such unanimous and whole-hearted support to the defense of The DAILY WORKER that these agents of American capitalism will understand fully that the masses of the workers will not tolerate any interference with their constitutional right to freedom of speech and press. Don't forget these are but the first few attempts on the part of extra-legal reactionary organizations to run our affairs. If they succeed now, they will make further excursions. Now is the time to call them to a halt. Your dollars are your command. Let us hear it—quick and strong.

U. S. S. R. WORKERS NOT WORRIED BY BARRAGE OF LIES

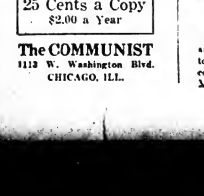
The weak spots in the general good showing are said to be in transport and building—yet here also the showing is such as would be lauded to the skies in any other country. In railroading, for instance, passenger traffic increased 11.7% and freight traffic 11%. On an estimated total revenue of 1418 million rubles, the railroads showed a net return of 665 million and the harbors 8.8 million, after deducting 60 million assigned to branches of transport that do not as yet pay their own way, and allowing 30 million for the continuation of new railroad building projects already under way. It should be noted also that "dead-head" tickets go not only to railway employees and their families, as in America, but that they are systematically used for cultural purposes, thus every student of a higher school can get a free ticket once a year to any point in the Soviet Union, through it be from Minsk to Vladivostok. Trade unions sending their members south to rest homes, etc., buy tickets at half price, and many similar concessions are made for other social service.

The building program, while extensive, cannot keep up with the demands made upon it, especially in Moscow where the housing situation will continue acute for years to come. In other centres conditions are rapidly approaching or have already reached normal. The sum expended on building are as follows:

Year	Total	Of which New Construction
1923	475 million rubles	147 million
1924	810 " "	300 "
1925	1110 " "	503 "
1926	1760 " "	803 "

In addition to these sums expended there must be considered about 150 millions spent on the countryside for new building purposes.

Electrification.



The electrification projects are going ahead steadily, 100,000 kw. were added to the total capacity during 1925 and the coming year is expected to add another 140,000 kw. from major works and 150,000 kw. from new district enterprises. An example of the former is a tremendous new plant which harnesses the Kura just above Tiflis (Soviet Georgia), and of the latter that in the autonomous province of Adjaria, 20 miles from Batoum, and about 5 miles from the Turkish border, where small, almost perpendicular tunnels, hundreds of feet in length, are cut thru solid rock to tap a mountain lake to turn the turbines far down in the valley. Both of these projects are rapidly approaching completion and will, the writer was told when on the ground, completely change the character of local industrial development. Very great hopes are pinned to the electrification of Soviet industry and many will be the treasure chambers, like Georgia and Adjaria, that this white coal will unlock. A total of 159 million rubles will be spent on electrification this year.

Foreign Trade.

Nothing shows more conclusively the definite improvement of Russia's position than the figures on imports and exports duging the last four years. It will be noted that the unfavorable balance 1169 million in 1924, and 62 million in 1925) is even now to a positive balance of 75 million this year, to which should be added 50 its.

Year	Export*	Import*
1923	522	438
1924	551	720
1925	670	732
1926	820	745

PAN PACIFIC LABOR CONFERENCE -HANKOW-

Pan-Pacific Labor Conference

(From Rotes Gewerkschafts Bulletin)
Translated by Whittaker Chambers.

The question of a Pacific Conference was first broached by the Australian delegation at the II Congress of the R. I. L. U. (1921) at the time when an armed clash between the United States and Japan seemed imminent. But the immediate danger was removed and, together with that, the calling of a conference was postponed. The Conference of Far Eastern Transport Workers in Canton in 1921 at which representatives from China, Indonesia and the Philippines were present, created a substitute. That conference established a secretariat in Canton, for the purpose of maintaining relations between all the countries of the Pacific Ocean and for publishing a bulletin.

Fake League Confab Shattered.

Presently the situation changed. The problems of the Pacific came to the fore again. The League of Nations as well as the II and the Amsterdam Internationals became interested in Pacific questions. The League of Nations opened a branch in Tokio, the Labor Bureau of the League of Nations decided to call a Pan-Asiatic Labor Conference. The plan, whose realization was entrusted to Suzuki tchairman of the Reformist Trade Union League in Japan) and Joshi (General Secretary of the All-Indian Trade Union Congress), was shattered by the opposition of the Chinese workers. Suzuki had to relinquish his ideas.

In August 1926, the Japanese government established in Nagasaki another (certainly not a labor) conference which set itself very broad objectives. Japan hoped to create a "Pan-Asiatic League of Nations" which she would play first fiddle. But the sweeping plans of the Japanese government proved a fiasco. Despite the strikingly caustic measures and the very guarded utterances of the delegates, public opinion in the Far Eastern countries was not deceived as to the motives of the initiators. It is sufficient to note the leading article in the completely bourgeois paper "Mingo Shibao" which says:

Reformist Conference Fiasco.

"Under the cloak of Pan Asiatic thought the other Asiatic peoples are to do yeoman service for the Japanese interests. Japan hopes to protect herself against the anti-imperialist movements in the Soviet Union, China and in Mongolia by a Pan-Asiatic movement directed against the American and European imperialists."

In anticipation of an inevitable armed conflict America and Japan carry on a lively propaganda in the countries of the Pacific. The United States has founded in Honolulu the so-called Pacific Institute, and, thru this powerful medium and an all-embracing agitative and propagandistic work, is forcing the countries of the Pacific under American culture and American influence. The countless scientific, cultural, student, and other conferences, called by the Institute serve the same end, Japan, on the other hand, bases her efforts on the Pacific society, created under the direct protectorate of the Japanese government, with headquarters in Tokio and in the principal cities of other Pacific countries, but whose activities do not embrace labor circles.

All Pacific Labor Represented.

The conference planned for May 1st 1927, in Canton, was thought to be extremely significant. In its organization committee sat representatives of the Trade Union Council of Soviet and of the Chinese Trade Union League. Careful measures were taken to ensure wide representation from the Chinese trade union movement. Special attention was extended to the Japanese Trade Unions and from the Japanese Peasant Movement which it is known stands in close relation with the workers. Other delegates from the Japanese colonies, Formosa and Korea, from the Philippines and Indonesia, from the American coast of the Pacific, i.e. from Canada and the United States, Mexico and Central America, were to participate.

Chiang's Betrayal.

The latest event, Chiang Kai-shek's betrayal and as a result of that, the turmoil in a whole series of south eastern Chinese provinces, and in Canton itself, radically changes the situation. Despite the statements of Lin Tin Sin, the present right Kuomingtang dictator in Canton, who has promised his "support" to the delegation of the Central Committee of the Trade Unions of the Soviet Union, it is very doubtful whether it will be possible to open the conference. The trade union movement is today forced into illegality. As Lo Tin Sin's orders hundreds, if not thousands, of the most active workers are being arrested in Canton. We have reports of the innumerable sacrifices of the Cantonese railway workers, Communists, and all that seems to hint of Communism is hunted down. The union between Hankow, Shanghai and Canton is broken. And, on the other hand, the imperialist powers use every means to hinder the conference. The government of the Australian Union, for example, refuses to visa the passes of the delegates from the Sydney Trade Union Council. Announcement comes from Japan of the arrest of the Japanese delegates in Kobe.

Naturally this tremendously increases the difficulties of the pending conference, which is threatened by the interference, if not by the forcible dissolution, of Li Tin Sin and the reactionary and imperialist powers who support him. The situation in the Pacific Ocean where the most vital interests of the imperialists collide with indescribable fury with the movement of the millions of the masses defending their most elementary national and class rights, more than ever demands the support and the cooperation of the forces of the labor-organizations of the Pacific Coasts. It is clear that the working class, its struggle, its organization, and its united action, will soon decide the fate of the conflict which amidst incredible suffering, is bursting into flame thruout the Pacific. The conference may be delayed: BET IT MUST TAKE PLACE! The situation in the Pacific, the interests of the national revolutionary and labor movement demand it.

(The treachery of Chiang Kai-shek necessitated the postponement of the conference to May 15th, and its transference from Shanghai to Hankow. No news has yet been received of the events at the conference.

In addition tu the arrest of the Japanese delegates and the refusal of the government to visa the passes of the Australian delegates, Losovsky and other prominent members of the Soviet Union delegates were held under arrest by British officials at Hongkong. They were later released.—H. F.).

NEW RECRUITS FOR RED ARMY TENTH MAY DAY

Inspiring Celebration In Moscow

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.
(Special to the Daily Worker).

MOSCOW, U.S.S.R., May 1 (By Mail).—It is the tenth May Day since the overthrow of csarism. It is a whole decade since the old order toppled and fell. The Union of Soviet Republics lives and grows in strength and power!

That is the thrill that sweeps the mighty hundreds of thousands of Moscow's proletarian hosts on this International Day, with the many tens of millions out over the Soviet Union.

The great avenues that parallel the Kremlin Wall filled early. The leading spokesmen of the Soviet Power fill the Tribune on Lenin's Mausoleum. There is Stalin, Bukharin, Rykof, Voroshilof and a host of others.

The Invincible Army.

And out over the Red Square it is filled with the soldiers, sailors, cavalry, airmen, artillerymen, the clenched fist of the Proletarian Dictatorship.

Ten years before, at the first congress of the Communist International, the soldiers of the Red Army had marched in this same Red Square, many of them, shattered, bleeding feet, reddening the cobblestones, but spirits undaunted, hard as the granite pavement in the struggle against the capitalist foe.

Today every Red Army uniform sparkles with newness. The equipment could not be better. And the Red Army spirit—the revolutionist—still lives, glowing strong as ever.

On the second as the clock in the huge tower of the Kremlin strikes noon, every unit of this fighting host snaps to attention, and from as many corners of the Red Square, half a dozen Red Army bands thunder "The International". The singing of the revolution is the song of the Red Army.

Red Army Leaders.

On passing review, Clement Voroshilof, the People's Commissar for the army and navy, and the chairman of the Revolutionary Military Council, with the renowned cavalry leader, Budenny, at his side, reviews the rigid lines of these defenders of the Soviet Union. Booted and spurred and in brilliant uniforms, the military attaches of capitalist lands, Poland, England, England and others watch and must wonder as each Red Army unit, in its turn, thunders new cheers for Voroshilof and Budenny as they pass.

The review is over. Voroshilof mounts the Tribune of the Lenin Mausoleum. He is about to say—

But we are not compelled to wait long. Voroshilof uses no delicate words. His words crackle like rapid fire guns, and in the microphone it takes them up and spreads his May Day message thun amplifiers to the listening tens of thousands in the Red Square and hundreds of thousands in the city beyond. It is a message of uncompromising struggle against the challenging power of world imperialism. Voroshilof points out that the world is divided into two camps. On the one hand the Union of Soviet Republics. Against it the imperialist powers. The issue is clear. The Soviet Union must be prepared for every emergency. The Red Army was ready.

The best sign of preparation was the swearing in of a great host of new recruits for the Red Army. Voroshilof spoke the pledge and the new detachments repeated it after him as follows:

"I, the Son of the Toiling People, citizen of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, take upon myself the name of a soldier of the Workers' and Peasants' Red Army.

"Facing the Toiling Classes of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and of the whole world, I take upon myself the obligation to bear this name with honor, to study thoroly the military art and to guard the people's property from any damage or nuisance. I pledge myself, earnestly and unflinchingly, to carry out the Red Army discipline and to obey without hesitation the orders of the commanders who are appointed by the Workers' and Peasants' government.

"I pledge to restrain myself from all actions which would harm the dignity of a citizen of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and to direct all my actions and thoughts to the great goal of the emancipation of all toilers.

"I pledge myself at the first call of the Workers' and Peasants' government to take my stand in its defense against all menaces and attacks by enemies upon the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and I pledge myself not to spare my strength or my life in the struggle of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics for the cause of Socialism and the fraternity of all peoples.

"If I sidestep willfully from this my solemn pledge, then may my fate be universal contempt and may the severe arm of the Revolutionary Law punish me."

Rykoff Speaks.

The thunder of cannon, the cheers of the multitudes, airplanes flying overhead greeted the closing words of the pledge, that brought new armed forces to the standards of the Soviet Union. Then Rykoff, president of the Council of People's Commissars, spoke from the tribune of the Lenin Mausoleum. He said

"For the 10th time we are celebrating the First of May. All militants, all toilers, all Red Army men are celebrating the First of May. In the Soviet Union this is the holiday of the whole population, not only of the advanced section of the working class as in other lands. While we, on our Red Square, are peacefully celebrating, in other countries the workers are compelled to meet with all kinds of reprisals. In all capitalist lands it is branded a crime to celebrate International May Day. In our country it is the holiday of the self-conquering workers, it is the holiday of social reconstruction."

Greeting From Britain

Then J. W. Murphy, representative of the British Communist Party in the Comintern, spoke declaring that, "Here in the Soviet Union we can celebrate International May Day without the interference of the bourgeoisie.

Russia Is For Peace.

Nikolai Bukharin then told of the lowering war clouds in the Orient. He referred to the efforts of the open and secret diplomacy to again surround the Soviet Union with a blockade of bayonets.

"It is the attitude of the international proletariat that will dictate when this new blood feast shall commence," he said. "We must intensify the work of peaceful reconstruction while we yet have peace. The foundation of our success is to be found in the reconstruction of society. We must can life the national and unbounded wealth now lying dormant. We must strain ourselves much more to make stronger our industry and agriculture. We must grow from the plow to the tractor, from hand craft to machine production. We must strengthen the bond between the working class and the peasantry. Our Army, our Navy, our industrial reserve capacity are the instruments that make for the emancipation not only of our own people, but of the people of the entire world. Long Live Our Working Class! Long Live Our Peasantry! Long Live Our Red Army! Long Live the Inevitable Coming Victory of the Workers of the World!"

Then the parade of the Red Army began, to be followed by the procession of the workers, that lasted the remainder of the day. I shall attempt to interpret part of the meaning of the passing of great hosts in another article.

U. S. Oil Men's Choice For Mexican President

Preliminary maneuvering for Mexico's 1928 presidential election campaign is already under way—and, as usual, the U. S. oil magnates are making many of the maneuvers. The candidate whom they are pushing forward with most insistence at the present time is Gen. Arnulfo Gomez, commander-in-chief of the Gulfco government, he has several times been on the point of going into open rebellion, particularly during the difficult days of the U. S. government assault upon the sovereignty of Mexico over the question of the oil and land laws. Gomez established his liaison with the U. S. oil interests years ago, when he held away over the state of Tamaulipas where the Tampico oil center is located. Tampico workers will never forget his strike-breaking and unionsmashing activities, in which all methods—not excluding murder were employed.

WILL USE ASIA MAP FROM FAR EAST INSTITUTE

A new map of Asia such as is used in the Far East University at Moscow and in the advanced Soviet schools has been received by C. M. Wicks and will be used in the first lecture of his course of four to be delivered on China at the Workers School 108 East 14th Street. The first lecture is this Friday evening. The map is a huge one, covering half of the side of the room and will enable those in attendance to remember the relation to China of the rest of Asia.

The lecture will deal with the economic geography of China and will show why the great imperialist powers consider it the greatest prize in the world today.

Dialectic Presentation.

The Marxian-Leninist method of presentation will be used by Comrade Wicks. Instead of the old, incompetent system of presenting the history of a country as an isolated thing separate and apart from the rest of the world, it will be presented in its relationship to the rest of the nations of the earth. Though separate for thousands of years from Europe, nevertheless even its great geographical barriers could not wholly prevent the East and West meeting at some points.

Invaluable for those who desire to understand the "Chinese puzzle" will be the outlines prepared for each lecture and to be obtained only by those attending the lecture. Those who miss one will miss one fourth of the outline and guide to the further study of China.

wards the auspices of the Workers' Republic. This dispatch says that the heads of the industrial and commercial apparatus of the Soviet Union look to Germany and the United States for the most advanced methods of production and not to England. But even at that the needs of 160,000,000 of people would throw considerable trade to the British market provided a labor government came into power in Great Britain or one not so provocative as the present government.

EVERYBODY in Nicaragua is pretty well satisfied with the situation there now excepting the liberals, despite Calvin Coolidge's emissary Henry L. Stimson, who returned from his mission of "peace" to the Latin American republic. Well, now, this is interesting and rather amazing because it is a fact. And the fact is that everybody, even the attitude of Diaz and his Wall Street-hired flunkeys are for the liberals. Stimson went to Nicaragua and frankly told the Diaz crowd that the majority rule did not mean a damned thing to the government of the United States. Wall Street investments and the Panama Canal demanded that Diaz retain the services of the United States would have no more no matter how many American marines had to be killed to attain it.

ANOTHER wicked slam has been dealt to the fiction that free speech exists in the United States. Not much consolation can be taken from the fact that two of the supreme court justices differed from the majority in the decision upholding the constitutionality of the conviction of Anita Whitney on a charge of having violated the California anti-syndicalist law. Majority rules on the supreme court, but it is quite possible that had Justice Brandeis-Holmes viewpoint commanded a majority, the reactionary minority would refuse to recognize the decision. Our ruling classes are very obedient to law as long as the law suits them.

* * *

IF Brandeis and Holmes had voted against the decision of the supreme court upholding the constitutionality of the California anti-syndicalist law instead of simply confirming themselves to an abstract attack on the suppression of free speech in general they would have less difficulty in proving their sincerity in the matter. The ruling classes of the United States will determine how much "free" speech they will allow their slaves and that will be just as much as they think the system can stand.

* * *

THE supreme court of the United States is one of the strongest bulwarks the capitalist system has here. They don't mind if a few of its members still retain a traditional affection for Lincoln, Franklin and Jaffarson. That does not hurt, since the respectable minority on the court will confine themselves to a mild protest. And creates the impression that the supreme court is not one reactionary mass. There are lots of ways of kidding the population. There is as much chance of the U. S. supreme court delivering a decision that will hurt the capitalist system as there is of the supreme court of the Soviet Union handing down a decision favoring the Nepmen. Both are class instruments. One is the bulwark of the robber system of capitalism; the other of the rising social order that is based on the laboring classes.

Professional Patriots Must Live.

The war with its hysteria still persists in the carcasses of a certain small but noisy strata of the population of the country. They still work overtime at the business of professional patriotism. Public interest in their antics has long ago subsided to the freezing point. Among intelligent people they are regarded with the same disdain that is accorded professional inhabitants of Greenwich Village and other freaks.

But somehow they manage to make an easy living preying on the gullible newly rich (and some of the older rich) who made fabulous sums out of the graft accompanying the war. They are kept busy concocting new "menaces" to the fortunes of these parasites. They have constantly to manufacture scares that will induce their gullible supporters to contribute money to their shady organizations, most of which exist merely to keep a few incompetents who cannot exist under normal conditions and in honest occupations in an easy job.

It is precisely this stripe of creature that is behind the persecution of The DAILY WORKER. They see in the frame-up against the editors and management of our paper a chance to circularize their list of suckers and try to extort money from them on the pretext that they are still holding aloft the sacred banner of patriotism and heroically defending the citadels of privilege. Aside from the well-known fact that the ruling class is constantly on the alert to crush us, these slimy creatures jump into the limelight in an effort to prove to their paymasters that they alone are capable of silencing the militant labor organizations and our most effective present-day weapon, our press. They are parasites upon parasites.

It is an easy matter to account for these particularly nauseating swindlers. Before the war they were never heard from. They are misfits, unable to exist by following legitimate occupations even in the society they pretend to defend. The war with its demand for professional patriots—four-minute men, red cross workers, poison propagandists, forgers, provocateurs, liberty bond salesmen and saleswomen, foreigner-and-red baiters, flag wavers, army chaplains—enabled this gang of semi-vagrants to live better than they had ever lived before. Hence they must, of necessity, in order to live, fan the flames of patriotism or again sink into the insignificant strata of society from which they emerged to thwart the evil designs of the Kaiser and help the late Woodrow Wilson make the world safe for the investments of J. P. Morgan and the rest of the brigands of Wall Street. They are part of the backwash of the war.

The serial we are running on "Professional Patriots" exposes the antics of this diseased growth upon the body politic, but does not explain the rotten objective conditions that gave rise to them.

This is written as a supplement to the "Professional Patriots" articles in order that our readers may know the real motives behind their exalted pains to patriotism and be able to expose them so that all readers will hold them in the contempt their execrable conduct so richly deserves.

Smashing Tory Government Is the Next Task of the Labor Movement.

The British government, following the raid on the Soviet Union Trade Mission, and its failure to isolate the Soviet Union at the Geneva Economic Conference, can choose now to break off relations, a move which is obviously a step towards war, or to let the whole matter drop, make the Churchill-Birkenhead-Joynson-Hicks combination the laughing stock of the world, increase greatly the prestige of the labor movement as a whole and the Labor Party in particular, and proceed to a general election in much more unfavorable circumstances than prevailed two or three months ago.

The British government has made errors in the past and survived. It has "muddled thru" until its ability to do so has become a tradition. But all this was before British capitalism entered a period of sharp decline. Strong systems can make mistakes—weak ones cannot afford it.

It is generally acknowledged now that the introduction of the bill for the suppression of the unions was a huge—a blunder of desperation.

The raid on the Soviet Trade Mission was to have been linked up with the drive on militant unionism, other nations were to be drawn into the front against the Soviet Union—then with British labor smashed and demoralized, the way would be clear for war upon Russia.

But the government has failed to rally any substantial support for its policy. On the contrary it has alienated those industrialists who want and need trade with the Soviet Union. The $50,000,000 loan to the Soviet Government which the latest dispatches say has been agreed to by the directors of the Midland bank is a very substantial straw showing which way the wind is blowing.

British industry shows little, if any, sign of improvement. According to a London dispatch to the New York Times, a reduction in prices of pig iron has failed to bring any new business, more coal mines are going on a short time operation basis, the outlook for new contracts in the shipbuilding industry is very poor indeed, the textile industry reports a discouraging future, etc.

Political maneuvering has failed to bring British industry back to normal. The defeat of the general strike gave the British ruling class a new lease of life but this too is nearing its end. The new attack on the British working class, directly connected with the conspiracy against the Soviet Union, has aroused the masses to the danger.

There is undoubtedly now in Great Britain the basis for a powerful drive of labor against the government—a drive which should have been the next step in the general strike, but which cowardice and treachery in the leadership prevented. The policy of capitulation put forward by the MacDonalds, Thomases, and their centrist supporters, has proved to be futile and dangerous—

Our Party Moves Forward

By JAY LOVESTONE, Acting General Secretary Workers (Communist) Party

It is now only a little more than one month since the various districts of our Party Organizations have swung into full activity in the Ruthenberg enrollment. Already the results achieved are gratifying evidence of the vitality of our membership.

In the first three weeks of the Ruthenberg enrollment our Party members showed their capacity for work, their ability to meet difficulties and spirit and devotion of the first magnitude to respond energetically to the party's tasks under the severest hardships. Here, our leader, Comrade Ruthenberg, died. A vicious offensive by the labor lieutenants of American imperialism, the employers and the government, had been organized on for months against our Party. All our enemies were busy singing our requiem. We, the Communist Party, in America were a thing of the past. We were no more. And what was even better for the bourgeoisie and their socialist lickspittles of the species Oneal and other fake historians, we could be no more—no, no—never—never again.

Some Significant Figures.

Here are some interesting figures that will make the socialist historians of the bourgeois chairs sit up and be paralyzed with disappointment.

In September 1925 our Party counted 14,037 dues-paying members. Of this number there were at least from three to four thousand who were counted as members thru the dual stamp column; that is, they were wives of members who purchased dual stamps—one stamp for husband and wife. Particularly among the former language federations was this practice in vogue.

In October 1925 the National Organization Department issued its call for the reorganization of the Party on the basis of shop and street nuclei. We proceeded with great energy to reorganize the party. We had just emerged from the most costly, disastrous factional struggle our Party had ever experienced. Practically only half of our membership responded to the reorganization call. To be exact, the dues payments in October 1925, the first month of reorganization, were only 7,213. By November of 1925 the number rose to 8,064. In December it mounted to 8,154. By January 1926 the figure reached was 8,389. In March 1926 we totalled 9,052. This was the high point for some months to come. The summer period drew on and our dues payments naturally shrunk.

Reorganization Difficulties.

No one will deny that due to reorganization our party has reduced in size, numerically, to an extent which some of us did not expect. But we must keep clearly in mind that the loss of dues-paying members is not as great as it would appear to the superficial observer. First of all, a minimum of twenty per cent of our dues payments before reorganization were not dues stamps actually sold to individual members but were only dual stamps—stamps given away to wives of comrades who were members of the party by grace of their husbands holding membership in the party. After reorganization, this social-democratic practice was dropped. There are no longer any dual or "by-grace" members.

Furthermore, the newly organized shop and street nuclei units do not all function well enough and regularly yet. There are many party members—far more active than many of the "regular dues-payers" in the pre-reorganization days of our party—who, because their units to which they are attached do not funcilon as well as they should, are unable to pay dues regularly. We make these remarks, not by way of seeking to explain away anything or hiding any of our weaknesses. The case is quite the contrary. We are here pointing out one of our most serious shortcomings.

Rally to Ruthenberg Enrollment.

The death of our leading communist fighter, Ruthenberg, was an irreparable loss to the party. This has been recognized by our every foes as well as by our most loyal followers. But the party set itself to work with a zeal and a determination to make good as much as possible the loss that suffered by us. The Ruthenberg drive to build our Party was launched under the most trying circumstances. The response of the membership exceeded the most optimistic in our ranks. There was a new spirit in the Party. The inactive, to a large extent, became active. The active members redoubled their efforts. Better results were evidenced in all our fields of activity. Every section of the party responded promptly and vigorously to the call of the Political Committee, the leadership of the party, to close ranks and build the Party.

Party Membership Grows.

Immediately the new Communist spirit showed itself in the status of our organization. We Communists don't view organization problems as questions distinct from the politics of the organization and political problems are invariably tied up as part of one whole problem and task of building a real Communist Party in the United States.

For the month of March 1927, the dues payments rose to nearly 9,500—to be exact 9,486. This is the highest dues payments we have had since September 1925. We must here keep in mind the fact that many hundreds of our members are at present involved in the severe disemployment in the needle trades in New York and in the strike of the United Mine Workers of America. The largest proportion of these party members refuse to take exempt stamps and prefer to wait in their dues payments until such time as when they can afford to pay up their back dues. This means that we now have an active party membership of more than twelve thousand.

April reports are not yet complete. All indications point to the upward swing in dues payments being continued.

The number of initiation stamps are not an exact index of the number of new members entering the party during a particular month. Some units even permit a new member to be in the party months before securing from their district offices the necessary initiation stamps. Yet, inaccurate an index of the influx of new members as the sale of initiation stamps may be, it has quite some value as an index of party organization progress. Let us again examine some figures.

In September 1925—the last month of the party organization on the old basis of language federation branches —286 initiation stamps were bought from the national office by the various Federation Bureaus. With the first month of reorganization, October 1925, the number fell to 253. It continued to fall to 158 in November and to 153 in December. By January 1927 the new units began to function with increasing regularity. There was an upward swing in the number of workers initiated into party membership. The total initiation stamps sold in January 1927 was 214. In the short month of February last the number rose to 278.

By mid-March most of the districts had not yet swung into the Ruthenberg. Still the few days which most of the districts participated in, the drive told appreciably in the influx of new members. These figures of new members will be especially important for April. Yet, in March last, 336 initiation stamps were sold. This means that a minimum of 336 workers were admitted to party membership in March. This is the highest figure reached in many months. Of course, there were many hundreds who applied for membership in the rousing Memorial celebrations held immediately after Comrade Ruthenberg's death. Not all of these workers were immediately enrolled into party membership.

Party Organization Moves Forward.

It is clear that the Party organization has taken a turn for the better. We have seen our most difficult days in the immediate post-reorganization period. We also have many serious problems of reorganization to solve. Some we have not even scratched the surface of in the least. But on the whole we have turned the corner for the better.

TABLE SHOWING CONDITION OF THE PARTY ORGANIZATION

1923	Oct.	Nov.	Dec.
Dues Payments	7,213	8,064	8,154
Initiation Stamps	253	158	155
1926	Jan.	Feb.	Mar.
Dues Payments	8,389	7,146	9,052
Initiation Stamps	104	124	145
1927	Jan.	Feb.	Mar.
Dues Payments	8,266	7,511	9,486
Initiation Stamps	214	278	336

The pessimists may throw sand into their own eyes. The enemies of the party may hope in vain and perish in disappointment. But the Workers' (Communist) Party of America is a living, growing force, moving forward in the revolutionary spirit and line of its dead leader, Comrade Ruthenberg.

Letters From Our Readers

Editor, The Daily Worker:

I believe that the big farce of the year was the Conference on "Youth and the War System" held last Saturday at the Labor Temple. Not one speaker was invited by this "open minded" society to present the Marxist point of view on this question. Instead of that an evangelist, who appeared to be neither a worker nor the son of a worker told the audience "to forget all about the class struggle and capitalism, but remember God, and you'll be sure to go" and there will be no more war".

An elderly lady who represented another humanitarian organization urged the audience to "forget the struggle" and remember that "we are all brothers,"—as a means to avoid future wars.

Still another fellow, named Christensen, who was once a candidate for president on the Farmer-Labor ticket, said that Esperanto was the only way to end war. After a few more speakers of the audience with similar trash, the chairman announced that those who wished to take part in the discussion could do so, but said he would not tolerate any mention of "Communism or class war," and also declared that "Youth and War" was the subject of the symposium. A storm of protest came immediately from the audience and the chairman yielded.

A few young Communists, including myself, then took the floor and exposed the "ideal of Christianity." We pointed out that Rockefeller who is responsible for the loss of 7,000 lives at Nanking, has contributed $900,000 to the Y. M. C. A., which is poisoning the minds of young workers. One speaker told the audience why England, a "Christian" nation, is trying to make war on Soviet Russia, while Soviet Russia, an "atheist" nation, is preventing war.

These so-called peace societies only befool the minds of the young workers so that when war comes they will be fooled by nice phrases.

Fraternally yours,—S. Magidson.

Sends An Extra Dollar.

Dear Comrade:

Enclosed find $2 for my monthly pledge fund. This month I feel lucky, so I have added $1.00 extra for this month over my regular pledged amount.

Wishing The DAILY WORKER all the success, I am, Fraternally yours, allowing just such surges of reactions at home and in China as have been indulged in.

J. U. DAS, New Orleans, La.

The time has come for British labor to admit the correctness of the estimate made by the Communist Party of Great Britain and the revolutionary practicality of its program.

The government, now severely discredited, but still determined to take its revenge on the working class, can be routed completely if the rank and file of British labor permits no more betrayals.

We believe that the British workers have learned in the last few weeks that there is no such thing as separating questions of relations with the Soviet Union from the question of the life and struggles of the British working class.

Let's Fight On! Join The Workers Party!

In the loss of Comrade Ruthenberg the Workers (Communist) Party has lost its foremost leader and the American working class its staunchest fighter. This loss can only be overcome by many militant workers joining the Party that he built.
